This decision was not arrived at until after the Commission had come in for strong criticism. Reeve Colliver complained that there had been an arbitrary Commission for the last ten years. "It has been a law unto itself," he declared. The Mayor reminded council that the matter of having the Commission pay costs of various projects had previously had no results. "It is like hospitalization—you pay with a smile or you pay with a frown, but you pay just the same", he said.

Council decided to reduce the number of guards from three to two.

Acting on the suggestion of Councillor Gerow, council decided to building an abutment in the town marsh to control sewage which emptied near the soldiers' barracks. Dr. T. S. Philp was named Medical Officer of Health to succeed Dr. G. Allison, who was given leave of absence for military duties. J. B. Falconer was granted permission to erect a one storey building on Main Street.

The Mayor stated that closing of stores on Remembrance Day was optional but expected all to close from 10 a.m. to noon for the service of remembrance.

MANION INVITED

May Raise Issue in House

The dispute started last week when Dr. Manion said there had been violations of the Prime Minister's pledge to keep patronage out of the war effort. The Prime Minister replied in another press statement that it was the government's policy to prevent such patronage and he asked the Conservative leader to make definite charges which could be investigated.

Yesterday, Dr. Manion called attention to patronage charges made in a Toronto financial weekly newspaper and said that if the patronage did not cease, he would raise the issue when parliament meets in January. The Prime Minister's statement last night was the last of the two exchanges.

CLAIMS ITALY GUARDS PEACE

Italian Press Assails Motives of Moscow and Attacks International

Rome, Nov. 8 (AP)—The Fascist press joined in an attack on the Communist International, reasserting Italy's role as guarding of peace on the Danube and in the Balkans and assailing the motives of Moscow.

The newspapers widely reprinted declarations of Virginio Gayda last night in Il Giornale d'Italia which charged Soviet Russia with partial responsibility for the war and with applying dangerous pressure in the Balkans.

Responding to the manifesto issued Monday by the Communist International on the 22nd anniversary of the Communist revolution, the editor, often a reflector of government views, declared the comintern "reversed the obvious proven truth when it presumed to assign to Soviet Russia the open mission of peace on the Danube and in the Balkans.

That, he asserted, was the mission of Italy. He added that Italy's neutrality had "circumscribed the conflict in Europe which already has been widened by Russian intervention."

Il Messagero, in its own editorial, declared, "one may be led to think that between Moscow and Berlin there does not exist the perfect accord of which they talked until yesterday, which the plutocracies labelled as a scandal.

"But it is more important that Soviet Russia has no right entitling her to five lessons of moderation against the imperialism of other nations."

JEWELRY RING IS BROKEN UP

Police Believe Arrest of Four Will Clear Up Recent Thefts

New York, Nov. 8—(AP)— Three men and a brunette "Madame Ladyfinger", who police said had engineered a series of spectacular jewel theft totalling between $500,000 and $1,000,000 were held today on robbery charges.

A fourth man, Raphael Stokvis, a jewelry salesman, was held as a material witness.

Detectives said the arrests had smashed the biggest organized jewel robbery ring in the United States, a ring which found victims among wealthy night club patrons and jewelry salesmen.

Police said George (the Mock) Stern, 44, had served as leader of the gang, and Mrs. Dorothy Stirrat, alias Dolly Turner, a dark woman of 35, as the feminine "spotter" of prospective victims.

The other suspects, Abe Levine,35, secretary of a small jewelry firm, and Murray Lang, 38, jewelry salesman, were accused of acting as "fences" in disposing of the stolen gems.

Police said that Stern, so incapacitated by heart disease he was removed to hospital after his arrest, had "put the finger" on jewelry stores to be robbed and hired five gunmen, still being sought, to do the actual holdups.

The gang was suspected of taking $23,900 worth of jewelry from Gypsy Rose Lee, former strip tease dancer.

Jury to Determine Term "Stepping Out"

Los Angeles, Nov. 8.—(AP)—It's up to a jury to determine whether "stepping out", as used by Actor Jackie Coogan, means what the dictionary says it does, or something else.

Coogan is being used for $80,000 by Princess Luana, entertainer, who charges her character was defamed. She says Coogan saw her walk into a night club with his stepfather, Arthur Bernstein, and remarked:

"He (Bernstein) is stepping out with Luana and my mother is probably is waiting for him at home".

She complained that "stepping out," referred to a married man and a single woman, implied an illicit relationship. Coogan, asking dismissal, contended it meant what the dictionary says "to go on foot beyond a boundary."

The judge said there might be two sides to the question and ordered Coogan's counsel to proceed with preparations for trial.

MAKE BORDER RECOGNIZABLE

Ottawa, Nov. 8—(CP)—Surveyors from the Mines and Resources Department are clearing a 20-foot wide lane on the Quebec-Maine border to make the boundary patrol more effective, it was announced today.

One result of the war, it was felt, will probably be greatly increased airplane traffic in the St. Lawrence River Valley and clearance of this stretch along the boundary would assist pilots in recognizing the border from the air.

PARTRIDGE HUNTERS FOUND

Sudbury, Ont., Nov. 8—(CP)—Two lost partridge hunters, missing since yesterday, were found today by rescue parties searching in the bush four miles north of Markstay.

The two are Knox Manahan, well-known paddler, and Howard Caesar. They said they came through the night in the bush in good shape, despite a heavy rainstorm.

German Ship Seized By Finland, Reported

Helsingfors, Nov. 8 (AP)—Usually reliable sources reported today that Finland has seized a German ship, identified as the Blumenthal, in territorial waters off Finland's southern coast.

(The Blumenthal is not listed in the current Lloyd's register.)

Finnish authorities declined to confirm the report, which followed closely the seizure by Germany of the 1,290-ton Finnish ship Otava while carrying a cargo of woodpulp to England.

PRINCESS SUES BRITISH PUBLISHER

Alleges She Was to Receive 5000 Pounds Yearly as Representative in Europe

London, Nov. 8—(CP)—A suit by Princess Stefanie Hohenlohe-Waldenberg against Viscount Rothermere, publisher, for breach of contract under which she alleged she was to receive 5,000 pounds, ($22,250) a year for acting as his special political representative in Europe was heard today.

Counsel for the former wife of a Hungarian prince said Lord Rothermere "told the princess in 1927 that he had decided to work for the restoration of the Hohenzollern and Hapsburg dynasties.

"He wanted to be a modern Warwick the Kingmaker and work on the European rather than the English field," counsel added.

Later the princess "rejected an idea that was put forward that Lord Rothermere's son Esmond should be suggested as the King of Hungary."

Counsel's Arguments

Other highlights in her counsel's arguments were: She obtained from Adolf Hitler in 1934 an invitation to Lord Rothermere to visit him in Berlin.

"Lord Rothermere had a royal reception and told her that Hitler would make her a duchess."

"The accounts showed that over a period of five and a half years Lord Rothermere paid the princess 46,000 pounds.

A "heated discussion" when Lord Rothermere "was apparently suggesting he was going to drop her as an employee" ended "with Lord Rothermere telling her he would pay her the 5,000 pounds for the rest of her life."

Princess Stefanie testified she met Lord Rothermere about 1925 and interested him in the cause of Hungary at a luncheon in Monte Carlo after "he told me there was very little news in his paper (The Daily Mail) and said he would be grateful for any original ideas."

PARM PIGGERY BURNS TO GROUND

Blaze at Cannifton Destroys Two Pigs of 180 in Herd

Flames ripping through the frame structure in the van of a strong breeze, totally destroyed the large piggery owned by Charles Parm, near Cannifton, shortly after noon today. One hundred and eighty porkers of all ages housed in the building were saved from the flames with the exception of two which raced back into the blazing building despite efforts to prevent them.

Garbage-cooking equipment and other apparatus used by Parm fell prey to the flames, and are a total loss. Insurance will cover the loss, Parm stated.

Louis Hebert, and a youth named Norman Sweet were working in the vicinity of the large sixty-by-forty piggery when the former noticed a sheet of flame envelop the east end of the building where the boiler is housed.

"The fire suddenly covered the entire east end of the building, even as we raced to fight it" Hebert said. Sweet and Parm stated, that the flames raced at tremendous speed through the entire building, and only the fact, that the doors operate simultaneously, prevented a more serious loss among the pigs.

"We got them all out, the entire one hundred and eighty," Parm said. "Two dashed back into the blazing building before we could prevent them, and that as far as I know, is the only loss, with the exception of the piggery and its other contents."

Parm had secured one hundred of the animals only this week, he said. Construction of a new piggery will start as soon as possible, the owner stated, and meanwhile sufficient room is available in barns and other buildings to house the pigs until new quarters are available.

QUEEN TRAMPS THROUGH MUD

Sees for Herself How City-bred Evacuees Live in Country

London, Nov. 8.—(CP)—Queen Elizabeth tramped through muddy fields in Sussex today to see for herself just how city-bred evacuees in a typical country "reception area" are adapting themselves to their wartime way of life.

The Queen visited the hamlet of Horsted Keynes where 140 children have been transplanted from the working class London district of Battersea.

In the Village Hall the Queen saw children aged three to seven playing at "Mothers".

"Don't forget to wash behind the ears," she said to four-year-old Shirley Sleet, busily bathing a baby doll.

Her Majesty also stopped in at the village school where evacuees are sharing tuition with the "locals' and watched the older boys digging in backyard vegetable lots they are cultivating as part of Britain's "grow more food" campaign.

FLIER JOINED AT TRENTON IN '38

Received His Commission 10 Months Later and Went to R.A.F. in England

Montreal, Nov. 8—(CP)— Pilot Officer James Campbell of the Royal Air Force, killed yesterday in a flying accident in the United Kingdom, joined the Royal Canadian Air Force at Trenton, Ont., in January 1938. He received his commission ten months later and went to England with the R.A.F.

Parents of the 20-year-old flier, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Campbell of nearby Lakeside, were advised by cable last night of the death of their son. They last heard from him about a month ago.

Woman Breaks 300-Year Precedent— Is Elected Mayor

Boston, Nov. 8—(AP)—A woman broke three centuries of Massachusetts precedent to become mayor of a city—Westfield— as sixteen of the state's cities tabulated today the returns of yesterday's municipal elections.

Mrs. Alice Burke, a 46-year-old former school teacher, gained a narrow margin victory over Westfield's veteran Mayor Ramond H. Cowing, who was one of three oft-elected Massachusetts mayors voted out of office.

Mayor J. Fred Manning of Lynn, with ten years' service and Mayor Edwin O. Childs of Newton, who had served ten two-year terms were the other two

HALT USE OF REVEREND

Lansing, Mich., Nov. 8 (CP) — Members of the Lansing Ministerial Association have decided to halt the use of the title Reverend, and all titles except that of Mister.

Ministers said they were tired of the formalities involved in selecting the right title every time they wanted to speak to another Minister.

"We hereby abjure that phillogical abomination which perfixes our names with Reverend," the meeting decided.

NAVAL PAY REVISION STUDIED

Ottawa, Nov. 8 (CP)—Revision of the schedule of pay and allowances for the navy and the air force is still under consideration, it was learned today. The pay schedules are being adjusted to conform to the recent upward revision of the pay and allowances for the military forces.

Empire Air Training Scheme Outlined by Squadron Leader

A detailed account of the Empire Air Training Scheme as outlined recently by the Federal Government was given by Squadron Leader Gordon Edwards of the R.C.A.F., Trenton, to members of the Kiwanis Club at their weekly luncheon at the Queen's Hotel on Tuesday. The speaker was introduced by Kiwanian Joe Imlah, who also read a letter of appreciation from the Watertown, N.Y., club for the visit of the Belleville club a week ago and also for the flag presented. Mr. Imlah also praised the fine address given by P. C. MacLaurin at the particular luncheon.

New Member Introduced.

Thomas Ogilvie, a new member, was introduced to those members who were absent to Watertown last week. The new directors were announced with Herb Muir and Jack Trudeau replacing Albert Boynton and Harold Seldon. The directors will meet soon and from their number elect a president. It was announced by Bruce Lattimer that the members, their wives and friends of the single members will hold a social evening on Monday next at the Trianon Ball Room. Bridge and dancing will constitute the program.

Mr. MacLaurin gave an earnest plea for all members to assist in the coming Red Cross drive for funds. "Words don't win wars but deeds do," said the speaker. In introducing the speaker, Joe Imlah stated Squadron Leader Edwards graduated from R.M.C. in 1930 and entered the Air Force, where he has enjoyed signal success. He stated Mr. Edwards was a stunt flier of note and at present an instructor of advanced flying at the Trenton base.

A Great Scheme.

Squadron Leader Edwards stated that the Empire Training Scheme was one of the greatest things the Empire has ever done and will certainly sit Hitler "back on his heels" when in complete operation. He explained the early development of the scheme and showed Canada was in complete control, due to Prime Minister King selling the proposition to the other dominions. "The scheme has been in use in England for two and a half years," said the speaker, "and consists of three stages, namely, civil schools, intermediate training stage and advanced training stage." The speaker told of reception of recruits under new scheme and that of old. "In the old way of training the recruit was "given the works" but now the candidate is taken along slowly and the approach of the army to the recruit has much to do with the future use of the man to the force," said the speaker. "The recruit is now taken on and flown around to let him get the feel of flying and then started on his schedule of training. In his civil school training the recruit gets 50 hours of flying and the use of controls, engines, and aircraft along with ground lectures."

Theory of Flight Taught.

The speaker also told of his training on rigging, drill and theory of flight. The recruit then passes to the intermediate stage. Mr. Edwards explained with a month's course on ground before training siege begins. In this stage the candidate is given lessons in advanced flying instruments, cross-country flights and acrobatics. The men are drilled on single or twin engine machines with 75 per cent going to twin engine machines and 25 per cent to single engines. "In this stage the recruit must put in 50 hours of flying," said the speaker. Going into the advanced training stage the candidate is taught to use his knowledge of aircraft to do "a job". He must learn to bomb, shoot, take photographs, make reconnaissance flights and when finished is a reliable service pilot but must go to squadron to get actual experience. "Every minute in the air is gainfully employed," says the speaker. Squadron Leader Edwards compared the Empire Scheme with the German system stating "that Germany did not have the same regard for human life as the R.A.F. and Dominions' services.

At the conclusion of the address the speaker answered a number of questions.

SPAAK REPORTS TO BELGIAN GOV'T

Foreign Minister of Belgium Receives Three Foreign Ministers

Brussels, Nov. 8— (CP-Havas)— Foreign Minister Paul-Henri Spaak, who accompanied King Leopold to The Hague on the trip which ended in the Belgian-Netherlands peace appeal, today received Baron P. B. Van Slooten, Minister from the Netherlands, Otto Krag, Minister from Denmark, and Michael Moscicki, the Polish Minister.

Spaak reported to the Belgian Cabinet last night. An official communique said simply that Spaak gave a full account of his visit to the Netherlands capital, with King Leopold and submitted a review of the international situation in general.

Belgian political quarters, puzzled over the meaning of the latest peace by Leopold and Wilhelmina, and skeptical of its chances of success, offered the two following hypotheses:

1—The Netherlands for the first time feels itself seriously threatened and has decided that from the standpoint of both home and foreign opinion it would be a good move to make it clear that up to the last moment it has done everything in its power to stay out of the war and hasten its end.

2—The two rulers acted in response to a more or less pressing request from Germany.

The latter explanation appeared to find some strength in the tone of Nazi propaganda broadcasts protesting violently against the neutrals' allegedly supine acceptance of the blockade conditions laid down by Great Britain.

Sterling May be Sold To Pay for Br. Imports

Ottawa, Nov. 8 (CP)—Only sterling may be sold by authorized dealers to pay for imports from any part of the British Empire, the Foreign Exchange Control Board announced today.

If for special reasons another form of exchange is required for such imports a special permit must be obtained from the Board.

Other new rules announced by the Board follow:

When Foreign Exchange is sold for remittance to non-residents of income originally arising in Canadian dollars, the foreign currency to be sold shall be that of the country or residence of the recipient.

When income is received in foreign currency for a Canadian agent of a non-resident, remittance to the non-resident must be in the currency received or in Canadian dol- a Canadian agent receiving sterl- a Canadian agent receiving sterling income for the acount of an American beneficiary.

A VERY GOOD HUNTING STORY

Randolph, Vt., Nov. 8 (AP)— Keith Campbell, 36-year-old sportsman, told a good fox hunting story today and he's got a witness. Campbell said his hound pursued a fox, whereupon Campbell shot the fox. Then a second fox appeared, chasing the hound. Campbell shot that one too. Clyde Carpenter was standing on a nearby hill and saw the whole thing.

CAPTAIN DROWNED AS TUG FOUNDERS

Tug Unable to Ride Out Heavy Gale on Lake Michigan Near Mackinac Straits

Charlevoix, Mich., Nov. 8—(AP)— Captain John Oling lost his life and two others were rescued early today when the tug Badger State foundered in Lake Michigan during a storm.

The freighter Carl L. Bradley picked up the survivors and the body of Captain Oling who apparently was swept overboard by heavy seas when the men took to a small boat. The rescued men were Jerry Neville, engineer, and Chris Nelson, deck hand.

Information received by the coast guard here indicated that the Bradley was continuing on through the Straits of Mackinac to Rogers City, Mich., before docking with the men.

The coast guard said the tug sounded a distress signal shortly after 9 p.m. E.S.T. last night, at the height of the storm which drove snow and rai- before a 40-mile-an-hour wind. The freighter responded and took the tug in tow near Grand Traverse Light.

Towed into the lee of South Fox Island, the tug began to sink, forcing the men into a small boat.

which had tremendous consequences for our movement and the German people.

"We decided to take responsibility for Germany's fate. That brought us to the support of the masses.

Same Forces At Work.

Hitler said the "same forces which in 1914 started war against Germany are at work today."

"During the four years of the Great War I never for a moment thought any opponent could defeat us," Hitler said.

"English and Frensh soldiers had no more courage than German. What caused Germany to fall was lies."

Hitler said: "The same Churchill today tries his lies, but Germany is not the same as then.

"Today we have a feeling of superiority. The lies were the same as today. Then it was Britain's fight for the freedom of small nations."

ALLOW MAGAZINES TO ENTER CANADA

Ottawa, Nov. 8—(CP)—The National Revenue Department announced today that three United States magazines, previously banned from Canada, will be permitted entry into the country beginning with the January, 1940, issues. They are Inside Detective and Personal Romances, both published in New York and Romantic Story, Published in Louisville, Ky., (source).

POPE PIUS TO BROADCAST

Vatican City, Nov. 8—(AP)—It was announced today Pope Pius would deliver a broadcast address in English next Monday (12 noon E.S.T.) in connection with the 50th anniversary of the founding of Catholic University, Washington, D.C.

Text of Statement on Sinking of Royal Oak

London, Nov. 8 (CP)—The text of the statement on the sinking of the Royal Oak, made in the House of Commons today by Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, follows:

It has now been established that the Royal Oak was sunk in the early hours of Oct. 14 by a German submarine which penetrated the defences of the land-locked anchorage at Scapa Flow.

These defences were of two kinds. First, physical obstructions by nets, booms and blockships. Second, by small patrolling craft in the approaches to the various entrances or sounds, which are seven in number.

Obstructions Improved.

Neither physical obstructions nor patrolling craft were in that state of strength and efficiency required to make the anchorage absolutely proof, as it should have been, against the attack of a submarine on the surface, or partly submerged at high water.

Measures have been taken, and are being taken, to improve the physical obstructions and, indeed, the last blockship required reached Scapa Flow only the day after the disaster occurred.

All the more it was necessary, while these defences were still incomplete, that patrolling craft should have been particularly numerous, but from a variety of causes connected with movement of the fleet, which was not at the time using the anchorage, these patrolling craft were reduced to below what was necessary.

Full Details Withheld.

It will be appreciated, I am sure, that I am unable to enter into details and give full explanations, and no explanation is worth giving unless it is full.

I am unable to give it because it would reveal to the enemy matters which would throw light upon our methods of defence.

This light would illuminate to them not only the past, but also the future.

It would not be right to discuss in public in time of war these intimate matters of naval defence, and I ask the House to support the Government in that decision.

I must content myself, therefore, by saying that the long and familiar immunity at Scapa Flow that its currents and defences had given in the last war had led to too easy a valuation of the dangers.

An undue degree of risk was accepted, both at the admiralty and in the fleet.

Risks of Warfare

At the same time I must point out that many risks are being accepted continually by the fleet and the admiralty as part of the regular routine of keeping the seas, and these risks, which were inadvisably run at Scapa Flow, seem to highly competent persons to be no greater than many others.

It is evidence of the strong sense of immunity against submarine attack which existed at Scapa Flow that after one torpedo from the first volley had struck the Royal Oak, none of the vigilant and experienced officers conceived that it could be a torpedo.

Danger from the air was the one which was first apprehended and large numbers of the crew took up their air raid stations under the armour and were thereby doomed, while at the same time the captain and the admiral were examining the alternative possibility of an internal explosion.

It was under these conditions that the second salvo of torpedoes was discharged. Thus forfeit has been claimed and we mourn the loss of 800 gallant officers and men, and a ship, which although very old, was of undoubted military value.

All 'acts Brought Out

Inquiries which have been completed brough' out all the knowledgeable facts and the Admiralty, upon whom broadly the responsibility rests, resolved to learn this bitter lesson, namely, that in this new war, with its immense novel applications nothing must be taken for granted and every joint in our harness must be tested and strengthened, as far as our resources and ingenuity allow.

Having most carefully considered all the issues involved in this particular case, the Admiralty intend to take such steps within the service as are proper and necessary. But the government do not propose to embark upon a judicial inquiry with a view to assigning blame to individuals.

Such a course would, they consider, impose an additional burden upon those afloat and ashore who are engaged in an intense and deadly and not wholly unsuccessful struggle. It is upon this that all our thoughts and strength must be concentrated.

THIRTY CASES IN BANCROFT COURT

Some thirty cases were disposed of in the weekly County Police Court held at Bancroft yesterday before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd, the majority being of a minor nature, however.

Two jail sentences were meted out during the court procedure, when Charles Smith was sentenced to serve two months in the common jail after being convicted of theft. The accused, Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., stated, broke and entered Hubbell's general store at Paudash Lake and stole wearing apparel, a shot gun and some ammunition last week. "Why he was even wearing the clothes he stole when apprehended in Trenton, I am told," Mr. Donnan informed the court.

When Lawrence McAllister, of the Bancroft district, stated he was unable to meet the assessed fine of $100.00 and costs, levied after he was convicted of being found in possession of illicit liquor, Magistrate Lloyd sentenced the man to three months in default thereof. The remaining cases were of a minor nature.

CABINET MINISTERS

London, Nov. 8 — (CP-Cable)— Dominion Cabinet Ministers here for empire talks today were shown the secrets of Britain's ultra-modern army in a visit to a famous army training centre.

The visitors inspected latest mechanized units and watched a mock battle staged on a windswept stretch of heather land, in which kilted soldiers of a Highland Regiment advanced with Bren guns and smothered with a hail of fire targets 500 yards away.

TO CARRY SPEECH

Toronto, Nov. 8—(CP)—Winston Churchill's radio speech at 4:15 p.m. E.S.T. on Sunday next will be carried over the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation National Network, the CBC announced today. The First Lord of the Admiralty will speak on "Ten Weeks of War."

Charge 12 Boys With Wrecking House Interior

King, Ont., Nov. 8 — (CP) — Twelve district juveniles, ranging in age from 9 to 13, were charged today by York county police, with the wanton destruction of the interior of a home in King Township.

Police contended the children entered the house Hallowe'en night and wrecked nearly everything moveable. Cupboards, tables and stoves were overturned and police said it was the worst case in their records. Police said the juveniles admitted the destruction and will appear in Juvenile Court at Toronto next week.

The house was rented by Lieut. S. G. Bennington, Royal Canadian Air Force, stationed at Camp Borden.

BOOKIES LOSE LAST STRONGHOLD

Pari-Mutuel Machines Replace Handbooks at New York

By Max Hill
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

New York, Nov. 8.—(AP)— The mirth was gone today from the faces of the men who all summer long beningly sat on their stools at the race tracks and smiled as they offered six-to-five on a legitimate two-to-one shot.

The iron men—as the pari-mutuel machines are known around the horse parks—had been voted in to replace the bookies and [illegible] the last stronghold of the [illegible] books.

Up and down Broadway, especially at such places as Lindy's, they did their best to put up a brave front last night, but in the end they looked lower than a chalk player with his last cent on an odds—on favorite which wound up last.

Each Bookie Made Own Price

Once the horse parks from Tiajuana in Old Mexico to Saratoga in New York catered to the men with slates. They made their prices from information and what the public thought or wagered mattered little. Each bookies made his own price.

Then only New York was left. Tom Shaw, lean and glum-faced the big Irishman, Tim Mara, Pete Blong and the others carried on, but they knew that in the end the "iron men", would get them.

SPEECH IS READ

Prime Minister Unable to Attend Lord Mayor's Banquet at Mansion House Due to Severe Attack of Gout

(By J. F. Sanderson, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Nov. 9 — (CP-Cable)—The British Government is not hopeful the Belgo-Dutch peace offer will lead to an armistice, it was indicated in a speech read at the Mansion House today by Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer.

The speech, which surveyed the nation's war effort, was written by Prime Minister Chamberlain, who was prevented from attending the Lord Mayor's luncheon by a sudden attack of gout. Referring to the leaders of Germany as "stiff necked men" who understood only the language of force, the Prime Minister's speech declared that "since we have been compelled to take up arms, we shall not lay them down until we are assured that Europe has been freed from the threats which so long has paralysed the life of her peoples."

Appreciates Motive

Then the speech continued: "No doubt you have all read the communication which has been addressed by Their Majesties the Queen of Holland and the King of the Belgians to His Majesty, the King, as well as to the President of the French Republic and to the German Chancellor.

"Everyone will appreciate the lofty motives which have actuated the two sovereigns in thus offering their good offices in the hope of avoiding further extension of the war.

Use of war balloons. Balloons became a recognized part of army equipment about 50 years ago. They are now used universally by all modern armies as an aid to observation. Their specific use is to enable observers to study the enemy territory, the disposition and movement of hostile troops and their fortifications. From their advantageous position they can also discover air raids by the enemy, especially when visibility is good. They are also used by the observers to report the progress and success of their own troops, and to spot artillery fire for the purpose of correcting the aim.

'Build New World Of Security' Plea Is Broadcast

London, Nov. 9—(CP)—Optimism regarding the creation of a new and better world devoid of "aggression and international lawlessness" was expressed by Peter Fraser, education, health and marine minister of New Zealand, in a broadcast speech last night.

The New Zealand delegate to the Dominions consultations here said: "We must this time make a most earnest effort to build a new world, in which the rights of small nations will be as secure as those of large nations, in which individual freedom of conscience and speech will be assured, in which men and women everywhere will be assured of access to all the good things of life. x x x

"I believe all these are possible. I believe they will be achieved and the people of our Dominion x x x will be among the foremost in helping to secure for all mankind the liberties and privileges they themselves possess in such large measure."

MANY UNVERIFIED ATTEMPTS MADE ON HITLER'S LIFE

Early in Regime, Assassination Attempts Were Reported Frequently

FEW RECENTLY

(By the Canadian Press)

Almost from the start of Adolf Hitler's rise to power, there have been repeated but unverified reports of attempts on his life.

His first escape from violent harm during his political career came in 1923, 16 years ago today, when troops broke up the Nazi putsch from the beer cellar wrecked by last night's explosion. Sixteen of Hitler's comrades were slain.

'GOOD WHALING' BEGINS IN COURT, FATHER SOCKS SON

Philadelphia, Nov. 9—(AP) — Charles Panetta startled a courtroom today by going into action immediately when a Magistrate advised that what Panetta's 20-year-old son needed was a "good whaling."

Hardly had the words been uttered when Panetta hauled away and smashed his son, Vincent, flush on the jaw in front of Magistrate Benjamin Schwartz' bench.

"No, no, not here," cried the astonished Schwartz. "I meant take him home and give him a good whaling there."

"Okay, Judge," said Panetta, and led his son from the room.

Schwartz advised the "whaling" after dismissing a charge of driving a car without the owner's consent.

Brewery Owner Not Sad Anymore As Tommies Help to Fill Bottles

With the British Expeditionary Force in France, Nov. 9 (CP-Reuters)—One of the jolliest places in the British zone in France is a small town where certain units of the British Expeditionary Force are billeted.

Life there seems to go with a swing. Troops and civilians appeared to be on exceptionally good terms. The soldiers have an unusually hard job, the nature of which must not be revealed.

But they would not relish the idea of being transferred elsewhere because soon after the unit arrived the Commanding Officer came into contact with the local Mayor. He seemed a sad man.

"Alas, Mon Colonel, I am ruined" he said.

He explained he owned a brewery, but since the war he could not obtain labor to fill the bottles.

Even in the British zone in France it is possible for a few men to get a little spare time. The Commanding Officer spoke to the second in command who spoke to the Adjutant who spoke to the Sergeant-Major, and so on.

Now the brewery is working splendidly, and there is free beer for every man in the British unit who wants it.

SHARP ACTIVITIES BETWEEN MOSELLE AND SAAR RIVERS

French Ministry Reports Increased Activity on Whole Western Front

WATCH FOR SIGNS

Germany May Coordinate Attack on West Front With Drive Through the Netherlands

Paris, Nov. 9—(CP)—The French War Ministry today reported increased activity on the whole Western front and sharp encounters with German forces especially between the Moselle and Saar Rivers.

The French were watching closely for a sign that Adolf Hitler might be contemplating co-ordinated attacks on the Western front and against the Allies through the Netherlands and perhaps Belgium.

(German officials have denied planning any drive through the neutral lowland countries but observers in those nations have expressed concern over Nazi troop concentrations on their borders.)

Stalemate Nearly Over

Military experts pointed to a renewal of German initiative after more than two weeks of stalemate in most parts of the Saar sector and reported that at the same time more German troops were massing on the Netherlands frontier.

This morning's war communique said there was "increased activity during the night on the front as a whole" and reported local scouting operations and "sharp encounters" on the northern flank ebtween the Moselle and Saar Rivers.

RETIRED OIL MEN TO HAVE HOME

$1,800,000 Mansion Owned by Former Governor Given to Project

Ponca City, Okla., Nov. 9 (AP)—The elaborate $1,800,000 mansion former Governor E. W. Marland built as he prospered in oil may become the centre of a $10,000,000 "colony" for retired oil men.

Marland, President of the Marland Oil Company of Oklahoma, offered to donate the great native stone house and its 36-acre plot as a home for aged oil operators and workers.

A Board of Governors is being formed with Marland as chairman.

The proposal was to use the mansion as the nucleus of a $10,000,000 project, Paul Hedrick, Tulsa World Oil editor, said. The program contemplating additional buildings also involved the rest of the 640-acre estate.

TRAFFIC RESUMES AFTER BLIZZARD

Edmonton, Nov. 9—(CP)—Airplane, train and motor traffic was back to normal in Alberta today following a blizzard which swept the province from north to south yesterday to reach a peak velocity of 68 miles-per-hour in Calgary. The sun was shining in many sections.

Planes grounded by blinding snow and driving winds which gained a top velocity of 18 miles in Edmonton, 30 miles in Red Deer and 68 miles in Calgary, were flying on schedule today.

More than three inches of snow was recorded in Edmonton.

Invasion of Netherlands To Establish Air Bases Possible German Aim

By LUCIEN ROMIER

Paris, Nov. 9—(CP-Havas)—French military experts today expressed the opinion an invasion of the Netherlands by German motorized forces would not be aimed at outflanking the French Maginot Line but to establish German air bases.

Nazi planes operating against Great Britain would save between 300 and 400 miles on every round trip between Germany and the British Isles if their starting point was from a base in the Netherlands instead of the Reich, it was pointed out.

In addition the saving in time would amount to at least an hour on each flight. For large-scale operations, involving hundreds or even thousands of planes, the saving in gasoline would be enormous. With Germany's normal gasoline sources eliminated by the Allied blockade, this latter factor is of utmost importance.

Another important aspect of the question is that it would be much easier for Germany to organize escorts of short-range fighters for their long-range bombers if the bombers could start from Germany and pick up their convoy of fighters in the Netherlands.

It is suggested here that the concentration of German troops along the Netherlands frontier might be based on a German desire to duplicate the tactics employed by the Soviet Union in achieving naval, air and military bases in the territory of its little Baltic neighbors.

But what if Holland resists the German pressure, as it has given every indication of doing? "Then of course Britain and France will come to the aid of the Netherlands and British planes will be able to operate from bases in the Netherlands to launch attacks on German military and industrial objectives with the same benefits and economies that the Reich would realize in attacks on Britain.

ANTI-SUBMARINE BOATS WILL BE BUILT IN CANADA

Canadian Industry Will Also Turn Out Aircraft, Ammunition and Gun Barrels

BUILD FUSELAGES

Ottawa, Nov. 9—(CP)—Canadian industry will turn out aircraft, anti-submarine boats, ammunition and gun barrels in its initial effort to assist in supplying Britain with war materials.

Lieut. Col. J. H. M. Greenly, controller-general of the British supply board, said here yesterday that these specific items will form the basis of the first orders to be placed in Canada. He indicated volume of business would be heavy.

Canadian shipyards are expected to be put to work on the anti-submarine craft known as "whale-catchers", steel vessels about 90 feet long powered with steam or diesel engines. They will carry depth charges and be armed. About 10 of these craft also will be built for the Canadian government.

A shallow-draft, mosquito- boat fleet also will be made in Canada, it is understood. These boats are faster than the anti-submarine vessels.

Concentrate on Fuselages

Aircraft manufacturers filling orders for Britain will concentrate on fuselages and it is probable that planes will be turned out here and

2-MINUTE SILENCE TO BE OBSERVED IN REMEMBRANCE

Solemn Ceremonial Will Take Place Throughout the Province

BUSINESS TO STOP

Although there will be no observance of Armistice Day throughout the British Empire this year, His Worship, Mayor Bone today issued a proclamation requesting all citizens to observe two minutes of silence at 11.00 a.m. on Saturday as Remembrance Day for those who made the supreme sacrifice in the last war and also for Divine Guidance in the present.

"I have arranged with the police department to toll the City Hall clock bell at ten second intervals for a full two minutes after eleven on Saturday morning," Mayor Bone revealed today as he added that all Front St. stores were observing two minutes of silence during this period.

"I would also ask that the citizens display flags wherever possible for this solemn national occasion," further added His Worship. It was also revealed that Saturday is a bank and legal holiday.

Clear Dutch Villages In' Water Line' Areas

Amsterdam, Nov. 9—(AP)— The Netherlands cleared out villages in new "water line" regions today preparatory to defensive flooding and Belgium raised her mobilization to a near peak figure of about 600,000 men.

Passenger service out of Amsterdam was ordered restricted, beginning at 4 p.m., "in view of extraordinary measures taken by the railway company." The order was believed generally to have been due to heavy precautionary movements of troops eastward.

The actions of the two nations were interpreted as evidence of a wary determination to be ready for any turn in the war. Official sources in both insisted, however, that they feared no immediate danger for their respective countries.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

Circumstances surrounding Tuesday's peace proposals by Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands and King Leopold of the Belgians receive close attention in European capitals. Generally they tend to accentuate the precarious position of the two neutral countries which bar the path of a German march to the sea around the north end of the Maginot Line.

The peace appeal came as new evidence appeared of a possible German intention to move through Holland or Belgium or both. Because of this the area of Holland under martial law was extended the other day.

High-Ranking Nazi Officials Escape Terrific Explosion; Police Seeking Perpetrators

Official German Sources Unqualifiedly Blame Blast on British Agents Provoked by Jews

Fuehrer Left Buergerbrau Hall Earlier Than Expected After Delivering Address to Those Who Assisted in 1923 Putsch

Berlin, No. 9—(AP)—Adolf Hitler, safe behind the walls of his new chancellery in Berlin, today viewed photographs of the first officially disclosed serious attempt to kill him since he assumed power in 1933.

Meanwhile the police combed the nation for perpetrators of last night's explosion in the Munich Buergerbrau cellar which would have buried Hitler under nine feet of debris had he not left the "beer hall" putsch anniversary observance earlier than customary.

The blast in the Buergerbrau hall, a shrine of Nazidom, came a few minutes after Hitler had left to entrain for Berlin and killed seven of his veteran followers and wounded more than 63, 29 of them seriously.

(Rumors were heard in Amsterdam that Rudolf Hess, Deputy Nazi party leader, was among those killed, but this could not be confirmed. The report was printed in some London newspapers.)

The British secret service and Jews were charged with the attempt on Hitler's life, but officials said so far there was no trace of persons directly responsible for what "must have been a long and carefully planned attempt."

The original reward of 500,000 marks ($200,000) for information leading to seizure of the guilty was increased today to 600,000 marks $240,000) by an anonymous additional offer of 100,000 marks ($40,000).

POLISH WOMEN INHERIT ESTATE

Brother in America Owns Violins of Rare Value According to Experts

Los Angeles, Nov. 9—(AP)—Two aged women in Wilno, Poland, may inherit considerable sum from their brother, who died here September 23 in what was believed modest circumstances.

Jean Truslewicz, 72, who had operated a violin repair shop 40 years, died inestate. Ben Brown, public died intestate. Ben Brown, public administrator, placed his collection of musical instruments in a warehouse under the listing, "Fiddles".

Then Brown discovered a letter disclosing Truslewicz had been negotiating with Mrs. Margaret Tannenbaum of Pittsburgh, Pa., for sale of one of the violins for $18,000.

Henry Stockbridge, authority in violins, said it was made by Joseph Guarnarius in Italy in 1736, with a possible value of $40,000.

Another "Fiddle" turned out to be an 1873 Pressenda worth $2,500.

Now Brown is seeking to communicate with Truslewicz's Polish sisters, Kitzerzyna and Kasmira Helena Truslewicz.

NAIL WOUND IN FOOT CAUSES WOMEN'S DEATH

Peterborough, Ont., Nov. 9—(CP) —Mrs. Samuel Johnston, of Bailieboro, rushed to Nicholls Hospital suffering from an attack of lock jaw, died early today. Mrs. Johnston stepped on a nail in the yard of her farm home a week ago, and treated the wound herself. She complained of feeling unwell a few days ago.

Toronto Shipbuilders May Build 'Whale Catchers', Says Conboy

Toronto, Nov. 9—(CP—Acting Mayor Fred Conboy said today he planned to have Toronto shipbuilders make a survey of facilities with a view to supplying British government orders for shallow draft, fast motorboats to fight enemy submarines and other types of ships.

"The federal government has announced that orders for the 'whale catches' are to be placed and I am confident we have here or can develop plants to manufacture these boats," Controller Conboy said.

ATTEMPT ON HITLER SEEN AS SIGN OF NAZI SPLIT

One Opinion in Paris Is That Anti-Soviet Element Is at Work

Paris, Nov. 9— (AP— French diplomatic circles today interpreted the attempt to assassinate Adolf Hitler at Munich as indicating a split in the Nazi party over Germany's alliance with Soviet Russia. One opinion reflected in the French press was that anti-Soviet elements attempted to kill Hitler to gain control of the party.

Diplomatic sources said last night's blast was likely to have widespread diplomatic and military repercussions and might possibly push Hitler into a sudden move.

MONARCHIST DEMONSTRATIONS REPRESSED

Former Crown Prince Wilhelm Under Virtual 'House Arrest' Report

WILHELM NEVER NAZI

His Appearance on Streets of Potsdam Said to Have Caused Demonstrations

Zurich, Switzerland, Nov. 9—(CP-Havas) — Former Crown Prince Wilhelm has been placed under virtual "house arrest" at his estate near Potsdam because his appearance on the streets of Potsdam caused popular demonstrations in favor of a monarchist restoration, according to reports reaching here from Germany today.

The one-time heir to the German throne was said to have given his word of honor two weeks ago that he would not attempt to leave his estate.

The Monarchist demonstrations provoked were severely repressed, the reports said. Police Chief Wedel was subsequently called to Berlin and his "sudden" death was reported

14-Year-Boy Held After Fatal Stabbing

Detroit, Nov. 9—(AP)—A 14-year-old high school boy was held today after police said he confessed killing a chum in an argument over a dollar watch.

Police said the boy, George McClelland, had admitted stabbing Howard Rucker, 17-year-old filling station employee, Tuesday night, then arranging it to look as though Rucker had been killed by robbers.

The boy was quoted by police as saying Rucker took his new dollar watch.

Last night I told him to give me the watch.

"He wouldn't. He was cleaning his nails with his hunting knife. He lunged at me and I was scared.

"He hit me on the side of the head. Then he dropped the knife. I grabbed it and stabbed him in the back."

Later, the boy said, he must have fainted. A neighboring filling station attendant found him unconscious on the floor with Rucker's body nearby.

British Columbia "Burden" on Allies Says Mayor Telford

Victoria, Nov. 9.—(CP) — Mayor Lyle Telford of Vancouver told the British Columbia Legislature yesterday that this province, because of its insufficient agricultural production, is a "burden" on the Allies in their war effort.

Dr. Telford, elected as a co-operative commonwealth federation member for Vancouver East but now sitting as an Independent, said British Columbians have been told the Allies need foodstuffs. "Instead of supporting them we are a burden," he said. "We import 3,000,000 pounds of bacon, 75 per cent of all lamb and mutton we eat, 50 per cent of all beef and millions of pounds of butter, yet these foodstuffs are most indigenous to this province."

"These figures show there is something radically wrong with our system. It reflects, and I believe unjustly, on our farmers. Our patriotic duty is to face up to these things, not to talk about them."

The people of Canada were taking a "proper trimming" through the Dominion Government's embarking into the wheat business. No. 4 wheat in Liverpool was quoted at $28.23 a ton while the people of Vancouver paid $30 a ton.

He said Canadian flour in Liverpool costs $3.89 a barrel; in Winnipeg $4.30; in Montreal $4.69; in Toronto, $4.69, but in Vancouver the consumer pays more than $7.

Dr. Telford added while Fort William collected $305,000 taxes on grain elevators, Vancouver collected only $70,000. It was a serious thing, he said, for Vancouver to have no public grain elevators and no cash grain market.

Japanese Commentator Predicts Conflict In South Seas

Tokyo, Nov. 9 (AP) — The political commentator of the newspaper Kokumin predicted today that "a conflict to acquire territories and resources in the South Seas will be fought in the Pacific during or after the war in Europe.

The result, he wrote, probably will be the "expulsion" of the United States from East Asia.

Asserting that South Sea Islands, including the Philippines, were "certain to become an arena of struggle among various powers," the article said:

CANES PRESENTED TO ENGINEERS

Three Retired Engineers Honored by Brotherhood at Testimonial Banquet

Honoring veteran engineers, who have been retired from active service on the Canadian National Railway for some months past, lodge members of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, Lodge No. 189, paid signal honor to John Robinson, M. W. Kelly and H. A. Hogan, all of Belleville in the B of L. E. hall, Pine St., last evening, in a testimonial banquet.

The conventional gold-headed canes, that have distinguished all retiring locomotive engineers of the Canadian National Railways in Belleville, were presented to Messrs Robinson, Kelly and Hogan by Thos. B. Skelly, general chairman of the B. of L. E. who resides in Ottawa. While other tokens of long service remembrance were tendered by George Naylor, chief engineer of Lodge No. 189 and Wm. Fairbairn. The three recipients made commendable responses upon the receipt of the gold-headed canes, which are cherished by all retiring locomotive engineers.

A banquet and social evening, when entertainment was featured in song and readings, preceded the presentations. Several students from Queen Victoria School added to the evening's entertainment with musical selections.

OBITUARY

LATE H. U. HOOVER (Rawdon)

Rawdon—(Special) — Wellman's United Church was filled to the doors on Tuesday afternoon with sorrowing relatives and friends from all over Rawdon Township who came to pay their last tribute of respect to the late Herbert U. Hoover who was well - known throughout the township.

The service was in charge of the pastor, Rev. James E. Beckel of Rawdon Circuit, assisted by two former pastors, Rev. W. H. Clarke and Rev. F. G. Joblin, who gave a message honoring the deceased, as Mr. Hoover was an elder of Bethel United Church.

The honorary pall bearers were elders on the appointment: From Bethel, Messrs. John Green, B. C. Tucker, John Scott, Samuel Gummer; from Mount Pleasant, Mr. John Holmes; from Wellman's, Messrs. John Pauley, George Heagle and Charles Dunham.

The bearers were Messrs. John Rainie, Charles Morton, Theodore Cooney, George McGee, Bert Thompkins and George Watson.

Deceased was in his 58th year and had been confined to the house for about two years. Before his illness he was always actively engaged in community affairs and was always willing to assist whenever called upon to do so. He was a prominent figure in both church and social life, assisting in the school section, at the cheese factory and taking an active part in municipal affairs. He was also a member of L.O.L. 172 Wellmans and was buried under that organization

He leaves to mourn his widow, formerly Miss A. Stewart of Rylestone, two daughters, Leatha, Mrs. John McInroy, West Huntingdon, and Lulu at home, also one son, Stewart, on the homestead in the sixth concession, also three brothers, Rev. Alfred Hoover, of Chicago, Ill., Mr. Frederick Hoover, Seattle, Wash. and Mr. Wilbur Hoover, Sault Ste. Marie.

LATE WILLIAM I. CONNORS

The funeral of William Isaac Connors, late residence, Doyle's Terrace, Belleville, took place from the residence of his daughter, Mrs. Clifford Weese in this city on Wednesday afternoon. The service in the home and at the graveside in Mountain View cemetery was conducted by the Rev. E. N. O. Kulbeck of the Evangel Temple and the Rev. A. Wyse of the Regular Baptist Church.

The bearers were Messrs. Wilfrid Sanford, Delbert Weese, Clifford Weese, George Nobles, Carl Davidson and Joseph Copeland.

JOHN McBRIEN

John McBrien passed away in his sleep early this Thursday morning at the residence of his son, Mr. William H. McBrien, 133 Albert Street.

The late Mr. McBrien who was in his 80th year, was born at Brooklin, Ont., his parents being the late Mr. and Mrs. William McBrien. During his active years he was engaged in the tannery business at Orillia, Ont., where he resided for some years. For the past five years he lived retired in this city with his son. In religion he was a member of the Church of England and held a high place in the esteem of those who knew him.

Surviving him are one daughter, Mrs. Earl MacDonald of Kitchener, formerly of Oshawa; one son, Mr. William H. McBrien, an officer in the service of the Ontario Provincial Police, Belleville; one sister, Mrs. Joseph Gibbons, Toronto.

The body is resting at the Martin Funeral Home, Church Street. The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

171 BU. CORN TO ACRE

Champaign, Ill., Nov. 9— (AP) — Roland Resler astounded the agricultural world today by certifying for production competition in hybrid corn a yield of 1,028 bushels from a six-acre field, slightly more than 171 bushels to the acre. Corn experts said they believed the farmer had established a record yield.

AN INVITATION TO ALL EX-SERVICE RANKS,—

Who believe that their sacred duty to our Glorious Dead is to honour their memory on the appointed date and time—REMEMBRANCE DAY—to meet at the Cenotaph at 10.45 on the morning of Saturday, November 11th. for that purpose.

Wreaths will be placed by representatives of the Imperial, 2nd. and 21st. Clubs.

The public are cordially invited to participate in this ceremony.

LEST WE FORGET

DON'T FORGET POPPY DAY, SATURDAY, NOV. 11th.

Help us to take care of the unfortunate returned man and family, who, through no fault of their own, are down but not out.

Let us all wear a Poppy on Remembrance Day in memory of those who willingly accepted death as the price of our liberty.

Old Dutch Offers Something New for Table Service

A new offer by Old Dutch is of special interest with the Christmas entertainment season coming soon. This offer is a smart cake or sandwich plate in the new, colored Sungleam Ware, exquisitely designed by Wm. A. Rogers, (Oneida Ltd.) Hostesses will be thrilled by the color and charm this new metal adds to their table settings. It has the warm, glowing color of the sunset, making a perfect background for holiday cakes, candies, sandwiches and sliced meats. Gracefully embossed centre with border of lacy piercing in Old English "Feather" style. Actual size 9 3-4 inches in diameter.

As with other Old Dutch offers, the public get a real bargain. This Sungleam Ware Cake Plate is obtainable in return for Old Dutch labels and cash which represents a real saving. It makes an ideal gift or bridge prize. Offer good only while present supply lasts.

Police Blotter

Murray Jones, 175 Bridge St. told city police officials yesterday afternoon that a man had stepped in front of his southbound automobile on Front St. and was knocked down. "He got up and said he wasn't hurt and walked away most unconcerned," Mr. Jones told Sergeant Arthur Booth as he assured the police he had stopped to render assistance, but had not been able to obtain the man's name. Mr. Jones was proceeding along Front St. when the man suddenly stepped from behind a parked motor car and directly into the path of the moving vehicle.

Cyril Kent, 65 Chatham St., reported the theft of a child's tricycle to the police yesterday. The tricycle was taken from the premises of Mr. Kent.

A transient, who gave his name as George Montgomery, was arrested last night on a charge of intoxication. He was remanded in custody until tomorrow.

Picton Police Court

Picton—Nov. 9—(Special) — Magistrate Shea presided at local police court on Wednesday morning. Kenneth Craddock of Trenton pleaded "not guilty" to a charge of driving a motor vehicle carelessly. Constable Sam Ervine testified that the accused was driving towards Picton at 11 p.m. on Oct. 27th. The car had travelled for 280 feet on the right shoulder of the road, had then gone in the ditch, turned around and overturned. The accused had only had a driver's permit for a month, and had apparently been driving too fast, and had lost control of the car. Miss Evelyn Johnson and Chas. McWalters also of Trenton, passengers in the car, testified that Craddock twice tried to pass another car that kept the centre of the road, and would not let them pass. Finally when Craddock put on the brake, his car swerved turned around and went in the ditch. The magistrate found Craddock guilty and he was fined $10 and costs.

Prosper Levine of Cornwall, appeared on a charge of wandering about without any visible means of support—not having any visible means of maintaining himself—and living without employment.

Constable McBrien of Belleville testified that he was present on Oct. 24th when Levine was discharged from H. and P. E. Regiment for gambling. Levine had told the C. O., he had made $75 the first night he was in the army by rolling dice and had loaned most of it. He had made $60 the second night and banked it. Levine had been escorted to Belleville by Constables McBrien and Ervine and told to stay out of P. E. County. He was told some of the soldiers objected to him, and would do him harm. Constable McBrien testified he received word Levine was returning to Picton on Oct. 31st, and met him on the bridge leading out of Belleville, and warned him to stay away from Picton. Levine carried a suitcase, and was thumbing his way. Constable McBrien came to Picton, where he later arrested Levine who was disguised with dark green glasses. He carried two decks of cards in his grip, one in his pocket, a handful of poker chips and a box for shaking dice. The 21 dice had been confiscated on October 24th by Constable McBrien. Levine told the constable he had returned to collect money owing him and to draw money from the bank.

Wilfrid Lane, defending Levine, asked for a dismissal on the ground that the accused had over $40 in his pocket when arrested, was well dressed and had a hotel room with clothes in it. "The police were 'high handed,'" Mr. Lane said, " in telling Levine to leave the county. Levine had a right to tell them he wouldn't go, or would go and come back when he wished." In summing up the case, Magistrate Shea said there were some suspicious circumstances but the case was dismissed.

Asks Overtime Wages

Marie Gibson, waitress, asked for $52.00 allegedly due her for overtime from Roscoe McConnell, proprietor of the Guild Restaurant. The plaintiff testified she worked from 8 to 16 hours a day from July to October at $6 per week. She testified Mr. McConnell had no regular schedule for the waitresses, who according to law were only required to work 54 hours a week. The case was laid over until Nov. 22nd.

Robert Deline, 23, of Trenton, now a private with H. and P. E. regiment, was charged with dangerous driving. He was forbidden to drive a car for one month and his license was held until Dec. 6, when he will appear again.

POLICE COURT

"I had a few nails in my pockets and didn't know what to with them", stated Carl Demille, 16, of this city, after he pleaded guilty to a charge of without legal justification committing damage to property of J. P. Millar to wit by placing nails in a driveway and thereby causing punctures to the tires of a truck, when he appeared before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., in to-day's police court.

"I believe this prank was done on Hallowe'en, but this type of prank isn't funny at all," added Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C.

"Actually this is a serious matter. Those nails might have ruined other people's tires and property", lectured His Worship as he placed the lad on probation for three months and ordered him to pay the costs of the proceedings, amounting to $2.75. Mr. Frank Cushing, local barrister, appeared on behalf of the accused lad and assured the court his client had not appreciated the seriousness of his act.

When the name of Bernard Rudner, Montreal, was called in court today there was no response. Rudner was charged with speeding, the charge being preferred by H.T.O. Caldwell of Trenton. A bail bond of $12.50, which had been given by Rudner, was ordered forfeited to meet the assessed fine and costs.

George Williams, Prince Edward County, pleaded guilty in writing to a charge of fishing by other means than angling, to wit by the use of gill nets. A fine of $10.00 and costs was paid prior to the court.

Several other cases of speeding were disposed of with pleas of guilty being accepted and fines levied. H.T.O. Sam Ervine also introduced several such charges.

PEN, PENCIL SET GIVEN DR. SEMPLE

At the anniversary dinner of the Melrose United Church on Tuesday night the Rev. Dr. Semple was presented with a Sheaffers pen and pencil set (life set) in appreciation of his services as interim moderator of the pastoral charge.

USES PLANE FOR BIRTH ANNOUNCEMENT

Oakland, Calif., Nov. 9 (AP)—Charles Beattie made himself and his airplane into a personal announcement card to announce the birth of a son. He painted "Boy" on the plane and flew low over his own neighborhood in Oakland and over Stockton, Sacramento and Redding where he and his wife have relatives.

Empey Hill

Empey Hill, Nov. 9.—The passing of Mr. Elmer Abbott on Thursday morning was indeed a shock to this community. He suffered a stroke on Wednesday evening while milking. Dr. Willoughby of Napanee was called and Miss Mildred Sampson, Reg. N., did all in their power to save him but he passed away at eight o'clock Thursday morning. He was of a quiet, kindly disposition and was highly esteemed by all who knew him. He leaves to mourn his loss his only brother Clifford, and two nephews, Ralph and Billy. He resided here nearly all his life. His parents predeceased him a few years ago. His funeral was held on Saturday at his late residence and was in charge of Rev. W. Merrick. Mr. Ward Wartman sang a solo. Interment was at Napanee. The bearers were Messrs. William Bell, Bruce Kimmerly, Roy Stafford, Herb Akey, Clare Brennan and Harold Kimmerly.

Mount Pleasant Pioneer W. I. met at their hall for their regular monthly meeting on Thursday evening with Mrs. W. Hudson in charge. It was opened in the usual way. Roll call was answered by a Hallowe'en joke. Many letters were read from various sources. Mrs. O. E. Ashley read a letter from Mrs. Morrison of Caithness, Scotland, a member of the W.I. there. She described their method of farming and told of their work for the soldiers. They are prepared for a long war and are confident of winning. Plans were made for a party in the near future. It was decided to want until after the week of the 13th of November when there will be a house to house canvass for the Red Cross to see if they will organize a Red Cross unit here to work with the Napanee branch. Some of the members are already knitting and helping in other work. Mr. Francis Murphy sang a couple of songs accompanied by the guitar. Mrs. Claude Nugent and Mrs. Tom McCambridge gave another talk and demonstration on meat cooking. The National Anthem was sung. Tables were spread and a splendid supper was served to about fifty. Dancing was enjoyed for a couple of hours after supper. Music was furnished by Messrs. Ross Parks and Edgar Oliver.

BRITISH CAUSE AND AIMS

So well did Lord Halifax, the British Foreign Minister, express the British and Allied cause and war aims during his broadcast on Tuesday that the German Nazis thought it was a direct reply to the peace mediation offer made to the belligerents by the Queen of the Netherlands and the King of the Belgians. In fact the radio speech had been arranged days before and advanced copies of the speech had been sent out to the press hours before the time of delivery set for 3.30 p.m. E.S.T., whereas the news of the offer of the two monarchs was not received until long after the advance copy of the Halifax speech had been sent out.

The German Nazis know what the British aims are and so they said that this was the British answer.

In fact it contains the generally accepted view in Britain of Allied aims.

The Germans understand what Britain means.

But Britain has promised careful consideration of the peace plea of the monarchs who have offered their services as mediator in the conflict, so Prime Minister Chamberlain stated. Poland and France will be consulted.

There is a feeling that peace is impossible under the present conditions with Germany unlikely to yield to any such terms as just treatment of the nations which she has seized and enslaved in East Europe. Nazis are not very optimistic as they realize the Allied stand which would mean a return to the status quo before the absorption of Austria, Czecho-Slovakia and Poland as well as guarantees which must be unbreakable and iron-bound against German aggression and the worst aspects of Hitlerism. That is the very spirit of the Halifax speech and the view of British newspapers.

Britain and France appreciate the sincerity of the plea made by the two rulers and will give it every consideration.

POPPY DAY APPEAL

Blood-red reminder of the Great War of a quarter century ago and the gallant sacrifices made by thousands of heroic Canadians will be brought to residents of the city on Saturday when the annual Poppy Day appeal will be made by officials of the "remnants".

The symbolism of the poppy, its blood-red appropriateness takes on a deeper significance each year. The Great War of 1914-18 is gradually passing into legend. On the famous Western Front another war has started. To those to whom the torch was thrown has been bequeathed the duty of "carrying on" in the new battle for which they gave their all in the dark days of the previous war.

Canada, along with the whole Empire has adopted the Poppy as a symbol for Remembrance Day. On Saturday, Belleville will pause, as every other part of Canada, in its normal activities to pay silent tribute to those gallant men who paid the supreme sacrifice and to those who came back, broken in body, yet uncomplaining in bearing their fortitudes and suffering.

And by buying the Poppies not only will Canada pay its tribute to those who marched away, but to those gallant remnants who came back and secured their only means of livelihood through the sale of the scarlet emblems.

All Canadians should wear a Poppy on Saturday. For that day is not only the Day of Remembrance but of rededication to the work of continuing the structure of civilization where the workers of a previous generation left off.

LORD HALIFAX TO THE BRITISH PEOPLE

Lord Halifax defined in general British war aims in his broadcast to the British nation—"We are fighting in defence of freedom; we are fighting for peace; we are meeting the challenge to our own security and that of all others; we are defending the rights of all nations to live their own lives; we are fighting against the substitution of brute force for law as an arbiter between nations; against the violation of the sanctity of treaties and disregard of the pledged word."

He declared that "it must, accordingly, be our resolve to protect the future from a repetition of the same injuries that German aggression has inflicted on Europe in these last few years, but also as far as we can repair the damage successfully wrought by Germany on weaker neighbors." He pointed out the cruel persecutions of causes and persons in Germany who were denied elementary rights so that the challenge is at once extended to something instinctive and profound in the universal conscience of mankind." We are fighting to maintain the rules of law and equality and mercy in dealing between man and man in the great society of civilized states.

"We are all united in will," he said, referring to the Allies, "and under Providence we have the power to prove also the supreme folly with which the German Government has moved to its own destruction."

Viscount Halifax is satisfied that "through victory in this conflict of physical force we can achieve our purpose." He dealt with "after victory what then?" Britain has no territorial ambitions, seeks no vindicitive peace, he said. Then he spoke of a new world which Britain seeks.

"The new world that we seek will enlist the cooperation of all peoples on the basis of human equality, self-respect and mutual tolerance. We shall have to think out again many things that lie at the root of international contacts, social and political and economic, and find a means of reconciling the necessity for change in a constantly changing world with security against disturbance of general peace. through a resort to violence."

To this new world all nations will have their contribution to make, a great responsibility to undertake and lessons to learn from the past.

Lord Halifax stated:—"We have no idea what shape the postwar will be. We do not know the circumstances in which hostilities will end or the materials which will lie at our hand in the building of this edifice of peace. . . . No plan will endure that does not spring freely from the will of the peoples who alone can give it life. Nor will it avail for one nation alone to see a vision that has no usage for their neighbors.

"It is finally the spiritual side that counts. To many it seems strange that we should look to force, with all its suffering, to bring redemption. It is, of course, profoundly true that the things of the spirit can only be finally reconquered in the spiritual sphere and that physical force is not liable to destroy the evil which is the source of war.

"We need not deny the limitations set to what physical force alone can do, but recognition of this truth should never blind us to the fact that if, for fear of the tragedy of war, measured in human lives broken and destroyed, we rest inert before an action which we hold evil, we are surely surrendering to the annihiliation of that expression of spiritual values which have inspired and guided all human progress."

THE MONTHS AHEAD

Winter, when it comes, necessarily will tie up much of the activities on the front and it coincides with the first months during which there will flow a new stream of munitions, guns and planes to the Allied forces from American factories. Winter largely retards Hitler's activities, and it gives the Allies time to add to their armaments by construction in Britain and France and by their purchases in the United States.

So when spring comes Hitler's forces will be a comparatively weaker force than they are today because the Allies will be more powerful.

There is some opinion that the enemy may again violate before winter sets in the neutrality laws, perhaps by sending their troops into the Netherlands and Belgium to get at Britain and France.

Hitler's only step has been said by some to lie in a more vicious submarine warfare and more desperate raiding on the Atlantic, to molest convoys and merchant ships carrying supplies and munitions to Britain and France. But the Nazis now not a ship has been lost to the Brit- must not trust too much in that. In a week now not a ship has been lost to the British merchant marine though the U-boats may be roaming and two pocket battleships may be at large. The submarine menace is well under control is the last word of the Admiralty.

If it is to be a sea warfare during the winter, the Germans will find the Britons ready, as they have found them ready in the past two months.

Campbell in "Ye Mariners of England" sang of the modern Viking warriors of Britain who range the seas in all seasons, in the stormy wintry days and nights as well as in the halcyon days of spring. This song sums up the spirit of the Britishers afloat upon the ocean waves, the men in the merchant marine and the men who man the battleships, the destroyers, the submarine chasers, and the multitude of small craft which swing into war service on behalf of the world's greatest maritime empire.

"The meteor flag of England
Shall yet terrific burn,
Till danger's troubled night depart,
And the star of peace return.
Then, then, ye ocean warriors!
Our song and feast shall flow
To the fame of your name.
When storms has ceased to blow—
When the fiery fight is heard no more
And the storm has ceased to blow."

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

NOV. 9TH, 1919

The cable which extends from the police station to the bell in the city hall tower was broken last night when an alarm of fire was being sounded. Repairs are being made today.

Mr. P. J. Wims, who is leaving Belleville to reside in Montreal, was presented with a gold headed cane, suitably inscribed, by the members of the Belleville Council Knights of Columbus, of which council he is a life member. The presentation was made by Mr. J. V. C. Trualsch and the address was read by Mr. Charles Dolan.

Through the courtesy of Mr. Forhan, the staff and children of the Children's Aid Society enjoyed the pictures at Griffin's Theatre yesterday afternoon.

The electors in this city will vote in fourteen sub-divisions next January. The lists have been changed and voters should make sure their names are on the lists.

The scholars at the High School and Queen Victoria School assembled at noon today and sang lustily the National Anthem in honor of His Majesty's birthday.

Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Mitchell of Calgary, formerly of Belleville, will spend the winter here.

Mr. Hugh Thompson of Orillia is spending a short time in the city.

Mr. Fred Pepper left last evening on a trip to the Old Country.

The youngsters who do so much whistling in the gallery at the opera House should be muzzled.

The mechanics employed in the G. T. R. repair shops here are working full time.

Considering the large number of reading people we have in Belleville, the Mechanics Institute should receive better support.

Mr. J. A. Masters of London, England, is stopping at Hotel Quinte. Fifteen years ago Mr. Masters came here from Bermuda and took a course at the O. B. C.

Mrs. F. O. Lewis of Montreal is visiting her aunt, Mrs. Miles, William Street.

NOV. 9TH, 1889

Last evening in the City Hall Mr. Henry W. Bell, youngest son of Dr. James T. Bell of this city, was publicly presented with the certificate and medal of the Royal Humane Society, and in addition received a sum of money given on behalf of the citizens in recognition of his gallant action in saving the life of the six-year-old son of Mr. James McKnight, when he fell into the Moira River, near Brown's Foundry, on March 18th last. The river at this point was deep and the current swift and Mr. Bell hastily took off his overcoat and jumped over the wall, a distance of twelve feet, and on reaching the child he grasped him and brought him to safety with much difficulty. On the platform at the presentation were Mr. H. Corby, M.P., Mayor W. Jeffers Diamond, Ald Curtis Bogart, Ald. D. Collins, Dr. James T. Bell, Mr. R. S. Bell, Mr Henry W. Bell, and the father of the boy saved, Mr. James McKnight.

The hospital wards at the D. and D. Institute are vacant, but the dining room is filled three times a day.

Qbsolete Cars

Hamilton's police commissioners have been discussing the menace to public safety presented by the operation of obsolete motor cars on the highways and of the streets of the province.

This is something that demands more attention from the provincial authorities than it has received to date. Uñquestionably. there are dozens of "old wrecks" running up and down the highways that should never be permitted to turn a wheel. They have defective steering and defective brakes. Their tires are falling to pieces. And in practically all the cases the owners carry no insurance. When they do cause an acident, as they frequently do, there is no way out for the victim. He simply has to pay the loss himself.

The problem is not easy of solution, but solved, it should be. Motorists contribute an enormous amount of money to the public revenue and they are entitled to at least a reasonable amount of protection from the irresponsible percentage. Compulsory insurance, often suggested would seem to be the most effective way of dealing with the matter.—Hamilton Spectator.

Soviet Commander Menelshoff, who is in charge of the Soviet naval forces based in Estonia, in accordance with the recent Estonian-Soviet treaty, is shown, LEFT, being welcomed to Tallin, capital of the little Baltic republic, by Estonian Army Commander Reek. The treaty gives the Soviet the right to base warships in Tallin and to establish a permanent military garrison in Estonia.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Scars, Moles and Other Growths May Turn to Cancer

I have spoken before of the surgeon who had three patients report to him in one week with a lump in the breast, all three of whom believed they had cancer. One had gone on a European trip with her family holding her secret (cancer with death to follow) within her heart rather than spoil the plans of her family. Another had discovered the lump when she was some thousands of miles from home and travelled all that distance in despair rather than consult a physician in the city so far from home. . . . And the story of the third was equally tragic.

Not one of these three women had cancer yet all endured weeks and months of agony of mind before consulting a physician.

Every one past forty with a persistent lump or a slow or non-healing sore should consult a physician. It it is not cancer, relief of mind is obtained; if it is cancer, the chances of removing the cancer by surgery, Xray or radium are excellent. Neglected, death will follow.

Most cancers grow rapidly. When a mole, lump, scar, or other growth has been present for months or even years, it is only natural that it is not considered cancerous. But if changes begin to take place in these common or innocent growth, then the fact that they may develop into cancer should not be forgotten.

Dr. H. Montgomery, Rochester, Minn., in Archives of Dermatology and Syphilology, shows that in 20 percent or more of all the conditions mentioned above—scars, moles, lumps, and other growths—skin cancer develops' In some of these lumps, moles, and scars, cancerous growth and innocent growth are going on at the same time.

While the fact that the great majority of these common skin conditions never develop into cancer is reassuring, nevertheless the fact that some of them are forerunners of skin cancer must be remembered.

Don't disturb these moles, scars, or growth in any way but make it a point about once a month to examine them carefully to see if any changes are taking place in them.

Fortunately, these skin conditions, even if they turn to cancer, are readily cured by surgery, Xray, and radium.

Relaxation in Britain

In Germany there has been no audible grumbling about regimentation and regulations due to the war. In Britain there has been much.

The reasons are apparent. In the first place, the Nazis are accustomed to regimentation. In the second place, they know if they voice criticism of the Nazi bureaucracy they will face either death or a concentration camp. The British, on the other hand, are not accustomed to regimentation, and they know they are free to express their opinions.

The British Government had regulations ready in advance of the conflict. These were prepared for the protection of the people. It was considered likely that the Germans would attempt a "blitzkrieg" aerial warfare on Britain, and no chances were taken.

Now that the war is two months old, and there have been no mass air raid attacks, the people are apt to regard some of these regulations as unnecessary nuisances, and do not hesitate to say so. The result is that there is a tendency by authorities to loosen up the restrictions, and allow a more normal life. If the Nazis were to stage mass air raids, then the people might see more reason to some of the regimentation. But the Britisher has to be shown a good reason for accepting bureaucratic control before he will willingly accept it.

One of the troubles, of course, is that in wartime persons are given rather arbitrary authority which they never had before, and which they do not know how to use. There are always enough of these to become a pain in the neck. They start throwing their weight around and cause resentment. It is not easy to prevent this, as it is a characteristic of many humans.

No doubt as the war proceeds, some of these difficulties will straighten themselves out. But Britishers will fight best if they have not to take too many orders from too many people. They will give their last ounce of blood, if necessary, but they don't want to be pushed around while doing it.—Windsor Star.

German Atrocities

Herr Goebbels may wish the world to believe that the British Government's "White Paper" stories of Nazi atrocities are merely wartime propaganda, and not to be taken seriously. Unfortunately for him, however, there is ample proof to support the charges.

There are 3,600 refugees from Germany in a camp in Kent, England. Because of their German nationality they became "enemy aliens" when war broke out. They are, of course, only enemies of Hitlerism.

These pitiful people know the facts. Many of them have been in concentration camps, and know the horrors of life there. They are witnesses against Hitlerism, and their testimony is in the form of bitter truth. Nothing that the British Ministry of Information could possibly publish could be more effective than the experience of these refugees.

Nor are these refugees confined to Britain. There are some of them in many countries of the world. Their words are now available to haunt their persecutors. No propaganda Herr Goebbels devises can be half so effective as the evidence these emigres can give. The best propaganda against Germany is that which the Nazis themselves have provided by their cruelty. The evidence of the refugees is merely a case of chickens coming home to roost on the German hatchery.—

STAMPCOLLECTION VALUED AT $1860

Property of Late Ralph Garratt of Wellington Contains Many Fine Specimens

Picton—A stamp collection with a catalogued value of $1860 and containing 1980 Canadian stamps, is part of the estate of Ralph Garratt who died last spring at Wellington. It is one of the finest stamp collections of its kind in Canada and is to be offered for sale by Rev. Rufus Garratt, his brother, to whom it was left.

Wm. W. Neill, Toronto, former bank manager at Wellington, and H. A. Jolley were called upon by the estate to value the collection. It required four day to catalogue the lot and 21 pages of foolscap were used in typin the list.

Mr. Garratt was an enthusiastic philatelist most of his life. He started collecting when a boy of 14 years and worked at it until his death at the age of 87 years. He specialized in early Canadian and Newfoundland stamps. He had a specimen of nearly all Canadian stamps issued.

Mr. Garratt also collected a complete set of stamps issued before Confederation in Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island, and lacked but eight stamps of a complete set of those issued in British Columbia. These were gathered over 70 years ago. Many of these specimens are not available today.

Among the collection, Mr. Garratt had two complete sets of Diamond Jubilee issue of 1897, one set being unused and the other used. Each set comprises 16 stamps, beginning at 1-2 cent to $5. The unused set is valued at $95.95 and the used set at $65.

Among the valuable stamps is a Prince Edward Island 3-penny blue of 1861, unusued, catalogued at $45. Others range in value from $10 to $50. A collection of the Registration stamps of 1875 contains fine specimens of 2-cents orange, 5-cent green and 8-cent blue, the blue being valued at $12 each. There are one of each, used and unused, in the blue set.

One of the most beautiful stamps is the Christmas stamp, issued at Christmas, 1898, when Sir William Mulock was postmaster-general.

Mr. Garratt also collected many rare covers and documents with large seals, as well as coins, the latter collection being a large one.

Mr. Garratt collected almost all the Newfoundland issues to date, the exception being a half dozen very early issues.

The stamps are unusually good specimens. Mr. Garratt was particular in securing good cancellation and perfectly placed perforations. In spite of the fact many had been in his possession for over 70 years, none are torn and all retain their natural colours.—Picton Gazette.

Lest we forget our Veterans, wear a poppy, Remembrance Day, Nov. 11

Precious? Certainly!

When, during the reign of James I., clay pipes were first made in England, the bowls were only a quarter of an inch across—about the width of a cigarette! They were so small because tobacco was so precious. It cost three shillings an ounce. Three shillings then was worth eighteen shillings now. So, roughly speaking, tobacco 300 years ago cost the equivalent of $72.00 a pound.

In those days it was stated officially, "Some of the gentry bestow three and some four hundred pounds a year" on tobacco. Four hundred pounds under James I. had the same buying power as $12,000 under George VI. So, it was only "the gentry" who could enjoy tobacco.

Today smoking is among the most democratic of pleasures. And, through the unceasing efforts of the tobacco industry, the lowest-priced brands are far superior in fragrance and flavour to the best procurable 300 years ago... at that, half the money you pay for a package of cigarettes goes to the Federal Treasury.

Present World Unrest, The Causes and Outcome Discussed by E. Vincent

A series of three meetings held by the local branch of the British Israel World Federation, concluded Tuesday night. The subject of the series was the present world unrest and the speaker Mr. E. Vincent of the Headquarters Staff, Toronto revealed in his first address that the first causes were to be found in ancient history going back to the families of Cain and Adam. He traced the two branches to the flood period and showed that Naamah, a descendant of Cain, was married to Japheth, the son of Noah and that, from that union had sprung the races of people who all down the ages had been antagonistic to the descendants of Shem, from which line had come Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and the Israel people.

He revealed that it was a Cainite people who were responsible for the spiritual downfall of the Israel people, a downfall which resulted in the deportation of Israel to Media and Judah to Babylonia. In dealing with the latter people he showed from Scripture that only a small portion of Judah returned from Babylonia and upon their return started to intermarry with the Cainite peoples, an intermarriage that resulted in the present-day Jew having Semitic features.

Founded Babylonian Empire.

He then traced the Japhetic peoples and showed that branches of this stock had founded the Babylonian and Assyrian Empires. From this point he followed the Israel people, tracing the route they took across Europe as they escaped from their captivity. He showed that it was these peoples, under many names, as the Massagatae, the Goti, the Scythians, the Goths and finally the Saxons, Frisians, Angles, Jutes, etc., who had broken down the empires of Babylonia, Medo-Persia, Greece, Rome and the succession of kingdoms which formed the Holy Roman Empire right up to the last Great War.

Germans, Russians, Same Stock.

He then stated that we are still faced today with the same forces for he claimed that the Russians and Germans are of the Japhetic stock which all down the ages have been antagonistic to Israel, whom the speaker said was the British.

Reviews Events Since 1918.

In the second address, the speaker confined his talk to more modern times, but prefaced his address by giving many proofs from Scripture that we are living today in the last days of the present age or dispensation. He then reviewed the events since 1918 and stated that the three powers who had caused the world unrest were still the same peoples he had spoken of the previous evening.

He reviewed the action of the German people since 1918 and claimed that to talk of abolishing Hitler or Hitlerism was not enough. He said Hitler could not have torn up the Treaty of Versailles, over-run Austria, Czecho-Slovakia and Poland, if he had not had the will of the German people behind him.

Quoting from the writings of Goethe he showed that this great poet had nothing but contempt for his own people. Continuing, the speaker then warned his hearers against peace propaganda and said that from now on the dominant partner of the Russo-German alliance would be Stalin.

Predicts No War on Western Front.

That there would be no great war on the western front, but that the conflict would swing south-east was also the opinion of the speaker who said that the true objective of our enemies was the overthrow of the British Empire. To achieve this they would try to possess Palestine and the Suez Canal. The former, because it is the key of the military situation of the entire earth as all history shows, the latter to cut the life-line of empire. Referring to Egypt, he said that Mussolini would soon realize he was being double-crossed and would then strike for his own dream and attack Egypt. That Egypt would fall and the Italian armies would sweep into Palestine following the Allenby route, but there be overthrown. The arrival of Germany and Russia in this land would be met by God Himself who, by the use of natural laws would bring ruin to these anti-God forces. The whole story, said the speaker, was to be found in the 38th and 39th chapter of Ezekiel. God would manifest Himself as God and Israel (Britain) would realize her national identity.

Prophesies of the Great Pyramid.

On the third evening the speaker gave a most interesting address, assisted by charts, on the Great Pyramid. Giving at first a comprehensive description of the immensity of the structure, which the speaker said was 2½ times as high as Belleville's city hall and nearly ¾-mile around, containing 5,000,000 tons of stone, he showed that it contained many astronomical features which proved that the architect could have been none other than God Himself. He then showed the system of chambers and passages and pointed out that critical days of Israel (British) history were indicated, such as the Exodus, the Birth and Death of Christ, the commencement and end of the Great War, the commencement of the economic depression, were all marked to the day exactly. He then showed that many recent happenings were also indicated, and, while he consistently refused to prophesy he did show certain features which may have future significance. He stressed the point that the pyramid was not a prophet, but a witness to the truth of the Bible, given to the people who used the inch as a standard of measure, the people of the inch, the British. Many at the close of the meeting expressed appreciation to the speaker and the whole audience hoped for a speedy return visit.—(Contributed.)

PICTON

57TH ANNIVERSARY IS FAMILY EVENT

Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Browne Honored by Picton Folk at Dinner

Picton, Nov. 9 — One of Prince Edward County's best known couples, Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Browne, celebrated the 57th anniversary of their wedding at their home here on Wednesday, Nov. 8. On this occasion they were privileged to have with them their family of three, Dr. G. N. Browne of Toronto, Mrs. Lou Metcalfe of South Bay and J. Philip Browne of Picton, along with their granddaughter, Mrs. H. Anderson, Toronto and several local relatives. An anniversary dinner was served with the table decorated with some of the many flowers which were sent by their many friends. Many messages of congratulations and good wishes were received.

Mr. and Mrs. Browne were married at South Bay, her maiden name being Emma Farrington, daughter of the late Capt. and Mrs. Phillip Farrington. They resided at Cherry Valley for some years before coming to Picton. At the Valley, Mr. Browne conducted a grocery store and in Picton was connected with the gasoline and oil business.

Mrs. Browne has been particularly active in the Women's Institutes of the county. At the time of the Great War she was county president and her able leadership resulted in a great deal of work being accomplished. She was also president when the county hospital was built and the W. I. again rallied to her call and furnished a number of rooms which they still maintain. She is still an active member of the Children's Aid Society and entertains the board at her home for the meetings. She supports organizations of the United Church and has been for twenty years a member of the Rebekahs. Every good cause interests her and her friends are legion. Her home is always open and callers are always welcome.

Mr. Browne is a great reader and is an advocate for reading the better kinds of books. He is familiar with the classics and keeps up-to-date on current events. Having lived in Picton all his life he can recall much interesting history. He is keenly interested in horses and horse racing and knows the records and pedigrees of the leading trotters and pacers in Canada and the United States. His hobby is chicken raising and here again he has made it a point to have a thorough knowledge of the subject.

The years leave few marks on this esteemed couple. They say that the secret of a happy life is to keep busy and interested. This they have always done and it appears to have agreed with them. Friends who know them well state that they might well be pointed out as the ideal happily married couple.

Dance Held

The Ladies' Auxiliary of Post 78 Canadian Legion, held a dance Wednesday night in the Orange Hall. There was a large crowd in attendance and the legion orchestra furnished music. Flags and streamers were used in decoration.

Red Cross Granted $750

Prince Edward County Council has granted $750 to the Prince Edward branch of the Canadian Red Cross. It will be used to purchase supplies to be made up locally. The wool being used was purchased as a result of donations by T. W. Kinney and Judge E. H. McLean who each gave $75 and Dr. T. S. Philp who gave $50.

Roy McLean on Visit

Mr Roy McLean, editor of the Kelowna Courier, B.C., and formerly of Picton, is visiting here this week with his mother, Mrs. P. S. McLean, going on to Montreal where he will meet his wife who has been there some time visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. Rightmyer and also friends in Montreal.

Mrs. Ethel Glintz of Walkerton is a guest for several weeks of her daughter, Mrs. C. McCabe and Mr. McCabe.

Daily War Survey

German newspapers, all under strict government control and inspiration launched an attack on Belgium and Holland for submitting tamely to the operation of the British blockade. More German troops were stationed behind the Netherlands border recently. Reports reached Amsterdam of the constructions of new bridges leading to the border across the Rhine by German military authorities.

Haste Brings Comment

The haste and secrecy surrounding the conference between the aged Queen and the young King has also given rise to comment.

Apart from any immediate threats, Belgium and Holland have more than humanitarian reasons for desiring the early end to hostilities. Their economic life is hard hit—hit by the disruption of their trade occasioned by the blockade and a falling off in the demand for non-essential commodities.

Should the Nazi regime order an invasion of Holland or Belgium the excuse would undoubtedly be that it has a matter of life and death for the Reich. The question which now arises in many minds is whether King Leopold and Queen Wilhelmina were advised directly or indirectly that a continuance of the war would force Germany to reconsider its guarantees of Dutch and Belgium neutrality.

HOW TO OVERCOME ITCHING PILES

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is highly recommended, is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost. Program for Band Concert

It will be a big day for the members of St. Michael's Children's Band tomorrow night when the curtain goes up on their much heralded band concert at St. Michael's Academy.

A most significant thing, and to us remarkable, is the perfectly sangfroid manner which the youngsters are exhibiting just before the big occasion. In the days when youngsters were not quite so precocious as they are today (and that was in our time) it was quite the usual thing to have the jitters several days before making a public bow. Not so your child of today. He has the situation right in hand and goes through what he has to do with the greatest aplomb. They are not nearly so self conscious, which is for the best.

This applies to the St. Michael's youngsters. They are looking forward to Friday night for what youngster does not thrive on approbation. And musical critics who have heard the children in practice are profuse in their praise and certain that the show will be a grand success. Careful coaching has resulted in a high degree of musical efficiency on the part of the bandmasters and following programme proves conclusively that they have not shirked hard selections. The programme is as follows:

March, "The Conqueror"—C. Teike—Band.
Tuba Solo—"Samsonian Polka"—G. McQuaide—Theresa Meagher.
March—"Something About a Soldier"—N. Gay—Band.
Group No. 1, John Deacon, Tenor; Mary Conner Deacon, accompanist.

Military Hospital For Canada Erected At Taplow

London, Nov. 9—(CP Cable)—Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, chairman of the Canadian Red Cross Committee in the United Kingdom today announced rapid progress had been made with plans and specifications for Canada's military hospital to be established at Taplow, Buckinghamshire. The Canadian Red Cross is financing the construction and equipment.

London headquarters of the committee of nine Canadians has been established at the Savoy Hotel, with Mrs. Brian Meredith as office director.

The hospital will be known as "No. 1 base hospital." Plans approved provide a 300-bed hospital, operating rooms and other facilities.

Cost of the fully-equipped structure will be about $250,000, about one-fifth the estimated cost of a permanent hospital of the same capacity. It will be built on the Cliveden estate of Lord Astor at Taplow where Canadian Red Cross built a hospital during the last war. Taplow is about 30 miles west from the centre of London.

Construction of the base hospital is not related to the offer made by the Massey Foundation, through Hon. Vincent Massey, Canadian High Commissioner in London, of a convalescent hospital-home to cost approximately $1,000,000. This offer is still under consideration by the Dominion government.

War Demands See Horse Comeback

London, Nov. 9—(CP)—Sir Walter Gilbey, who for a long time has been a voice crying in the wilderness against the tendency to neglect the horse for faster means of transportation, celebrated his 81st birthday the other day and felt pretty happy. Breeders of racing and other classes of horses were encouraged when he said the new war had restored the horse to favor.

Sir Walter advised garage owners to convert their premises into stables, store oats where they kept tires and not envy their former competitors who wait to sell gasoline for a ration coupon and cash. He wants them to take advantage of the arrival of the second horse age because he believes the horse has come to stay.

Wagging his finger in an "I told you so" way, Sir Walter said that for nearly two decades he had prophesied England would be sorry for neglecting the horse.

"They cannot get enough horses now but once they get them back on the streets they will never let them go again," he said. "Almost all the town delivery work can be done cheaper by horse and he has not to be tied up in the stable when a war starts."

ENGAGEMENT NOTICE

Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Henley wish to announce the engagement of their daughter, Kathryn Merle, to Allan Hogg, son of Mrs. Margaret Hogg, Merritt, B.C., and the late David Hogg. Wedding to take place shortly.

A great deal of interest is being shown in the announcement of the engagement of Miss Florence Elizabeth (Betty) Roome, daughter of Mrs. Walter Roome, Dartmouth, to Corporal Richard G. Henley, R.C.A.F., son of Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Henley, of Belleville, Ontario. Miss Roome, who is a member of the office staff of the Eastern Trust Company, is very popular in the younger social and sports groups of the city. The wedding will take place in the near future.—Halifax Mail, Halifax, N.S.

Mrs. E. G. Fullerton has left Calgary to join her husband, Squadron Leader Fullerton, in Trenton. Their daughters, Miss Eva, Miss Jean and Miss Sheila Fullerton, have remained in Calgary at St. Hilda's School for Girls.

Miss Mabel McDonnell has been visiting at the home of Miss Vivian McLaughlin, Napanee.

Mrs. T. A. Mascaro and family, Tommy, Barbara and Bernard, formerly of Hamilton, are taking up residence in the city at 22 Chatham Street.

Miss Ivy Corby and Miss Peg Rowbotham were hostesses at a charming miscellaneous shower held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Sharpe, 128 Chatham Street, last evening in honor of Mrs. Steve Hook (nee Marguerite Sharpe), a recent bride. About twenty-five guests were present and the guest of honor received many lovely gifts. During the evening the "Y" basket ball team of which she has been a valued member presented Mrs. Hook with a gift. Games, contests and dancing were enjoyed and a dainty lunch was served.

Only a Lion Daunts V. O. N.

While Victorian Order nurses are prepared to face most emergencies, their training makes no provision for encounters with wild beasts. So it is not surprising that a veteran Montreal member of the Order should lose command of the situation on meeting a monstrous lion face to face in the course of duty.

Called to minister to a sick woman in a Verdun home, the nurse found it necessary to go to the cellar for articles required in the treatment.

A growl at her elbow first startled her. Directed toward the spot from which it came, the beam of her flashlight revealed a huge lion seated within a yard of her, its eyes expressing disapproval.

Her screams brought members of the household to the rescue. They explained that a circus animal trainer was boarding there and had been given permission to keep his star performer in the cellar.

Apologies were offered for failure to warn her, coupled with assurances that the animal was so docile that he wouldn't raise a paw, unless someone stepped on his tail in the dark.

The nurse is only grateful that her flashlight did not reveal a mouse.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Foreign Matter Swallowed Into Child's Lung Often Gives Rise to Pneumonia.

No discussion of foreign bodies finding their way into various orifices of a child's body would be complete unless we gave some study to the lungs. For it is when some foreign substance gets into the lung that we really have trouble.

During the early years of life, and particularly during the early months, a child's reflex actions are not as much under control as they will be later. The act of swallowing is a complex one, governed by the reflexes. A very young baby, for instances often chokes because he breathes at the time he is swallowing, and these choking spells occur more often if the child is being given his food too fast.

In premature children this condition is especially prevalent, for the reflex controls of a premature infant are even less than that of a full-time baby. I remember the first days with the Quintuplets. That was one of the things I was afraid of, and I warned the nurses again and again. That was one of the reasons we fed them with an eye dropper—so they wouldn't get too much food at a time so they wouldn't draw it into their lungs instead of their stomachs. You see, getting food into the lungs in this way is very serious, for it gives rise to pneumonia. Needless to say, pneumonia in a very young child is fatal all too often.

In full-term babies, there isn't quite as much danger of breathing food into the lungs, but still there is a danger, and care should be taken to see that it doesn't happen. As the child gets older, the danger lessens as the reflexes become more perfect.

However, I remember quite a lot of cases of older children brought to me with something in the lungs that was intended for the stomach. The danger occurs when, as the child is swallowing, something happens to cause excitement. The child opens his mouth to cry out, takes a deep breath—and down the food goes into the lungs.

When this happens, there is real danger of complications. If it were a foreign body in the stomach, we shouldn't have as much concern unless it were a pin or something else sharp. In the lungs, the danger intrudes another source. The body as a whole and the lungs in particular, do not tolerate things foreign. This is demonstrated when stitches are left in a wound too long and a swelling develops that has all the earmarks of inflammation due to any other cause. In the case of stitches, this is not serious because these are likely to be in the skin where the inflammation will do little harm.

But in the lung, a foreign substance lodged there by accident sets up an inflammation which develops very rapidly into pnuemonia.

It is a low-grade pneumonia that does develop, and it clears up if the offending substance is removed at once. The unfortunate part of it is that the presence of something in the lung may not be suspected. The child begins to run a temperature, and everyone thinks the child just has an ordinary cold, and not a great deal of attention is paid to it.

So the trouble goes on and on until an abscess forms on the lung where the foreign body is causing the irritation. When such an abscess forms, it means a long, dangerous illness with grave danger to the child's life.

Acne's Sad Antics

By HELEN FOLLETT

IF THIS preacher of pulchritude dwells frequently on the subject of black heads and pimple, it is hoped that the older members of the congregation will be patient. Acne heads the list of youth's beauty sorrows, and youth takes its grievances pretty seriously. Also, there is much to be said on this subject. One could preach many a sermon and not repeat.

The trouble begins with the pores filling with sebaceous oil that hardens and forms a blockade. The walls of the pore are stretched; the oil picks up atmospheric dust which forms an ugly black tip. In time bacteria gets busy, pus appears, a pimple results.

It is believed that acne is a local manifestation of some constitutional disturbance; it has been proved by surveys that constipation is a common cause. A diet too rich in sweets and starches, beloved by the young, is supposed to be a contributing cause.

First, add more fruits and green salads to the diet, both of which act favorably upon the intestinal tract. Second, drink plenty of water. Third, scrub and scour the entire body surface every day with soap suds and a brush.

Try a spine arching exercise if you would be limber, slender and "soople".

Lie face downward on the floor. Lift on your hands and toes until you have made an arched bridge of yourself. Come down slowly. This is not easy, especially if you have eaten the good things of the table and accumulated more fat cells than you need. Go slowly. Lift first with the hands only. As the muscles get stronger, you will be able to raise the torso higher, have more muscle control when you come back to first position.

It's an excellent exercise for reducing arms that have gone in for a policy of expansion and for trimming down thighs.

ANN RUTHERFORD. . . . .keeps her skin clear with care and diet.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

She Doesn't Smoke, Drink or Pet

Dear Miss Fairfax

I'm over 18 years of age, but don't seem to get into things. I go out occasionally with boys, but most of them consider me cold and indifferent, for you see I don't smoke, drink or pet.

However, as I don't care much for any of these boys, I don't mind what they think. You see I'm really "on my own" to make my place in the social world, and Id like to know what you would suggest as to meeting new and more interesting people. I'm spending a rather dead existence. Would you please tell me what places a girl can attend alone, or in the company of another girl? I'd like to go some place where I can enjoy myself, a thing I haven't done in ages.

Perplexed

You're very wise not to go in for "S.D. and P." as a correspondent calls smoking, drinking, and petting.

You come from a big city—what has it to offer to lonesome girls? Inquire at the "Y.W." They usually keep on hand a list of activities open to young girls. And if Im not mistaken, there's a very good girls' camp in the suburbs. Join that, to know nice boys; its well at first to make your way slowly and know girls—these usually have brothers, cousins and friends in whom they are not vitally interested, and they are glad to introduce them to other girls.

To become acquainted with the right people is likely to be a slow and sometimes laborious process. But, my dear, it's worth while. Write again and let me know how you're making out.

Proper Way to Become Acquainted With a Girl

Dear Miss Fairfax

I'm interested in a certain girl and she appears to be interested in me. But I don't know anybody to introduce us. I meet her almost every day on my way to work. I have phoned her several times, asking for a chance of meeting her, and she always has another date. One day I thought I'd be brave, so I stopped her on the street and asked if we might not talk a little. But she turned me down and acted as if she had been annoyed. However, she still continues to look at me in the same loving way.

Jackie.

I'm afraid there isn't any way to meet a girl without an introduction. It doesn't always have to be the formal type—if you happen to be in the same class on school or college, or if you are guests under the same roof, or belong to the same club or community centre—these things now constitute an introduction.

However, this girl evidently does not want you to try and crash an introduction. So you've got to use your ingenuity, my dear boy. Find out the clubs, church, community centre or societies to which she belongs, and perhaps you can join them. If you know where she works, you may get acquainted with some of the men and girls who work there.

If she's of the conventional type, she may get angry at your persistent crashing. Use your head as millions of men have done before you.

A One-Way Pocket

Dear Miss Fairfax

I know a certain young man who is always bragging about his feminine list, but more than once he has been left out of things because he couldn't get a girl. Also he has a one-way pocket. When a crowd of us go out together to a movie or for refreshments after the show, he gets "leaden feet", and makes it his business to be the last one to reach the box-office window, and always lets the other fellows take the check at restaurants.

He doesn't scatter sunshine, and is very clever about handing on his troubles. What do you think of such a person?

On-looker

Why let him worry you at all? If he has that fatal gift—leaden feet around a box-office window— his next step will be home, where he's likely to remain minus further invitations.

You don't seem to like this young man, so why take such an interest in him?

Answers to Your Medical Puzzles

By Logan Clendening, M.D.

"In reading your discussion of the inoculations to produce immunity in school children, the question occurs to me whether it would not be possible to give all the immunizations at one dose."

Not only possible, but very advantageous. The report of a public health officer says that he gave, in 1930, in a group of rural counties, 60,000 doses of vaccine. Experience proved that a person could be immunized against diphtheria, typhoid fever and smallpox at the same time without any more reaction than one gets from vaccines given for only one disease.

Many schools have been inoculated 100 per cent with three simultaneous vaccinations. Many pupils were tested two years later with the Schick test for diptheria and found to be immune.

The advantages are that parents will bring children for three inoculations and then fail to show up for any others. Children develop a fixed dislike to being inoculated after three doses. Who blames them?

During five years of experience, according to this report, there were no fatalities, and no one was made seriously ill.

Eye Troubles and Body Disorders

Q. What conditions and symptoms are caused by eye strain?

A. A long list of functional disorders are attributed to eye strain — nervousness, mental dullness, laziness, headaches, nausea, indigestion, chronic dyspepsia. Parents and teachers must think of this source of functional trouble and institute complete routine examinations of the eye in backward and listless children.

It also works the other way around; many bodily disorders that are obscure and uncomplaining may cause eye trouble. A prominent Chicago oculist says that a majority of those he examined are actually in need of other medical attention. His statement is based upon practical experience of many years, during which he examined and treated thousands of eye cases. A good oculist probably turns down more applicants than those he prescribes glasses for.

Action of Sauerkraut Juice

Has there ever been any study made of the action of sauerkraut juice, or is what we hear about it based just on opinion and guess work?

Dr. Gehlen, of Erlangen, made a careful laboratory study of sauerkraut juice and found it to have quite complicated pharmacologic properties.

Sauerkraut as a laxative depends mostly on its bulk. It is one of the best cathartics because it contains so much roughage. But the juice itself is also laxative, probably largely on account of its lactic content.

Taking sauerkraut juice as a fresh product, it contains yeast and lactic acid bacilli. When pasteurized and filtered, it is clear with five per cent solid content and one and one-half per cent ash.

Ten to 20 cc. of this regularly produced catharsis in cats and humans. Strips of intestinal muscle responded with rhythmic peristaltic action to application of neutralized juice. It can be proved pharmacologically that it has an action on the automatic nervous system.

Sauerkraut juice is a good source of vitamin C and vitamin B.

It also has an effect on the heart producing slowing and increased output.

A NOTE TO TEACHER

Most schools require a note explaining the absence of little Jack or Jill on the previous day or days. So many of my readers have written me lately asking for a general form for such a note that I'd like to suggest this brief one, showing the correct salutation and correct form of signature:

Dear Miss Allen,

Because of the storm yesterday, and because John had a cold, I thought it wise to keep him at home. Will you please excuse his absence?

Very sincerely yours,
Mary Smith Brown
(Mrs. Edward Brown)

Engagment Ring Problem

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

I was told recently by a friend that it is not fashionable to wear an engagement ring. I disagreed and expressed my opinion that such a decision rests with the couple as to whether or not the lady receives an engagement ring.

However, don't you think the gentleman should present his fiancee with a ring if his financial circumstances permit it?

I would appreciate your opinion.

A Reader

I can't imagine where or how your friend got the idea that it is not "fashionable" to wear an engagement ring. Perhaps the answer to this question is the famous answer given by "Diamond Jim" Brady, when someone criticised him for wearing so many jewels. You probably remember his answer, "Those that has 'em wears 'em." There is another possible answer that may have cause her observation. Many women nowadays prefer not to wear their engagement rings at all times. This is especially true when their wedding rings are diamond bands. There are so many married women engaged in business or in the professions or otherwise extremely busy during these hours only their wedding rings. This is very noticeable of late, and this may have caused your friend to think that these women do not ever wear their engagement rings, or that they do not have engagement ring.

It's true too, as I have often said in my column, that many girls today choose not to have engagement rings, preferring to wait and have diamond wedding rings; while others prefer to apply the money to buying household items.

In other words, it rests with the girl's choice as to whether or not she wishes an engagement ring, and it certainly should rest with her choice as to what kind of ring she prefer. However, if her fiance has his heart set on giving her an engagement ring . . . and the majority of men have pride in abiding by this romantic tradition . . . a girl shouldn't emphasize the practical when her gallant and generous fiancee takes delight in the romantic gesture!

Courtesy Tip

Some girls and women persist in making the mistake of rising when a man is introduced to them. Just keep your seat, ladies, smile pleasantly, and say, "How do you do, Mr. Smith".

BRIDGE STREET W.M.S.

The regular meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of Bridge Street United Church, was held in the Sunday School rooms, November 3, Miss Lazelle Brown, presiding and opening the meeting with a reading.

Especially invited guests, Miss Olazie and Mrs. Outerbridge, both of Japan were introduced to the ladies. Mrs. Helliwell and Mrs. Lind recently of China, were unable to be present.

Mrs. Osborne and Mrs. Ash led in prayer. This was followed with a responsive reading by Miss Brown, Mrs. Dyson, Mrs. Ackerman, Mrs. Holmes and Mrs. Cronk.

Mrs. Outerbridge sang very beautifully the hymn "There were Ninety and Nine"

Mrs. W. L. Smythe of Pembroke, was the guest speaker of the afternoon. Her subject was "Christian Stewardship" and the point was stressed that God is waiting for the influence of your personality to touch some one whom God wants touched; only thus will the world be transformed.

Mrs. De Roche moved a vote of thanks to Mrs. Smythe for her message to the society and to Mrs. Outerbridge for her beautiful song.

The Finance Committee reported that $165.00 had been received at this Autumn Thank-offering meeting.

Dr. Semple spoke a few words in memory of Dr. Baker and said that he was still present in spirit and rejoicing in the faithfulness and generosity of the ladies organization.

Presentations

On Friday evening, November third, friends and neighbours of Mr. Roy Dunkly, invaded his home to do honour to his son, Clarence Dunkly, who has joined Prince Edward Regiment and presented him with a wrist watch. Mr. Clarence Fleming acted as chairman. The programme opened with community singing, Mrs. A. Pyear at piano, Mr. Frank Harding, Harry Couch, and Don Spencer gave guitar selections. Clarence Fleming gave a reading, Archie Bailey read the address and Oscar Merrick made the presentation. The address is as follows:

Dear Clarence

Availing ourselves of this first opportunity since your enlistment to have a social time with you, your friends in this community have come into your home this evening. We come with mixed feeling, on the one hand we feel very keenly the nearness of your time of departure for active service with the Forces of our King, and to say good-bye to those whom we call friends is never easy or pleasant. But on the other hand, we come to this occasion with a sense of pride in that you have volunteered yourself for such service in the cause of liberty as your country may require of you. We are confident that you will not only give a willing service but that you will acquit yourself as true man in all the situations you may have to face.

We shall therefore follow with great interest your future course and be very proud when we shall hear from time to time of your success. The Apostle Paul in one of his letters to the Corinthian Church says to them with pride:—

"Watch ye, stand fast in the faith, quit you like men, be strong." This we would suggest as our farewell word to you at this time, and may God bless you and keep you and in all your way protect you and give you His Peace.

Will you please accept this small gift as an expression of our regard and good wishes.

Signed on behalf of the community—Archie Bailey, Clarence Fleming, Harry Couch, Oscar Merrick.

West Huntingdon

West Huntingdon, Nov. 9. — On Friday evening a large number of friends and neighbors gathered at Mr. and Mrs. Jas. McGowan's home and tendered them a farewell party. Mr. and Mrs. McGowan and Norman are leaving soon for Haileybury in Northern Ontario. Mr. Philip Carr was chairman for the evening's entertainment. Arthur Wilson read an appropriate address. Messrs. Clayton Wright and Sandy McCurdy spoke on behalf of the community. Mr. Melville Donnan gave a reading and also led the gathering in prayer asking God's blessing for Mr. and Mrs. McGowan in their new home. Mr. and Mrs. McGowan each gave brief addresses thanking their neighbors and friends for their kindness. The singing of "Blessed Be The Tie That Binds" closed this part of the program. The remainder of the evening was spent in a social manner. In token of the esteem in which they are held Mr. and Mrs. McGowan were presented with handsome occasional chairs. Following is the address.

Dear Friends: When Henry Francis Lyte wrote that immortal hymn, "Abide With Me, Fast Falls the Eventide", he voiced a statement that has been universally true when he said, "Change and decay in all around I see". How true to life this is. We are surely living in a world of change. Ever since God commanded Abraham to leave his friends and neighbors and to step out on faith, not knowing where he went, there has been constant change. Empires, nations, communities, old landmarks, etc., change. A portion of a prayer of one of God's saints was, "The time and place that know us now shall shortly know us no more forever," is also true and so, dear friends, we your neighbors and friends, having learned of your intention to leave our community and make your home in another part of our province, have assembled here this evening to spend a social time with you and to wish you many years of happiness in your new home. We have appreciated very much your readiness to help down through the years in every way you could. Your home has indeed been a house by the side of the road where you have been a friend to man. In asking you to accept these gifts may they ever remind you of your associates in West Huntingdon and may God's richest blessings attend you always.

Bride-to-Be Given Shower.

On Wednesday afternoon Mrs. Clayton Wright entertained some thirty young ladies of the community in honor of Miss Helen Wright, bride-to-be, when she was presented with a linen shower. Mrs. Foster Wilson presided over the following program: Community singing, prayer by Miss Sarah Wilson, solo by Mrs. Raymond Chambers, reading by Audrey Bird, duet by Misses Lenora Stapley and Marion McMullen, contest conducted by Miss Marjorie McInroy. The following address was read by Miss Annie Cook:

Dear Helen: We, your friends and school mates have gathered here this afternoon to spend a social time with you before you leave us to embark on the good ship Matrimony to sail away to a new home and new friends. We could not let this momentous event pass without in some way showing our love and esteem for you. We trust that your same sunny smile will make new friends for you in your new home and hope God's richest blessings of health, happiness and prosperity will follow you through the coming years. As a token of our friendship we ask you to accept these gifts and as you use them may they bring to you some happy thought of the giver. Signed on behalf of your girl friends and neighbors—Annie Cooke, Marjorie McInroy, Georgie Pitman.

Birthday Party For Mrs. Adams.

Mrs. M. A. Adams, who resides with her daughter, Mrs. James S. Wilson, received a real surprise on Tuesday evening, Oct. 31, when a number of friends gathered to celebrate with her on the occasion of her 82nd birthday. Those attending were Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Tummon and Arline of Stirling, Mr. and Mrs. Keith Bush and daughter of Sidney, Mr. and Mrs. William Fox, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Ashley and Harold of town, and Mr. and Mrs. Hugh McFee of Keene. The evening was spent in a social way and at the close a lunch was served. A birthday cake with 82 candles adorned the table. Mrs. Adams is enjoying the best of health and is very much interested in the present day happenings locally and at large. Her many friends here wish for her many more happy birthdays.

Louise Emerson, young doughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Emerson, underwent a successful operation in Belleville General Hospital Thursday for appendicitis.

Mrs. Aaron Ashley is visiting her sister, Mrs. Blackburn of Orillia.

Mrs. V. Barragar is visiting with friends in Belleville.

Mrs. Gerow of Carmel spent a few days recently with her daughter, Mrs. Delbert McCurdy.

PRESS FEATURES MUNICH BOMBING

Paper Suggests Bombing Planned by Nazis to Gain Sympathy for Hitler

London, Nov. 9—(CP Cable)—The Munich bombing was featured in the British press today with greater prominence than any story since the declaration of war, not forgetting the tripartite Ankara Treaty.

Huge headlines stressing Adolf Hitler's escape and blacktype emphasis placed on the fact the bomb exploded only 15 minutes after he left the Buergerbraukeller made editorial comment virtually unnecessary.

The Star's headline read: "Fifteen minutes save Fuehrer." while the Evening News Poster cried: "Hitler just missed it."

Some headlines said Rudolf Hess, the No. 3 Nazi, was "reported killed." Some newspapers even printed obituary notices for Hess. Columns were devoted to previous attempts on Hitler's life and the history of the 1923 beer cellar putsch.

The Nazi attempt to blame the British secret service was countered here with a suggestion in some quarters that the alleged attempt on Hitler's life might have been faked by the Nazis themselves in an attempt to rally the nation at the Fuehrer's side, in a manner similar to that in which the party gained absolute power through the burning of the Reichstag in 1923.

ARRANGE FOUR-DAY MEET

London, Nov. 8 — (CP-Cable)—Steps are being taken with a view to arranging a four-day race meeting at Ascot next June, it was learned today. Details of the plan will be issued later.

Ascot is the most fashionable of English race meetings and usually is attended by the King and Queen who, weather permitting, drive down the course in an open carriage prior to the first race. Last year Their Majesties were absent in Canada during the meeting.

Thomasburg

Thomasburg, Nov. 9.—The November meeting of Christ Church Anglican Women's Auxiliary was held on Friday evening at the home of Mrs. Edward Carter with a large attendance and several visitors. The president, Miss E. Porter, was in charge. The members were reminded of those sick among their number. The Scripture lesson for this meeting was given by Mrs. Wesley Morton. Roll call was answered with a donation to the Fish Pond for the annual bazaar. The secretary, Mrs. Clarence Mouck read the minutes of the previous meeting and correspondence included a report of the Diocesan Board meeting and a letter of thanks for flowers from one of our members who is ill. During the business period it was decided to pack a bale of good used clothes for the needy in our own diocese. Plans were made to have the pictures of "The Royal Visit to Canada" shown in the hall here. Arrangements were made to hold the annual supper and bazaar early in December and various committees were appointed.

The program in charge of Mrs. Edward Carter and Mrs. S. D. Prindle included a solo by Katherine Coulter, a reading by Mrs. Beazer and a reading appropriate for All Saints' Day by Mrs. Prindle. The meeting closed with the singing of the hymn "Go Labor On" and the rector, Rev. P. C. Beazer, pronounced the Benediction. Mrs. W. Geen put on a contest after which the hostess served a delicious lunch assisted by Mrs. M. Geen.

Rev. H. B. and Mrs. Herrington were guests on Friday evening of Mr. and Mrs. James Jeffrey. During the evening the baby daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jeffrey was baptised and also the baby son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Irvin.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Morton attended the Morton-Parson marriage at Avondale on Wednesday.

The public school pupils enjoyed a holiday on Friday when their teachers, Miss E. Reynolds and Miss M. Huffman were in Peterboro attending the religious conference of the Ontario Educational Association.

A number of the laymen of the Anglican Church attended the Laymen's Banquet at Christ Church, Belleville, on Wednesday evening.

Mrs. J. E. Brown has returned home after visiting Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Morton, Avondale, and Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Morton, Foxboro.

Mrs. Ritchie Geen and baby son came home from Tweed Hospital on Sunday.

The Moira Valley Cheese Factory closed on Friday. A meeting of the patrons was held on Thursday evening and Mr. John Dudgeon was reengaged as cheesemaker for another season.

Relatives and friends from here attended the funeral of the late Mr. Murney Robinson at Bethel on Friday. Interment was made in Thomasburg Cemetery. Rev. H. B. Herrington had charge of the service.

Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Morton and Miss Luella of Avondale were the guests on Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Morton.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Bishop, Bruce and Dorothy of Belleville were guests on Sunday of Mrs. M. Geen and family.

Mrs. Edith Taverner of Napanee was a week-end guest of her sister, Mrs. W. H. Elliott.

Mr. and Mrs. William Geen were guests on Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. H. Varty of Bogart.

B. C. I. Win Practice Game Over Albert by 4-0 Score And Are Banquet Guests

Albert College Team Hosts to New Quinte Football Champions at Luncheon

CUP IS PRESENTED

Fine Sporting Gesture on Part of Group Losers; Clare Boots All Points for Collegiate

Playing out the remaining games of their Bay of Quinte senior C. O. S. S. A. group schedule the B. C. I. group champions defeated the Albert College griddsters 4 to 0 on the latter's field yesterday to ring up their fourth consecutive win of the current Interscholastic football season over the Alberts. The game, which was of the exhibition nature, was productive of some fine playing despite the fact the field was quite heavy and muddy.

Following the game the Collegiate players were the guests of Albert College at a luncheon in the main dining hall, during which time Captain Tom Woolley of Albert College, presented Captain Ross Clare of the group champion Belleville Collegiate with the Interscholastic trophy emblematic of the senior Interscholastic championship of Eastern Ontario, which had been won by Albert College in 1938. Principal Dr. Howard, of Albert College, welcomed the Collegiate squad and congratulated the present Bay of Quinte titlists in victory. Coach Pete Beach of Albert College and Coach Eddie Schrieder of the "collegians" also made impromptu remarks, making preferable mention of the splendid sportsmanship that has prevailed between the two schools in the field of athletics during the past few years.

Footing Uncertain

The heavy muddy field made footing rather uncertain throughout the entire game and minimized the team's open field plays. Fumbles were quite frequent and sturdy line work dominated the game. There was no score until the second quarter when Clare punted well over the Albert line and Woolley was roughed in a futile attempt to run the kick out. In the last minute of play B. C. I. worked the ball to Albert's 25-yard-line, following an Albert mid-field fumble, and Clare went in to kick a placement and terminate the scoring at 4-0 for the Belleville Collegiate.

Coach Eddie Schrieder injected many of his alternates into the game at rapid intervals, thus giving the substitutes ample opportunities to display their wares and obtain additional practice prior to the "collegians" launching into the C. O. S. S. A. playdowns next week. Woolley and Lougheed carried the bulk of Albert's running attack, the former standing out as the star of the game. Coach Schrieder's second string squad made a very favorable impression with their blocking and tackling all along the line, while the regular squad carried too much driving power in their clutches.

The "collegians" thoroughly appreciated the hospitality of the Albert College boys after the game, which was granted through the courtesy of Principal Dr. Howard. A swim in the spacious Albert College pool preceded the banquet tendered the B.C.I.

The line-ups: — Albert College: snap, Brawley; insides, Downing, Bailey; middles, Burrows, Chamberlain; ends, Brown, Crouch; fullbacks, Lattimer; Ruddy, halfbacks, Woolley, Lougheed and quarter, McDonald; subs, Instant, Bailey, Manning, Hughes and Partridge. Belleville Collegiate—snap, Cronk; insides, Stewart, Cearly; middles, Cavanaugh, Pickering; ends, Hart, Watson; quarter, Pigden; fullbacks, W. McBride, Sword; halfbacks, Clare, S. McBride; subs, Thorne, Zufelt, Sharpe, Warren Mulholland, Bunnett, Hunter, Tripp, O'Connor, Gardner, McCormick and Goodwin.

Referee—Morley Baker; umpire, Don Grant, both of Belleville.

Wrestling Last Night

By The Associated Press

Boston—Bobby Managoff, 240, Chicago, defeated Danno O'Mahoney, 230, Ireland, two falls out of three.

WHO IS HE?

Known only as "The Mask," this wrestler has never been defeated in a Belleville ring. Tonight at the Hume Arena he meets Chief Lone Bear, the fullblooded Oklahoma Indian, while in the main bout attraction Dave Khoen, Detroit, meets Joe Malch, Brantford and former Canadian amateur champion wrestler in a return bout following a draw here two weeks ago. Two other good bouts are on the night's card.

HORNETS TIE INDIANAPOLIS FOR TOP RUNG

Harry Currie With Pair of Goals Hero of the Pastime

SCORE IS 5-4

Winning Marker Scored Seconds Before Completion of Time

(By The Canadian Press)

Everyone can't be a hero in a hockey game so Harry Currie, with a pair of goals, wore the mantle today while Lloyd Allsby, with three, was just another tough luck player.

That was the way it worked out last night when Pittsburgh Hornets beat Philadelphia Ramblers 5-4 in an International-American League game to gain a first place tie with Indianapolis Capitols in the Western Division.

Currie, who entered the pro ranks by way of Charlottetown, scored two goals and assisted in a third to lead the Hornets to victory. His second goal, less than three minutes before the end of the game, was the winner and spoiled a game effort by the Ramblers who had trailed 4-1 in the third period.

Currie's deciding point put in the background the brilliant job turned in by Allsby who did his best for the Ramblers by scoring three times, twice in the last period when his team fought from behind.

Hornets started the scoring in the first period when Oscar Aubuchon, who went up to the Int-Am from Valleyfield of the Quebec Provincial Senior Amateur League, tallied the first of two goals.

He got his second at the three quarter mark of the second period and Currie made the count 3-0 before Allsby tallied his first goal in the last minute of the session.

Coach Larry Aurie ran the score up to 44-1 at the start of the third and then Philadelphia's defencemen turned on the heat. Allsby got his second goal, Alex Levinsky another and Allsby his third with the period a little more than half over.

Hornets recovered themselves then, however, and at 17.47 Currie picked up a pass from Mickey Drouillard, feinted his way past a couple of Ramblers and broke up the game.

Winners in their first start, New Haven Eagles will play Providence Reds in the only game tonight. The Rhode Islanders lost their first two games.

This Saturday's Big Four game in Montreal, in which the Royals of that city, winless for almost two complete seasons now, face Toronto Argonauts, will be the last for Ted Reeve, ABOVE, their coach, who took over at the start of the present season, succeeding John McDonald, who had been unable to post a win with the Cubs of the year before. A Toronto sportswriter by trade, Reeve coached for six years at Queen's University with considerable success, but recently announced his retirement from masterminding.

Coach Pete Beach and his Albert College senior Interscholastic squad put Eddie Schrieder's group champion Belleville Collegiate twelve in a tough spot last evening. Yesterday the Alberts agreed to play the "collegians" a practice game and following which the B.C.I. team was invited to luncheon at Albert College as guests of the Albert team and through the courtesy of Principal Dr. Howard. It was following the banquet that Pete Beach presented the 1939 Bay of Quinte football champions with the Eastern Ontario C.O.S.S.A. cup, won by the Albert College in 1938. In presenting the trophy to B.C.I. Mr. Beach said in part—"The cup is now yours, protect it as we did last year and keep it here in Belleville." Now Eddie Schrieder's squad is on the spot, they have to win the Eastern section of the C.O.S.S.A. or become the targets of verbal blasts for their missing the boat, that Albert piloted last year. The gathering proved not only a sporting gesture, but exemplifies the splendid sportsmanship that can be attained in Canadian sporting circles. Incidentally the "collegians" won the practice game 4-0, Ross Clare's educated toe being responsible for the scoring.

In the Trent Valley senior Interscholastic playoffs Tweed eliminated Marmora Tuesday, winning 33 to 5 and earning the right to meet Madoc in the group finals tomorrow afternoon. Rumors have been rife regarding the "northerners" not competing in the C. O. S. S. A. playdowns, but more recently these street rumors have been authentically contradicted, especially by Tweed. If the interscholastic gridders from Sam Curry's adopted abode emerge winners the pig-skin chasers from the local seat of knowledge had better mark well the fleet-footed Courneyea, who scored three touchdowns for Tweed against Marmora and within a period of 30 minutes. He really gets around, the Tweed football fans agree. In all probability the B.C.I. squad can prepare for their first C. O. S. S. A. playdown next week, versus the Madoc-Tweed winner. In the meantime things have narrowed down in the Lake Shore group until only Oshawa and Peterboro collegiates are within range of a group pennant. One will be eliminated on Saturday when they meet at Peterboro when the winner takes all.

Jake Powell, classy fly-chaser of the world champion New York Yankees, only needed to stay a week end in North Hastings to bring down a fine 275 pound buck and satisfied with his hunting efforts in Canada, leave for home Tuesday. Incidentally Powell was the guest of William (Bill) Pearse, well known Cleveland millionaire and sportsman. We understand Pearse is anxious to have Powell play for the Cleveland Indians and doubtless his gesture in bringing Powell to Canada had suggestive motives behind them, but we cannot see any player forsaking the great New York Yankees, the highest paid ball club in history, just as a friendly gesture and without monetary persuation. Powell's good hunting fortune, of a 275-pound buck, should be valuable advertising to Hastings County as a future mecca for other big league ball players in future years.

W. L. Brann, owner of Challedon, the three-year-old champion and leading money winner in 1939, has announced that the son of Challenger II and Laura Gal will be named for both the $100,000 added Santa Anita Handicap and the $50,000 Widener. Weight assignments may determine whether the speedy thoroughbred starts in the California or Florida classic.

Patrons attending tonight's wrestling bouts at the Hume Arena will hardly recognize the local indoor sports palace. The dancing pavilion has been removed while the sidewalls of partition used to separate Loblaw's temporary store have been levelled and the place is taking on somewhat of an arena appearance. Those sitting around the ringside will enjoy a little more room and freedom to watch their favorite indoor sport—modern wrestling. Four bouts will be presented tonight featuring a return bout between Joe Malch and Dave Khoen the two pachyderms who wrestled a full hour to a draw two weeks ago. Three other bouts of equal importance are listed on the card for the first four-bout wrestling card ever staged in Belleville. Local as well as foreign talent will ply their wares at the Hume Arena this evening.

"Sandy" Burrows called us today to say that Mack Robertson, proprietor of the Belleville Creameries, had signified his willingness to sponsor and equip a full team in the newly organized Belleville Juvenile Hockey loop. Frank Collins, former Sea Flea player and member of an Allan Cup championship team, has been mentioned as the coach of this particular club. There is room for a few more generous-hearted citizens, who might like to help the league financially also.

Remember when Walter Master and Rolf Carlsten, stars of the Ottawa Rough Riders, Big Four football team, were expelled from competition seven years ago today. They admitted they had accepted payment for playing baseball in the United States, violating their status as amateurs.

Both Queen's and Western are reported to be at full strength for Saturday's title Intercollegiate test at Kingston. Local grid fans are somewhat split on their hopes and expectations. A goodly number of Bellevillians are graduates of Queen's and naturally are hoping the old Alma Mater kicks through with a win, while others are just as eager to see Western win, simply because Wally Hilton, Belleville's gift to football, is with Western. Of course Bud Johnson is with Queen's firsts this year and carries innumerable followers and well-wishers.

Sport Spice—Racing officials in Eastern Canada feel the new New York State pari-mutuel law should ultimately aid horse racing in Eastern Canada...."It will prove a boon, as New York State breeders will increase their breeding and will be anxious to bring their mounts to Canada," predicted Tommy Gorman of Quebec....We fail to see why pari-mutuels should have any effect on the breeding of horses, however....Gerry Nugent, of the Philadelphia Phillies of the National League, suggests the major leagues adopt the "Shaughnessy plan" of play-offs, but he's not getting too much support from any angle....If Toots Holway is looking for a goalkeeper, Harold (Oatsy) Phillips of Wellington is available...."Oatsy" minded the nets for the junior "B" finalists last year and might fit into the Belleville picture.

Lachine Rapides In Third Place

Lachine, Que., Nov. 9—(CP)—Lachine Rapides, showing balance and power, rode into third place last night in the Provincial Senior Hockey League, defeating Valleyfield Braves, undefeated in their first two starts, 7-1.

Defenceman Tudin was the only two-goal scorer for the Rapides, bagging both his counters early in the first period when the home team scored four times. Fernand MaJeau, Bastien, Paul Armand, Joffre Seguin and Gib James scored Lachine's other goals while Marcel Despelteau tallied for the Braves.

CHICAGO BOOKIES MEET SITUATION

Direct Wire Service Cut Off for First Time in Forty Years

Chicago, Nov. 9 (AP)—As long as the horses are running the bookmakers will book them.

That appeared to be the general attitude today of nearly a thousnenberg, owner of the Nationwide NeNws Service, for alleged income and Chicago bookmakers as they faced loss of direct wire service for the first time in 40 years. The Illinois Bell Telephone Company had arranged to cut off their service at noon in compliance with a request from United States District Attorney William J. Campbell, who is prosecuting M. L. An-News Service, for alleged income tax evasion. Nationwide serves the entire country with horse racing information. Chicago reputedly is the biggest betting centre in the country with an estimated $4,000,000 to $5,000,000 being wagered on the "gees-gees" daily.

The bookmakers plan to meet the new situation by taking wagers as usual, but will accept no bets later than two or three minutes before the scheduled post time of the race. Before they pay off, however, they will wait for the official "off-time" of the race, checking it with the time the wager was made so as to reduce the chances of any bettor "cheating" on them.

Nationwide News will continue to disseminate its racing information as usual by telegraph but it will not be relayed by private telephone hookup to all betting establishments simultaneously. The handbook operators plan to station runners at the Nationwide headquarters to obtain race information as it comes in by telegraph and then telephone it to the books from public phones.

GOPHERS SEEKING 6TH STRAIGHT WIN

Battle for "Little Brown Jug" Annually Takes Place at Ann Arbor

Ann Arbor, Mich., Nov. 9 (CP)—Minnesota Gophers seeking their sixth straight football win over University of Michigan in their "Little Brown Jug" battle here Saturday, will face the Wolverines' greatest touchdown combination in a decade. Tom Harmon and Forest Evasheski.

Harmon, top scorer of the Big Ten, is making a strong bid for All-America honors and the man who is making it possible for him is Evasheski, Harmon's favorite blocker and pass-receiver.

Evasheski was shut in the first quarter of the Illinois game last week and triple-threat Tom was held to seven points as Michigan was beaten.

The Little Brown Jug became an object of contention in Michigan-Minnesota football relations in 1903 when the University of Minnesota equipment manager found it in the Michigan locker room following the game. The Wolverines had just used the jug as a water bottle. Since that time, both teams have fought annually for it.

A crowd of 65,000 persons are expected to witness the classic.

Harder Thinks Time And Law of Averages Will Catch Yanks

Omaha, Neb., Nov. 9—(AP)—You can't add Mel Harder, ace pitcher of the Cleveland American League baseball team, to the list of those who think the world champion New York Yankees ought to be liquidated.

Mel has his own remedy for the monopoly the Yanks have taken on the American League pennant.

"Time and the law of averages will take care of them," said he.

Mel, an Omaha boy, thinks the Indians might make it kind of tough on the Yanks next year. The Indians, he said, are on their way up. He doesn't predict any 1940 pennant for them, but—"anyway we ought to end up in second place."

There's a lot of spirit among the Indians—they won 20 of 23 games on the road in the last five weeks of the 1939 season—and "our weak infield suddenly became strong when our rookies came through," Harder declared.

"Lou Boudreau and Ray Mack make us tough on both sides of second. We've got the best third baseman in the league and our outfield is good. A couple of our young pitchers are coming up.

"More than that we've got a great team spirit. Those young fellows helped us a lot," Mel went on.

Kingston Collegiate Team in Finals

Perth, Ont., Nov. 9—(CP)—Kingston Collegiate Institute and Vocational School team moved into the final for the Eastern Ontario Secondary Schools' Association junior football final when they eliminated Perth Collegiate in a sudden-death semi-final 10-5 here yesterday.

The Kingston students now meet either Ottawa Technical School or Ottawa Glebe Collegiate in the Eastern final Nov. 17. Glebe and Tech play off at Ottawa tomorrow.

Red Cross Work Well Organized Throughout Country

Tweed, Nov. 9.—A Red Cross unit affiliated with Tweed Red Cross Society was organized at Sulphide on Friday night. Mr. H. J. Cordy, superintendent of Nichols Chemical Co. was chairman of the meeting held in the Community Hall.

Mr. W. E. Tummon, president of Tweed Red Cross Society, was present with Dean D. A. Cullinane to assist in the organization. In his address Mr. Tummon said that it would require remarkable foresight for anyone to prophesy what turn events might soon take in the European war zone. No one could predict with any degree of certainty what may be the lineup of countries in the next two months.

All we hold dear has been challenged as never before. The combined efforts of all are needed if the war is to end as we wish to see it end.

Mr. Tummon traced the history of the origin and growth of Red Cross. It had its beginning nearly 80 years ago. Following the battle at Solferino in Northern Italy between the French and the Italians, a Swiss philanthropist received permission to view the battlefield. He was shocked at the sight of dead and dying soldiers lying uncared for. His book, written in 1862, set forth the ideal that an organization could be formed having the approval of all nations.

The ultimate outcome was the famous Geneva convention of 1864 which laid down certain rules which were subscribed to by sixteen countries. Since that date other countries have become signatories and today 65 countries approve of the aims and objects of Red Cross.

The following committees were formed:

Campaign Committee—H. J. Cordy, convener; Harvey Carleton, secretary; G. H. Cotton, Arthur Corbett, C. Goulah, J. McCabe, Harold Varty, W. Turcotte.

War Work Committee—Mrs. G. H. Cotton, convener; Mrs. M. Youngs, Mrs. C. Goulah, Mrs. H. Varty, Miss Butler, Mrs. G. Dowdall, Mrs. Langevin.

Secretary—Mrs. A. Corbett.

The campaign to raise funds will be launched at the same time as the Dominion-wide appeal. Representatives of Sulphide branch will meet jointly with Tweed Red Cross at the regular monthly meeting held on the second Monday of each month.

Queensboro Organizes.

Messrs. W. E. Tummon and S. H. Connor, president and secretary of Tweed Red Cross Society, attended a meeting held in Queensboro Orange Hall on Monday night for the purpose of organizing a Red Cross Society. Mr. James Moore, Reeve of Elzevir Township, presided over the meeting which was attended by some forty men and women all of whom are keenly anxious to do their share in Canada's war effort. Mrs. E. A. Manchester, Reg. N., was appointed secretary.

Mr. W. E. Tummon traced the history of Red Cross from its origin in 1864 at the Geneva Convention until the present day. Red Cross is interested in a great many things. One of the important matters with which it is concerned in war time is the exchange of prisoners. Only recently a young Ontario pilot was reported by the British War Office as missing on the western front following his flight into Germany. His father got in touch with Canadian Red Cross who communicated with Geneva headquarters. They in turn contacted the German Red Cross with the result that the young Ontario airman was found to be a prisoner of war in Germany and regular communication was established between him and his parents in Ontario.

As charters for Red Cross are granted only to municipalities, Mr. Tummon suggested that the Township of Elzevir organize a Red Cross Society and that Queensboro organize a Red Cross branch. He also outlined briefly the campaign being conducted across Canada from November 13 to 23, with an objective of $3,000,000.

The following nominating committee was appointed: Jas. Moore, Fred Rollins, Geo. Lowe, Bruce Leslie, John Thompson, Jerry Laffan, George Glover, Mrs. Latone, Mrs. M. Dyer.

The following are the officers of Queensboro Red Cross Branch: President, Mr. James Moore, vice-presidents, Mr. Fred Rollins and Mrs. P. Barry; secretary, Mrs. E. A. Manchester; treasurer, Mrs. Bruce Leslie.

Campaign Committee—Geo. Love, Geo. Glover, Mrs. C. McMurray, Mrs. R. A. Sager, Stafford Courneyea.

Woman's War Work Committee—Mrs. Alex Latone, Mrs. Jerry Laffan, Mrs. M. Dyer, Mrs. F. Rollins, Mrs. Geo. Love, Mrs. Harry DeClair, Mrs. Geo. Glover, Mrs. Chas. Thompson.

Mrs. R. G. McCullough, Reg. N. of Madoc, explained in detail the work which the women might undertake in the knitting of sox, the making of bandages of various types, pyjamas and other supplies. She recommended that the women secure a room where they may carry on their work. Subsequently it was announced that the Orange Lodge would permit the use of their hall free of charge for this purpose.

Rawdon

Rawdon, Nov. 9. — On Sunday morning despite a nasty rain storm which later turned to snow, worshippers gathered from various points and Mount Pleasant Rawdon United Church was filled to the doors for their morning service and in the evening a slightly smaller crowd was in evidence. Many folks who had formerly resided at Mount Pleasant came back for this occasion and visitors from Salem, Burnbrae, Hoards, Carmel, Stirling, Halloway, Eggleton, Marsh Hill, Foxboro, Aikins, Springbrook, Frankford, Rylestone, Campbellford, Bonarlaw, Ivanhoe, Belleville and the other two appointments on the circuit, Bethel and Wellman's all helped to make the day a glorious success. Rev. Alfred Poulter, Madoc, gave two excellent discourses; his morning theme based on Paul's teachings and his evening discourse "The abiding values of a changing world, namely faith, hope and love". Mrs. Kenneth Weaver presided at the piano and the choir of twenty voices assisted by Mr. Ed Pyear of Carmel rendered four anthems. At the morning service Mrs. Percy Hubble, Mrs Edgar McKeown, Messrs Ed Pyear and John Coggins sang "Beyond Today". At night Mrs. Carleton Potts and Mr. Coggins rendered "Rock of Ages". Beautiful plants adorned the altar and appropriate hymns rounded out the day's services. Over one hundred and eighty-seven dollars was placed on the plates during the day.

ENJOYING LIFE IN MUNICH

Munich, Nov. 8—(AP)—Authorized sources said today that Miss Unity Freeman-Mitford, 25-year-old daughter of Lord and Lady Redesdale and a supporter of Nazism, had recovered from a recent illness and was enjoying life in Munich. Miss Freeman-Mitford has been a frequent visitor to Germany and has engaged in Fascist activity in England.

WILL RUN SWEEP WITH LESS HELP

Dublin — (CP) — Irish sweepstake promoters have decided to carry on as usual and are making preparations for a sweep on the Grand National next year. Owing to the war situation, they are dismissing 900 of their 2,500 women employees. To avoid hysterical scenes in their offices, dismissal notices are being sent through the post to workers' homes.

FRENCH CAVALRY SEEN IN ACTION

Cavalry Regiment Has Been Twice Cited in Orders of the Day

With the French army in the Maginot Line, Nov. 9—(CP-Havas) —All advance predictions of war on the western front were that motorized units would dominate the fighting, yet French cavalrymen have played an important part in the no-man's-land between the Maginot Line and Germany's west wall.

Usually the cavalry fight on foot, riding up to their positions and dismounting as soon as machine guns enter into action. On a number of occasions, however, French horse squadrons have thundered forward on old-fashioned charges against enemy patrols and have brought back information of value. A cavalry regiment twice has been cited in the army order of the day.

Germany has failed to unleash the "total warfare" threatened for a number of years by Nazi propogandists, and the result has been to favor individualism and individual exploits on the front.

Despite stringent military rules there still are instances of individual daring. They tell the story of th Poilu who strolled nonchalantly between the lines with an open umbrella and returned unscathed.

SIX OFFERS MADE TO SELL EYES

Five Women and a Man Set Price of $2,500 to $5,000 for an Eye

By HOWARD BLAKESLEE
Associated Press Science Editor

New York, Nov. 9—(AP)— Five women and one man are each offering to sell an eye in order to keep a home together. Two of the women set a price of $5,000 for an eye. The man offers his for $2,500.

The six offers, each in a letter that sounds a little desperate, have reached The Associated Press New York office in the last three weeks.

The hope of selling an eye is based on the fact that a bit of the cornea, the clear window over the pupil, can be used in certain unusual cases to restore sight of the blind. A pitiful fact, unrealized by most persons, is that these blind persons seldom possess any money.

The letters are from Minnesota, Michigan, Nebraska, Tennessee, Alabama and Texas.

One writes that she is a crippled mother, 43, years old, unable to walk for 13 years, and that now her husband is a broken man, destitute on account of the expense of caring for her. He is on relief and she wants to sell an eye to get a farm.

Another mother says she wants to do something for her five children. Two have finished high school and she says:

"I want to send them further where they can find more training to fit them for the world where they could do better for themselves and me also."

RE-ESTABLISH OVERSEAS PHONE SERVICE SHORTLY

London, Nov. 9—(CP-Cable)—Sir Victor Warrender, Financial Secretary to the War Office, told the House of Commons today that overseas telephone services would shortly be re-established, though necessarily on a restricted basis.

THREAT TO BOMB HOME RECEIVED

Action Adds Element of Mystery After Turfman Knocked Off by Gangsters

Chicago, Nov. 9—(AP)—An anonymous threat to bomb the home of Edward J. O'Hare added a new element of mystery today to the slaying of the widely known turfman.

The threat to "blow up" the suburban Gencoe residence of the wealthy horse and dog track operator was telephoned to a Negro maid whom the caller advised to leave immediately.

O'Hare, 45 and President of Sportsman's Park race track, was slain in gangster fashion yesterday after a wild automobile chase along Ogden Avenue.

The victim raced his expensive automobile toward the loop apparently knowing he was marked for death His car smashed into a pole when he turned into a side street. The assassins then slowed almost to a stop and fired two shotgun charges.

An unfired 32 calibre pistol lay on the seat of O'Hare's car. A crucifix, a rosary and a religious medallion in a box marked "happy birthday" were among the effects found in his pockets.

Investigators also considered the possibility the slaying was the culmination of a quarrel arising from horse racing activities.

LIBERAL PARTY NOW IN POWER

Adelard Godbout, Leader, Holds First Cabinet Meeting Today

Quebec, Nov. 9—(CP)—The Liberal party, after three years on the opposition benches, took up again today the task of administering the affairs of Quebec Province.

Premier Adelard Godbout, who led his party to a sweeping victory at the polls Oct. 25, was expected to hold the first meeting of his newly-formed cabinet this morning. He and his 13 ministers took the oath of office yesterday.

The Premier, returning to the office from which he was ousted in 1936 by the victory of Maurice Duplessis' Union Nationale, declared in his first public pronouncement after assuming office that the "three great principles" of his government would be "rigid economy, perfect co-ordination and practical efficacy."

The Premier chose his cabinet from widely separated areas of the province, from men in a variety of fields. Lawyers, druggists, a journalist, farmer, accountant, insurance broker and a lumberman were among the ministers he named.

The cabinet:

Mr. Godbout, Premier, Minister of Agriculture and Colonization. T. D. Bouchard, Minister of Roads and Public Works. J. A. Mathewson, Provincial Treasurer. Wilfrid Girouard, Attorney-General. P. E. Cote, Minister of Lands and Forests, Game and Fisheries. Oscar Drouin, Minister of Municipal Affairs, Trade and Commerce. Edgar Rochette, Minister of Labor, Mines. Henri Groulx, Provincial Secretary, Minister of Health. Leon Casgrain, Cleophas Bastien, Frank L. Connors, L. J. Thisdel, George Dansereau and Wilfrid Hamel, Ministers Without Portfolio.

30,000 Votes Swung Balance in Favor Of Quebec Liberals

Quebec, Nov. 9—(CP)— About 30,000 votes swung the balance in the Liberals' favor in the Oct. 25 election, according to calculations by The Canadian Press from results in 84 of Quebec's 86 constituencies.

Tabulation of the final voting figures in all but the two ridings yet unreported shows the Liberals polled some 52 per cent of the total vote and their majority over the combined totals of Union Nationale, Action Liberale and other candidates was near the 30,000-mark.

The total of ballots cast in the 84 ridings is estimated at 545,599, proportionately below the 1936 record vote of 569,325.

Liberals received 287,673 and the Union Nationale, 217,460, close to 40 per cent. The Action Liberale Nationale received 24,893, about 4½ per cent.

RAISE COAL RATIONS TO 100% CONSUMPTION

London, Nov. 9—(CP) — The British Government has decided to increase the amount of coal available for rationing from 75 per cent to 100 per cent of last year's consumption figures, Geoffrey Lloyd, secretary for mines, announced in the House of Commons today.

PROCLAMATION!

I hereby proclaim that on Remembrance Day, Saturday, November 11th, 1939, at the hour of eleven in the forenoon, all loyal citizens do observe two minutes of reverent silence

That the glorious dead of the last Great War may be remembered and revered.

That those they left behind may also be remembered, cherished and encouraged.

That the veterans who survived, more or less broken in body and in health, may also be remembered by a grateful nation.

That the young men and women now offering themselves to do battle with the massed forces of evil be saluted and honored.

And that we and our statesmen throughout the great British Empire be given keen perception and Divine Guidance.

Text of Speech of Mr. Chamberlain

London, Nov. 9—(CP-Havas) — Partial text of a speech by Prime Minister Chamberlain which, due to Mr. Chamberlain's absence because of an attack of gout, was read by Sir John Simon at the Lord Mayor's luncheon today, follows:

Last year I spoke of the spirit of England. I described the country as thankful to have been spared an ordeal which had come so close, but ready to answer any call which might be made upon them. When I spoke thus, I was full of hope the call might never come, at least in my lifetime and I have no hesitation in saying it never should have come and never would have come if, on the side of the German government, there had been the same genuine desire for peace as there was here.

Stiff-Necked Nazi Responsible

But events have shown that the stiff-necked men to whom ermany has handed over the guidance of her destinies would be satisfied with nothing less than a repetition of that forcible attainment of their desire which they had successfully tried before, and upon them must lie the responsibility for the consequences.

To those who speak no language but that of force, force is the only answer, and since we have been compelled to take up arms we shall not lay them down till we are assured that Europe has been freed of the threats which have so long paralyzed the life of her peoples.

Lofty Motives of Rulers

No doubt you have all read the communication which has been addressed by Their Majesties the Queen of Holland and the King of the Belgians to His Majesty the King, as well as to the President of the French Republic and to the German Chancellor.

Everyone will appreciate the lofty motives that actuated the two sovereigns in thus offering their good offices in the hope of avoiding further extension of the war. I confess that I am not very hopeful of a satisfactory response from the German Chancellor in view of past experience.

Nevertheless, we do not want to continue the war a day longer than is necessary if a satisfactory settlement can be obtained in another way.

Consultation With Dominions and Allies

In due course it will be the duty of His Majesty's government to tend : His Majesty our advice as to the nature of the reply he should make, but before we can do so it will naturally be necessary for us to consult with the Dominions and with our friends and Allies who are standing shoulder to shoulder with us in the struggle.

In the meantime, I would like to make a few observations upon this strangest of wars, which, in the form in which it has hitherto been waged, must seem to many who remember the 1914 conflict to be no war at all, but rather a sort of siege. We do not know how long this phase will last or whether at any moment it may not be changed into a violent conflict.

Allied Position Strengthens

But we can see, at any rate, that the position of the Allies has, as the weeks have gone by, rather strengthened than deteriorated. The treaty we and our French Allies have concluded with Turkey will be a powerful instrument for the peace of southeastern Europe. On the other hand, the pact between Germany and the Soviet Union has gained indeed great advantages for the Soviet, but has brought only humiliation and loss for Germany.

Repeal of the Neutrality Act in the United States is a momentous event, for while it affords America the means to maintain her neutrality, it reopens for the Allies the doors to the greatest storehouse of supplies in the world.

No Major Battles

We have no reason to regret that up to the present, while we are still strengthening our defences and building up our offensive power, there have been no major battles. We have indeed suffered losses and we mourn with sorrow, and yet with pride, the brave men who have given their lives for their country.

But we may be thankful that our successes in hunting down submarines and in numerous conflicts in the air have as yet been unclouded by the terrible casualty lists that were only too familiar to us in the last Great War.

Efficiency of Three Services

And we may be proud of the fact that the British Expeditionary Force has been transported to France without the loss of a single man or a single piece of equipment. Indeed, the efficiency of all our three services has already proved to be such as to inspire us with confidence in their ability to meet any task which may be given them in the future.

It is perhaps natural that in the absence of the stimulus of excitement which is always provided by great and stirring events we should hear a good deal of complaint about the various restrictions and controls which the government have found it necessary to impose.

I would ask you to think for a moment what would have been said if war had begun and had found people crowded together in towns and factories, schools and places of entertainment, while the night was illuminated by street lamps and shop windows, and tracks of railways marked out by lighted trains.

Effectiveness Necessary

Of course we were well aware of the disadvantages and dangers of blackouts, the depression and boredom when recreation was curtailed, the inconvenience and distress occasioned by moving hundreds of thousands of children into the country. But experience of the last war over and over again showed the importance of starting with an effective machine, instead of proceeding by trial and error, and since then development of air power has introduced a new factor which threatens the safety of the whole civil population.

Nevertheless, as we gain experience of the working of these restrictions, we can see from time to time that we have gone further than was necessary in this direction or in that, and we are modifying and shall continue to modify them to any extent that may be possible to fight dangers to which, as long as war continues, we must remain subject.

Modern Planes Costly

The armed forces already mobilized are huge, and will eventually equal, if they do not surpass, those in the last war. But as a result of increasing mechanization, the task of equipping them has become vastly more expensive and complicated. Modern aircraft for instance, costs from three to seven times as much as the corresponding type in 1918, and the increased cost of naval and military equipment is little less remarkable.

All this extra expense in its turn raises new problems for us in the field of foreign exchange.

Restrictions on Imports

We have even had to impose some restrictions on exports, but we have done this only for two essential purposes, namely to conserve articles we cannot do without and to prevent goods that the enemy wants from falling into his hands. We do not know how long the war will last but we must be ready to fight it through to a victorious conclusion. Imports for the equipment of the armed forces have to fight for shipping space and foreign exchange with the needs of the civilian population.

I hope, therefore, that the civilian will not forget that if he cannot buy luxury imports, if he hasn't enough petrol for his car, and even has to forego some articles he is accustomed to see on his breakfast table, he is helping to provide more ships and more foreign exchange for our war effort.

Widen Unity of Empire

We are fortunate indeed to be able to claim a wider unity of the Empire. In the Dominions, in India and throughout the vast colonial empire we see the same appreciation of our cause and the same resolve to bring it to victory.

With France, our valiant and trusted ally, we have the most complete and cordial understanding.

With such spirit and such supporters and allies, we know that we cannot fail and I cherish the firm conviction that we shall live to see the foundation laid of a new world in which freedom and humanity will have superseded oppression and the rule of force.

Princess Testifies In Breach of Contract Suit

London, Nov. 9— (CP-Cable)—Princess Stafani Hohenlohe Waldenberg testified in her breach of contract suit against Lord Rothermere today that the publisher one day endowed one with the power of a queen and the next day put one in the gutter.

Questioned about a letter from Lord Rothermere asking her to stop importuning for money and jewelry, the Princess said she had asked reimbursement of expenses and in ten years "he has given me one bracelet and one diamond clip for a birthday present, and both together cost about £1,280 (about $5,720)."

The Princess said she saw Hitler often at Lord Rothermere's instruction. Questioned about a letter Hitler sent to the publisher beginning .... "You had the great kindness to communicate to me a number of suggestions . . ." The Princess said she had communicated the suggestions at the publisher's request.

And at his request she had entertained "royally" members of the German delegation to the coronation. At least five of them had stayed at her house.

Princess Stafania, a divorced Hungarian princess, charges that the publisher of The Daily Mail broke a contract to pay her £5,000 ($22,350) a year as his personal political representative in Europe.

Loses Certificate For Attempted 'Flight to Mars'

Washington, Nov. 9—(AP)—Cheston Eshelman of Carlisle, Pa., lost his pilot's certificate today for attempting a "flight to Mars."

Eshelman left Camden, N.J. June 5 and landed in the Atlantic Ocean about 175 miles off Boston. He told rescuers he was on his way to Mars when trouble developed.

The civil aeronautics authority, in revoking Eshelman's students pilot certificate, said his "recklessness and disregard" of civil air regulations justified its action.

FREIGHT MOVEMENT GROWS

Fort Erie, Ont., Nov. 9—(CP) — Increased movement of freight from Canada to the United States as a result of wartime needs was reflected today in figures issued by the New York Central Railroad. For the month of October, just ended, 3,560 more freight cars crossed the International Bridge over Niagara River than in the same month last year. This October there were 11,902 cars.

R.C.C. Training
—the open door to a job!

THE value of a school's training is not measured by its promises, but by the number of its graduates who are EMPLOYED.

● A survey, conducted in October 1939, shows that of 374 R.C.C. graduates who availed themselves of our Employment Placement Free Service, 88% or 329, found early employment.
299 graduates entered Radio and Communication Services,
30 hold other positions,
28 graduated only recently and are now in process of being placed.
17 only, or less than 5%, are known to be not yet working.

● Radio College of Canada graduates have been employed by: Royal Can. Air Force, Royal Can. Navy, R.C.M.P., Dept. of Transport, Royal Can. Corps of Signals, Trans-Can. Airways, Out. Airways, Dom. MAY SHIP PLANES INTO CANADA

Opinion is That Harvards May be Used in Empire Air Training Plan

New York, Nov. 9—(CP)—A report from London that Canada may receive the North American Harvard training airplanes ordered in the United States by the Royal Air Force was described in aviation circles here today as a "logical development."

One aviation official who declined use of his name said:

"As Canada is to be the Empire base for the advance training of Britain's air fighters, it is logical that the Harvards should be shipped to Canada."

While North American aviation company officials declined to discuss the matter, it was learned that 500 or more of the low-wing monoplanes are on order by Britain.

Order For 400

The Harvards were standard training equipment in England before the war and the original British order was for 400. Of these, 325 have been delivered across the Atlantic. The remaining 75 have been completed and may be the first consignment sent to Canada. In addition there is ready for delivery sufficient spare and repair parts to comprise another 50 planes.

Since the original order the British government placed another and this was described here as being for "several hundred machines." The exact number of Harvard trainers covered by this order has not been announced, but authoritative circles say it is larger than the first order for 400 planes.

Harvards Described

Some time ago the Canadian government bought 15 of the Harvard trainers and these were delivered before the war. Another Canadian order for 15 could not be filled because of the United States neutrality act and its embargo on implements of war, but the planes were completed. Now that the arms embargo has been revoked, they may be delivered at an early date.

The Harvard trainer has a service, or cruising speed of from 225 to 250 miles an hour. It is powered by a 550 horsepower Pratt and Whitney Wasp motor, has a wing span of 42 feet and is 27 feet long. The landing gear is non-retractable while the propellor has a double pitch—flat for takeoff and high for cruising. The wings are equipped with a split, trailing-edge flaps for air banking to reduce the landing speed.

London, Nov. 9—(CP Cable) — Aviation circles today suggested North American Harvard trainer airplanes ordered for the Royal Air Force and held up in the United States pending lifting of the arms embargo may now be delivered to Canada for use in connection with the empire air scheme instead of being shipped to the United Kingdom.

Support is lent the theory by the fact that large regular deliveries of the British-made Miles Master Training monoplane are being made to R.A.F. training schools.

Experts here favor the Master because, with a top speed of 270 miles an hour, it is 50 miles an hour faster than the Harvard.

WAR BRIEFS

Zurich, Switzerland, Nov. 9—(CP—Havas)—Reports reaching here from Germany today said former Crown Prince Wilhelm has been under "house arrest" at his Cecilienhof estate near Potsdam for the past two weeks. The one-time heir to the German throne was said to have given his word of honor he would not attempt to leave his estate.

Hong Kong, Nov. 9—(AP)—An official Japanese statement today said machine-gun fire from Japanese naval planes had forced the British Imperial Airways liner Dardanus to land at Waichow Island Tuesday, but said the liner flew over prohibited territory and did not maintain the prescribed altitude. It said the only damage was a punctured tire but that the five passengers were remaining at Waichow, off the South China coast pending clarification of the incident.

Washington, Nov. 9—(AP)—United States War Department estimates being studied by President Roosevelt were reported reliably today to call for equipment for an army of 1,000,000 men. If Mr. Roosevelt approves, Congress may be asked at the January session to appropriate $3,000,000,000 or more for national defence, nearly double the record sum voted this year for the army and navy.

ITALY ORDERS 6000 TONS OF ARGENTINE BEEF

Buenos Aires, Nov. 9—(AP)—An Italian order for 6,000 tons of Argentine frozen beef, supposedly to provision the Fascist army, aroused considerable interest today because meat shipments to Italy have been practically suspended this year.

The frozen beef shipped to Italy in 1938 totalled only 13,500 tons. The National Meat Board is studying the request and informed sources suggested that Great Britain, buying 200,000 tons of Argentine meat, is likely to insist on strict control of any sales to Italy to prevent the possibility of trans-shipments to Germany.

Reports German Plot to Parachute 1000 Spies in Dutch Uniform to Prevent Opening of Dutch Dikes

Paris, Nov. 9 (CP-Havas)—The newspaper Paris-Soir reported today that Netherlands authorities had discovered a German plot to drop 1,000 spies in parachutes with the mission of preventing the execution of plans to flood the Netherlands in case of invasion.

The spies would be dressed in uniforms of the Netherlands army, the report said. It was for this purpose that German agents attempted to smuggle uniforms out of the Netherlands into the Reich, the newspaper added. Three Netherlands Nazis have already been arrested in connection with the alleged conspiracy.

WIRE SERVICE TO ALL BOOKIES IS SUSPENDED

Telephone Company in Illinois Cuts Off 1,000 Customers at Noon Today

Chicago, Nov. 9— (AP)— Wire Service to M. L. Annenberg's Racing News customers—mainly bookmakers—was suspended at one p.m. E.S.T. today throughout Illinois.

The Illinois Bell Telephone Company took down facilities serving an estimated 1,000 customers and by one the network had ceased functioning.

Counsel for Annenberg's nationwide News Service failed in a last minute effort to obtain an injunction to prevent the utility from carrying out an ultimatum from the Federal and State prosecutors to halt service.

Judge Donald McKinlay of the Superior Court transferred the proceeding to the Federal Court where yesterday Annenberg lawyers were denied an order to restrain the Illinois Bell Telephone Company from stopping the service on which the book-makers base their operations.

William J. Campbell, United States District Attorney, told the judge the suit sought to restrain the prosecutor from acting in his official capacity; any hearing would involve the construction of the Federal Lottery Statutes; a similar bill filed in Federal Court was heard and a restraining order refused.

Loudspeaker Network Silenced

The action will silence the loudspeaker network that calls into nearly a thousand books in the Chicago area the entries, results and payoff prices at race tracks in the United States and Canada. It will cut deeply into gambling activity in reputedly the United States greatest betting centre where from $4,000,000 to $5,000,000 is bet on the ponies daily.

The court, however, did not interfere with the service of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company to Annenberg's nationwide News Service, Inc. It directed the company to maintain its cross-country operations with Nationwide until Nov. 15 when further arguments will be heard on Annenberg's move for an injunction to prevent the company from severing its service.

Omitted to Attend Capitol Theater Loses $140

One hundred and forty yards away from one hundred and forty dollars—and she didn't know it. That is the experience of Miss Hazel Smith, of Rednersville, who was in the city last night, and omitted to attend the Capitol Theatre. For it was Foto Night at that place of entertainment and Miss Smith's name was called out. Had she been there she would have received $140 for her photograph. As it was Miss Smith sat in another place of entertainment a hundred or so yards away, blissfully unaware that Dame Fortune had smiled on her, in her absence.

BITTEN BY BEAR, ASKS DAMAGES

Mrs. Mae Berry Tells of Incident Near Fruitland

Hamilton, Nov. 9— (CP)—Bitten and clawed about the legs by "Teddy", a 450-pound bear owned by William Campbell, who operates a highway refreshment stand near Cainsville, Mrs. Mae Berry, who ran a dine-dance hall near Fruitland, asked Judge Ernest F. Lazier for $1,000 damages in County Court suit today.

Mrs. Berry said she had been in bed for two months following the incident with "Teddy", 14 years old and the biggest of three bears in a cage near Mr. Campbell's highway stand.

"I told Mr. Campbell I would like to have my picture taken with the bears," testified Mrs. Berry when examined by her counsel, John A. Munro, K.C. "He told me they were quite tame, and I could have my picture taken on the inside of the cage, if I wished."

"Teddy" made "funny noise, grabbed my legs, and threw me backwards. I have all scars on my legs to show you. I was incapacitated for 12 weeks."

Mrs. Berry fell backwards over a cement step which led into the cage.

Milder Weather 'Probs' Promise

Toronto, Nov. 9—(CP— Milder weather was promised for tomorrow after a cold snap that sent temperatures down to the lowest point for the fall season in several centres. A trace of snow accompanied north and northwest winds in Central Ontario.

At Toronto the temperature dropped to a low of 25 degrees during the night. In Kitchener thermometers fell to 24.

At Porcupine camp in the Timmins district, the miners decided winter had arrived. The temperature was two degrees during the night, and in the forenoon rose to only four degrees above zero.

CHEVALIER WEARS HELMET AS HE ENTERTAINS TROOPS

Paris, Nov. 9—(AP)—His familiar straw hat replaced by a steel helmet, Maurice Chevalier began a tour of war zones today with other French stage, screen and radio stars to entertain the troops. Josephine Baker and her entire Casino de Paris troupe were with the cavalcade formed under a French program to mobilize entertainers.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Nov. 9—(CP)— Trading action dried up to a turnover of 143,000 shares in the first three hours on Toronto exchange today. Sluggishness prevailed in all groups. The price tone held quite firm despite the lack of buying demand and at noon the index losses were limited to .03 to .07 for the industrials, the base metals and the western oils. Golds were a little weaker with a drop of .35. Losses were widened slightly in the early afternoon when Home Oil dropped to 2.65, Anglo-Canadian to 1.05 and Okalta to 1.18, all off 3 to 5 cents.

Recessions of about a half point were posted by Nickel, Noranda and Smelters and soft spots in the golds included Preston, Broulan and Hard Rock.

Food and steel stocks displayed mild weakness, papers were stronger and the utilities irregularly lower.

Wall St.

New York, Nov. 9—(AP)—Rallying efforts centring on Steels and Motors met with only half-hearted response in todays stock market.

Scattered favorites tacked on gains of fractions to a point or so at the start, then backed away and near the fourth hour, prices were moderately irregular.

Stocks ahead at one time—some eventually slipped were—U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, General Motors, U. S. Rubber Common and Prefered, Douglas Aircraft, United Aircraft, Du Pont, Allied Chemical, Santa Fe, Pennsylvania, Great Northern, Westinghouse and International Mercantile Marine.

In a narrow Canadian group C. P. R. and Lake Shore inched ahead. Dome fell back a bit while most others, inclding Dominion 4s in the bond market, showed little variation.

Declines were posted for Sears Roebuck, Republic Steel, Sperry, General Electric, American Smelting, Consolidated Edison, Union Carbide and Texas Corp.

LIVESTOCK

Toronto, Nov. 9 (CP)—The hog section featured early-afternoon trading on the Toronto Livestock Market today. O-trucks and dressedweights each gained 10 cents. Other sections of the market were steady. Cattle holdover from Wednesday was 700 head.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Livestock Branch were: Cattle 280, calves 160, hogs 360, sheep and lambs 120.

Butcher sattle of medium grade and upward sold stead; at from $6-$7.50 with a few comon as low as $5. Canners and cutters made $3.25-$3.75 and a few bulls traded at $4.50-$5.25.

A few veal calves ranged from $6-$10.50 but sales were made mostly on grassers at $5.

961-TON STEAMER SUNK IN NORTH SEA

London, Nov. 9—(CP)—The 961-ton British steamship Carmarthen Coast was sunk in the North Sea today and two members of her crew were missing. Fourteen men, five of them injured, were rescud. (Lloyd's Register says the Carmarthen Coast was owned by the Coast Lines, Ltd., and her home port was Liverpool.)

Riga, Nov. 9—(AP)—Four German flyers, rescued by fishermen after their bombing plane came down in the Baltic Sea near Leipaja (Libau) last night, were interned today by the Latvian Government. The plane was towed to Leipaja.

Buying Interest Raises Butter Price

Toronto, Nov. 9 — Butter prices pushed slightly higher, while eggs maintained previous levels at Toronto yesterday.

Buying interest that revived on the butter market Tuesday continued throughout yesterday's session. The small arrivals of fresh receipts cleared well and holders raised prices as offerings dried up. A good demand was evident in wholesale channels for first grade Ontario creamery solids at 28 1-4c, but, while no sales were recorded above this figure, it was difficult to obtain, butter under 28 1-2c near the close of the market.

Grades A-large and A-pullets were in good demand on the egg market, but mediums were not moving so readily. Lower grades cleared freely. Fresh receipts were still light. Prices were generally unchanged.

Montreal Produce

Montreal, Nov. 9—(CP)—Produce market prices here yesterday as reported by the Dominion Agricultural Bureau, follow:

Butter— First grade creamery prints, job price 28 1-2 to 29; first grade solids, job price, 28 to 28 1-2.

Eggs: Graded shipments in used free cases, selling price, A-large, 45; A-medium, 40; A-pullets, 32-33; B-large, 26; C, 20. Receipts —181 cases.

Hog Quotations

Toronto, Nov. 9.—(CP) — A steady to firm tone prevailed on bacon-hog markets today. Hamilton dressedweights gained 10 cents while other reporting markets boarded unchanged prices.

Liveweights: Brantford $8.25.

Dressedweights: Barrie $11.40, Brantford $11.20; Hamilton, $11.50; Hull, $11.30; Peterborough $11.05 plus transportation; Stratford $11 plus transportation.

MONARCHIST

four days later. It was hinted that Wedel had been "purged" for having permitted any such public demonstrations of anti-Nazi feeling.

Never Criticised Hitler

Wilhelm has never in any way been associated with the Nazi Regime although he has never voiced any criticism of Adolf Hitler.

In 1936, the former Crown Prince, who had been living a life divorced from politics of any kind, ventured to congratulate Premier Mussolini on the conquest of Ethiopia, and was reproved by a Hitler Aide for "meddling".

In November, 1923, the fifth anniversary of the German Republic, Wilhelm was permitted to return to Germany from an island in the Zuyder Zee where he had lived in exile since Imperial Germany collapsed in 1918.

However, he was rigidly restricted from expressing any political opinions.

FLINT UNLOADS CARGO AT BERGEN

Will Return Directly to United States Carrying Only Ballast

Bergen, Norway, Nov. 9—(AP)—The Untied States Freighter City of Flint, captured as a war prize by Germany and then released by Norway, started to unload her cargo today in preparation for returning directly to the United States. Captain Joseph Gainard said the vessel would carry only ballast on the return voyage.

AUSTRALIA DEFERS ISSUE OF WAR LOANS

Sydney, Australia, Nov. 9—(CP-Cable) — The Australian Loan Council representing the commonwealth and the six state governments, met today to discuss war financing and decided not to begin the issue of war loans at this time. Australia's war commitments alreadp undertaken are estimated to cost 90,000,000 pounds (about $306,000,000) in a full year, exceeding by 10 per cent the national income.

HIGH-RANKING

Only Left Eleven Minutes

The blast occurred just 11 minutes after Hitler had left the hall, officials said. He finished delivering his speech, in which he attacked Great Britain and asserted the war would go on, at 9:05 p.m. (3:05 p.m. E.S.T.) and left at 9:10 p.m.

The terrific explosion, which tore loose the rafters and felled a large column immediately behind the rostrum, occurred at 9:21 p.m.

The explosion came from above, indicating explosives either had been smuggled into a room over the meeting hall or hidden in the ceiling.

(British official sources scoffed at charges that the British Secret Service and Jews were responsible and a spokesman declared: "doubtless the gentlemen who engineered the Reichstag fire of 1933 know how to do these things."

Indicates Split in Party

(In Paris, French diplomatic circles said they interpreted the incident as indicating a split in the Nazi party over Germany's new partnership with Soviet Russia.)

Hitler arived in Berlin by train at 10:30 a.m. today (4:30 a.m. E.S.T.) and was met at Anhalter station by Field Marshal Hermann Goering and Dr. Hans Lammers, Liaison Officer between the Wartime Ministerial Council and Hitler.

Conference Held

They drove immediately to the Chancellery where a conference was held with Colonel General Wilhelm Keitel, Chief of the High Command, and Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop.

Officials congratulated Hitler and later Italian Ambassador Bernardo Attolico led a procession of diplomats to the Chancellery to pay their respects.

It was assumed wholesale arrests were being made by the Gestapo (secret police) in the Munich region but officials declined to disclose the number.

Hitler himself was safe aboard a special armoured train at the time, heading toward Berlin chancellery about 4 a.m. (10 p.m., E.S.T. Wednesday) aboard his special train, which left Munich 20 minutes after he finished speaking.

Munich authorities searched for clues but strictest secrecy was maintained and nothing was said about arrests.

Britain and Jews Blamed

Official German sources unqualifiedly blamed the explosion on British agents and declared it was provoked by Jews.

"There is no doubt that the English Secret Service has a hand in this affair," declared the newspaper Zwoelf Uhr Blatt, first German newspaper to report the explosion.

It promised an investigation "with German thoroughness" and destruction of Germany's enemies.

"The British Secret Service and Jews" were responsible, declared Deutscher Dienst, the commentary service of DNB, German News Agency.

Too Violent For Hand Grenade

Witnesses of the explosion said it was so violent that a hand grenade or amateurish infernal machine could not have caused it.

The beer hall had been one of the most strictly watched spots in Munich for days and no explanation was offered how a foreigner or conspirator could have entered.

The train that brought the Fuehrer here after the impromptu annual address in which he warned that Germany would "speak the language which England understands', was said to be one of the safest trains ever built.

Technical experts said its padded coaches and steel-shuttered windows could withstand the force of a mine exploded on the tracks.

"We thank Providence for sparing the Fuehrer," an early morning commentator broadcast.

"But he is moved by fanatic hate for the perpetrators of this outrage. Enemies will learn what it means to lay hands on Adolf Hitler".

$200,000 Reward

Officials charged with the security of the Fuehrer's person had the scare of their lives and the energy with which they plunged into the hunt was shown by the reward offered for information—500,000 marks (about $200,000).

A semi-official statement said "clues indicate the plot originated abroad" and it was expected, therefore, that Germany's borders would be watched carefully for evidence of intrigue.

The supposed clues were not disclosed. But there were signs that the Gestapo, the Nazi Secret police, and the Schutzstaffel, Hitler's blackshirted elite guard, were launching a spy hunt and a drive to wipe out enemies of the Nazi Regime in politics and the war.

News Agency Bitter

DNB charged that an attempt was made on Hitler's life "because it was thought that through the act Germany would be struck in the heart."

"Who are these murderers?" it asked. "We do not yet know the individuals or how they prepared the deed. But one thing we know—gold givers, capable of such detestable notions, are agents of the Secret Service.

"And behind them stand war agitators into whose ears Jews are whispering.

"If anything could have strengthened our will for victory or made us more faithful to the Fuehrer, it is this attempt to murder Adolf Hitler.

"But England will learn to know us better. We will not be satisfied with half measures—that is the oath given at the bier of these dead.

Fight Now Starts

"The German nation enters truly well prepared into the fight which now starts. If, up to now, we have shown consideration toward State enemies it should be clear that beginning today they will be treated so they are unable to threaten the life and security of National Socialists (Nazis) any more.

"In the future we will deal differently with those who become criminals for English gold. Let England be informed we are keeping an eye on the enemy. We know after this action that everything is at stake."

Zwoelf Uhr Blatt commented that when "Englishmen are faced by men refusing to submit to their criminal aims or blood-thirsty policy or suppressions, assassinations have been staged or mysterious accidents have happened'"

It was said repeatedly here that Hitler was unharmed and that he was aboard his Berlin-bound train before the blast wrecked the famous beer hall.

Notables in Party Present

With him at the celebration of the 1923 beer hall putsch were propaganda minister Joseph Goebbels, deputy party leader Rudolf Hess, interior minister Wilhelm Frick, Julius Streicher, Robert Ley and Sister Pia—the only woman who was among Hitler's early battlers. Several admirals and generals also had been invited.

All, however, were said either to have left with him or shortly after he started for the railroad station at the conclusion of his speech.

In the spacious room at the time were mostly obscure Nazi oldtimers who followed Hitler in the unsuccessful 1923 uprising. Many of them were said to have been supervisors on German highway building projects.

They had remained after cheering the Fuehrer on his way and still were discussing his address with its declaration that Germany was prepared to fight a five-year war.

Came From Above

The blast came from above, indicating the possibility either that explosives had been hidden in the ceiling or smuggled to a room above.

Either there was a miscalculation of some minutes in preparing a timing device or in touching off the explosives or Hitler's decision to leave ahead of schedule caught the plotters unaware.

He probably owed his escape, it was said, to his abrupt departure because of the press of state business instead of remaining to chat with the veterans as has been his custom.

No Names Disclosed

No names of the dead and injured were disclosed. The eight dead were said to have been killed immediately and some of the injured were reported in a dangerous condition.

The interior of the hall was wrecked, tables were strewn about and the Nazi comrades thrown to the floor under the piles of wreckage.

An administrator of the Buergerbrau Hall said it was a "terrific charge" and the proprietor added that it came "without any preliminary sound or other warning", causing the ceiling to fall "with a terrific roar".

Munich was thrown into turmoil and cut off from telephone communication with the rest of the country for several hours, until the situation was fairly well in hand.

A death list announced by the Propaganda Ministry disclosed that one of the eight dead was a woman. She was believed to be Frau Maria Henle, cashier of the beer cellar, but was not definitely identified.

Others were Franz Lutz, Wilhelm Kaiser, a radio announcer named Weber, Leonhard Reindl, Emil Kasberger, Eugen Schachta and one man still unidentified.

The eight dead were said to have been killed instantly.

DeWitt MacKenzie

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

New York, Nov. 9—(AP)—The attempted bomb assassination of Fuehrer Hitler by unknowns at Munich is being seized upon for war propaganda with the bandying about of accusations and innuendoes, some of which are not only ill-timed but absurd.

German official sources blame the explosion on British agents. It's highly improbable the Nazis believe any such thing.

What is probable is that the deed was done by the agents of one of the peoples who have felt the weight of the Nazi hand. There are plenty of them around who would give their own lives to avenge alleged wrongs.

Height of Stupidity

Even if Nazidom doesn't put it beyond the British to engage in assassination, it would be the height of stupidity to perpetrate such an outrage. There are few things calculated to cause the German people greater anger and desire for retribution than the murder of their leader.

Therefore, since Britain is out to alienate the German population from Hitler, and not to consolidate them in his interest, the Nazi accusation can be dismissed.

The suggestion from London that those who set the Reichstag fire "know how to do these things", also seems most unlikely. The intimation is that the Nazis perpetrated the explosion for ulterior purposes. It seems incredible that they should kill and maim their own followers to furnish propaganda.

FOUND DEAD IN BAKESHOP.

Ailsa Craig, Ont., Nov. 9—(CP- — James Wilson, 33, former Toronto resident, was found dead early today in a bakery which employed him here. Ailsa Craig is 25 miles northwest of London.

The body, a gash on the head, was found on the floor and death is believed due to a heart attack. Police said he apparently struck some bake tins in falling.

His widow, formerly Edith Field of Chatham, and two small sons, survive.

MANY UNVERIFIED

Early in his regime, assassination attempts were reported frequently, but in recent years few have come to light.

The reports include:

MARCH 7, 1933—Two waiters arrested in Munich on charge of plotting to kill Hitler, named chancellor less than two months previously.

MARCH 13, 1933—Count Arco-Valley placed under "protective arrest" when police said he announced intention of killing Hitler.

MARCH 21, 1933—Persons living near scene of Reichstag assembly ordered not to leave their homes during opening ceremonies, as precaution for safety of Hitler and President Paul Von Hindenburg. Bouquets forbidden.

Assassination Plot Thwarted

APRIL 13, 1933—Munich police say assassination plot thwarted by arrest of Hindu Communist at border.

APRIL 17, 1933—Paul Orlowsky, medical student in Nazi uniform, arrested in Berchtesgaden by police who said he had loaded pistol, ammunition and narcotics. Police later released him, saying he merely desired to speak to Hitler on a petition.

JUNE 20, 1934—Rumor circulated and denied that Hitler was missed by rifleman as he attended funeral of Frau Karin Goering at Eberswalde; similar rumor that Hitler was shot at while returning from visit to President Von Hinenburg at Neudeck.

JUNE 22, 1934—Herman Wilhelm Goering quells insubordination of his special guards as Nazi agents throughout Germany spike previous rumors of attempts on Hitler's life.

JUNE 30, 1934—Edmund Heines, Breslau police chief and storm troop leader, reported slain as he rushed up to Hitler with a pistol when Chancellor personally led raid on Capt. Ernst Roehm's home at Munich in the "blood purge."

Prompted by Shots

JULY 30, 1934—Paris hears blood purge was prompted by shots fired at Hitler when he visited a labor camp near Essen; German legation in Oslo denies knowledge of report eight tourists removed from Norway cruise ship because of plot against Hitler.

OCTOBER, 14, 1934—Julius Streicher, anti-Semite leader, charges "a murderer was bought for 50,000 marks to kill Hitler at Nurenberg party congress."

DEC. 18, 1934—Rumors that Hitler wounded by a German girl denied by officials, who also scoff at London report Hitler's plane fired upon recently in East Prussia.

JAN. 6, 1935—Unconfirmed reports from Munich and Berlin say two storm troopers shot at Hitler Dec. 31, but hit his chauffeur instead; story denied but it is noted that Hitler has new chauffeur.

March 6, 1935—Copenhagen police arrest, eight men, including three Americans, expressing fear they were plotting against Hitler.

Companion Wounded

JUNE 15, 1935—Vienna newspaper says a companion of Hitler wounded in attack on him at Berchtesgaden retreat.

JUNE 15, 1936—Paris newspapers report followers of late Captain Roehm conducting campaign of terrorism with death warnings sent to Hitler; Berlin denies it.

JUNE 4, 1937—Helmuth Hirsch, 21-year-old Jewish grandson of a naturalized American, executed for attempt on life of Julius Streicher; Nazis deny Hitler was his object.

OCTOBER 7, 1938—Hitler struck in face and scratched by bunch of roses tossed during his triumphal tour of Sudetenland; general order issued against any bouquets along his route in future.

APRIL 4, 1939—Spoke from behind glass shield at Wilhelmshaven; Nazis said it for protection of his throat and not a bullet-proof device.

shipped to England without motors, since England is one of the main sources of engines for the Allies.

However, a considerable number of motors will be brought to Canada to test the planes before shipping. Other motors may be imported from the United States.

It was indicated policy of the board will be to place orders in the United States and Canada in a way to avoid overlapping. Materials which would entail heavy capital expenditure and much delay to produce in Canada will be bought in the U. S.

The British supply board will coordinate purchases in both countries with Arthur B. Purvis, Montreal industrialist, directing the work in the U. S. From an office probably to be established in New York.

2-MINUTE SILENCE

Throughout the province on Saturday, there will be the solemn ceremonial that for 20 years has marked the return of the anniversary of the armistice.

In London, Ont., the soldiers of the last war and those who may soon travel overseas to fight in the present one will march together. Under the auspices of the Canadian Legion, 1,000 veterans will parade with 1,500 enlistments of the active service force.

In most large centres, a part holiday will be observed by municipal proclamation. Services will be held at cenotaphs in the morning. Shops and businesses will be closed during this period in most cases from 10.30 until noon. The regular Saturday routine will continue in the afternoon.

Deferred Till Sunday

Kitchener and North Bay will observe two minutes silence Saturday and brief ceremonies will be held. But the official ceremonies will be deferred until Sunday.

All local military units at Brantford will parade to the war memorial, where a commemoration service will be held. In Brockville, town council, the Imperial Order of the Daughters of the Empire, and militia and fraternal societies will participate in the service at the cenotaph conducted by the Canadian Legion.

At Woodstock, the official ceremony in the public hall will not be held this year. There will be a brief service under auspices of the Canadian Legion at the war memorial at 11 a.m. except for the two minutes silence in the city, business will go on as usual.

In the evening after the usual services in Sault Ste. Marie, the Post of the Canadian Legion there will hold its annual banquet.

A service will be held at Canada's national shrine, the peace tower of the parliament buildings. Veterans and recruits of the Canadian army will gather. Prime Minister Mackenzie King and Lord Tweedsmuir, Governor General, will head the list of church and state dignitaries.

Crashing guns will signal the beginning of the two minutes silence and the last post played by trumpeters will mark the end.

Hamilton, Bermuda, Nov. 8—(CP Cable)—Publication today of a proclamation by Governor Sir. D.J.C.K. Bernard placed Bermuda in position to deal with prize vessels brought here by Allied warships. In order to bring the terms of the Imperial Prize Court Act of 1894 into effect, it was necessary for the Governor to declare Military authorities of the Netherlands cleared out several villages in the main flood defence region near Utrecht and also removed the population of the hamlet of Lent, near Nijmegen on the east frontier.

CLEAR DUTCH

(Utrecht is in Central Holland while Lent is about 40 miles southeast.)

This is the Netherlands' first line of defence against German invasion.

The Belgians sent troops north to the border of the Netherlands and important defences there were speeded up against the possibility of a German invasion of Netherlands which would sweep south into Belgium to outflank the Maginot Line.

(Germany has denied any intention of sending troops through Belgium or the Netherlands.)

Buses Requisitioned

Buses were requisitioned to provide for the removal of the residents of certain unidentified areas.

Official circles in The Hague said the only direct reaction of the offer of mediation Tuesday by Queen Wilhelmina and King Leopold so far had come from the Scandinavian sovereigns.

They described the reception by belligerents as cool but said this did not mean they thought the war situation was more unfavorable.

It was reported privately, women of both the French and German legations at The Hague had been advised strongly by their respective governments to return home.

SHARP ACTIVITIES

Military experts had about concluded that any big German offensive in the west would await the coming of spring. but they professed to see also the possibility of twin drives on the Maginot Line and against one of the lowland countries in an effort to reach coastal bases from which they might raid England more effectively.

Intended For Coercion

Another interpretation of Nazi concentrations along the Netherlands border was that they were intended to coerce the Netherlands into co-operation against the Allied blockade of Germany.

The fighting was particularly serious last night in the region between the Moselle and Saar Rivers. In this region, military authorities said, the German move was certainly more than simple reconnaissance. On Tuesday the Germans had made big raids at two points on this front with heavy artillery preparation.

Extremely lively fighting ensued when French troops supporting the posts attacked came to the aid of the advanced positions.

Since the darkness prevented wide employment of automatic weapons, both sides made full use of hand grenades.

Men's Association Hears Address on England in Wartime

Impressions of England in wartime; her preparations for offence and defence and the general atmosphere prevailing in the British Isles were vividly described to the Men's Association of Bridge Street United Church last night by the Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne, vicar of St. Thomas Church, recently returned from a holiday in the Mother Country.

The meeting, the first of the fall and winter series of the Association was held under the chairmanship of President R. D. P. Davidson. During the supper that marked the inaugural occasion, community singing led by Russell Wotten with Leo Riggs at the piano, brought out the lusty voices of the gathering.

GERMAN LEADERS

"I confess I am not very hopeful of a satisfactory response from the German Chancellor in view of past experience. Nevertheless we do not want to continue the war a day longer than is necessary if a satisfactory settlement can be obtained in another way."

Must Consult Dominions

"In due course it will be the duty of His Majesty's government to tender to His Majesty our advice as to the nature of the reply he should make, but before we can do so it will naturally be necessary for us to consult the Dominions and our friends and allies, who are standing shoulder to shoulder with us in the struggle."

Sir John read the speech in the blue and cream Egyptian room of the Mansion House. There was the usual lavish display of the famous gold plate of the city and high over the Lord Mayor's chair were the flags of Britain, France and Poland.

First in 18 Months was the first he had suffered in 18 months. He had been unable for several days to take his usual walk in the park. If the attack takes its usual course it was said the Prime Minister should be about in a day or two. Meanwhile he is attending to papers and meeting ministers in his rooms.

The Prime Minister's speech referred to "this strangest of wars" and added it was not known when the present static warfare would be changed into violent conflict. But since the outbreak of war, he declared, the position of the Allies has strengthened rather than deteriorated.

Powerful Instrument

The speech listed the Anglo-French-Turkish treaty as a "powerful instrument for the peace of southeastern Europe." Set against this was the Russian-German agreement which "has gained indeed great advantages for the Soviet but has brought only humiliation and loss for Germany."

"Repeal of the Neutrality Act in the U.S.A.," he said, "reopens for the Allies the doors of the greatest storehouse of supplies in the world."

"We know that we cannot fail," he concluded, "and I cherish the firm conviction that we shall live to see the foundation laid of a new world in which freedom and humanity will have superseded oppression and the rule of force."

The Prime Minister said the nation should take consolation from the fact that the static warfare of the present time, which really amounted to a sort of siege, had not resulted in the "terrible casualty lists that were only too familiar to us in the last great war."

Three Services Praised

At the same time, he continued, the efficiency of the three services "inspires us with confidence in their ability to meet any task which may be given them in the future."

The speech was prepared for presentation in the "City," heart of London's trading and financial life. It cautioned the nation against too much complaining over wartime restrictions, controls and extra taxes.

"I hope," the Prime Minister wrote in his speech, "that the civilian will not forget that if he cannot buy luxury imports, if he has not enough petrol for his car and even has to forego some of the articles he is accustomed to see on the breakfast table, he is helping to provide more ships and more foreign exchange for our war effort."

France Gallant Ally

There was support for the war effort in every part of the nation, he went on. This unity and the same resolve to achieve victory extended throughout the Empire. France was a gallant and trusted ally.

"With such a spirit and such supporters and allies we know we cannot fail and I cherish the firm conviction that we shall live to see the foundation laid for a new world in which freedom and humanity will have superseded oppression and the rule of force."

After the Brawl Was Over

By CHET GRANT

"And further more, goodnight!" When Georgie Blake slammed the front door of Mabel Porter's house and dashed down the drive to the parked Iron Horse, he left behind him a distinct understanding that he was averse to having Mabel attend the ultra-social private function at the Odd Fellows hall next Tuesday night for two reasons: first, having no invitation he could not take her himself and second, Mabel was invited by Ferdy Hoyt, son of Elston's leading banker, whom Georgie considered a sissy.

Georgie took with him as he slammed the dour the distinct understanding that the Annual Elston ball wasn't for garage mechanics anyway, and Mabel was going whether he liked it or not.

The Iron Horse careened up to The Hamburger Grille.

"Hey, Dodo, hamburger with onion, Cawfee!" Georgie bawled. Dodo slid out from the rear with a disarming grin. "Sure, hamburg. Sure, coffee."

A musical voice spoke from the doorway. Dodo's jaw dropped and Georgie put his elbow in the coffee. Francine Parmenter was always causing men to do such things. She was the darling of Elston's 400 and had all the personal charm and beauty allowed one human being.

She sat on the stool next to Georgie. "Coffee and hamburger," she said to Dodo. Georgie felt uncomfortable. This was the kind of a girl who would be at the Annual Ball. Maybe Mabel was right. It would be no place for garage mechanics.

"You're Georgie Blake, aren't you?" Francine asked suddenly.

"Yes," Georgie gulped. "How did you know?"

"Heard about you catching that bandit last fall. I've often wanted to meet you."

"Who, me?" Georgie grinned.

"The Gazette said you were seventeen. You're older aren't you? I mean, to be strong enough to catch a bandit and all." Blue eyes and blonde hair held Georgie's enraptured gaze.

"It was nothing," he blushed. "I'm almost eighteen though. Next month."

"What are you doing Tuesday night?" Francise nibbled at the hamburger. "Nothing," Georgie answered.

"I have to invite an escort to the annual ball," Francine explained. "I wish you'd take me."

"You're f — fooling," Georgie gasped. "Why you must have —"

"I have," she interupted, "but I want you. Will you come?"

"S-sure," Georgie stuttered. "G-glad to."

Georgie had the first dance with Francine. It was a long one. People smiled all around him. They're a good crowd, he thought. Only Mabel glared at him. He was secretly elated. Mechanic, huh!

Francine said suddenly, "Turn around!" He did. "You nitwit." she cried angrily. "You would make a laughing stock of me!"

"I—" Georgie said helplessly. People laughed. He looked over his shoulder. He felt faint. His coat had no tails. He had tucked them inside his trousers along with his shirt!

"Why did I ever invite you?" Francine cried.

"To win ten dollars," somebody said. "This is tough on Ferdy, he hates to pay!"

Georgie turned away and nearly bumped into Mabel. "I'll be ready in ten minutes," she h. :ed.

"Ten minutes?" Georgie looked suspicious.

"Ferdy's in the cloak room," Mabel said. Then Georgie heard her saying she wanted to see Francine alone for a second. It was five minutes later when Mabel came out the front door and found Georgie waiting by the Iron Horse.

"You weren't long", she said.

"Ferdy can't take it," Georgie said. "Climb in."

"I always suspected that," Mabel remarked. Georgie glanced sideways at her. Mabel's dress was mussed. Powder couldn't hide a scratch on her cheek.

"I should hate to think, Mabel," he said evenly, "that you'd hit a lady."

"You're right," Mabel answered. "I never have yet!"

Little Benny's Note Book

I still had 5 cents left out of my dime and I went in the Kristal Kandy Kitchen, being a swell store that wont sell less than 5 cents worth of no matter what, and some lady was in there buying a pound of assorted choklits and the candy lady was picking them out and putting them in a box saying, would you like one or 2 or these orange centers, Mrs. Gattle?

Proberly being the lady's name, and she said, I dont know, may I taste one?

Why certainly, the candy lady said, and she handed her one on a little silver shovel and Mrs. Gattle bit it in half saying, No I think not.

Only she ate the other half anyways, saying, How are the coconut creams, I'll try one if you dont mind.

Certainly, the candy lady said, and she handed her one on the little silver shovel and Mrs. Gattle ate all in one mouthfull, proving coconut creams were proberly her favorite kind, saying, Very nice, put in several please.

Me thinking, Good night I bet she knew she wanted some even without tasting them.

Giving me a idea to taste some different kinds myself, and Mrs. Gattle went out with her candy and the candy lady looked at me, saying, Yes?

Meaning what kind and how much, and I said, What's inside that round flat kind? and the candy lady said, Cream mint.

Me knowing without her telling pjut in several please.

Being a invitation for her to ask me if I wanted to taste one, only she didn't except it, just saying, Why yes, they're very nice, and I said, Are they just white or colored inside? and she said, My goodness wouldn't you like to visit our factory and watch them being made before you decide?

Being sourcastic, and I bought 5 cents worth of small lollypops.

Proving some people can only take a hint from people their own age.

Frankford

Frankford, Nov. 9.—Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Beatty and family of Tweed spent Sunday afternoon and evening with Mr. and Mrs. Dan Frost.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy Bateman and family of Springbrook and Mr. and Mrs. Dan Frost had dinner with the latter's daughter, Mrs. Herrington, of Hilton on Sunday.

Mrs. Rich of Oakwood is spending some time with her daughter, Mrs. J. F. Lane.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Miller were guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. Spencer, Trenton, on Sunday, Oct. 29, when the members of the High School board with their wives and the teaching staff were entertained at tea.

Mrs. Walter Fowlds of Hastings and Mrs. Everett Birdsall of Birdsall were guests of Mrs. H. T. Miller and Mrs. E. E. Ketcheson on Saturday afternoon.

Mrs. Sid Williams and Mrs. Edgar Matthews of Stirling visited Mrs. Geo. Spencer one afternoon last week.

The Czechs of the Bata Shoe Co. entertained their employees at a dance in the Community Hall in Frankford on Saturday evening. Other friends in the village were also made welcome and an enjoyable evening was spent. During the evening a delightful lunch was served.

The young people of Frankford United Church held their election of officers on Monday evening, Oct. 30 in the Rose-Lowery Hall with the Rev. J. F. Lane in charge. Scripture was read by Miss Hazel Mikel, a reading was given by Miss Lucy Ferguson and a piano solo by Miss Clute Nugent. Then the following officers were elected: Hon. president, Rev. J. F. Lane; past president, Charles Anderson; president, Lucy Ferguson; vice-president, Kathlyn Hibberd; secretary, Arevella Conley; treasurer, Donald Nicalasan; conveners: Christian Fellowship, Clute Nugent; Christian Mission, Maude Cooper; Christian Citizenship, Ray Mikel; Christian Culture, Daman Conley; representative to Quarterly Official Board, Kathlyn Hibberd.

Mrs. Skubalova who has been making her home with Mrs. Hogg has been ill in Belleville Hospital with pneumonia.

Mrs. Earl Benson's children of Ivanhoe are staying with their grandmother, Mrs. Hinds, as Mrs. Benson has undergone an operation in the Belleville Hospital.

Trinity Church Sunday school held a masquerade party in the Parish Hall on Friday evening. The hall was delightfully and tastefully decorated for the occasion in orange and black with the customary pumpkin faces, witches, black cats, etc. Most of the children came in costume. After the prizes were awarded games under the direction of Rev. McConell and the Sunday School staff were played. A delightful lunch of pumpkin pie and orangeade was served to the children.

The voluntary registration of Canadian women for Frankford closed Monday evening with a splendid representation.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Williamson spent Sunday at Harold guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Runnalls.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Dafoe and family spent Sunday in Malone guests of Mr. and Mrs. Mervin Dafoe.

Miss Evelyn Crow spent Saturday and Sunday in Belleville with friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bonisteel and Barbara of Toronto and Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Bonisteel of Ingersoll spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Earl Bonisteel.

Miss Roberta Massey and Mr. Arthur Massey of Toronto spent the week-end with friends in the vicinity and had dinner on Monday with Mr. and Mrs. Earl Bonisteel.

ARTHUR B. PURVIS

WALLACE R. CAMPBELL

The British ministry of supply has announced the establishing of a central organization to co-ordinate the placing of war orders in Canada and the United States. Orders in the United States will be placed through a British purchasing commission headed by Arthur B. Purvis, of Montreal, who has been appointed director-general of purchases. Wallace R. Campbell, chairman of the Canadian War Supply Board, and Mr. Purvis will be members of the central organization, which also will include representatives of United Kingdom service departments—navy, army and air force—and the treasury.

96-YEAR-OLD TWINS

Truro, N.S., Nov. 9 (CP)— The oldest twins in Canada—and perhaps in North America—celebrated their 96th birthday today.

They are Mrs. Thomas Brenton of Truro and Mrs. Rhoda Dartt of nearby Pleasant Valley, N.S.

Mrs. Brenton said she and her sister had "the greatest thrill of our lives" last June when they were received by the King and Queen at the Truro railway station.

They turned down the invitation of a United States newspaper columnist to go to the world's fair at New York this year. "We had no desire to travel so far," they said.

Weather Not Perfect For Good Hunting Says Local Resident

Although conditions thus far have been anything but conductive to good hunting in the Weslemkoon district, hunters returned from that part of the deer hunting country report a plentitude of deer hunters.

Frosty weather, said to be ideal for tracking the elusive bucks, has thus far been conspicuous by its obsence, one hunter remarked today. Dogs have had difficulty in picking up the scene, but in spite of this the presence of numbers of deer in the vicinity has resulted in some fine specimens being bagged.

Hunting in general has attracted a larger number of nimrods this year than usual, he said. In trailer and in tent they are making their camps near the deer runways. One party, in particular, the hunter said, who travelled to the north country in a small coupe and pitched their tent in the woods, had three fine bucks hanging nearby, indicative of good sport.

His particular party, had already bagged two deer, and with the expected favorable change in atmospheric conditions, the quota for the camp is expected to be shot within the next few days.

France or Her Allies Will Never Violate U. S. Neutrality

Paris, Nov. 9—(AP)—Finance Minister Paul Reynaud declared today that if United States neutrality is ever violated "it will not be by any act of France or her Allies."

German offers of peace, Reynaud said, were nothing but a ruse for "a breathing spell." He declared the respite would expose the French army, which he said now totalled 5,000,000 men, to "the risk of being surprised a few months hence and defeated."

Then, he asked, "who could doubt that the Nazis would become absolute masters of Europe."

THE RUNAWAY

by

Kathleen Norris

After a confused moment of forced laughter and surprise and greeting, they all sat down again, and Gavin smiled keenly at his wife. Becky's hair was in disorder; she wore a cotton morning dress belted with Gibb's big bath apron.

"You're thin. Think she's thin, Mrs. Gibson?" Gavin asked.

"Look here, Gavin. Don't make too much noise; he's beginning to hear things." Becky raised the baby's blanket.

"He looks all right!" Gavin said, laughing. "Well, tell me everything, and how's everything?" he added, resuming his seat. "Ned McSwayne wrote me he'd seen Beck, and I thought the best thing I could do was to come up. I'm not much of a letter writer."

"I'll say you aren't!" Becky felt an odd prick of self contempt beneath her rueful little laugh. This forgiving, casual manner wasn't the way to treat him after all these months. But what else could a neglected wife do? Make a scene in these first minutes of reunion, embarrass Mother with recriminations? Instinct told her that at the first break, the first loosening of her tongue, she would loose all restraint and begin to cry. She must hold tight to her self-control.

"But, Gavin," she said, trying to speak lightly yet with a touch of bitterness already in her voice, "where've you been? Why no letters? I didn't know where to write, or what was happening to you—"

"Beck was worried," Sarah put in gravely.

"I didn't know where I was myself" Gavin assured them cheerfully. "They sent me to Yuma; hell of a place. I was in Calexico for three weeks, being fried by inches. I kept thinking I'd sit down and write the whole thing out for you, Beck, and then, by George, it'd all bust up and I'd be off somewhere else. Well, but here I am now, with a few days to consider about sixty-seven propositions," Gavin concluded with an air of humor, "and meanwhile the kid's arrived, eh?"

To Becky, even in this first moment, it was pot humorous. Nothing was right from then on; not his suggestion that he take a bath and a shave while they were getting lunch ready, his characteristic procrastination until too late, nor her father's kindly, quiet greeting of him, nor the boys' surprise, nor the meal to which they all presently sat down Gavin did most of the talking, telling them amusing little episodes of the helter-skelter days of a movie cameraman, acknowledging their goodness to Becky and the baby somewhat indirectly with a good-humored, "Say, I've loaned you my wife long enough! I knew her mother'd want her to be here, but there were lots of times I could use a good cook down there!"

He had some money; was quick, almost ostentatiously quick, to pay the small bill that was presented when the drugstore boy brought the boric acid and the Castile soap which had been ordered for Gibbs. Becky felt mixed emotions when she saw his hands on the green five-dollar notes.

INSTALMENT 13

But Becky could say nothing then. Indeed, she was presently to discover the extreme difficulty of criticising Gavin at all, anywhere, under any circumstances, for anything.

He came into the kitchen when the boys arrived for lunch, enjoyed his own lunch, gossiped entertainingly as she and her mother and Sophy cleared the kitchen afterward. When Becky carried the baby upstairs he followed her up to her room. He sat there, seeming embarrassingly out of place in the immediate hurry of her care for Gibbs. Smoking a tenth cigarette, he watched her as she changed and fed the baby.

"What's the big idea of naming him Gibbs? Who's Gibbs?"

"For dad. He's Spencer Gibson."

She was afraid again. She was afraid of him again.

"Ha!" he said. "He's not been christened?"

"Oh no."

"Well, why not think it over and name him after me?" Gavin murmured. "However...."

A silence. She was getting nervous. She wanted to ask Gavin his plans, to review with him these months during which they had been separated, but he seemed interested only in matters of the moment, seemed content to watch and smoke. Once he said he hoped her mother would have that pot roast for dinner.

"Yes, that's for dinner. And applesauce cake. She and Sophy made it after breakfast."

Separated for months, and they talked of applesauce cake!

Becky carried Gibbs back to his basket in the yard. She and Gavin sat on the porch steps in afternoon sunshine and talked. But even now she could not bring herself to an open, honest forcing of his confidence.

"How long will you be here, Gavin?"

"Tired of me already, huh?" It was his old teasing way.

"No. But I didn't know whether you were working now, whether you had a job."

"Sure I'm working. That is, I could be the minute I wanted to go back. But I think I've seen enough of Yuma, and of Frenchy Cotton too. Did me out of about six grand, Frenchy did."

"Six grand! You mean six thousand?"

"Yip."

The weak spring sunshine came down through the oak branches; chickens pecked nearer and nearer, cocking their sleek little heads, watching with heady eyes. Becky felt a sickness of spirit, not at the loss, but at what she suspected was the lie.

"How'd he do that?" she asked against her will.

"Oh, we had it in common, and what does he do but sink it all in a well! Dust well."

"What's a dust well?"

"It's a well that puffs up a lot of dust instead of oil."

"Can you sue him?"

"He'll be damn lucky if I don't" Gavin growled. She knew that the whole thing was a fabrication, reflected that it would be senseless to criticize any one part of it.

"So now what do you plan?" She tried to ask it brightly, naturally, as if she were just another of the town's secure, every-day young matrons who wheeled babies to market, discussed bridge games, picknicked and camped up at the lake in hot weather.

"Well, I don't know," he said. "Rest for a while, I guess."

No answer could have filled her soul and heart and mind, her very being, with a more complete dismay. Becky was unable to make any response. A dismal prevision of what would follow silenced her.

"Well," he said after a while, with a jerk of his head toward the shabby little car he had parked around the corner of the house, "I'm going to take my bag upstairs and unpack. What's the chances on a bath?"

Of course He was going up to her room. Where else? There was no other available space now, for Sophy and her baby had the big room at the top of the kitchen stairway.

"Gavin," she began, seizing her courage with an almost physical effort, "let me explain something. I've—you've made it very hard for me. I've had—" She swallowed angrily, lowered her voice to keep it from breaking. "I've had a hard time these last months, Christmas and all."

"For criminy's sake! Didn't they want you?"

It was like him, her lightning thought flashed, to put it on her people.

"Of course they wanted me. Of course they've been wonderful to me. Of course I had my own room and my own nurse in the hospital!" Becky said, warming. "But do you think it was easy to take it all from them, to have no money, not a dollar, to call my own? Week after week with no word from you, no letter, nothing to tell these village gossips who were wondering and watching and saying what they liked—"

"Lissen, Essen!" Gavin interrupted as she paused for breath. He put a drawling accent upon the first syllable of the word. "What d'you think I've been doing? Going around the world in my private yacht? If I had money I'd have sent it. I've been having a rotten time, borrowing everywhere...."

It was a long story. At the end he flung away the stub of his cigarette and hunched himself across to sit close beside her on the step and put his arm about her. "Don't be mean to me, Becky," he pleaded.

She felt her mood yielding to his and hated herself. She made herself say sulkily and stubbornly, "You might have written," but even as she said it she felt her own weakness.

At dinnertime she watched him nervously, watched the other faces to see what impression he made, laughed wretchedly at his jokes and hastily and eagerly explained whatever seemed confused or doubtful in his easy talk.

Her father and mother and the boys responded readily enough, were interested, listened, replied. Apparently they felt no strain. She wondered when they would begin to feel it, how soon he would wear out his welcome, destroy the last shred of her peace of mind, almost regained in these quiet weeks at home.

Gavin was restless. He had always been restless. After dinner he asked the boys what movie was playing in town. Bob and Spin looked up eagerly, but Sarah said pleasantly enough that there must be no movie for them on a school night.

"I have to be here for Gibbs' ten o'clock," Becky, a hot glass and a dishtowel in her hands, reminded him. Spencer Gibson, in his kitchen rocker, looked up across his eyeglasses from his evening paper but did not speak.

"We'll have a fire in the parlor in a few minutes and sit in there", Sarah said, mixing oatmeal for breakfast. Gavin sat smoking in the kitchen, evidently bored.

In the city, she knew, he would presently have gone forth when he felt this to find a game of somethin., dice, poker, roulette. Salletts offered him no such amusement. Or if it did he had not found them yet; in another day or two he might. She felt that she could not endure this situation for many days.

Andrew, eleven years old, and struggling with long division, called on her for help. Her mother brightly suggested a game of dominoes; did Gavin play dominoes? Becky, dropping with weariness and need for sleep, protested that she was "terrible", but somehow the dominoes appeared, and they played a languishing game. Gavin apparently was not interested. Why should he be? His domino stake was usually "twenty and two"—twenty cents a point and two dollars for the game points.

Constance Moore, Johnny Downs, Mary Carlisle and Eddie Quillan in "Hawaiian Nights," Universal's musical picture now showing at the Capitol and on the same program Jack London's story of the north country, "Wolf Call", featuring John Carroll and Movita.

Jane Withers and Leo Carrillo in the laugh hit, "The Arizona Wildcat," now playing at the McCarthy Theatre with the companion feature "Legion of Lost Flyers," starring Richard Arlen.

Rosalind Russell and Noma Shearer in the romantic comedy, "The Women," featuring Joan Crawford at the Belle Theatre.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Wolf Call"

Monogram's "Wolf Call', which is now playing at the Capitol, is Jack London set to music.

A thrilling story of a playboy's re-generation, "Wolf Call" is set against a magnificent background of the great northwest. Mike Vance, young millionaire, is sent by his father to investigate condi- at the Vance radium mine, and report as to whether or not the mine should be sold.

Mike arrives in Canada with a hangover and soon gets into a fight. His injuries are nursed by Towanah, Indian maid, and Father Devlin. When Mike learns that Carson, the mine superintendent, is in league with a radium syndicate which wants to get control of the mine, and discovers that Towanah's father has developed a process whereby the cost of production can be reduced, he wires his father not to sell.

But old Mr. Vance, informed of his son's affair with Towanah, is determined to get rid of the mine. Carson and his gang interrupt a broadcast as Mike is trying to get through to his father, and from then on it is a race against time as Mike, flying to New York, crashes in the wilderness.

John Carroll, a splendid actor with a glorious singing voice, plays Mike Vance; and the beautiful Movita is seen as the Indian maid, Towanah, who wins Mike from his American sweetheart, Natalie. Polly Ann Young has this role, and is an excellent aide to Movita, who is given a fine opportunity here for dramatic acting.

Outstanding in other roles are Peter George Lynn, as Father Devlin, the priest who was also a heavyweight champion, Wheeler Oakman, as the sinister Carson, and Guy Usher, who plays Mike's father.

Special mention must be accorded the dog star, Gray Shadow, who plays "Smoky". According to his trainer, Gray Shadow is one of the most intelligent animal actors on the screen, and his performance in "Wolf Call" certainly warrants such extravagant praise.

"Wolf Call" is based on the Jack London story of that name, and the screen play was written by Joseph West.

George Waggner directed, and Paul Malvern was the producer.

The added special attraction is Universals musical 'Hawaiian nights' featuring Johnny Downs, Mary Carlisle, Constance Moore, Eddie Quinlan, Matty Malnech and his orchestra and Sol Hoopii, Hawaiian Band.

AT THE BELLE

"The Women."

Skilfully blended as to comedy, drama and pathos, "The Women," starring Norma Shearer, Joan Crawford and Rosalind Russell, now in its third hilarious day at the Belle Theatre.

Based on the Broadway stage success by Clare Boothe, the drama has lost none of its effectiveness in being transcribed to the screen. It moves swiftly and surely against eye-filling and spectacular sets and not until the final fadeout does one realize the total absence of men from the screen.

The role of Mary Haines was a happy choice for Norma Shearer. Not since the days of "Riptide" and "Private Lives," has she appeared in the characterization of this type, and her return to the drawing-room comedy will be heralded by her many fans. Her performance is outstanding for its brilliance and versatility, particularly in the instance of her transformation from the hurt and humiliated wife into the woman ready and willing to fight other women with their own weapons.

Equally interesting is the performance turned in by Joan Crawford who assumes the role of a definite "heavy" for the first time in her screen career. As the siren, Miss Crawford does an outstanding piece of work. Her scenes are marked with fire and determination.

Sure-fire for comedy honors Rosalind Russell as the gossipy Sylvia Fowler brightens every moment in which she appears on the screen with her running mate, Phyllis Povah, drafted from the original stage production for the role, and a welcome addition to Hollywood's line-up. Mary Boland and Paulette Goddard provide another top comedy team. In the case of situations, however, the hair-pulling contest between Miss Russell and Miss Goddard may easily be awarded the palm.

Rich in production value, the entire drama proves a round of ace entertainment. The elaborate beau- night club and the individual wardrobes of the cast serve to dress up one of the most unusual love stories ever presented on the screen.

AT THE McCARTHY

"The Arizona Wildcat."

Law and disorder came to the West with Jane Withers and Leo Carrillo in "The Arizona Wildcat," 20th Century-Fox's uproarious comedy now playing at the McCarthy Theatre.

This is the type of picture Jane's admirers have been waiting to see her in, everything one could ask for in the line of action has found its way into "The Arizona Wildcat;" a faster-paced comedy has not been seen in along time. There isn't a moment's let-down from beginning to end and every time you blink your eyes something uproarious is happening. There's enough fun and excitement crowded in this one to make a dozen other good pictures.

Jane Withers is excellent and Leo Carrillo gives one of his finest performances in "The Arizona Wildcat." A fine supporting cast is headed by Pauline Moore, William Henry, Henry Wilcoxen, Douglas Fowley and Etienne Girardot.

"Legion of Lost Flyers"

If you enjoyed "Only Angels ty shop, the fashion parade, the Have Wings," you'll be more than delighted with the second feature presentation now at the McCarthy Theatre entitled "Legion of Lost Flyers" that stars Richard Arlen, Ann Nagle and Andy Devine.

Hitting a new high mark for adventure, drama and romance, "Legion of Lost Flyers," is an epic of the air, produced by the makers of "The Sun Never Sets," "You Can't Cheat an Honest Man," and "When Tomorrow Comes," and you will find it in every way the wholesome screen entertainment that these past productions found favor on your list of big movie hits.

"Adventures of a News Cameraman," a splendid short subject and another episode of "Mandrake the Magician," is also now playing at the McCarthy Theatre.

The Stars Say

For Friday, November 10

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

MODERATLY lively and auspicious conditions prevail on this day, according to the lunar transits. Fairly pleasant and profitable situations may develop in business as well as domestic, sentimental, social and cultural interests. There is some menace of inharmony, disappointment or defeat as a result of over-arduous or drastic manipulation of affairs, or because of the brewing of petty duplicities, schemes or other ulterior motives. Be vigilant.

Those whose birthday it is are assured a year of fair success and happiness in both business and personal activities, if they will keep alert to trivial deceits, plots, intrigues or other petty undermining conditions. Also, over-activity or ruthlessness may precipitate defeat and inharmony.

A child born on this day may have a rather complex and difficult nature, although it should be active, able and personally popular. It may be disposed to attain its ends by resort to petty treacheries and debatable tactics.

GIVES SELF UP TO POLICE

Montreal, Nov. 9 (CP)—Emile Lajoie, 24, walked into police headquarters last night and asked for a "good French Canadian" officer, explaining he wanted to give himself up on a two-year-old robbery charge.

Lajoie said he had broken into a Montreal store in 1937 and stolen dresses and silk stockings valued at $100. The records revealed the theft.

Probabilities
Cloudy with light scattered showers; strong southwest to northwest winds or moderate gales; somewhat colder tonight. Saturday: Strong northwest winds; fair and moderately cold.

German Aviators Appear to be Deliberately Violating Belgian Territory in Flying Between Aachen and Franco-Belgian Frontier

(By Axel de Holstein)
(Havas Staff Writer)

Paris, Nov. 10—(CP-Havas)—The violence of localized fighting and the aggressiveness of German vanguard units on the Western Front today strengthened the conviction that a German offensive is near.

A French General said a "big blow" is possible and that the French armies are braced for any eventuality.

This morning's official communique from the French High command merely reported "activity by contact elements during the night".

Within the last several days German land and air forces have grown progressively bolder and more active along the entire Lorraine front, from the Moselle to the Vosges.

Concentrate 100 Divisions

In the sector between the Rhine and Moselle Rivers French military quarters estimated the Germans have concentrated 100 divisions—between 1,000,000 and 1,500,000 men—behind the Westwall and Gould put 40 divisions into an attack within the course of one night.

Enemy reconnaissance flights, not only over the French positions and their immediate rear but above territory well behind the lines, have been extremely numerous.

German planes have repeatedly been sighted at high altitudes over Northern and Northeastern France. The German aviators appear to be deliberately violating Belgian territory in frequent return flights between Aachen and the Franco-Belgian frontier.

Land Patrols Active

German land patrols, larger than any put into action heretofore, have been thrusting repeatedly at French-controlled sectors.

Hardest fighting was reported in the Forbach region south of Saarbruecken, along the Threnthal salient and in the Apach ravine sector.

Residents of Schengen, in Luxembourg near where the Duchy's border touches Germany and France, reported hearing heavy machine-gun and artillery fire for 2 1-2 hours last night, apparently from the Perl-Paach sector. Dispatches said exploding shells shook buildings in Luxembourg villages along the Moselle, some miles away.

German Invasion Would Shock Moral Conscience of World and Hitler Would be Loser

Hear Report 'Intimidating Representations' Made To Holland and Belgium

Paris, Nov. 10.— (CP)—A Havas News Agency dispatch from Zurich today said reports were circulating in that Swiss city that Germany had delivered "intimidating representations" to the Governments of Belgium and the Netherlands. Details of the reported representations were not known in Switzerland, the dispatch said.

There have been recent reports that German armed forces are massed along the Belgo-German and Netherlands-German border.

Amsterdam, Nov. 10— (CP-Havas)—Foreign Minister E. N. Van Kleffens, addressing the Lower House of the Netherlands Parliament today, said that while an aggressor might have initial success in invading Holland, "the aggressors will end by regretting their aggression".

He said the independence of the Netherlands was essential to Europe, and that this fact could not be "misundersood by anybody with impunity."

A Brussels despatch said the Belgian cabinet later was called to meet at 9 p.m. (3 p.m. E.S.T.).

Foreign Minister Paul-Henri Spaak conferred with the British Ambassador, Sir Robert Clive.

Competent quarters in Amsterdam flatly denied rumors that Germany had made an "intimidating" demarche at The Hague.

These quarters insisted that the precautionary defence measures taken by the Netherlands were dictated by the concern raised in all neutral countries by aggravation of the general situation, rather than by any specific threat against the state.

BEER HALL EXPLOSION BLOCKS REICH VICTORY SAYS NEWS CHRONICLE

Internal German Division Shown by Attempt on Fuehrer's Life Says Paper

DEEPLY DIVIDED

London, Nov. 10 (CP)—Internal German division, as indicated by the Munich beer hall explosion, blocks a Reich victory over the powerful and united allies, the News Chronicle said today.

"There is really no reason to doubt that the explosion was a deliberate attempt on Hitler's life planned and carried out by opponents of the Nazi regime, some of whom are believed to have found their way into the Gestapo, and that from their point of view Hitler's escape was just a piece of pure luck," the newspaper said.

"It is certain that there are people there who are prepared to go to any lengths to overthrow Nazi tyranny. A nation which is so deeply divided can hardly hope to wage a successful war against united and powerful allies."

The Daily Telegraph said of the Nazi charges that the attempt on Hitler's life had been engineered from abroad:

Green flash from Venus! Many have heard of but a comparatively few people have seen that "green flash" from the sun just as it is sinking below the western horizon. There have been many reports of the same phenomenon when Venus sets. This can readily be believed, as any strong enough source of light composed of traditional seven colors of the rainbow will show the colors red, yellow, last green or bluish-green under the same circumstances. The "green flash" may occur either at rising or setting. At sunrise the colors appear as green, yellow and finally red, but upon setting they occur in reverse order with green last.

Canadians Resident in Belgium Warned to Leave Country

Brussels, Nov. 10—(CP Cable)—The Canadian legation tonight warned all Canadians resident in Belgium to be prepared to leave the country by the weekend.

Brussels, Nov. 10 —(AP) —Military authorities announced the reopening of certain northern canals which had been closed as a defence measure for several weeks.

The announcement was interpreted as an indication that they did not consider the international situation critical. The canals lie between the Albert Canal and the border with the Netherlands and from a direct route to Germany.

U. S. ARMY LAYING 'NEST EGGS' ALONG BOTH SEABOARDS

Mines Are Harmless for Any But Hostile Ships—Each Contains 200 lbs. TNT

ATTACHED TO ANCHORS

(By Stephen J. McDonough, Associated Press Science Writer)

Fortress Monroe, Va., Nov. 10—(AP)—The United States army is laying "nest eggs" up and down the Atlantic and Pacific coasts.

They are submarine mines, put away for the possible day of attempted invasion. Each contains 200 pounds of TNT and can be fired electrically from an observation point miles away.

The mines are harmless for any but hostile ships. Even if a ship struck them directly, they would not explode in impact as would mines used by the navy.

But the network, officals contend, would be fatal for any enemy battleship or submarine attempitng to invade a harbor or the channels into coastal waterways.

Buy a Poppy!

"To you from failing hands we throw
The Torch; Be yours to hold it high"

Tomorrow is Poppy Day.

Tomorrow veterans of the Great War and others will offer to Canada and Canadians the blood-red symbol, the Poppy, scarlet reminder of those gallant lads who gave all that civilization might endure; and those brave remnants who came back broken in body, to pick up the strands of civilization severed suddenly when the forces of evil threatened the freedom and liberties of the democratic world.

Today we are involved in another war against the forces of tyranny and oppression. Today the glorious youth of Canada and the Empire is once more arrayed in armed might against those very forces that would wipe freedom, liberty and all that civilization stands for, from the face of the earth.

Taken Up Challenge

Today Canada's sons and daughters, proud in the traditions handed down to them by heroic forebears, have taken up the bloody challenge of Hitlerism, and "faces to the West" stand ready with sacrifice and effort to hurl back the threat of the mailed fist of armed might that would engulf and destroy the very things for which their ancestors fought and died.

Every Canadian should wear a Poppy tomorrow.

We owe it to that gallant company who stand in the ghostly halls of Valhalla gazing earthward in the hope that the torch they threw is still being carried high. We owe it to that gallant company who returned to their homes, broken in body, and who through the manufacture of the glorious symbol of their dead, eke out a living. And we owe it to that gallant company now in the uniform of civilization who stand ready in the air, on the land and on the sea to uphold and defend those principles and ideals that are part of the common heritage of all democratic peoples.

Pause to Pay Tribute

Tomorrow, Belleville, in common with all parts of the Empire will pause in its busy stride to pay a silent two-minute tribute to its glorious dead.

Shops, stores, offices and factories, market-places and salesrooms will cease to function while Canada, in fact the whole world, stands with bowed heads in reverent silence.

For one hundred and twenty seconds memory will leap across a chasm of twenty-one years, when the flower of Canadian manhood went forth to battle and to die. And mingled in that memory will be the sincere prayer of millions, that generations, yet unborn, will be spared the horrors of war's holocaust that was their forebear's.

Then "Reveille"

Then "Reveille" will sound. And with its stirring notes will come the hope of an everlasting Peace, when the nations of the world can once again dwell beside each other in contentment, far from war's alarms—when the brotherhood of man has once again asserted itself and the flags of the nations twine and intertwine with each other in peace, harmony and mutual respect.

And so the red poppy tomorrow will carry a threefold meaning—tribute, memory and hope.

When the sellers of the scarlet symbol approach you, remember those heroes, who lie in Flanders fields—those equally heroic men, who came back to wage yet another war against the forces of depression, in spite of tremendous physical handicaps—and those gallant youngsters of today, who, gentlemen unafraid, stand ready to give all that we might continue to enjoy the glorious freedom, liberty and principles of British ideals, that have been ours down through the centuries.

FIRE LOSSES HIGHER

Toronto, Nov. 10 (CP)—Fire losses in Canada for the week ended Nov. 4 totalled $330,950, a substantial increase over the $150,500 for the previous week and higher also than the $223,900 losses in the corresponding week a year ago. The figures were released today by The Monetary Times.

For the month of October, fire losses were $1,612,600, compared with $1,469,200 a year ago.

SERIOUSLY INJURED

Kingston, Ont., Nov. 10 (CP)—Miss Jessie Gordon, Kingston, formerly Assistant Secretary of the Medical Faculty at Queen's University for more than 30 years, was seriously injured last night when struck by a car, driven by William Boyd, taxi driver. Miss Gordon was taken to the Kingston General Hospital.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

The attempt on Adolf Hitler's life was promptly seized upon by Nazi propagandists now engaged in the task of whipping up the German people to a fanatical hatred of Great Britain. Hitler's speech in the Munich beer hall only a few minutes before he left in time to escape injury and perhaps death was mainly directed to the same end.

Insofar as the Nazis succeeded in convincing Germans that the British secret service was responsible for the explosion they will mitigate the undoubted tendency of the incident to weaken public confidence in the Nazi regime.

Nevertheless the incident must give heart to thousands of anti-Nazis within Germany whose outward conformity hides deep and bitter resentment of religious, racial and political persecution, torture of themselves, their relatives and friends in concentration camps.

The attempt on Hitler's life will undoubtedly stir out-and-out Nazis to greater devotion to his person and his doctrines. But for those who are luke-warm, or secretly opposed, it is a bold notice that there are still daring and desperate spirits willing to risk everything to destroy him.

The gravity of the offence and the character of the Nazi regime combine to demand a victim, whether or not the guilty party may be found. So it is almost certain some one, perhaps many persons, will be punished.

Object Apparently Aimed At Huge Picture of Fuehrer; Thought Experts Set Bomb

Photographer Accompanied Hitler to Munich to Attend 1923 Putsch Celebration and Had Just Returned When Missile Thrown

REWARD INCREASED

Two Conclusions Reached on Bombing, First That Timing Device Set Off Explosion and Secondly, Extensive Preparations Made

Berlin, Nov. 10 (CP) — A large plate glass window in the store of Heinrich Hoffmann, personal photographer to Adolf Hitler, was smashed today by a missile apparently aimed at a huge picture of the Fuehrer.

Hoffman returned yesterday from Munich, where he attended the celebration of the 1923 putsch anniversary and narrowly escaped being caught in the blast which wrecked the historic Buergerbrau cellar.

Police dug through debris nine feet deep today in search of telltale fingerprints and metal scraps, having decided that experts set the time bomb intended for Adolf Hitler.

'Revolution Likely in Germany', Says Duchess of Bavaria

Hoboken, N.J., Nov. 10—(AP)—Duchess Eleanora of Bavaria, sister-in-law of Queen Mother Elizabeth of Belgium, said as she arrived today on the liner Veendam from Europe there was "likely to be a revolution in Germany."

Esther Maassen, 22, of Chicago, a German-born girl, returned from a six-month visit in Germany.

"The Germans don't know what freedom really is," she said. "The Americans are too dumb to know the amount of freedom they have, and if they do know it, they abuse it."

The Veendam, of the Holland-America Line, docked from Antwerp and Southampton with 659 passengers. A Viennese refugee, Jacob Grunberg, 78, died Nov. 1 while the ship was at sea. He was an uncle of Otto Schnabel, Austrian concert pianist now on tour of the United States.

BRITISH PLANE INTERNED

Brussels, Nov. 10—(CP-Havas)—A British airplane landed today in the region of Courtrai, near the French frontier. The plane and its crew were interned by Belgian authorities. It was believed the pilot thought he was landing on French territory.

MARGIN OF AIR SUPERIORITY IN WAR SO FAR IS SMALL

If Any Advantage Does Exist it Rests With French Force

YOUNG PILOTS USED

New York, Nov. 10 (AP)—Censored news dispatches and private reports from the western front tend to show that any margin of air superiority by one side or the other in the war so far is small.

If an advantage does exist, apparently it rests with the French air force.

Before the start of the war Great Britain laid claim to the fastest 'service' pursuits. Germany announced new speed records with racing planes and repeatedly inferred it had built up a numerical warplane superiority.

Equipped with American-made pursuits, French pilots since Sept. 3 have established a spectacular record against Germans flying the highly publicized Messerschmidt fighters.

The planes the French are using are said to be outclassed by one production type and two experimental types of pursuits ordered by the United States Army Air Corps.

323 M.P.H. Speed.

The United States Curtiss planes shipped to France have a maximum speed of 323 miles an hour. Reliable reports received here indicate the Messerschmidts are not much more than twenty miles an hour faster. The speed margin in actual combat has been erased by the whip-like manoeuvrability of the United States planes.

Contributing to the French air victories are at least two other factors—the ease of control built into the planes and the superior experience of the French pilots.

Most of the French air officers above the rank of captain flew in the first Great War, and built up a wealth of experience meantime for the war of 1939. In many instances German pilots downed in combat, especially in the touch-and-go raids on the British Isles, have been youngsters barely turned 20.

German Opera Singer Held for Investigation

London, Nov. 10—(CP Cable) — Johanny Elly Simon, 40-year-old German opera singer charged with possession of an irregular passport, was remanded for further investigation yesterday after police told a Bow Street Magistrate that the reason she wanted to obtain a passport without the "J" endorsement signifying she is a Jewess was to allow her to enter Canada to join her husband.

A detective who said she might possibly be a spy testified he was puzzled by her story she obtained the passport from another opera singer allowing her to escape the Gestapo, the German secret police.

He said a naval attache at a certain Berlin Embassy who could be reached through diplomatic channels might throw more light on the case as Mrs. Simon's papers of identity had been smuggled into Britain in diplomatic mail.

MEGALOMANIA OF HITLER BLAMED

Henderson Says Germans Must Feel at End of War Only Their Rulers, Leader and System to Blame

London, Nov. 10 (CP)—Sir Nevile Henderson, British Ambassador to Germany at the outbreak of war, addressing the London Press Club today, said "we must end the war in such a way that the only grievance that the Germans have shall be against their own rulers, against their leaders and the system that brought them again to defeat."

He said his attempts during 2 1-2 years to save peace through understanding with Germany were defeated by Adolf Hitler's "megalomania."

AERIAL PICTURES OF GREAT VALUE TO THE R. A. F.

Reconnaissance Flights Over Reich Show Flooded Sections of Nazi Westwall

MASSING TROOPS

Attempted General German Sweep Through Netherlands and Belgium Anticipated

London, Nov. 10—(CP Cable) — Britons were given dramatic proof today of the value of Royal Air Force reconnaissance flights over Germany with publications of pictures showing flooded sections of the Nazi westwall.

The aerial pictures, published in newspapers today, showed strikingly how the advanced posts of the fortified line had been inundated. Taken after heavy rains, the pictures showed the overflowing Rhine had encircled completely fortifications along the bank.

The Air Ministry has announced 21 observation flights over the Reich, many of which resulted in "valuable photographs" of military objectives being obtained.

May Shift Bases

Possible preparation for a move to shift German air bases nearer the coast of England was seen meanwhile in the massing of Nazi troops near the borders of Europe's low countries.

Britons heard reports of growing tension on the Netherlands-Reich frontier, heightened by a reported border incident in which possibly two persons were killed and several Hollanders were abducted into Germany.

Newspapers devoted big headlines to the reports which some saw as

SCHOOL-TEACHER KNOCKED DOWN, CRITICALLY HURT

Miss Bernice Church Receives Grave Facial Injuries When Hit by Truck on Glenora Road

SUN BLINDS DRIVER

Picton, Ont., Nov. 10—(Special)—Critically injured, Miss Bernice Church, 21-year-old school teacher, was rushed to Prince Edward County Hospital here last evening after being struck by a heavy Prince Edward County road truck on the Glenora Road, six miles south of this town.

Miss Church is suffering from a fractured skull, compound fractures of both lower and upper jaws, a punctured eyeball and other facial injuries. Her condition today was regarded as "serious" by attending physicians.

The injured girl was walking along the road, a half-mile from her home at Lake-on-the-Mountain when she was struck. According to investigating County Constable James Lovelace, Harry Dodge, Picton, driver of the truck, told him that he was unable to see the girl due to the fact that the sun was shining brightly through the windshield of the vehicle.

Hedley Ostrander and George Martin, who were riding in the truck with Dodge told the same story. Dodge told police he "felt a bump as if the truck had struck something, and immediately stopped." They got out of the cab and found Miss Church in an unconscious condition lying by the side of the road. She was carried to the nearby home of Alfred Snider and from there was taken to hospital.

Police stated today that charges would be preferred against Dodge but the nature would depend on the result of, the injuries sustained by Miss Church. The injured girl is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sylvester Church and had taught school at Glenora since September.

POLICE COURT

"This is the most ridiculous thing I ever heard tell of. Fortunately for you, young man, the maximum fine is only ten dollars," stated Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., in addressing 35-year-old Harold Thompson, Rossmore, when Thompson appeared in city police court today on a charge of trespassing upon Canadian National Railway property, namely by driving his motor car on the C.N.R. tracks at the Belleville station recently. Thompson pleaded guilty and was assessed the maximum fine under the law.

After the charge of trespassing was read to Thompson, Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C., addressed the court. "This young man decided to use the C.N.R. railway tracks in front of the local station as a highway and at a time when the night express train was due to arrive", revealed Mr. Donnan.

"Fortunately for him the midnight flyer was late that night", stated Fred Chapman, chief of C.N.R. special police.

Six persons, including a Brighton woman, appeared on charges of intoxication. Four pleaded guilty and paid the conventional 'ten and costs', while the charge against the woman was enlarged until Monday next.

George Montgomery Maritime province transient, admitted he had imbibed tou freely, but asked the court to forego a jail term and let him depart. His plea fell on deaf ears, while the others agreed to pay the fiddler.

Use of Weigh-Scale Building for Bus Terminal Suggested

Recommendations that the now vacant office in the weigh-scale building at the corner of Market and Pinnacle Streets be converted into a terminal for main highway and other buses, will in all likelihood be forwarded to bus company officials and city council, Alderman Jack Marshall stated this morning.

Alderman Marshall with Aldermen Harry Rollins and Charles Cushing were appointed a committee of three to investigate the possibilities of usage of the vacant building by City Council in Committee last night. The committee will report to council immediately following thorough investigation of the matter.

Another suggestion forwarded by Alderman Marshall regarding the use of the building, was the transfer of the City Relief Office and Staff from its present locale in the City Hall.

Referring to its possibilities as a bus terminal, the alderman was of the opinion that the building would be an ideal location for such a use.

"Belleville has been sorely in need of a terminal for some time," he said, "and I cannot think of a better location that the weigh-scale building. It is conveniently situated, and has ample parking space in its immediate vicinity. The office would make an ideal waiting-room for passengers, while its central position would make it convenient for buses as well as travellers".

Conversion of the building into a bus terminal would also eliminate the congestion of traffic in this part of the city during market days, due to large buses stopping on market and other streets in the vicinity. "The public could easily be educated to the fact that there was one central places at which buses travelling in all directions would stop," Alderman Marshall said.

OBITUARY

LATE MRS. E. W. BROWN, (Thurlow Township).

The funeral of Mrs. E. W. Brown took place from the family residence in the 3rd Concession of Thurlow Township on Thursday afternoon and many friends were present at the service which was conducted in the home by the Rev. A. Armstrong, pastor of Bethany United Church, assisted by the Rev. E. Farnsworth, of Belleville. During the service Mr. Bruce Martin sang "City Four Square," with accompaniment played by Miss Clarke.

Interment was made in Elmwood Cemetery. The bearers were Messrs. John McCullagh, William Clarke, William Casey, George Hamilton, Wesley Bradshaw and John Cooley.

OBITUARY .. ..N-tN REN .. .. MISS MARY FOLEY

After a lengthy illness Miss Mary Foley passed away at the residence of her sister, Mrs. Katherine Gannon, 33 North Front Street, Thursday afternoon, Nov. 9th.

The late Miss Foley, who was in her 85th year, was born in Tyendinaga Township, her parents being the late Mr. and Mrs. James Foley. The greater part of her life was passed in the township where she was born and for the past five years she made her home in Belleville with her sisters, Mrs. Katherine Gannon and Miss Anna Foley, who are the only close relatives surviving her. In religion Miss Foley was a faithful member of St. Michael's Church and throughout her long life she was held in high esteem in the communities where she lived.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

Campbellford Hunters Get Their Deer in Less Than Three Hours

Deer apparently are plentiful in the district immediately north of Campbellford, for less than three hours after they had reached the hunting grounds, 35 miles north of that town, Earl Van Volkenberg, A. C. Connor, John Gay and Harold Twigg had three fine bucks hanging at their figurative belts.

William Tedford's party however were not so fortunate. Although they have seen no deer as yet, they succeeded in bagging a trio of bears that became too curious, while hunting near Burleigh Falls.

A. & N. Veterans Will Observe Sunday as Remembrance Day; The Imperials on Saturday

Despite the decision of other war veteran organizations of the city and district to observe "Remembrance Day" on Saturday, November 11th, members of the Army and Navy Veterans in Canada, Branch 201, decided to adhere to their original plans and pay tribute to the fallen on Sunday, November 12th, at the regular meeting held in the Front Street Clubrooms last night.

Mild discussion followed the question as to when to hold Remembrance Day observances with the majority of members voting for the original plan to deposit wreaths on the Memorial Cenotaph and attend divine service at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church at eleven o'clock Sunday morning.

Plans as laid down last night and which will appear in advertisements in the newspaper call for veterans to "fall in" at the Armouries at ten o'clock Sunday morning. The parade, which will be headed by the Belleville Municipal Band, followed by Imperial Veterans, Canada's fighting divisions, a detachment of the Royal Canadian Air Force, members of the Women's Auxiliary of the Canadian Legion and possibly fraternal societies and members of the Belleville City Council, will move off sharply at ten-fifteen o'clock. A brief service conducted by the Rev. W. J. Walker will be held at the Cenotaph; wreaths will be deposited by the veterans organizations, city council, the Province of Ontario and city organizations and the parade will march to St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

Imperials Observe Saturday

Decision to hold the Remembrance Day observances on Saturday morning at eleven o'clock was made by the Imperial Veterans' Association, President James Shepherd of that organization told Army and Navy veterans last night. This, however, will in no way interfere with the Army and Navy service on Sunday. Invitation to Canadian veterans to attend the services on Saturday was cordially extended by President Shepherd.

Fine Entertainment

Following the business session of last night's meeting, veterans were entertained by the Public School Boys' Band under the baton of Conductor A. Cooper. The band, some thirty strong, played several stirring selections, featured in which was the popular "Beer-Barrel Polka." The youthful musicians who showed exceptional ability in the handling of their instruments drew the well-merited acclaim of the veterans.

Tommy Mason, versatile pianist and entertainer, was never heard to better advantage in his renditions of the old war songs. He was encored time and time again, and generously responded with song and recitation.

The perennial Jamie Clark, Belleville's ace piper, brought old Scottish songs and melodies home with his tuneful instruments. Jamie scored the hit of the evening when he commandeered the services of the drummers of the Boys' Band and paraded through the ranks of veterans playing old-time Scottish marches.

His rendition of the "Blue Bells of Scotland" played with a remarkable chime effect practically "brought down the house." Always popular with the veterans, the diminutive piper entertained with march, lament and popular melody until a late hour.

Mayor and Council Guests

Following the session of City Council in committee Mayor Jamieson Bone and members of the council were guests of the veterans. His Worship the Mayor in a brief address to the ex-service men reaffirmed the sympathy of himself and council in the Remembrance Day observances. He lauded the stand taken by veterans in the present emergency, adding that they were the steadying influence on the youth of Canada that is now taking up arms in the Empire's defence.

Refreshments brought to a close a meeting and entertainment that in spirit if not volume took the place of the usual Armistice Day social events. Newly-elected President Fred Wiggins occupied the chair.

Sulphide Youths Admit Peppering Resident With Eggs

Hallowe'en pranks usually are passed off as the general trend of custom, but there is a limit to insults and personal sufferings, eight Sulphide youths found out, when they appeared before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd on charges of assault at Tweed yesterday. The octette of youths, whose names were given as Francis Torch, Kenneth Credicott, Harold Luffman, Everett Beatty, Robert Founder, Claude Youngs, Morris Beatty and Fletcher Deline, faced the charges as the result of peppering H. Purchase, Sulphide with eggs on Hallowe'en, some of which were of the rather over-ripe nature.

"I am instructed by police these lads called at the home of Mr. Purchase and after rapping on the door, stepped back and pelted him with eggs as he opened the front door of his home. Some of the eggs were rather aged and the stench was not exactly acceptable to the home," related Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C. in presenting the cases.

The lads all pleaded guilty and were placed on suspended sentence after being cautioned by His Worship regarding the repetition of such practices. The boys also were assessed the costs of the proceedings.

VETS TO PAY TRIBUTE TO BELLEVILLE MEN WHO HAVE ENLISTED

Tribute to Belleville's sons who have enlisted in His Majesty's fighting forces in the present war will be paid by officials and members of the Belleville Branch of the Army and Navy Veterans in Canada, it was decided at last night's meeting held in the Front Street Clubrooms.

The names of all Bellevillians who wear the King's uniform in the present conflict will be emblazoned on a "Roll of Honor" and hung in a prominent place in the clubrooms.

There it will occupy a place alongside the names of those who fought for King and Country in the last Great War, and near the black-bordered scroll containing the names of those who "went west" for civilization.

The Roll will be placed in position in the near future.

PROCLAMATION !

I hereby proclaim that on Remembrance Day, Saturday, November 11th, 1939, at the hour of eleven in the forenoon, all loyal citizens do observe two minutes of reverent silence

That the glorious dead of the last Great War may be remembered and revered.

That those they left behind may also be remembered, cherished and encouraged.

That the veterans who survived, more or less broken in body and in health, may also be remembered by a grateful nation.

That the young men and women now offering themselves to do battle with the massed forces of evil be saluted and honored.

And that we and our statesmen throughout the great British Empire be given keen perception and Divine Guidance.

Red Cross Committee Chosen In Nation-Wide Campaign For Funds for War Work

All Sections of Canada Represented in Group Which Brings Leaders From Many Fields

$3 MILLION OBJECTIVE

Drive Will Follow Queen Elizabeth's Message to Women of the British Empire on Armistice Day

FERGUSON CHAIRMAN

Toronto, Nov. 10—Leadership in Canada's first national war appeal, to be launched Monday, November 13, on behalf of the Red Cross, will be provided by a committee of outstanding Canadians who have enlisted under Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, former Canadian High Commissioner to London, it was announced here today.

Representatives of every walk of life, chosen from all sections of [illegible], form the group of more [illegible] 158 men and women who will head an army of thousands of Red Cross volunteers, in every city and town in the country, who will launch a drive for an objective of $3,000,000.

The Ferguson Committee, as it has become known among Red Cross workers who have been engaged in completing details of the campaign, will fact the task of providing funds for war work with an added significance, it is expected, following an address by Her Majesty, the Queen, on Armistice Day. The message which the Queen will broadcast to the women of the Empire, it is anticipated, will urge them to devote themselves to the task of providing the materials and supplies needed for the comfort of the forces and the relief of civilian suffering.

The personnel of the committee, as released by Mr. Ferguson today, reveals a membership which includes church, professional, education and financial leaders, and is as democratic as first promulgated in the 75-year-old Red Cross principle laid down in Geneva: "Membership must be open to all nationals without any distinction, particularly as regards sex, religion or political opinion."

A strong committee from all Canada consists of: Chairman, Hon. G. Howard Ferguson; Honorary Patrons, the Lieutenant-Governors of the nine provinces—Premier T. D. Patullo, British Columbia; Premier William Aberhart, Alberta; Premier W. J. Patterson, Saskatchewan; Premier John Bracken, Manitoba; Premier M. F. Hepburn, Ontario; Premier-Elect Adelard Godbout, Quebec; Premier A. A. Dysart, New Brunswick; Premier Angus L. Macdonald, Nova Scotia; Premier Thane Campbell, of Prince Edward Island.

The Ontario members are:—Joseph E Atkinson, The Toronto Daily Star, J. P. Bickell, McIntyre Mines, Toronto, Rev. H. H. Bingham, Ontario and Quebec Baptist Convention. Lieut-Col. Claude Brown, O.B.E., London, Col. Hon. Herbert A. Bruce, Toronto, C. L. Burton, Toronto, Wallace R. Campbell, Ford of Canada, Windsor, C. H. The committee, with the full endorsement of the Canadian Red Cross Society, urges this appeal upon the people of Canada. In all provinces of the Dominion, its members will stand in support of the work of the society with belief in its great necessity and in full confidence that the people of every section of the country will respond with their utmost financial and moral support.

P. E. CO. HOSPITAL HAS GOOD YEAR

Net Profit of $107.45 for Year Reported by Secretary of Institution

Picton, Nov. 10—During the past year, Prince Edward County Hospital enjoyed a very successful year and ended with a net profit of $107.45, Secretary-Treasurer R. B. Small reported at the annual meeting this week. In addition, provision had been made to cover all expenditures during the year and also sufficient reserves to cover depreciation of buildings and equipment.

There had been 868 patients during the year and 176 babies had been born there. A legacy of $300 had been left the hospital by David H. Sprung.

The hospital has been considerably improved by the adding of a new table for the operating room, an autoclave sterilizer, an oxygen tent, a stove for the kitchen, and extractor and steam roller for the laundry and a high pressure steam boiler, all of which it was felt would mean a saving in operating.

Mrs. C. H. McGibbon gave the report of the Woman's Hospital Auxiliary and showed that they had raised a good deal of money as well as accomplishing much sewing for the institution.

Directors elected were Carson Hubbs, W. H. Nettleton, W. S. Blakely, H. D. Cleminson and G. M. Hicks. The Medical Board will elect a representative as will the County Council and these will meet later to elect officers. Mr. Hubbs is the president and presided at the annual meeting.

Various members of the board had complimentary remarks about the management of the hospital and the work of the various officers as well as the splendid support given by the public and other organizations.

Entertained at Tea

Mrs. C. A. Newman entertained at a tea with proceeds in aid of the I.O.D.E. war funds, at her home yesterday. There was a very large attendance of ladies and a nice sum was realized. These teas are being held frequently at the homes of various members.

Pupils of Picton Collegiate and Vocational Institute enjoyed some motion pictures showing the Old Curiosity Shop and part of the royal tour in Canada, following school on Wednesday. The cadet corps sponsored the program and are using the money to help pay for the uniforms.

Mrs. E. H. Kelly entertained at a musicale yesterday afternoon at her home, taking her guests on to the home of Mrs. C A. Newman for refreshments at the I.O.D.E. tea.

The various companies of Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment had their pictures taken yesterday. They are preparing for the visit in the near future of Major-General McNaughton, who will be in command of the First Division overseas. As yet there are not sufficient shoes and socks to go round and the Red Cross has supplied several hundred pairs of socks to help out.

William Branscombe, coach of Picton Junior O.H.A. team, has joined Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment.

Major and Mrs. Howard Graham of Trenton have taken an apartment in Mrs. J. J. Garvin's apartments.

Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Walden spent a day in Napanee this week. Mrs. F. H. Herrington, who was their guest for a few days, returned home with them.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Leavitt have gone to Florida to spend the cold months.

Miss Mary Kavanagh of the Bell Telephone Co. is attending a conference in Ottawa.

Picton will observe Remembrance Day with a great service on Saturday morning. The stores will close from ten o'clock until noon.

Cannifton

Cannifton—Many friends are sorry to hear that Rev. A. Armstrong was so ill that he was not able to take the service on Sunday last.

Mrs. P. Grass of Frankford spent a day recently visiting friends here.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Lywood and family were the tea hour guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cannon of Centre.

Miss Elma Reid of the Ontario School for the Deaf spent the week end at Mr. and Mrs. Charles Mathews'.

Mr. Jack Williams has had the telephone put in his home.

The community welcomes Mr. and Mrs. Dale Sharpe. They are living in part of Mr. Latta's home.

Mr. and Mrs. John Webb spent an evening recently with Mr. and Mrs. A. Carmichael.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Hall are now living in their new home, the residence of the late Miss Mary Callery.

Mr. and Mrs. B. Bowerman, Yvonne and June of Albury spent Sunday at Mr. and Mrs. Charles Mathews.

Mr. Earl Demille has had an operation for appendicitis in the Belleville General Hospital.

Voters' Opinion Sought on Suspension of Municipal Elections for War's Duration

Belleville Municipal Electors Will be Given Chance to Register Vote on Question

VOTE ON DECEMBER 4

Mayor Bone Voices Opinion Premier Should Have Consulted Heads of Municipalities Before Taking Action

Municipal electors of the city of Belleville will be asked to vote in the forthcoming civic election on two questions relative to the suspension of municipal elections for a period of two years or duration of the war, according to a recommendation passed by the City Council in committee last night.

The questions are:

"Are you in favor of suspending the annual municipal elections for a period of two years and or for the duration of the present war provided it continues beyond two years from the date thereof."

"Are you in favor of an application being made to the Legislature to pass an act extending the period for which members of Council are elected from a one-year to a two-year term, and providing for retirement of one-half the members each year."

The questions are an aftermath of the statement made by Premier Mitchell Hepburn a few weeks ago, that he would bring in legislature at the next session of Parliament, to suspend municipal elections for a period of two years after January 1940, or for the duration of the war providing it lasts more than two years after that date.

They will be inserted on the ballots and electors will mark "yes" or "no" according to their opinion on the matter.

Mayor Bone Against

His Worship Mayor Bone, who declared himself a few days ago as being "emphatically against such legislation" voiced the opinion today that the Premier of Ontario should have consulted the heads of municipalities before taking such action.

"Mayors and other Municipal heads are elected by the voice of the electors of municipalities and as their accredited leaders should have some say in the matter," he said.

Official opinion on the question was sharply divided in city municipal circles according to a consensus taken shortly after the Premier made his statement. Chairman Russell Wotten of the Board of Education concurred with the Mayor, with Chairman Morley Duff of the Public Utilities Commission and Hastings County Clerk Eric Denyes, expressing themselves as being in favor of the plan.

County Councillors to discuss Plans

According to an authoritative source, heads of rural municipalities of the county will thoroughly discuss the question at the forthcoming session of the Hastings County Council. A number of communities have already advanced their election dates to December from January, in order that their elected representatives can vote with confidence on resolutions regarding the suspension of municipal elections that will be introduced during the County Council December session.

OBJECT

Nazi newspapers blamed the British Secret Service and Jews, but searchers hunted for clues that might reveal the identity of those who prepared the blast which missed the Fuehrer by only eleven minutes Wednesday night.

The whole nation was canvassed for information that might lead to the assassins who set off the blast in Munich's historic Buergerbrau cellar, a Nazi shrine, killing six men and a woman and injuring 63 others.

Germans who heard a broadcast of the Fuehrer's address at the beer hall celebration of the 1923 Nazi putsch were asked to report any radio listeners who hight have commented, "nothing happened", or who asked, "why did the Fuehrer speak so briefly?" He spoke for 58 minutes.

Reward Is Increased.

In addition to a reward of 600,000 marks ($240,000) offered earlier for aid in tracking down the perpetrators, Heinrich Himmler, chief of the Nazi police, offered 300,000 marks ($120,000) to anyone abroad who supplied information leading to the arrest of the guilty person or persons.

Hitler's only comment when he heard of the explosion was "a fellow has to have luck"—"glueck muss der mensch haben".

After he arrived safely at his chancellery yesterday, the Fuehrer studied photographs of the wreckage which poured down from the ceiling so deep on the rostrum from which he had spoken that eight hours were needed to clear it away and recover the dead.

Just a "Miracle".

To many Nazis, it was a "miracle" that urgent state business broke up the annual celebration ahead of schedule, and that Hitler and some of the highest ranking Nazis had left unharmed.

Criminologists had reached two conclusions—first, that a timing advice set off the explosion and, secondly, that careful and extensive preparations had been made.

There have been no official disclosures of the progress of the investigation, and the number of arrests is not known. Authorities, however, said charges had not necessarily been placed against any persons detained so far.

Archbishop of Paris Requests French To be Patient

Paris, Nov. 10—(CP-Havas)— A plea to the French people to be patient, made in the Catholic periodical La Semaine Relgieuse by Jean Cardinal Verdier, Archbishop of Paris, made some French circles wonder today if he had included a hint that Italy might be brought into the Allied camp.

"Let us be patient," Cardinal Verdier wrote. "We forget that if our armies seem to be living in useless waiting, other less murderous and doubtless as effective battles are taking place on the economic and diplomatic field.

"The Holy See has already proclaimed the right in terms which have powerfully encouraged us. Fertile friendships are growing stronger, and groupings of peoples are being worked out which permit the highest hopes.

"All this is better paving the way for triumphant battles, if they are some day necessary. Let us know how to wait, to be patient, and we shall thus best serve the interests of France and our dear ones."

21 years ago, on November 11, the Great War ended with the armistice. That day was observed with demonstrations throughout the Allied world and accepted silently by the defeated foe. Since then the day quickly took on a different aspect with the memory of the dead paramount, and with plans to carry on the peace movement until war should be no more a possibility. Then in time came the breakdown of the League of Nations as member nations left their seats, and a few years ago rearmament became again the fear of of men. For some years the world has been trembling lest another war come and wondered how long peace could last. Today that other war has come and the world is nearer peace than it was in those awful days of suspense of the past two or three years. But how long away that second armistice will be, no one can tell. It is the hope and prayer of the vast millions of the population of the earth that the Allied arms will triumph and that the disturber of peace and enslaver of peoples and territories may be crushed and Germany set on a footing which will assure peace and security to others and to herself.

The past and the present mingle very poignantly at this time as young Canadians and youths of other parts of the Empire prepare and dedicate themselves to the supreme task of holding back with their bodies and their engines of war the enemy and of crushing that foe's ambitions and aspirations to dominate the earth. These young men are ready to give all as the men of 1914-1918 were ready to do and as many did.

On Saturday especially we honor the memory of the dead and recall their deeds which are a light to the youths and adults of today, and we think of the weight of war which rests on everyone at this hour to do his or her duty in every possible way.

Today we are inspired by the efforts of those who fought at the front or on the homefront in those other years to achieve security and today we pledge ourselves to do no less than they. Saturday Armistice would have celebrated its coming of age but the German Nazis would not have it so. Now the Allied world will halt in its efforts and observe the two-minute silence in honor of the fallen, and think of the present task, vowing and dedicating all to this great effort for the world's liberation from fears and unrests, revolution and selfish ambitions.

Surely this world knows the cost of freedom, which is still the one thing no one who has ever known it would yield even at the cost of life.

THE RED CROSS CAMPAIGN

The committee named by the Canadian Red Cross Society to direct the national campaign for war funds is, in effect, a directory of our most prominent citizens. Under the chairmanship of Hon. Howard Ferguson, the character of this committee should ensure that the objective of three millions of dollars should be reached.

A study of the information contained in the display advertisements now appearing in The Ontario Intelligencer will convince Canadians generally that the Red Cross is undertaking in this new war the same splendid work that marked its activities in 1914-18. The cause is most worthy. The sum of eight thousand dollars has been set as Belleville's quota, and judging from the former generous reception of Red Cross appeals, undoubtedly will be attained.

THE EXPLOSION AT MUNICH

Repercussions of the explosion in the Munich Buergerbrau beer cellar, the shrine of Hitlerism on Wednesday night when a terrific blast brought down ruins of the structure on many persons, killing seven and wounding more than sixty who had been celebrating with Adolf Hitler the sixteenth anniversary of his unsuccessful putsch in 1923, may be expected.

The explosion has world significance because of the fact that Adolf Hitler was here celebrating with the Nazis leaders and old friends of 1928, and that he, the head of the German Nazi Government, had left the building to go to his train not long before the blast took place.

The plot so deeply laid as this appears to have been has so many elements of mystery that the occurrence has attracted the attention of the world, especially at this time because of the fact that Germany is at war.

What revelations will come out of the search by the German police into the plot remain to be seen. With the extreme suppression of news under the German dictatorship it is doubtful if the facts will be fully revealed, at least, for a considerable time.

Endless conjecture will centre about the blast. Various opinions have been expressed as to the responsibility for the explosion, but the German police themselves admit there is nothing definite. High-ranking Nazi officials were too ready for political reasons to charge the blame on foreign agents but the police admit that the job was that of experts. Many see in the explosion a plot originated or planned in Germany. One opinion in Paris is that it was anti-Soviet in purpose. There are other conjectures.

A possible repercussion is seen in French circles where the opinion is expressed that Hitler may take some immediate step in the war as a consequence of this incident.

The course of the past few years has not been all smooth sailing, for force and violence have not been absent in the Nazi Regime. Such an event as took place the other night at the beer cellar whence Hitler and his followers had started out to conquer the world in 1928, might not appear unnatural, especially in view of the stress and strain of the past few years.

There have been reported other alleged attempts on Hitler's life but the facts have always been shrouded behind the silence of censorship. But Thursday's event which is not hidden or could not be hidden occurs at a critical time in world history and especially in German affairs.

One of the surprises is that German police and military efficiency and precautions should have failed in this very place at this time of the war to guard against such an occurrence. The plans, whoever the perpetrators were, must have been most carefully laid for only the time element of the plot missed.

The reaction of the incident on Chancellor Hitler and on the German people will be watched closely.

MUNICH

Munich has three times been in the public eye. Sixteen years ago the Nazi revolution under Hitler had its birth there with the putsch that failed. In September 1938 the famous pact of Munich was signed over Czecho-Slovakia and Wednesday night in the same Buergerbrau beer cellar, the very shrine of Nazism and Hitlerism, Adolf Hitler himself narrowly escaped the explosion at the close of the anniversary celebration.

Hitler here fostered the revolution which has overrun Germany and made it the threat to the welfare of Europe and has resulted in the present war.

Munich has been the centre of much of the life of Adolf Hitler. After working as a carpenter in Vienna for five years he left there in 1912 for Munich and escaped military service in the Austrian army. It was while here he joined the German army in 1914. At the end of the war he returned to Munich where he became the founder of the group, now known as the National Socialist German Labor Party (Nazi). In 1923 assisted by General von Ludendorf, he organized in this very Munich the revolt which was quelled in 48 hours. He was arrested and sentenced to prison for five years but was released within a year, and resumed his socialist activities. From that time onward he built up his party. In 1932 he ran for president of the German Republic but was defeated by von Hindenburg by a majority of 2,000,000 votes. As leader of the largest party in the Reichstag he was invited by von Hindenburg to form a majority government but so many conditions and provisions were attached that he found it impossible to get adequate support in the Reichstag from his party and was forced to decline. Von Schleicher was made chancellor but his rule was shortlived and Hitler became chancellor and after the death of Hindenburg he assumed full power.

The cathedral at Munich was built between 1468 and 1494 and is remarkable for its two square towers with their octagonal upper stories, capped by cupolas and its thirty lofty and highly decorated windows. Its public library contained a million and a third volumes and is rich in art collections.

Munich is noted for its enormous breweries of Bavarian beer and also has manufactories for cotton, wool and damask goods, jewellery, silver articles, mathematical instruments, machinery, leather goods, wax-cloth, paper-hangings, pianos, gold, silver and steel wares. It has large lithographic plants.

It is one of the finer cities of Germany and is imposing in appearance. It has been the seat of culture and art with vast art galleries. The national theatre is one of the largest in Europe.

In 1919 it was the scene of serious disorders when an effort was made to set up a Soviet Government.

Writing of Verses

We like the spirit of a Journal reader who writes us in this way:

"I don't pretend to be a scholar. I am a countrywoman, and quite busy, but I always find time to write a poem or a song or frame up a pageant when it is needed."

She does not pretend that her poems are works of literature; they are just simple, homely pieces written because she likes to write them, because she has caught something of the fascination of making words jump through hoops. Nor does she think editors should be pressing her for publication rights. Poems are her hobby, and if they interest others that is fine, but essentially she writes to please herself.

And that is, we think, the correct attitude for the amateur poet; to look upon the composition of verse as a private enterprise of no commercial value, a pleasant hobby that costs nothing, harms nobody, has a circle of interest no broader than the family and close friends.

Publication, in a great many cases, should be the last thing in the poet's mind. The difficulty is that, reduced to type and submitted to the judgment of casual readers, an honest, painstaking piece of composition bristling with the finest sentiment is judged by the standards of true poetry, and unthinking people may call it ridiculous presumption. The amateur should not want to put himself, or herself, in that position. A man may build bird-houses or book-cases as a hobby, or work with metal, but he would not think of competing with professionals He might raise a few chrysanthemums in a sunny window, but he would not dream of submitting them for judgment with the product of experts perfectly equipped.

If poets looked upon their hobby in the same light—and many of them do—they would be spared from disappointment and grief.—Ottawa Journal.

Money to Spend for Peace

The trustees of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace have to acknowledge once more that not much progress has been made towards accomplishment of the aims of its founder, and there is a certain irony in production of their report for 1938 at a time when the world again is immersed in the business of war.

Andrew Carnegie, when he turned over $10,000,000 to the trustees back in 1910, told them to ask themselves "from time to time, from age to age, how they can best help man in his glorious ascent onward and upward and to this end devote this fund." No doubt they have done their best, and if they have not made any conspicuous gains it merely goes to show that the ills of the world are beyond the cure of money except perhaps by extremely slow process.

The Carnegie fund now stands at $12,349,015, and for the last fiscal year the trustees found themselves confronted with the task of spending an income of $538,892. Its main disbursements were under the headings of "Intercourse and Education," "International Law" and "Economics and History." The money, that is, went into the most commendable form of propaganda —a widespread effort to convince the nations that law, education and knowledge rather than war are the solutions of their problems.

It would seem that the trustees have a long job on their hands, but we may be sure they will never show discouragement while they have half a million dollars to spend each year—Ottawa Journal.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

Removing Fear of the Dentist

"Until recently "painless" dentistry was largely a myth, a phrase used by charlatans and quacks to lure unwilling victims into their fly-by-night offices. But today, every major dental operation can be performed without the least pain to the patient. Much of the suffering due to operative dentistry—filling and removing teeth—is today altogether unnecessary."

I am quoting Frederick R. Adams, DD.D.S., New York, in Hygeia.

Unfortunately most individuals do not know that dentists can do so much work about the teeth and gums without causing pain and so allow these harmful conditions to become worse rather than visit their dentist. "Though physical anguish has been uprooted at last, the difficult matter of doing away with fear and "imagined" sufferings remains unsolved. I think more people are deterred from making needed visits to their dentists because they fear they may be hurt than for all other reasons combined."

"A new anaesthetic (with long name) has been developed quite recently. Already over eight million injections of this new drug have been made, and it gives every indication of being a decided improvement on any other anaesthetic now available to the dentist. Not only is the onset of anaesthesa swifter, but this new preparation is more thorough; apparently entirely safe, and so stable that boiling will not spoil it. What is more, no bad effect on the heart has been observed in any of the numerous trials. Nor does this new drug "accumulate" in the body, for when the blood stream carries it to the liver, it is broken down into almost completely harmless substances."

The thought then is that as pain or the fear of pain keeps many individuals from seeing their dentist until considerable damage to teeth and gums is present, this new anaesthetic should remove that fear, and so urgent and necessary dental work should be done without delay.

Your dentist and physician will tell you that when infected gums and teeth are too long neglected, the removal of teeth, too far gone to be worth trying to save, may cause injury to the gums and surrounding tissues so that the "open" blood vessels may carry infection to joints and heart, causing rheumatism and heart disease.

Mussolini's Fair at Rome

Mussolini's World's Fair of 1942 can scarcely be dedicated exclusively to the World of Tomorrow, as ours was. Its very site in the Eternal City is an assurance that considerable emphasis will be placed on the glories of the past.

Photographs of the excavations and construction work already under way indicate that it is to be an elaborate enterprise. The buildings are solid and rather severely modern, without being fantastically modernistic. But if we have peace by the time Il Duce's fair opens it will be old Rome rather than any modern achievement of fascism that most visitors will be drawn to see. The background of the exposition is sure to be "the grandeur that was Rome" in ancient days. Mussolini, who has dreamed sometimes of recreating the empire of the Caesars, is certainly not unsympathetic to the lesson of the long continuity of civilization through every catastrophe that the contrariness of Man could conceive an dexecute.

Rome, perhaps even more than Athens itself, is rich in the relics of the past. It blends more than twenty-four hundred years of community life. Despite the invasions which have swept over it and the darkness which sometimes descended on it, it is the only world capital existing today which ever enjoyed as much as three hundred years of uninterrupted peace and prosperity. Its monuments go back to the later days of the republic. The forum of Julius Caesar and Augustus, dedicated before the birst of Christ, still keeps its original outlines. The Pantheon is still the most perfectly preserved edifice of antiquity. Despite the floods of Father Tiber the Castle of St. Angelo, defended by Roman legionnaires as wel las medieval Popes, still stands. The development of the Remanesque, the Gothic, the Renaissance and the Baroque into modern types can all be traced in Rome. No city so remotely anchored in the classic past so plainly shows its ordered progress toward our own time. Prognosticators do not hesitate to speak now of the coming end of civilization in a welter of savage war. Rome testifies that civilization, frail as its defenses seem, is a hardy growth, difficult indeed to eradicate. — New York Times.

Raid Trench Diggers Find Roman Deposits

Excavation of an Air Raid Precaution trench system for the protection of the pupils of the Simon Langton Schools, Canterbury, has resulted in finds of considerable archaeological interest, The London Times reports.

The schools are on the site of the former buildings of the White or Austin Friars, where some twenty-five years ago a passage built of chalk blocks and believed to lead to the cathedral was found during drainage excavations in the playground. The site has been found to cover extensive Roman deposits.

Among the discoveries have been a brick-lined well thirty feet deep, a sixteenth-century German jetton bearing the inscription "Hans Schvites zv Nuremberg"; pieces of worked stone with Gothic molding, evidently from the old friary buildings, one of which seemed to be a piece of Norman work which had been re-used; a glass bottle seven inches long, probably of the seventeenth century; a Roman kitchen midden containing a bed of oyster shells, much broken coarse-ware, pottery heavily coated with soot, some fragments of Samian ware and quantities of burned wood.

Two massive foundations of medieval date, composed of chalk blocks, extended from three feet below the surface to a depth of at least eleven feet six inches. One of them had a lateral thickness of ten feet. Presumably they once formed the base of some of the friary buildings.

A quantity of human bones in no particular order was found six feet below the surface, and in one spot a skeleton, lying east to west, indicated a hitherto undisturbed Christian burial. Another trench cut into an early cemetery, probably of medieval date, and it is believed that this was the "certaine plot of ground laid out for a Churchyard" of which William Sommer wrote in his "Antiquities of Canterbury" in 1640.

Here also was unearthed six feet below the surface, a simple medieval ring made from a flattened piece of copper wire.

A Polish Ghetto

There has been uncertainty as to what Germany intends to do with the central part of Poland now under her control. Perhaps a despatch from Berlin gives some clue to the plans.

It will be recalled that after the downfall of the Polish armies, Soviet troops stepped in and occupied the eastern portion of the country, settled largely by White Russians and Ukrainians. Then Berlin announced the annexation to Germany of the western part, consisting of the Polish Corridor, the Province of Posen, and Polish Silesia. But this left sort of a no-man's-land in between, with the Germans, of course, in control.

One suggestion has been that this central territory would be left as a rump, to serve as a buffer state between Germany and Russia. Now Berlin announces that all Jews in Vienna must be in this part of Poland before next Mar. 1. Already 4,000 have left, and also many have gone from Maehrisch-Ostrau. The emigres have been given three days each to pack up. The supposition is that all other Jews in Greater Germany might be sent to the same destination.

Is it possible that Herr Hitler plans a huge Jewish ghetto in the central part of what was once Poland? There they could be kept under Nazi domination. In the event of war at some time in the future between Germany and Russia this area would be the battlefield, and the Jews would be in the line of fire.

If this is the scheme, then it would be disrupted by an allied victory, which would reconstitute Poland as an independent nation, though not perhaps with the same boundaries as those which were recently violated by Germany and Russia. The Jews would then be free to leave this vast ghetto to which Hitler is consigning them.—Windsor Star.

Marvels of Science

Up until recently, when anyone had the misfortune to become disfigured, he or she had to face life with a fatalistic acceptance of the scars. No matter how hideous they were, there was little, or nothing, that could be done. Due to the advances of science, this is now no longer true.

Speaking to the Society of Plastic and Reconstructive Surgery, in New York, Dr. James Barrett Brown, associate professor of clinical surgery at Washington University, describes how he transformed into a beautiful girl one who, as a child, had her face horribly burned when she fell into an open hearth. For years the girl had been unable to close her eyes; her face was a hideous mask. Now she is pleasant to look upon, and from a tortured soul is made into a gay, charming personality.

Such accomplishments are miracles of human ingenuity and ability. One can well imagine that not only the girl's face is transformed, but her whole being. She can have friends and go to parties; love and be loved, and take her normal place in life. Any surgeon gifted with the knowledge and ability to perform such operations must feel a soul-stirring satisfaction, something more than any financial reward could bring him. Plastic surgery is one of the finest achievements of medical science. — Windsor Daily Star.

Plight of Refugees

According to a statement issued by the Commission for Polish Relief, in New York, there are seven hundred thousand Polish refugees in Poland itself, fifty thousand in Rumania, twenty to thirty thousand in Hungary, eleven thousand in Lithuania and three thousand in Latvia. These are receiving assistance as fast as contributions come in, but the task is obviously a most difficult one. Attention of the Jewish elements in Poland, who are represented as persecuted to a worse extent than in Germany itself, everything being taken from them, even food, and the most brutal treatment, including many executions, being meted out.

These are only the advance contingents of the victims of war, who, it is predicted, will run into the millions if the struggle is prolonged. At the meeting of the Intergovernmental Committee on Refugees in Washington a week or so ago, plans were discussed for large-scale resettlement for these unfortunate people. Some of the international delegates thought the estimates of those who would be compelled to rely upon the good offices of refugee organisations had been exaggerated; but certain it is that this question of providing for persons whose lives will be disrupted by hostilities is not the least of the humanitarian efforts confronting both warring and neutral powers; it is a responsibility for the whole civilized world to shoulder.—Hamilton Spectator.

A Soldiers' Song

In offering prizes for a soldiers' marching song, The Manchester Guardian, it may be presumed, had small hopes of discovering another Tyrtaeus or Kipling. It seems to have wanted—at any rate, it mainly got—songs from the ranks. It is the rhythmic "go" of the tune that counts rather than the words.

The winning poetic feet are the feet of marching men who find small poetry in marching. Thomas Brosnan, winner of first prize, writes up to the expectation given by his name:

I've got a heavy rifle and a very heavy pack
And of course I've got a pair of heavy feet.
My rifle's on my shoulder and my pack's upon my back.
And the blinking lot's upon my blinking feet.
Do I like it? (Does he like it?)
It is a perfect treat.
For whether we're advancing or whether in retreat,
Our mode of locomotion over road and over street
Is feet, feet, feet, feet, feet, feet, feet.
My feet, feet, feet, feet, feet, feet,
Hear 'em beat, beat, beat,
Just feet—just feet!
As I walk or amble,
Hobble, crawl or ramble,
Hear 'em beat—my feet!

May Mr. Brosnan's feet be wrapped in cotton wool this night! And may he live to get a little gout from well-deserved Burgundy.—New York Times.

PRESENTATION

On Saturday evening, November 4, a number of friends and neighbors of Mr. Grant Millar gathered in the Wallbridge Town Hall for a farewell party.

Mr. Millar entered the R.C.A.F., Trenton, at the outbreak of the war and was recently transferred from Trenton to the new base at St. Thomas.

The party commenced with community singing and this was followed by a short program consisting of a solo by Mr. Wm. Wickson, a reading by Miss Marjorie Latta and a solo by Mr. Hudson Ketcheson.

The following address was read by Miss Helen Lane:

Dear Grant:

We your friends and neighbors have come together tonight to express to you our appreciation of your loyalty and devotion to what you deem to be your duty in doing your part to uphold the principles of liberty and freedom.

Undoubtedly it has taken considerable self-denial and courage on your part to decide on the course you have taken in offering yourself for active service, to go where sent, or do whatever is required of your, regardless of consequences.

Men sometimes take great risks, or make some great sacrifice in order to accomplish a purpose for selfish interests, but the more worthy sacrifice of enlisting for active service, as in your case, is for a principle, that society in general may derive the benefit.

In the present war, we are not fighting to gain possessions, or to deprive any other nation of their just rights, but merely to defend and maintain the liberty for which our fathers fought and which they have handed down as a heritage to us.

We have faith to believe that in the end our cause will triumph as it did in the World War when we fought against great odds.

In your absence you will be greatly missed in your home, in social circles, in the church and in the Sunday School in which you have always taken a lively interest.

We now ask you to accept this wrist watch as a slight token of our regard for you, and in bidding you farewell, be assured that our prayers for your safe return to us will follow you wherever you may be called to go.

Signed on behalf of the community, Edgar Lane, Omar Chisholm, Clarence Woods, Jack Ketcheson.

Following this presentation, Mr. Murphy of the Stirling Citizen's Band addressed Grant, telling him of how his services as cornetist in the band had been appreciated and as a token of the esteem in which he was held, Bandmaster Maurice Bell presented him with a pen and pencil set from the band.

Lunch was served and everyone enjoyed a sociable get together for the rest of the evening.

MINER'S WIFE NEAR HYSTERIA

Rawlins, Wyo., Nov. 10 (AP)—A miner's wife who was standing only twelve feet from her husband when a mine roof collapsed over him and four other men was under treatment today for near hysteria.

Mrs. Viola Stackhouse, 35, had walked 130 feet into the mine and was standing at the edge of a large chamber in which the men were working when the roof of the chamber gave way last night.

Lee Stackhouse, her husband, his three employees, Raymond Potter, Bill Haywood and Wesley Messing, and Sammy Valdez, a Rawlins bar employee, were buried beneath tons of coal.

Blinded by the coal dust, Mrs. Stackhouse groped her way to the shaft entrance and drove 29 miles to Rawlins.

"The roof of the mine caved in—five men are in there," she told Sheriff Glen Penland.

Although near collapse, Mrs. Stackhouse went back to the mine and aided rescuers by telling them the position of the men when the reached after about an hour of digging. The bodies were cave-in occurred.

Exclusive Sale of High Grade Apples Raises Consumption Greatly

100,000 Barrels Usually Shipped to Britain Will be Sold in Ontario and Quebec

GRADING IS STRICT

One hundred thousand barrels of delicious Ontario appes, formerly consumed by the British market will be available to Ontario housewives this year, C. D. Stevenson, Senior Fruit and Vegetable Inspector of the Dominion Department of Agriculture stated this morning.

Built up carefully in the past by Ontario apple growers, the excellent overseas business has now been lost due to war conditions. Last year Ontario shipped some 100,000 barrels of apples to Great Britain out of a crop of 800,000 barrels. This year the crop is just as large, with a slight decrease in Eastern Ontario yields that has been offset by the heavier harvest from Western Ontario orchards.

The quota of Ontario apples that went overseas will be used in Ontario and Quebec for, according to an agreement with the Federal Government, Ontario growers cannot ship beyond the borders of their own province and Quebec, leaving the Canadian West to British Columbia growers.

No Low Grades Sold

Elimination from sale in all markets of "windfalls" and other low grade apples by the government, has resulted in the consumer getting nothing but the best grades of apples, Mr. Stevenson pointed out. Furthermore, it has also eliminated the itinerant huckster, who formerly peddled low grade fruits from door to door. Another result of the exclusive sale of the high grade fruit is the increased consumption, that in places has amounted to nearly one hundred per cent.

City Market an Asset

Produce markets are an invaluable asset to any city or community, Mr. Stevenson remarked, in that consumers can choose from a large variety of fruits and vegetables whereas in marketless cities they are faced with taking what is offered to them, or being the victims of itinerant hucksters.

Apple growers are reminded, the inspector said, that all open packages of apples must have the same markings as closed packages. This means that in addition to the grower's names, each basket or package must have the variety of apples and grade stamped on it in letters of at least one-quarter inch in height. The grades will be No. 1 and Domestic.

Difference in Grades is Color
Color

The leading difference between No. 1 apples and the Domestic variety is color. In all red varieties, No's 1 must have 40 per cent color, while the Domestic grade requires but 15 per cent. In other words a No. 1 basket must contain all highly colored apples.

Evidence of the increased consumption of the better grade apples is seen in one Ontario town where a dealer increased his sales from ten barrels to twenty-one barrels in the space of a week, Inspector Stevenson said.

In spite of this, however, there are ample supplies of this delicious fruit and Ontarians can look forward confidently to a winter of continuous consumption of the fruit that keeps the doctor away.

TOMMIES TO PAY SILENT REVERENCE

With the British Expeditionary Force in France, Nov. 10 (CP-Reuters) — The young men who today make up a large proportion of the British Expeditionary Force in France will stand in silence at 11 a.m. Saturday in homage to the men of that other British Expeditionary Force who gave their lives in the first Great War for the same ideals.

Many of them will be paying a silent tribute to their own fathers. Among them will be a sprinkling of officers on whose breasts medal ribbons will bear witness of service in that other war.

The ceremonies on this Armistice Day will be held before most of the principal memorials erected on the sites of big battles of the last war, whither detachments of troops will be sent from the various units now occupying the British zone.

Mrs. Robert Hart, Sidney, Mrs. Pearce, Mrs. Willis Campbell and Miss Gertrude Nightingale, left on Thursday for Florida, where they will spend the next few months.

Howard and Harold Burley entertained a number of friends in honor of their 17th birthday last evening. Games and music were enjoyed after which a dainty lunch was served.

Miss Eleanor Noble of Toronto, is the guest of Miss Ena Blaker, Earl Street.

Mr. Wilfred Lalonde of Rochester, N.Y., is in the city for the funeral, tomorrow, of his brother, the late Paul Lalonde.

Mr. William Kennedy, 30 East Moira Street, left for Toronto today to attend the funeral of his son-in-law, Mr. David Stocks.

WEDDINGS

MONTEITH—WALLBRIDGE

St. Thomas' Church, beautifully decorated with white chrysanthemums was the scene of an interesting wedding at noon today when Helen Isobel, daughter of Major C. F. Wallbridge, and the late Mrs. Wallbridge, became the bride of Mr. Andrew Brock Monteith, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Montieth of Stratford. Rev. Rural Dean A. Beauchamp Payne officiated.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a smart costume of grape wool, with matching hat, seal coat and corsage of orchids. The young couple were unattended. Wedding music was played by Mr. E. Wheatley.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Hotel Quinte, the guests being immediate relatives. Later Mr. and Mrs. Monteith left on a wedding trip to Ottawa and Montreal and upon their return will reside in Stratford.

CHAMBERLAIN IMPROVES

London, Nov. 10—(CP)— Prime Minister Chamberlain remained in bed today although attending physicians reported definite improvement in the gout condition which forced him to cancel outside engagements yesterday.

Mr. Chamberlain continued to receive other Ministers and to deal with official business at his 10 Downing Street residence.

COLLEGE OMITS ARMISTICE DAY CEREMONY

East Lansing, Mich., Nov. 10 —(AP)—The customary Armistice Day ceremony at Michigan State College won't be held tomorrow. Dean C. L. Emmons announced: "We have omitted the official Armistice Day ceremony in the belief that it is antiquated in the light of present-day conditions."

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Vegetable Matter Breathed Into Lungs Causes Dangerous Lesions

Certain foreign bodies in the lung cause more dangerous lesions than do others. Anything vegetable is especially dangerous for it gives rise to a more acute reaction than any other bodies. Perhaps the classic example of this is the humble peanut. Undoubtedly peanuts cause more trouble in the lungs than any other single foreign material that may be breathed in. If a morsel of peanut lodges in a child's lung, it must be removed within a very few days if the child is ever going to have a healthy pair of lungs again.

If your child has a spell of choking when he is eating and, shortly afterward develops a cough, the trouble should not be treated as a slight cold but a doctor should be called at once.

The doctor will examine the chest carefully. From this examination he may get a hint as to whether there is anything lodged in the lung. He will probably want an x-ray examination, anyway. If this proves that there is something lodged in the lung he will insist on an immediate operation. A long tube will be passed down into the lung and the foreign material will be removed. If the operation is performed before too much damage is done, the child ought to recover completely. If the operation is delayed too long, however, the child may have a severe cough all his life.

This operation I speak of is an extremely delicate one. I think only an expert should attempt it. I know I wouldn't care to undertake it, and I don't think many general practitioners would want to tackle it. The expert has the tools and the experience.

There are certain things we can do to cut down on the number of these serious accidents among children. One of these measures is to see that the child should be kept entirely quiet when he is eating.

This is one of the reasons we have the Quintuplets rest for a quarter of an hour before each meal. If this isn't done, the child rushes to the table fresh from whatever game he has been playing. He is full of excitement and so he is much more apt to start to tell you something in the midst of swallowing and so suck something into his lungs.

We allow very little talking at the table. The Quintuplets always sit down rested and relaxed. Not only does this aid digestion, but I think it does a lot to prevent accidents like those we have been talking about.

Another point the Quintuplets are never given peanuts because of the danger that a morsel may find its way into the lung. In my opinion, peanuts should be denied children until they are at least of school age.

A few children develop the dangerous habit of inserting things into their external genitalia. Parents should watch for such habits and correct them.

If bed-wetting and urinary frequency develop in a child who was formerly normal, it is well to have a doctor make an examination. If there is any foreign body in the tube leading to the bladder, the X-ray will find it and it can be removed.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

She Liked to Kid Along All the Boys

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I had always had a lot of boy friends and thought it fun just to kid them along, and when they began to tell me how much they cared, I'd give them up—but finally I've fallen for a boy. I've been going out with him about eight months and he has been wonderful to me, and I'm sure I really love him.

The other day a girl who I thought was my friend, told him a lie about me, saying that I had been seeing another boy, and now he has left me. He speaks very sociably when he meets me by chance, but he has stopped coming to see me.

Mitzie

I hope by the time this answer appears in the paper, you will have made up with your boy friend, and settled the misunderstanding brought about by your supposed-to-be girl friend.

I get many letters from boys and girls along the same line, telling me that "someone told a lie on me", and then the trouble begins. I often wonder, if every chance stranger is believed at the expense of one's sweetheart, how such young doubters ever get anywhere with their love affairs.

However, as you seem to be an unrepentent coquette in regard to those boys you enjoyed fooling along and then giving them up, perhaps the fates are catching up with you by giving you a dose of your own medicine. Let this be a warning to be more considerate of the feelings of your victims in future.

Shall He Telephone Her

Dear Miss Fairfax

I met a girl just before graduating from high school, and although I could tell she liked me a lot, I never asked her for a date. I was an officer in cadets and at request gave her one of my buttons and a picture. She wasn't very popular in school, which was my main reason for never dating her for school affairs. And I was sort of shy about taking her to a movie.

At graduation she told me not to forget her. I went to college and she took a post-graduate in high school. We saw each other once during the school year, but I failed to get her address or telephone number, so I couldn't contact her. Two months ago I obtained the information and wrote her a letter, while on my vacation. I gave her that address, but she didn't answer. Would you suggest that I phone her, or wait for a move from her?

J. P. R.

It's always a compliment to follow up an acquaintance with a telephone call, but your letter doesn't indicate any great degree of interest in this girl. But I suppose you have your own reasons for following up the acquaintance in this leisurely fashion.

Nineteen Not Too Young to Become Engaged

Dear Miss Fairfax

My daughter has just reached her 19th birthday. She has been going with a young man of 20 for nearly two year. They both have gone with other girls and boys, even after they met, but are now going "steady".

He is very anxious to give her a diamond ring as a Christmas gift. As this would be considered as an engagement, I would appreciate your advice on whether or not I should agree to this. Do you think she is too young to become engaged? They could not marry for at least two years.

A mother

It's not so much a question of age as sincerity of attachment. Many young people of 19 and 20 are in love with love, rather than each other. As this girl and boy will have to wait a couple of years before they marry it seems that would be ample time for them to decide how deeply they care for one another.

Paris, Nov. 10—(AP)— The French cabinet was understood today to have discussed a French reply to the Netherlands-Belgian mediation proposal in a 2 1-2 hour meeting. Although the decision was not disclosed, previous indications in Paris and London pointed to a joint French-British reiteration of war aims.

Nagger is Beauty's Enemy

IRENE HERVEY . . . . knows a tranquil nature is a beauty asset

By HELEN FOLLETT

FOR THE SAKE of appearance no woman can afford to be a nagger or a snap dragon. Ill nature takes a toll, makes criss-cross faces. Emotional binges use up physical forces, have a deplorable effect upon nutrition, tie the nervous system into hard knots and raise the dickens generally. The nagger is always punished; she gets the nagger's look and there is no cosmetic magic that will do a bit of good.

The soft, cushiony substance under the skin does a flop because of the strain on the nerves and the tension of fibres. If weeping spells follow, the tissues under the eyes are depleted. Then they're in first class condition to fall into turkey tracks.

The wise woman knows that nothing much in life is worth fighting about, that you can't change the opinions and actions of other individuals, and maybe you shouldn't anyway. She seeks tranquility in the home, in business and social affairs. She endeavors, every possible way, to keep her physical, mental and emotional works running smoothly.

She gets more results from her beautifying efforts than does the woman who has tantrums, feels sorry for herself or tries to boss the universe. The fragrant creams and lotions have a better chance to bring gratifying results.

Mrs. Fashion is doing a lot of talking about black fabrics—satins that are shining bright, silks that glimmer.

All right for the youthful ones. Lovely on the blonde whose hair has retained its pristine goldness, whose complexion is of the peaches-and-cream order. But if there is a sign of a line or an appearance of fatigue, bright black is fatal.

Browns are good this season. There's a wide range of browns. Dark, rich ones are becoming to blonde and brunettes, but ginger brown or one with a yellow cast is seldom flattering. Drains the complexion of its natural highlights, seldom does a thing to make the eyes attractive.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

When Mrs America or Miss America Travels

You've undoubtedly heard of The Fashion Group. The most important "fashion" organization in America, it is composed of women who are foremost authorities on fashions in dress, in accessories, home decoration, cosmetics and all other style features, when they give advice, it is listened to very seriously by manufacturers, by stylists, by buyers, by consumers.

Let's listen to what they say about clothes for traveling.

"Travel is no longer for the favored few. There's travel for everybody. Complete figures for 1939 are not yet available, but comparison of the first eight months of the year against the same months in 1938 show impressive gains in domestic travel. Including travel by bus, automobile, railroad and plane, the increase is approximately 16 per cent, establishing 1939 as a record travel year.

"America is going to keep on travelling in 1940. War restrictions may change the direction but not the spirit of this nation of travellers. Americans still travel to the neutral ports of the Caribbean, to neutral Latin America, to Canada, to Bermuda, to Hawaii, to Alaska . . . AND IN AMERICA.

"Travel wardrobes will depend on not only where the traveller goes, but how. The wise store will know all about the new accommodations for the traveller who buy something new for even the shortest trip.

"If by train: Air-conditioning has made travel comfortable and clean, all the year round. Travel by Pullman whether in the compact little roomettes, or in the luxurious drawing rooms, is like living in a hotel. The two new all-coach trains, the 'Trailblazer' and the 'Pacemaker' suggest new fashions in train clothes. These trains boast long waiting lists for reservations, something new for the railroads.

"If by bus—Bus lines were the originators of the phrase 'land cruise' and this cruise has also a captain and a crew. It is no wonder that the greater comfort in bus accommodations and the sleeping car buses have made long non-stop trips more and more popular. One bus line reports that they carried 31 per cent more passengers the first eight months in 1939 over 1938.

"If by boat: The democratic spirit of travel for everyone shows up most impressively in the cruise field, with the increases in the short sea trips. In 1930 there were 8 West Indies Cruises; in 1938-1939 there were 88. There will still be plenty of cruising in 1940.

Cruise Wardrobe Advice

"Don't take anything you'll wear only once . . . it isn't worth the space.

Don't take anything that won't stand dampness and spray.

Don't take anything that will muss, unless it's so pretty that it's worth the trouble of pressing it for every wearing.

Do take:

For the Deck—

Play suits with separate skirts

Jackets, blouses, separate skirts to swap with each other.

At least two bathing suits

Beach wrap and big beach-bag.

For the Shore

Simple sports dresses, play suits with skirts

Dark printed silk, linen, or spun rayon that will look fresh at the end of a sight-seeing day

Low-heeled shoes, not with open toes or heels

A bag, big enough for everything.

For the evening—

Concentrate on dinner, rather than formal evening clothes

One glamour evening dress

A light wrap and evening bag

Choose from these materials . . . cotton, opague crepes, very sheer wools, sheer spun rayons, stiff silks.

Don't forget to take an all-purpose coat. And an over-night bag containing pajamas or night-gowns, dressing-robe, soft slippers, and light weight receptacles filled with whatever you need for daily cosmetic use. A suit, preferably dark, the weight to be determined by season and climate. Blouse or pullover. A small hat, preferably packable. Comfortable shoes; whatever would be appropriate and usual in heels of polishable leather. Handbag with a handle, washable gloves. A small fur or scarf probably won't amiss. A small purse for afternoon, one for evening. Silk hosiery; six pairs of medium weight for travel and nightly washings."

Hunger Strikers Will be Allowed

Dublin, Nov. 10 (CP)—Premier Eamon De Valera said today four Irish Republican army hunger strikers were "in imminent danger of death."

De Valera said he had decided between the lesser of two evils, to let the striking members of the outlawed organization die rather than endanger the safety of the country.

He said the government had released one man after a hunger strike of 31 days, but that the next day six more began fasting.

For three of the men, who have refused food since Oct. 15, this is the 27th day of their strike. The fourth began a week after.

Knuckle Down to Care for Wrists

SUSANNA FOSTER . . . her attractive hands, wrists are well-groomed.

By HELEN FOLLETT

That little round bone on your wrist should have enough padding so that it won't be outstanding. A light massage now and then with cocoanut oil will fill out the tissues, especially if you do hand-waving and hand-circling exercises. An imposing wrist bone is suggestive of scrawny old age, like enlarged knuckles. While attending to your hand care, give your knuckles a creamy workout; wriggle your fingers so they will keep flexible.

Dressing the wrist is a matter that eludes the attention of many of the most ardent beauty seekers. The subject should come to mind when they observe ladies who wear dainty cuffs of lace and sheer fabrics that are flattering to the hands. Paris dressmakers make a special point of decorating the lower portion of the sleeves. And they are fussy about the length. A long sleeve that ends an inch above the wrist nubbing is awkward and ugly.

Sarah Bernhardt knew that her hands did not qualify, so she wore sleeve made with a deep point that came midway between wrist and finger bases. It's wise to be conscious of beauty defects so one can disguise them. Heavy rings and bracelets call attention to hands that aren't strictly up to beauty snuff. The dashing type can wear beautiful, barbaric shackles on her wrists; the small, dainty woman should stick to dainty jewelry.

Are you a slave to metal curlers? There are tricks to be learned.

To make the ringlets strong, use a setting lotion on only a few inches of the ends. Wetting the strand too high up causes a frizzy effect. Divide the hair in even portions, then rolls will be uniform.

The longer the hair remains on the metal rod, the stronger the curl will be. The more you dilute the wave set, the more quickly the hair will dry.

Start at the left side and you'll find the task easier. Do the hair at the sides in pin curls and have them very wet. Pin curls dry in no time. While they're called "brush curls", you may find a narrow comb more convenient for grooming.

SHANNONVILLE W. A.

The monthly meeting of the W. A. of Shannonville United Church was held at the Melborne home on Tuesday, Nov. 7th. Forty-two enjoyed the delicious pot luck dinner served at noon. A short business meeting was held in the afternoon in charge of the president Mrs. Sam Elliott with Miss Sara Stickney presiding at the piano. The scripture lesson was read by Mrs. W. D. Robertson. Prayer was offered by Mrs. Sam Elliott who also gave a fine reading. A menu was planned for the dinner to be served to the ministers of the Presbytery in the church hall and a committee was formed to plan and allocate the cooking to the members. Several of the ladies worked at a quilt in the parlor. Mrs. Elliott expressed thanks to all the members of the family for opening their home for the meeting. All repeated the W. A. Benediction. Proceeds of the dinner were $7.35.

SHANNONVILLE W.M.S.

Mrs. Will Sine entertained the W. M. S. ladies at their November meeting last Thursday afternoon with 26 ladies in attendance. Mrs. Frank Doxtator, group leader, put on a good program. Mrs. Harvey Shetler rendered a lovely solo. A playlet was given by Mrs. Doxtator and some of the ladies of her group. Mrs. A. Houston and Mrs. D. Hinchey favored with a beautiful duet. After the meeting Mrs. Sine and her assistants served delicious refreshments. A vote of thanks was given the hostess for her kind hospitality.

Lovely ladies are wearing elegant dinner dresses these gala evenings. Brocaded black damask makes a suit with full skirt and slim basque jacket closed by rhinestone buttons. Jacket neck is square, sleeves are curved from wrist to elbow.

Don't mind im your evening wrap isn't ermine—the new cloth or silk wraps are alluring. A beauty made with slim bodice and wide, full-length skirt is of bright red, crisp brocade with an all-over floral pattern. Revers are high and sleeves are long and tight.

Forward march many of the new hats tilted right over the forehead. This line is followed by a hat that is nothing but a high shirred pouff of rose-colored velvet held on by an elastic covered with shirred velvet.

New fur coats include a dress model of fine moired black caracul fitted at the waistline with straight double-breasted front and gathers at the side. Revers trim the collarless neck.

It isn't new but it's always lovely —the evening dress of black velvet or tulle with a garland of waxy white or pale pink gardenias trailing down the full skirt. We've noted it several times lately.

A great help in achieving the slim waistline is the laced-up frock. A princess model for afternoon is of black faille has velvet lacings from the throat to below the waist. Eyelets are of rhinestones.

The Stars Say

For Saturday, November 11

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

A DIFFICULT day, with indications of predispositions to invite adverse and regrettable situations through indulgence in violent, passionate and ungoverned conduct or impetuosities, is forecast. Quarrels, turbulence and self-indulgence of various kinds incite to definite dangers and reprisals. Tact, diplomacy and stratagem may avert disagreeable denouements. There are hazards in journeys, changes, removals and other sudden acts. Let restraint rule.

Those whose birthday it is may encounter a year of adverse and difficult circumstances, mainly through indulgence of their own reckless, passionate and intemperate conduct, ignited from within by inflammatory forces and irrepressible faculties. These should be diverted into creative channels by self-restraint, moderation in act and speech. Turn away incited wrath by kindliness, tact and strategy. Beware of dangers in change and travel.

A child born on this day may be excitable, passionate, ill-governed, self-centered and self-indulgent, unless its creative energies are turned into constructive channels by early discipline and training.

Urges President To Halt Sailing Of Oil Tanker

Boston, Nov. 9—(AP) — Thomas McGowan, Boston agent of the Nation Maritime Union called upon President Roosevelt in a telegram today to halt the scheduled sailing of the Standard Oil tanker H. H. Rogers which has been transferred to Panama Registry.

The discharge of a crew of 41 officers and men and replacement with a Canadian complement from Nova Scotia by the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey also was protested by McGowan. He asserted "the responsibility for the consequences of gambling with America's peace by big business now rests squarely on the shoulders of the president. He can put a stop to it."

He asked the president either to halt the sailing of the tanker or forfeit "the right to state that the administration is not encouraging those who would force us into war." The company announced that the American crew had been given a "90-day leave of absence" and would be placed on the preferential rehiring list.

FATALLY INJURED IN CAR-TRUCK CRASH

Simcoe, Ont., Nov. 9 (CP)—Three hours after he was thrown from his automobile following collision with a heavy truck in Charlotteville township, William Walker, 55, Lyndeoch, died in hospital here today.

The crash occurred at Powell's Corners, the intersection of country road 11 and the 12th concession, Charlotteville.

Clarence Wilson, R.R. 1, Simcoe, was driving the heavy dump truck which rolled over on its side after the collision. He escaped injury.

Collegiate News

On Monday, November 6th, the Grade X wiener roast sponsored by the Girls' Athletic Society took place at Zwick's Island from four to seven-thirty p.m.

Miss Allison kindly chaperoned the party which was enjoyed by all those present. Rousing school songs, led by the older girls, were sung by all.

The Stamp Club

On Friday night, November 3, the Collegiate library was the scene of a most enjoyable "games party" held by the Stamp Club. The members turned out "en masse," and matched their wits at checkers, ping-pong, croquinole, snakes and ladders, Chinese checkers and cards. Mrs. E. Fry and Mrs. W. Coulby kindly acted as chaperones.

A delightful lunch was heartily (and how) enjoyed by all, although there was some difficulty at the end until a dish-washing crew was chosen by the flip of a coin.

The group dispersed hurriedly but with satisfied comments to watch a fire which broke out down the street.

Among the outstanding B.C.I. & V.S. social events of the year the semi-formal Victory Dance held last Friday night at the Trianon—under the sponsorship of the Boys' Athletic Board—can be listed as the most successful occasion as yet this term. A great deal of planning and work was undertaken before the dance—the proceeds of which are to equip the senior rugby team, was finally held and credit is certainly due to the various members of the Athletic Board for their fine work in making this affair the success it was and may we take this opportunity on behalf of the sponsor to express our appreciation to all those who attended the dance — not only the present students and masters of B.C.I.&V.S., but also to the many alumni present — for their swell cooperation in turning out

A very fine gesture on the part of the Albert College was extended to the Senior Team after Wednesday's game at Albert. The team, Coach Eddie Schrieder and members of the team management staff were invited to a dinner held at Albert after the game. This was greatly appreciated by the team and only goes to prove further that the rivalry that exists between our two schools is strictly friendly and that we think the Collegians have a fine team and a "swell bunch of fellas."

3 MILLION DOLLARS NEEDED to heal war's wounds

The need is urgent— dig in and Give

WHEN CANADA DECLARED WAR, the Canadian Red Cross found itself practically without funds. Almost immediately the need for Red Cross assistance became apparent from one source after another. Much of this work was of vital importance and had to be undertaken at once. To carry out the work to which it has already committed itself for the coming year, the Canadian Red Cross must have $3,000,000:

... Normal work of the Red Cross in Canada	$950,000
... Wool, materials and supplies already provided or required immediately by Red Cross branches throughout the Dominion . . .	408,000
... To construct and equip a 300-bed hospital for Canadian soldiers at Taplow, England	250,000
... $150,000 a month for the next eight months to furnish branches of the Red Cross in Canada with the materials they need	1,200,000
	$2,808,000

This leaves the barest margin for unexpected emergencies, to assist the allied Red Cross Societies with goods and money and for other needs which are almost sure to arise.

Total contributions of the Red Cross during the last war amounted to 35 millions of dollars in cash and goods. For the present campaign, Canadians are asked to contribute $3,000,000. It is essential that every Canadian should shoulder a share of this vital Red Cross work. Dig in and give—today.

Already $408,000 has been appropriated for immediate expenditure, or has already been spent to purchase wool, cloth and all types of materials and supplies for Red Cross branches throughout the Dominion.

The Canadian Red Cross has undertaken to construct and equip a 300-bed hospital for Canadian soldiers at Taplow, England, to be known as Canadian Red Cross Hospital Number One. The cost of this undertaking is conservatively estimated at $250,000.

Approximately $150,000 will be required each month for the next eight months to furnish all branches of the Red Cross in Canada with the wool and other materials they need to carry on their war efforts.

It is estimated that $950,000 will be required to carry on the normal Red Cross work in Canada—for outpost hospitals and nursing stations, work in frontier districts, etc. During the past two years, the cost of this work was $2,293,000.

Maich Loses to Khoen When Final Hold Proves Boomerang; Local Wrestlers Win 2 Bouts

Khoen Victor Over Maich After Two Thrilling Bouts, Winner to Meet "The Mask"

900 STAMP APPROVAL

Roy Doherty and Bill Tracey Local Lads, Both Win Their Bouts and Show

After wrestling the full hour without a resemblance of a decision with Dave Khoen, the Jewish heavyweight, two weeks ago, Joe Maich, the former Canadian amateur champion, lost to Khoen in the main bout of last night's four-bout card at the Hume Arena, when Maich's attempt at an aeroplane spin proved a boomerang in the final round of a no time limit bout as Khoen evaded the final crash and caught Maich with a full double leg Nelson to win, after each had taken a previous fall.

Generally speaking the night's bouts were productive of strength triumphant, as two local boys made good before some 900 fans, when Roy Doherty won over "Irish" Kruher, of Vancouver and Bill Tracey of Belleville, beat Lorne Lottridge of Toronto in the two preliminary bouts.

"The Mask" Victor

The surprise feature of the evening came when Pedro Valdez, the 165 pound lithe Mexican grappler, stay 1 the full hour limit against "The Mask" a mystery man wearing a hood, although "The Mask" did win the only fall of the bout to be declared the winner at the end of a full 60 minutes of action wrestling, that saw the patrons of the game favor the lighter Mexican, who was outweighed a full 40 pounds by "The Mask."

In the main bout clean orthodox wrestling was piled by both Khoen and Maich, leaving the fans split in their desires of victory. Both men worked methodically, Khoen showing more science, but Maich proved the stronger as he repeatedly broke punishing holds and on two occasions hurled Khoen bodily from the ring. Khoen won the initial fall with an aeroplane spin and hard body slam after 22.00 minutes Maich returned to win the second round and some punishing wrestling following the application of several flying mares and a press in 19.15 minutes.

Hold Boomerangs

Both men showed outward signs of fatigue as the third round opened and continually missed holds as the result. Twice Maich failed in the attempt to win with an aeroplane spin and in the third attempt at this hold Khoen worked free as Maich prepared him for the killing and then the contestants dropped to the mat, Khoen with lightning-like appliance of his legs gained a full double leg nelson around Maich's stretched arms and pinned Maich for the fall and victory. Khoen won the right to meet "The Mask" in top billing next Friday at the Hume Arena.

In the semi-final bout, that saw Valdez out-weighed fully 40 pounds, the Mexican's agility sayed him from utter annihiliation at the hands of the strong and sturdy "masked gent". Valdez frequently gained his favorite figure four leg-lock, but could not toss his heavier opponent for the fall. After applying a series of severe headlocks and neck twisting holds, that left the Mexican groggy, and in a semi-conscious condition as the result of punishment to the neck nerves, "The Mask" won the only fall of an hour limit bout with a press. Valdez was knocked out and had to be assisted to his dressing room. Valdez received the applause of the crowd for his courageous stand against the heavier and stronger opponent, however.

Local Boys Make Good

It was a straight case of strength that won for Roy Doherty of Shannonville over Jim Kruher, of Vancouver in the opening bout as Kruher had Doherty at a disadvantage until he tried to bounce the big fellow off the ropes and fell victim to a reverse body slam as Doherty fell on top of Kruher, who could not evade the press and loss after 14.35 minutes.

Bill Tracey, a newcomer to Belleville, carried too much weight for Lorne Lotteridge of Toronto and won his bout with an arm-spread and press after 20.07 minutes in the second bout. Lotteridge tried to rough matters with his heavier opponent, but Tracey showed too much ring generalship and general knowledge of the science of wrestling to prove an easy winner. Cliff Faux, Belleville, handled all four bouts.

RHODE ISLANDERS IN WIN COLUMN

(By The Canadian Press)

Rhode Island Reds, who usually fare pretty well in International-American Hockey League competition, have entered the win column after two straight losses.

They turned the trick last night against Jimmy Ward's New Haven Eagles, gaining a 3-0 victory as Paul Goodman gave them perfect goaling and Hub Wilson and Jack Shill provided the scoring punch.

Art Lesieur, veteran defenceman, guided the Providence team in the absence of Coach Bun Cook, in hospital with an attack of grippe.

There was no scoring in the first period, featured by five penalties, including a major to Red Doran for hitting Ward, but Art Giroux counted for the Reds in the second on a play with his linemates Starr and Crossley Sherwood.

Wilson and Shill completed the scoring in the third period, Shill getting the first on Welson's pass, and Wilson the second on passes from Shill and Jarvis.

Indianapolis Capitols, undefeated in two games, will try to extend their streak tonight at the expense of Syracuse Stars. It is the only game down for decision.

'Bad Post Actors' Don't Have Chance At Pimlico Track

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 10 (CP)—"Bad actors" at the post don't have a chance to act up at Pimlico racetrack this season. A new electric starting gate, in use at the historic oval for the first time at the current meeting, takes care of any horse, no matter how "mean" he may be.

But public confidence in the gate was shaken yesterday when it failed to work as it should have done in the first race, a six-furlong sprint. Dixieland, a filly in No. 7 stall, was left at the post when the gate did not open automatically for that stall.

The race was won by J. J. Watts' Billionaire, which with eleven other thoroughbreds in the field of twelve got off to a good start. Race officials announced all money wagered on Dixieland would be refunded.

Sponsors of the electrical gate, which beginning tomorrow will be used to start all races at Pimlico, claim it makes near-perfect starts and eliminates long post delays.

In front of each stall is a dual gate of wire screen. When closed, this forms a v-shaped barricade.

After a horse enters this stall a tailboard is put in place, preventing his backing out. Square boxes attached to the front of each gate are locks similar to devices used on military planes to release bombs, these locks are electrically controlled and when the starter presses a button, the gates fly open simultaneously and the bell rings.

LAST NIGHT'S N.H.L. STARS

Bourque Shows Real Class in Goal With Forwards Assisting in Backchecking

Montreal, Nov. 10 (CP)—Pete Lepine ran a hand through thick grey hair today, grinned happily, and then let it be known he is eminently satisfied with the way his Montreal Canadiens have performed so far in this still-young National Hockey League season.

It would be hard for Pete to be otherwise, for the Flying Frenchmen have a perfect batting average with two victories in as many starts and are holding down first place in the standing. The Habitants, who routed Chicago Black Hawks 8-2 Sunday, continued their fine play here last night with a 2-0 victory over New York Americans.

This, then, is the team that all the experts laughed at before the start of the season; that they said had no defence; hardly enough scoring power. When Canadiens picked up a half-dozen veterans, let loose by other teams, a good many observers scoffed. But it looks as if the Flying Frenchmen might have the last laugh.

They have yet to come up against the power-house squads like Boston Bruins, Toronto Maple Leafs and New York Rangers, but Lepine and his men are confident they will do just as well against these clubs. As Lepine puts it, "just let them play all the time like they have in the last two games and I won't be worried about meeting any of them."

It was defenceman Doug Young, a castoff from Detroit Red Wings along with Marty Barry only a few weeks ago, who scored the goal that gave the Flying Frenchmen their victory over the Americans. And it was Charlie Sands, a veteran obtained from Boston in Exchange for a younger Herbie Cain, who put the game away with a score late in the last period.

But while these two companies supplied the scoring punch it was left to youthful Claude Bourque, starting his first season as a regular N.H.L. goalie, to balk every New York scoring effort. Bourque and his defence, however, got a maximum of help through the persistent back-checking of Montreal forwards.

While practicing with the McIntyre Mines hockey team at Schumacher this week, Ken Murphy, formerly with the Belleville Redmen when Eddie Thomas' charges brought the first O.H.A. championship to Belleville in 1937, was a victim of a serious accident during which he sustained a fractured jawbone. A surgical operation was necessary to reduce the fracture which will keep Ken out of hockey for some weeks to come. Murphy returned to the McIntyre team after working out with the Detroit Red Wings recently, Murphy sustained his injury during the initial hockey practice of the season.

Viewing with alarm the possibilities of the Belleville Redmen getting in some pre-O.H.A. practice in the Kingston Van Horne Memorial series, the Peterboro' seniors journeyed to Oshawa on Wednesday night where they held a light workout and skated for an hour. The Petes are hopeful of including an Oshawa entry in the Air Force - Belleville - Peterboro senior "B" group this winter, but the Liftlock City pucksters are not blessed with an artificial ice rink nor even the advantages of pre-season workouts in a loop such as the Van Horne series. No doubt the Petes will motor to Oshawa for weekly practices from now until the Brock street arena opens.

The Oshawa scribe says A. W. "Army" Armstrong, former Belleville athlete and well known hockey referee, has been selected as one of the senior O.H.A. referees for the ensuing year. Incidentally the motor city scribe refers to Belleville as "that's where homebrew players are developed". Scribe Campbell speaks exceedingly complimentary towards Belleville's efforts in the fostering and sponsoring of an entire juvenile league. As a matter of fact the newly formed Belleville Juvenile Hockey Association has brought many commendable remarks from sports sheets in various parts of the province. And there are those who score the value of civic advertising in the sponsoring of sports, to say nothing of the splendid work attained towards the minimizing of juvenile delinquency.

It took Dave Khoen, the Jewish lad from Detroit, nearly two full hours to finally win over Joe Maich, the former Canadian amateur champion, at the Hume Arena last night. Of course the two hours weren't all included on one card, as Maich and Khoen had grappled to a full hour draw and without a fall two weeks ago, while last night in a no-time limit scrap each won falls before Khoen was declared the winner and then only after Maich's attempt at an aeroplane spin backfired as the lithe Jewish lad evaded the slam that follows the spin, and gained a leg scissors around Maich's arm in victory. These two lads staged a sterling clean and orthodox bout, something the fans really appreciate. Khoen earned for himself the right to meet "The Mask" next week and was promised a bonus if he won or unmasked the behooded gent. Otherwise the features of last night's show were the victories of the local boys over wrestlers of foreign fields. Roy Doherty, the Shannonville strong boy, won his bout by sheer strength, while Bill Tracey, a newcomer to Belleville, triumphed and showed promise of becoming a real contender in the business.

Despite hostilities the usual racing calendar will continue in England next year especially in the normal flat racing program, it was announced today. Conditions for races were published in an effort to maintain as much of the country's racing program as practicable as long as possible. Sports are the one medium of keeping the public spirit at a normal pitch in times of stress, it is readily agreed.

Henry (Devastating) Armstrong, world's welterweight boxing champion, announced today that he would retire from the ring next summer after engaging in three more fights. The colored fighter who recently lost his lightweight title to Lou Ambers and vacated his junior welterweight crown, feels he has amassed sufficient to retire and devote his efforts to literary learnings. The passing of Armstrong from the leather-sling business sees the bowing out of a great champion and a game fighter.

Do you remember when Jack Sharkey met one of the eleven defeats of hs career 18 years ago tonight when he met Johnny Buff in the bantamweight class at New York? In a 15-round bout, Buff defeats of his career 18 years ago tochampion. Sharkey won the heavy title in 1931 from Max Schmeling and lost it to Prima Carnera two years later.

Al Schacht, baseball's clown, is going after some of that football money. He is booked to put on football burlesque between halves of the Drake-Washington game at Des Moines, Ia.

Roy Covert, former Belleville puckster and Ken "Artso" Partis, of Kingston, will be with the Washington Eagles tonight when they meet "Flat" Walsh's Queen's University hockey squad at Kingston tonight. Hockey is well on its way in, the senior O.H.A., as well as the professional leagues playing last night, when Hamilton beat Galt. Down in Kingston they have two groups in their junior City League, but nothing has been heard about the activities of the plans for the Van Horne memorial series, which should get under way pronto, or the clubs will be running into difficulty regarding the drafting of their senior "B" O.H.A. schedules as usual.

SPORT SPICE—We heard this morning there is an outside chance that the R.C.A.F. "Flyers" may work out at the Oshawa Arena this afternoon. . . . Rumors say there are forty signed to try out with the 1939-40 "Flying Men". .. .. .. Mel Harder, ace pitcher of the Cleveland Indians, says "time and the law of averages will catch up with and take care of the New York Yankees". That may be, but the question is WHEN? . . . Western is shooting for an undefeated intercollegiate grid season while Queen's must win tomorrow, or else it's curtains. . . . Jimmie Follwell and his O. A. C. 'Aggies' are on the spot tomorrow also, as a loss will drop them back into a three-way tie. They meet the Varsity intermediates. .

Bronko Nagurski Beats O'Mahony Easily

Toronto, Nov. 10—(CP)—Bronko Nagurski, one of the most compelling figures in football when he played with Minnesota and later with Chicago Bears, proved better than a fair hand at wrestling last night in Maple Leaf Gardens when he floored Danno O'Mahony for the only fall of the main mat event of the Queensbury Club card.

Irish Danno lasted 23 minutes, but this seemed to be only through courtesy of the Canadian-born Minnesotan, who toyed with the former world's champion and then suddenly rocked him out of the bout with a crashing flying tackle and top spread.

HITLER
HESS

An alleged attempt to kill Hitler and a number of his trusted aides failed when an explosion wrecked the famous Munich beer cellar, from which Hitler and his cohorts staged their unsuccessful 1923 Putsch a few minutes after Hitler had left the anniversary celebations. The blast, which brought the ceiling of the beer hall toppling onto the heads of celebrating Nazis, is reported to have killed eight persons. Rudolf Hess, No. 3 Nazi, and named by Hitler as one of his successors, was unofficially reported among the dead. Hess is shown, ABOVE with other prominent Nazis, during a meeting of the Nazis party at Nuremberg.

QUEEN'S TRICOLOR FACE ACID TEST OF ENTIRE YEAR

Can Force Playoff by Defeating Western Mustangs, Only Undefeated Team in East

HAVE REAL CHANCE

Argos, Assured of Playoff, Will Use Second String Against Montreal Royals

By JACK CALDER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Two great football records will be put through fire and high water tomorrow as the curtain is drawn on the eastern Canada senior schedules.

Sarnia Imperials, undefeated at home since their Dominion final of 1933 with Toronto Argonauts, oppose the up-and-coming Toronto Balmy Beach Club at Sarnia with a place in the Ontario Union playoffs at stake.

The University of Western Ontario, only undefeated and untied senior team in the nation this season, meets a courageous Queen's University outfit at Kingston and, by winning or tying, can clinch the intercollegiate championship without the necessity of a playoff.

These are the headline events in the east tomorrow, after which at least six of the twelve senior teams will put away equipment for the season.

But to many players the day will be more than just a season's ending. Some expect to be in military uniform before another season opens and if the war spreads there may be no more football for these six clubs for a while.

Determined Battling.

That means a heap of determined battling this week-end, with the possibility of an upset or two. Hamilton Tigers of the Big Four and Peterborough of the O.R.F.U. are a couple of improving units that may make it a heavy afternoon.

Western, whose backfield can do more things well than any Canadian college back division in years, will run up against the combination of a charging line, a great kicker in Jack Brown and a first-rate passer and runner in Art Walker—while a fighting spirit runs through the whole tricolor. After three straight victories, Queen's is entrenched in second place and can force a playoff by winning.

If Queen's can stop the wild horses, though, it will be the surprise of the year. Sometimes the Mustangs have been held in check for a while but always Joe Krol and Harry Szumlinski, the sensational junior-year men, have been around to pass and run when points were needed.

Quite a Duel

Fired by a 23-1 triumph over the previously unbeaten Montreal Westmounts last Saturday, Alex Ponton's eager Beachers will throw the running of Eddie Thompson and good all-around tackling at Sarnia. The Imperials will come back with the long kicking of young Hank Galloway behind a big forward wall and it should be quite a duel before a capacity crowd in Sarnia's athletic park.

The winner will be sure of a playoff spot, while the Westmounts will be in if they do so as expected and win or tie against Peterborough at Montreal. If Sarnia and the Petes should win, however—and that's not outside the realm of possibility—Montreal and Balmy Beach would have to meet to decide which will play the Imperials for the title. The Westmounts and the Beachers are tied for first place now, with Sarnia a point behind.

Peterborough has been close to a victory several times and, after the way Montreal was mauled in Toronto last week, the Orfuns realize the Westmounts can be beaten.

Use Second String

The Argos, tied with Ottawa for first place in the big four, will run out their schedule at Montreal against the winless Royals with substitutes carrying a major share of the play. Halfback Jimmy Farmer and lineman Art Evans will be on the sidelines, resting from injuries for the two-game playoffs with Ottawa.

The University of Toronto and McGill will settle last place in the Intercollegiate series at Toronto. The home school has been hit harder by enlistments than any other team in the east, Bee Rowland and Bernie Shiffman having been called up.

Hank Greenberg Sitting Tight At Bronx Home

(By Sid Feder, Associated Press Sports Writer).

New York, Nov. 10—(AP)—The "sit tight" corner of the Greenberg household in the Bronx is occupied comfortably these off-season days as big Hank awaits developments on rumored baseball matters ranging from a salary cut to a trade sending him from Detroit to Washington.

"All I know so far," Hankus-Pankus explained today, "is what I read in the papers. One story says that I'm going to be traded to the Senators. Another says that if I'm not traded, Im going to have my salary cut by the Tigers anyway.

"Well, the club hasn't told me a thing about either move yet, so I'm sitting tight until I find out what's what.

"Frankly, I don't anticipate any trouble with the club either way. It strikes me, just as an opinion, that the Tigers could afford to trade several other of the players more than they could me. Of course, it may be that they've put me on the block because Rudy York can handle first base and can hit, too.

"About a salary cut — well, I haven't thought about it. I may not have had such a good year in '39 as the season before, but don't forget the whole club was below par. And a player can't play top notch ball a whole season, if the rest of the club is floundering."

As a matter of cold fact, the '39 Greenberg record isn't anything to make him hide his head. Big Hank wound up with a batting average of .312, only three points off his hot '38 mark. He hit 33 homers, second only to Jimmie Foxx. And he drove in 113 runs. Although that doesn't come close to the 146 he knocked across the year before, you must remember he was out three weeks in the past season.

Represented Family

Mrs. John L. Lewis, wife of the leader of the C.I.O., is shown as she arrived at the reception given at the Soviet embassy in Washington, which received a definite snub by United States officialdom. Mrs. Lewis, who arrived alone explained to Madame Oumansky, wife of the ambassador and hostess, "I am representing my family tonight—my daughter and my husband couldn't come."

Consecration of the Individual To Nation's Highest Service Called For in Mayors' Proclamation

Ottawa, Nov. 10 (CP)—Consecration of the individual to the nation's highest service is called for in a Remembrance Day proclamation issued here today by the Mayors of Canada under the auspices of the Canadian Federation of Mayors and municipalities.

"With a sense of individual responsibility, we shall achieve true economy of man-power, money and National effort," the proclamation said. "The morale of the people and the health of the fighting service will be at their best."

Text of the Proclamation follows: (200)

Remembrance Day recalls the courage and sacrifice of the past. It bids us reconsecrate ourselves to the nation's highest service, in whatever field our duty lies.

Shortly before Their Majesties' visit, the Mayors of Canada passed a resolution calling for moral rearmament as the need of the day. The world-wide response showed a world-wide need; and war has intensified that need.

In time of war our homes require this kind of spirit to enable them to bear its anxieties, as well as to give them a lasting unity and purpose. Such a spirit will make for co-operation in industry and throughout the whole nation. It will make us eager to put National interest before personal security and personal profit.

With a sense of individual responsibility, we shall achieve true economy of man-power, money, and National effort. The morale of the people and the health of the fighting services will be at their best. Furthermore we need no longer accept as inevitable the moral casualties of war.

The two minutes' silence on Remembrance Day forms a link with the dead. It can also link us with the future and with life. On this day, while remembering our glorious dead, let us use these two minutes to seek God's plan and to find out how best to serve Him, our King and our country.

Recognizing our own faults and our own failures, let us set ourselves to put right what is wrong in our lives and so help to free our country from greed, fear and hate. Then we shall truly honor those whom we recall to memory today. Then we can build the sort of world they died to bring about.

Cowboy and Heiress Kiss and Make-up

New York, Nov. 10—(AP)—The cowboy and the lady got together yesterday and agreed the cowpuncher did not punch the lady.

"You tell 'em, dear," said the cowboy. "I didn't punch you, did I?"

"Oh, no, darling," said the lady.

Thus the hearts-and-flowers motif, spiced with recollection of the best banana-cream pies a millionairess ever baked, was restored in the sagebrush romance of Anne Gould Elsbury, 26-year-old heiress to the vast fortune amassed by her great-grandfather, Jay Gould, railroad Titan, and her husband, Herman E. Elsbury, 28.

A one-time $75-a-month "dude wrangler" on a Cody, Wyo., ranch, Elsbury beamed about the banana-cream pies.

He looked pained when the topic turned to Mrs. Elsbury's now-stayed divorce suit, and the anguish deepened when it was mentioned Mrs. Elsbury accused him of knocking her unconscious twice.

But about those pies!

"I taught her to cook," said Elsbury, a thin little man with a big Adam's apple. "All Western men have to know how to cook. It's a matter of necessity out on the range

"But she knew how to make the pies herself. And it's some pie!"

The cowboy husband, who flew from Cody in response to his wife's "Come-at-once" telephone call, took her hand and smacked his lips.

The reconciliation took place in a chrysanthemum decked room in St. Vincent's Hospital, where Mrs. Elsbury lay with her right arm in a plaster cast, recuperating from injuries suffered when she was thrown by a horse.

Elsbury said as soon as his wife's condition improved he would return to their 200-acre ranch fifty miles from Cody, where they raise cattle and hay.

"And go to the movies once a week," he added, "It's not a very exciting life, maybe, but it's better than night clubs and all this society stuff. Isnt it, dear?"

The heiress said: "I love it."

Each mine in strings of 19 mines each, placed at strategic points in harbor entrances, is wired directly an electrical cable. The mines are to a shore control point through attached to anchors one hundred feet apart and lie about thirty feet below the surface.

The mine defence crew of any harbor knows the exact location of every row of "eggs" and can check just as precisely the position of a ship as it moves toward any row.

By triangulation, which is simply observing from three points and plotting the intersecting lines the course of the ship can be traced. Officers say they can predict within a few seconds when the ship will pass over a certain mine. Then a button is pushed to fire the mine. Since a battleship is from 90 to 100 feet wide and extends about 30 feet below the surface, the 200 pounds of TNT going off near its hull would cave it in like an eggshell.

The ship might not be sunk, unless the charge hit its powder magazines and blew it up, but it would be put out of commission. Submarines are even more vulnerable, since they carry lighter armor, and the shock of the mines is effective against them at much greater distances.

Only Excites Derision.

"In every country but Germany the spectacle of the Nazi leaders protesting that they are menaced by foreign assassination plots will only excite derision. For centuries no government has attempted to use assassination as an instrument of policy. The bomb in the Burgerbrau at Munich may have been placed by a Nazi hand or by the hands of some of that great host which the tyranny of Hitlerism has made desperate. It is a German affair. No other German stoops to the infamy of the Fuehrer's methods."

The Daily Express said in similar vein:

"We in England regret and deplore this method of argument (by assassination). But it shows that argument still exists in Germany, though it uses the only method which Hitler permits.

It speaks with deeds, not words; violence, not reason. And it shows the rising resentment against Hitler's rule. It is a prelude to that explosion which will burst out and bring the regime of barbarism down in ruins."

The Nazis, who have murdered so many inconvenient opponents, cannot understand that political assassination is not a weapon employed by this country, said the Daily Mail.

WILL DER FUEHRER

its defence preparations.

Beyond saying it was a 'distinct possibility," military leaders here would not hazard a guess, but it is quite apparent the general staff has been given a great deal of study to this contingency.

Here are some of the considerations which should be borne in mind—

1—Inundation, or the flooding, of Holland would not stop a German invasion although it might delay it and render it more difficult.

2—German invasion might result in cutting in half the air distance Nazi bombers would have to travel in bombing Britain, but it would also cut in half the air distance between British air bases and Germany's industrial area in the Ruhr, through enabling them to fly over the low countries which they now must circle.

3—At present Germany may use Rotterdam and other Dutch ports for her imports and exports, but she would lose that sea contact with the outside world if she invaded Holland.

4—A German invasion would shock the moral conscience of the world to such an extent that Hitler would be bound to be the ultimate loser, no matter how successful his military operations might be.

Rains Severe Handicap.

British military leaders claim the early rains and the approach of winter are a severe handicap — if they do not render impossible — big scale operations against the Maginot Line. They suggest this is the advice being tendered Hitler by the German command, but whether Hitler would act according to the advice is something else.

It is argued here that only the need of strengthening the morale of the German people would lead to big scale operations in the west before next spring.

The flooding measures in Holland would place only scattered areas in the centre of the country under water, with big gaps between them. They would not stop foot soldiers but would bog down tanks and heavy guns. Even if the Zuider Zee dyke in the north were opened, it would not make the country impassable to the German army.

Be Provided With Bases.

Judging from the opinion of men who know the topography of Holland and have studied it from the military viewpoint of an invasion from Germany, it would be a comparatively simple matter. It would provide Germany with air and sea bases which could be used in a big flanking operation through Belgium against the Maginot Line.

But Germany would not get all the advantages. At present British planes must take a wide detour around neutral countries when striking Germany. Once the German army steps over the Dutch frontier that handicap is removed. It would extend the length of the German line and immobilize thousands of troops just as Poland has done. But the biggest advantage of the allies would spring from world opinion, just as the German invasion of Belgium in 1914 embittered the world against Germany.

800 FAST PLANES MAY BE ORDERED

Negotiations Under Way for Purchase of Training Machines by Great Britain

New York, Nov. 10 — (AP)—A single order for about 800 speedy training planes was being negotiated today by Great Britain and North American Aviation Corporation of Inglewood, Calif.

It was understood the company, which received an order for 400 of the same type before the war started, intends to double its plant capacity.

Either Britain or France, or both, also are considering buying a considerable number of four-motored bombers, of exceptional range and striking power, from the Boeing Airplane Co. of Seattle.

Meanwhile, a delivery problem confronts the state department because of prohibitions in the revised Neutrality Act against either pilots from belligerent countries or American pilots flying the machines out of the country.

Shipment by Ocean Vessel

In raising the embargo on sales of war materials to warring nations, Congress also made mandatory shipment of the material by ocean vessel. Even if the only two customers placing orders, France and Britain, wanted to fly bombing planes to Europe to expedite deliveries, they would encounter the delay of knocking down and boxing them for shipment to Canada.

Unless an easier solution can be found within the terminology of the act, it was considered likely that Canada would build a large airport adjacent to one of the United States side of the border and have the planes towed across the line by tractor.

The "Harvard" trainers in which the British are interested have a top speed of almost 250 miles an hour and, in an emergency, can be used for combat.

120-Gallon Still Found in Bush

Holland Landing, Ont., Nov. 10—(CP)—William Graham of this settlement 30 miles north of Toronto will appear in Newmarket court next Tuesday following discovery of a large still buried in the surrounding bush.

The still was found yesterday by Royal Canadian Mounted and York County Police. They charged Graham with illegal possession of a still and illegal possession of spirits.

Police said as they closed in on the still a man fled into swampland despite warning shots fired into the air. Graham later was arrested at his home.

The still was located six miles from the Yonge Street Highway and had a full capacity of 120 gallons, police said.

Horseless Carriage No Match for Dobbin

When a horse suddenly started to run across the road in front of a motor car on the fourth concession of Sidney last evening, the gasoline buggy came out second best in the collision, as damage to fully $100.00 resulted to the horseless carriage, while old dobbin merely shook himself loose from the wreckage and cantered away into the darkness. The motor car was being driven by Walter W. Head of Peterboro. Mr. Head was proceeding easterly when suddenly the form of a horse darted out from the side of the road in front of his motor car. The automobile struck the horse on the right rear flank, damaging the grill, lights and hood. Although the horse was carried a few feet after the impact, the animal released itself and trotted away into a nearby field. Mr. Head reported the matter to police authorities and added he was unable to ascertain who owned the animal. Police are endeavouring to find out this information for the motorist, who feels his property came out second best in the argument.

PILE DRIVER BEAM THROWS MAN INTO BAY

Hamilton, Ont., Nov. 10.—(CP)—Thrown into the bay when a heavy beam struck him while he was working on a pile driver on harbor construction at the foot of Victoria Avenue yesterday William Barnett, was rescued by fellow workers. Police later removed him to the hospital where examination revealed he suffered a possible fracture of the left leg.

12,024 ENTER IN SIX MONTHS

North European Immigration to Canada Increases 79.5 Per Cent

Ottawa, Nov. 10 —(CP)—Canada opened wider its doors to immigrants in the first six months of the present fiscal year. Number of immigrants entering Canada totalled 12,024, increase of 1,320 over the 10,704 for the same period of previous fiscal year, the Immigration Department reported today.

Entry of Sudeten Germans, who left that section of Czechoslovakia after the German annexation, accounted for a 79.5 per cent increase in immigrants from Northern European races, who numbered 1,556 compared with 867. The number of immigrants of German origin was 975 compared with 382 last year.

Immigrants from the British Isles at 2,544 showed an increase of 15.1 per cent while the number from the United States rose by 1.3 per cent to 3,410 from 3,365. Immigrants of other European races totalled 4,514 compared with 4,262. Of this class Jewish immigrants showed the largest increase, the total rising to 1,107 from 236.

Quints' Following Bigger Than Ever Says Dr. A. R. Dafoe

North Bay, Ont., Nov. 10 (CP)—Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe expressed the opinion today that the only sensible solution to the problem of Niagara Falls officials who say the Dionne quintuplets are stealing away the honeymooner trade is to "move the falls up to Callander."

In Toronto, W. L. Houck, Liberal member of the Ontario Legislature for Niagara Falls, told a service club that his riding is "burning up" with envy of the tourist trade at Callander, birthplace and residence of the quints. Mr. Houck said that honeymooners now give the falls a "once over" and head north to see the five sisters.

Dr. Dafoe, guardian and physician of the quints, was asked to comment on Mr. Houck's statement that Niagara Falls plans to offer counter attractions.

"Indeed," he said. "It will have to be bigger and better than New York's World Fair—because the fair didn't cut into the fan following of the quints this summer. More folks came to see the quints this year than ever before."

TWO R.C.A.F. MEMBERS INJURED

Toronto, Nov. 10.— (CP)— Two members of the Royal Canadian Air Force are in hospital here today in serious condition after being thrown from a fire truck at the Camp Borden training base, 60 miles north of here.

Injured are Gordon Fairman of Hastings, Ont., and B. E. O'Hander, about the face, head and shoulders, and may have internal injuries. It was reported they were on their way to extinguish a fire in a guard house when thrown from the fast-moving vehicle.

FIREMEN'S MASCOT DIES

New York, Nov. 10—(AP)— For 10 years "Nigger" a brown mongrel dog, went to all the fires as mascot of engine company 203 in Brooklyn. He won three medals for saving lives.

A motor car struck the dog in the street last night and sped away without stopping.

The crippled dog dragged himself painfully back to the station and climbed to the running board of the machine that carried him to scores of fires. He died, wagging his tail, as firemen tried to help him.

Retired From Post in Gov't.

Toronto, Nov. 10—(CP)— Fred O'Connor, Ontario Department of Health purchasing agent, and brother of the late Senator Frank O'Connor, has been retired from his post, it was learned today. Mr. O'Connor was appointed in 1934, shortly after the Hepburn administration was formed. No explanation of his resignation has been offered.

ADMITS BREAKING GLASS

Stratford, Ont., Nov. 10—(CP)—Herbert High, Hibbert Township farmhand, pleaded guilty in court today to breaking about 20 panes of glass in three schoolhouses and to cutting a wire fence around a field on Andrew Christie's farm. He blamed bad company for his plight and said he had paid $20 for the windows broken and $5 for the fence. He was remanded in custody for a week for sentence.

30 MONTHS ON EACH COUNT

New Orleans, Nov. 10—(AP) — Dr. James Monroe Smith, former President of Louisiana State University, today pleaded guilty to two federal charges of mail fraud and income tax evasion and was sentenced to 30 months on each count.

The sentences are to run concurrently with his previous 30-month sentence for mail fraud.

Smith was arrested near Brockville, Ont., last summer.

AGED COUPLE REVIVED

Toronto, Nov. 10—(CP)— Mrs. James Colville, 65 years old, staggered to a telephone in her apartment early today and called her son-in-law before collapsing. In another room her husband lay unconscious. Both had been overcome by coal gas fumes. Russell Taylor, the son-in-law, arrived in time and saved the elderly couple, reported recovering in a hospital.

Intelligence Test Is High But Man Lands in Court

Cleveland, Nov. 10— (AP)—The man with all the answers on traffic violations had another for the judge who found him guilty of driving with ficititious licence plates. He refused to pay the fine.

"I'd rather go to the workhouse", Earl Rubright, 28-year-old Cleveland salesman, told Municipal Judge Artl when the latter imposed $250 fine, suspended $200 and placed Rubright on probation for two years.

So Rubright was in the workhouse today.

Pyschiatrists said tests showed Rubright had an intelligence quotient of 154, placing him among the upper .2 per cent in the country.

Rubright was arrested after being involved in his 10th traffic accident in a year. It was his practice, police said, to go into action with a candid camera and a copy of the traffic code after each mishap, to prove the accident was the other driver's fault. In the 10th accident, police noticed licence plates on his car were issued for another.

Said Judge Artl: "I strongly suspect that you went around deliberately setting the stage for accidents."

MEDICAL AND CIVIC AUTHORITIES MOBILIZE TO FIGHT DIPHTHERIA

Melfort, Sask., Nov. 10.—(CP)—Medical authorities and civil officials of this town 80 miles northwest of Saskatoon mobilized today to battle an epidemic of diphtheria which already has resulted in one death and sent 33 others into quarantine.

A school girl of Pleasant Valley, near Melfort, died of the disease.

An isolation ward has been established in the town hall. There are now five patients in the ward and more are expected to be admitted soon.

ENEMY AIRCRAFT WITHOUT REPORTING, IS FINED $500

Kitchener, Ont., Nov. 10 (CP)—Max Loeffler of London, Ont., who pleaded guilty a week ago to a breach of defence of Canada regulations today was fined $500, and costs or six months in jail. He took the jail term. Loffler, classed as an enemy alien, left London without reporting to the registrar.

FORMER HOCKEY STAR DIES

Vancouver, Nov. 10 (CP)—Dr. T. B. Curtin, 62, Vancouver physician and former Intercollegiate football and hockey star with Queen's University at Kingston, died here yesterday.

Dr. Curtin was a member of the Queen's University's hockey team which held the Intercollegiate championship of America in 1901. He later played for Pittsburgh Athletics and Pittsburgh Keystones in an amateur United States League. He came to British Columbia in 1907.

POST OFFICE HOURS ON SATURDAY

Saturday, Nov. 11, "Remembrance Day" being a statutory holiday, full postal service will be given at the city Post Office.

The main lobby will be open from 6:30 a.m. until 9 p.m. while all wickets will be open from 6:30 a.m. till 6:30 p.m. Letter carrier service will be given in the morning and afternoon while regular street collections will be made. Special delivery, air-mails and ordinary mails will be received and despatched as usual.

U.S. Citizens Not to Leave Yet

Washington, Nov. 10 (AP)—State Secretary Cordell Hull said today that American envoys in Holland and Belgium had authority to request Americans to leave those countries if it seemed advisable. So far, he said, he has not heard of any such action.

GOLD IMPORTS DECLINE

Washington, Nov. 10 (AP)—The United States Commerce Department reported today that gold imports in October decliner to 69,740,356, compared with $326,088,889 in September.

The decline apparently was due to the difficulties of war shipments and the restrictions placed on capital movements by most European governments.

The month's imports included $10,181,856 from England and $9,953,880 from Canada.

October silver imports totalled $7,267,917, including $688,867 from Canada.

GIVEN UP FOR LOST

London, Nov. 10 (CP)—The Admiralty announced today that the auxiliary naval vessel Northern Rover, unheard from for some time, had been given up for lost. Relatives of the crew members have been advised. (The ship is not listed in naval reference books.)

NORWEGIAN FREIGHTER AGROUND.

Ogdensburg, N.Y., Nov. 10—(AP)—Tugs sought today to free the Norwegian freighter Trajof, aground on a St. Lawrence River shoal six miles south of here.

NOTED FINANCIER DIES

Toronto, Nov. 10.— (CP)—Thomas Bradshaw, one of Canada's foremost authorities on finance, died here today. He was 71.

WOUNDED MAN DRIVES TO SURGERY

Bullet Courses Way Through and Across Chest Skirting Ribs

Hamilton, Ont., Nov. 10—(CP) — Wounded in the chest with a .22 rifle bullet in his home near Fisherville last night, William Reu, 31, farmer and cattle dealer, is in St. Joseph's hospital here today. Meanwhile, his housekeeper, Jeanette Spetch, 38, formerly of this city, is in custody at Cayuga on a nominal charge of vagrancy. Arrested late last night she will appear before the district magistrate Tuesday.

Mr. Reu was rushed to the hospital for an emergency operation after he had driven his truck to Dr. J. Aiken's office at Fisherville to appeal for aid. Surgeons removed the bullet which, it was said, had entered the chest, skirted across his ribs and lodged under the left arm.

Police said the man was lying on the sofa when the incident occurred. Because of his position, the bullet coursed across his chest.

"Mr. Reu was able to drive his own truck to Dr. Aiken's office in Fisherville, three miles away," High Constable McBride said. "When we learned later in the evening that he had been wounded, we went to investigate and found Jeanette Spetch waiting in the doctor's office

High Constable McBride said the woman was held on a nominal charge pending completion of the investigation. No bail had been granted, he added.

LAST MAN WOUNDED WILL PARTICIPATE

Brantford, Ont., Nov. 10.—(CP)—The last Canadian wounded in the first Great War, Kenneth Lawrence, 39 years old, will participate in Remembrance Day ceremonies here tomorrow.

Lawrence's leg was amputated after he had been brought down by German machine-gun bullets at Valenciennes three minutes before hostilities ceased November 11, 1916.

He was not yet 16 and lied about his age to enlist in the Canadian Mounted rifles at Hamilton. He learned the war was over at a casualty clearing station.

Secret German Wireless Stations Operate in Mexico

Mexico City, Nov. 10 (AP)—Reports that secret German wireless stations are sending information on ship movements from the deep interior of Mexico to sea raiders were under investigation today by Allied and neutral Foreign Intelligence Agents. According to these recurrent rumors, the transmitters operate on powerful, high frequencies that can carry important naval intelligence to ships far at sea in the Atlantic or Pacific.

One foreign operative displayed a sheaf of reports from staff observers in various sections of the Republic charging that hidden stations were at work. But out of the mass of reports, he said, agents had not gleaned enough clues to determine the location of any station.

He added there is substantial evidence, however, that a transmitter is located somewhere in Chiapas State, 500 miles southeast of Mexico City. The rugged interior and difficult communications make it difficult for the Mexcan government to control the situation, the informant said.

8 White Families Evicted From Reservation

Ottawa, Nov. 10—(CP)—An official of the Indian Affairs Branch said today a report from the agent of the Caughnawaga Indian Reserve near Montreal was awaited here before any action would be taken in the cases of eight white families evicted from the Reservation.

Residence of white families at Caughnawaga is illegal under the Indian Act, at the Reservation, it was said the evictions last week were carried out under orders of the Indian Affairs Branch.

However, it was reported from Montreal the white families were returned to their Caughnawaga homes last night by authorities of Ville La Salle, the Montreal suburb where they had been lodged since their eviction.

Mayor Joseph Delisle of Caughnawaga said the matter was being referred to Ottawa authorities.

$500,000 Saving By 2-Year Terms Says Hon. E. Cross

Kingston, Ont. Nov. 10—(CP)—Saving to municipalities of Ontario of $500,000 would be made by the election of councils for two year terms, Hon. Eric Cross, Minister of Municipal Affairs, said today in addressing the Queens University conference on municipal affairs.

Mr. Cross said the idea of a two-year term was universally acceptable in Ontario. He stated that now was the time for the enforcing of all possible economy and that all capital expenditures should be postponed until the end of the war. The necessity for the pegging of municipal debt was stressed by the Minister.

M. MacDONALD TAKEN TO PRISON

'Mickey' Says "Crime Is Sucker's Racket" and Does Not Pay

Toronto, Nov. 10. —(CP)—"Crime is a sucker's racket and I'm the one who knows it," said Donald (Mickey) MacDonald today as he was taken handcuffed aboard a train to Kingston penitentiary.

Recently acquitted of the murder of James Windsor, Toronto bookmaker, after two of he longest murder trials in local records, MacDonald is going to the penitentiary to serve the unexpired portion of a two year sentence for assault and robbery of James Elder. He expects to be out in eight or nine months.

MacDonald said he would be "through with the gang for life" when he is free again. He said he would try to get a job.

Windsor Furrier Accused of Smuggling

Detroit, Nov. 10—(CP) — Moses Silver, former Windsor, Ont., furrier, today waived preliminary examination on charges of smuggling $10,000 worth of furs into the United States. He will go on trial before a Federal judge within a week or two.

Customs men arrested Silver this fall, charging that he sold fur coats to Detroit women in his Windsor store and then delivered the coats to their Detroit homes without paying customs charges.

Customs men charge that Mrs. Laura Gill Fox, 34, a model, wore the coats, one at a time, across the border here. She is facing a charge of complicity in the case.

More than one hundred and thirty Detroit women who bought their new fur coats in Windsor have not received them yet, as customs officers seized them in Detroit.

Freighter Runs Risk of Voyage From Chile to Hamburg

Santiago, Chile, Nov. 10—(AP)—The Freighter Lahn, which Chilean officials had hoped to buy with six other German ships for a projected private shipping monopoly, ran the risk of an ocean voyage today with Hamburg as its announced destination.

The Lahn, a 7,000-ton vessel, sailed suddenly from Talcahuano yesterday after loading a cargo of coal and food from the German ship Frankfurt, which also had taken refuge in that port.

Maritime and official sources said the government was arranging to lend 40,000,000 pesos (about $1,320,000) to a proposed shipping monopoly which intended to purchase seven German ships, including the Lahn, in Chilean ports.

Gifts From Soldiers Overseas Admitted Duty Free in Canada

Ottawa, Nov. 10 (CP)—In a memorandum sent to customs and excise collectors today the Department of National Revenue declared that during the period of the war, personal gifts from members of the Canadian Overseas Forces or Canadians serving with the British or Allied forces overseas, to relatives or friends in Canada may enter the country duty free.

For the same period donations of clothing and bona fide donations of other supplies for the Red Cross Society and donations of goods for the personal use of prisoners of war interned in Canada, and not for sale, may also be delivered free of duty.

WAR COMMITTEE ASKS FOR GUARD

Windsor, Ont., Nov. 10—(CP—Mayor David Croll announced today the War Charities Committee here has asked for a special squad of police to check on all cash-prize keno parties here. Already the permit of one church to sponsor entertainments has been suspended because of an alleged breach of the regulations.

"The committee grants permission to hold these feather parties subject to certain restrictions," explained Reg. Cooper, Secretary of the Committee. "One of the most important ones is that no cash awards be given.

"Reports have been received by the committee that some of the organizations granted permits are disregarding these restrictions. The Police Department is being supplied with a list of all those holding permits and a complete check on charity activities is to be undertaken immediately."

CAR THIEF LEAVES BICYCLE

London, Ont., Nov. 10 (CP)— A thoughtful automobile thief left a stolen bicycle behind last night. John Bouke found the cycle where his auto should have been in front of Kensal Park school. In his hurry to attend a ratepayers meeting, Bouke told police he left the keys in the ignition lock of the car.

EXPAND SHIPMENT OF FISH TO U.K.

Ottawa, Nov. 10 (CP)—Fisheries Minister Michaud said in a statement issued today that the matter of expanding shipment of fish to the United Kingdom is being "dealt with as expeditiously as possible" and members of the Canadian delegation to the Empire War Conference in London are discussing the matter with British authorities.

Mr. Michaud said, however, the "department has nothing to do with any plan so far announced for making shipments to Britain. Any undertakings of that kind are private ventures only. As soon as any plan has been worked out through the consultation of the Canadian and British authorities it will be made known in an unofficial announcement."

(Major Hugh A. Green of London, England, said in an interview here last night that large quantities of frozen fish are to be purchased immediately in Canada and Newfoundland by British fish interests.

SHOTGUN SLAYING TO BE PROBED

Chicago, Nov. 10 (AP)—Impelled by the shotgun slaying of Edward J. O'Hare, wealthy President of Sportsman's Park race track, the Chicago Crime Commission issued a bulletin today sugesting horse racing interests in Illinois had better clean house.

O'Hare was assassinated Wednesday night by gunmen who followed him in cars from his offices at the track in suburban Civero.

Police invetigators, admitting there were "a thousand possible angles" to the case, have as yet made no arrests. An inquest was continued to Nov. 30 as the Crime Commission made public its analysis of the killing.

"Horse-racing in Illinois is not so secure that it can afford racketeer activities and gangster style elimination of its officialdom," the Commission's bulletin said.

"Illinois has too many race tracks now (there are six) and this fact alone is bound to bring bitter rivalry and inevitable accompanying outlaw activities.

Chain Letter Suckers Still Act on Requests

They're here again.

And fugitives from erstwhile chain-letter gangs had better take warning, for a brand new departure in this knave of indoor sports is beginning to flood the city.

Addicts of the new craze claim that the new wrinkle will make the famous California "ham-and-eggs" — the Ohio "thirty-dollars-every-Thursday" and the Social Credit system, look like a bunch of pikers.

'Tis simple, 'tis said and all you do is to strike out the name at the head of the list you receive through the mail, add your own moniker at the bottom and mail to five of your acquaintances, (you won't have any friends, if they find out who mailed the letter.)

Then all you have to do is to sit back and wait for whatever the gods of chain-letter Olympus throw into your laps.

When you get YOUR letter you will read of the extraordinry luck that attended one young lady who followed instructions explicitly. Within a few days of mailing, she received in the neighborhood of four thousand dollars from mysterious sources—another impressionable gal received three thousand.

It's simple, inexpensive and has no practical outlay if you can chisel the office stamps. It all depends on how you stand with Dame Fortune, Providence, Santa Claus and the New Deal. There is not the slightest danger of you being the recipient of bad luck—providing you do not break the chain.

You will get your letter within a few days, for judging from the amount already received in the city and also mailed out again there are enough to reach the entire population.

Fire Strikes Twice Within an Hour

Windsor, Ont., Nov. 10—(CP)—Fire struck twice within an hour doing $600 damage at the varnish sub-plant of the Standard Paint and Varnish Company plant here today.

The first fire was caused when fumes from the huge kettles used to cook varnish ignited from the coke fires below the kettles. George Krytny, varnish maker in charge of the cooking, said the fumes were the worst he had ever seen in scores of varnish fires.

He gave the alarm and firemen subdued the blaze within 20 minutes. Main loss consisted of $400 worth of varnish being cooked when the fire broke out.

Less than an hour later, the firemen were back when the roof caught fire. District Chief Guynot said the roof was so hot that it caught fire long after the varnish fire had been put out. W. A. Murray, company treasurer, estimated the damage to the roof at about $200.

FALSE WARNINGS

London, Nov. 10 (CP)—False air raid alarms sent the residents of several cities in South Wales scurrying to shelter today. It was the first time raid warnings had sounded in Wales.

Investment Suggestions—

When you have money to invest, our many years experience is available for the asking. Some of Western Provincials and large Western Cities are attractive, as well as selected common stocks such as the Banks and large industrials.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Nov. 10 (CP)—The tendency today on Toronto Exchange was downward. Trading was slow and the turnover in the first three hours totalled 180,000 shares. Smelters and Noranda weakened about ¾.

Losses were limited to about five cents in the secondary golds. O'Brien, Perron, MacLeod-Cockshutt and Sylvanite were among the weak spots.

Steel, utility, liquor and implement issues worked lower and the foods and senior oils were irregularly lower. Losses up to a point appeared in the steel list. Building and bank stocks held firm.

In the western oils losses from 4 to 7 cents showed for Home, Okalta, Anglo-Canadian and Calgary-Edmonton.

Wall St.

New York, Nov. 10—(CP)—Feeble rallying sorties in today's stock market failed to carry far and leaders backed away fractions to around 2 points at the worst. Dealings slackened after a moderately fast opening and extreme losses were reduced before noon.

Fractions lower among Canadian issues were C.P.R., Dome, McIntyre, Porcupine, Distillers and Lake Shore Dominion 4s showed little variation in the bond market.

Bonds egged downward and commodities were mixed. Foreign markets ipped as war tension heightened.

Among losers were U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, Douglas Aircraft, DuPont, U.S. Gypsum, Anaconda and U.S. Rubber. Posting minor gains at one time were General Motors, Sears Roebuck, Electric Boat, Youngstown Sheet and White Sewing Machine. Lake Shore, Gulf Oil and Aluminum of America lagged in the curb. A bit better than even were American Gas, Sherwin-Williams and American Cyanamid "B."

British Airliner Attacked by Japs

Hong Kong, Nov. 10 (AP)—Passengers of the British airliner Dardanus, brought here from Canton today by an American naval vessel, said five Japanese planes staged a 20-minute attack at close range on their ship and continued to fire machine-gun bullets into it as the pilots landed it.

Japanese officials said the plane was forced down Tuesday at Waichow Island because it flew too low over a prohibited area en route from Hong Kong to Hanoi, French Indo-China. Japanese held the plane and its mail sacks at Waichow and the two British pilots at Canton.

The plane's passengers asserted they were compelled to sign pledges that they would not reveal details of the Japanese base at Waichow.

Butter Prices Show Improvement

Toronto, Nov. 10—Prices continued to strengthen for butter on the Toronto open produce market Thursday. Eggs maintained previous levels.

Trading tapered down in the afternoon session of the butter market, but prices regained their morning improvement. Offerings were light, as holders were not pressing for sales. Buyers were willing to take on supplies of first-grade Ontario creamery solids at 28 1-4c per pound and they were bidding at this price in late dealings. Sellers, however, generally were not accepting business at the 28 1-4c mark, but they experienced difficulty in obtaining prices 1-4c higher. As a result, the market closed with a quieter tone in the range of 28 1-4c to 28 1-2c. Most points were asking 28 3-4c. Creamery prints to the retail trade moved at the firmer values of 29 1-2c to 30 1-4c per pound for top grades.

The good demand for A-large and A-pullets evident in the morning on the egg market later slackened. Prices continue firm, and it was possible to secure premiums of 1 cent per dozen on these two grades when sold alone. Mediums remained draggy.

Montreal Produce

Montreal, Nov. 10 (CP)—Produce market prices here yesterday as reported by the Dominion Agricultural Bureau, follow:

Butter: First grade creamery prints, job price, 28 3-4-29; first grade solids, job price, 28¼-½.

Eggs: Graded shipments in used free cases selling price, A-large, 45; A-medium, 40; A-pullets, 32-33; B-large, 26; C, 20. Receipts: 167 cases.

American Citizen Donates $5,500 To Canadian Red Cross

Ottawa, Nov. 10 (CP)—An anonymous gift amounting to $5,000 reached the Canadian Red Cross Society today from an American citizen operating through a prominent Canadian living in Ottawa.

The letter accompanying the donation read:

"Realizing the present stress on the Canadian government is extremely great I would like to be of help in a very small way, so please accept the enclosed cheque and devote it to the welfare of your fellow citizens serving in your armies.

"Having spent many pleasant visits in Canada it would be giving me great happiness to help a bit."

OFFERS TO SELL BODY FOR $500

Duluth Man Wants to Make Down Payment on Home

Duluth, Nov. 10 — (AP)—A Duluth man has offered to sell his body, upon death, for $500 to make a down payment on a home.

In a paid advertisement appearing in the Classified Ad section of the News-Tribune, a 44-year-old resident who asked that his name be withheld, said he would order his body turned over to any medical group or institution upon payment at the present time of the sum.

"I've been working all my life for small wages," he said. "All I have contracted is a pile of receipts for paying rent. I figure that my soul belongs to God, my heart to my wife—but my body belongs to me to do with as I please."

King and Queen Inspect Mobile Canteen

London, Nov. 10— (CP)— The King and Queen today inspected a mobile canteen in the quadrangle of Buckingham Palace. The green-painted canteen was driven by members of the Women's Voluntary Service.

The King, in naval uniform, and the Queen, dressed in dark blue spent 30 minutes examining the canteen. The Dowager Marchioness of Reading, who is head of the Women's Voluntary Service, told Their Majesties about the work being performed with the canteens.

The Princess Royal, wearing the uniform of an officer of the Volunteer Service, visited units in the West Riding, staying for a luncheon prepared by girls belonging to the service. At the barracks she saw the girls preparing lunches for the troops, then had lunch at the officers' Mess.

Madoc

Madoc, (Special)— On Thursday evening, the Madoc Branch of the Red Cross Society held a very successful business and work meeting in the Anglican Guild rooms, Madoc, —about sixty ladies were in attendance. Under the supervision of Mrs. McCullough hospital supplies were prepared and work given out to those attending. During the evening Miss Doris Broad gave a humorous reading and Mrs. Jones contributed two solos with Miss Salisbury presiding at the organ. A dainty lunch was served by the members of the executive and a silver collection was taken which was very helpful in aiding in the war work.

MADOC CHEESE BD. IS ENTERTAINED BY COMMUNITY CLUB

Tribute Paid to Board in Upholding Traditions of Cheese Industry

SUMPTUOUS BANQUET

Madoc, Nov. 10. — (Special) — Wholehearted appreciation of the efforts of the Madoc Cheese Board in promoting and upholding the traditions of Hastings County's basic industry, was shown members of that body and guests, many of whom were cheese industry officials of the district, by the Madoc Community Club at its 1939 inaugural meeting last night.

Tribute to the cheesemen was paid verbally by municipal officials and other representatives of the community and district. Perhaps one of the outstanding tributes was the sumptuous repast tendered the club at the banquet provided by Mr. Thomas Blue in his hotel. Members of the host organization as well as the guests were loud in their praises of the excellent cuisine, that contributed in no small way to the success of the evening as a whole.

Mr. John McCaffrey deserves a great deal of credit in organizing this meeting. For the past month Mr. McCaffrey has been busy organizing the cheesemen of the district.

Greatness of Industry.

Mr. Chas. Johnston, president of the Community Club, welcomed the cheesemen to the meeting. He handed the meeting over to Mr. McCaffrey who in a few remarks spoke of the greatness of the cheese industry in Canada. Mr. George Pollard, dairy instructor of Stirling was then called on to introduce one of the guest speakers of the evening, Mr. Harold Sandwith, chief dairy instructor for Eastern Ontario. Mr. Sandwith stated that the revenue from the cheese industry has aided the farmer in many ways. In Eastern Ontario there are 600 cheese factories. The cheese industry is one in which the producer has more control than many of the other farm industries. He stated that there were too many under-grade cheese being made in Ontario.

Mr. Sandwith then introduced Mr. Newman, Secretary of the Marketing board. He spoke about cheese and the war. He stated that this situation will be controlled by the War Supply Board. He also stated the farmer needs the cost of production plus a reasonable profit. "Today we are not doing this," he said. Other speakers were Mr. McNeil and Mr. Owen McEvoy, dairy instructor of Madoc district. Mr. George West, on behalf of the Community Club, voiced the appreciation of the members to the cheesemen.

At the regular meeting of the Cheese Board held following the banquet, a resolution was passed expressing appreciation for recognition of their efforts as shown by the Madoc Community Club at the banquet, and in verbal tribute paid by speakers.

a prelude to an attempted German sweep through the Netherlands and Belgium.

The Daily Herald printed a chart of the various types of German plan . so that "you will be able to recognize them" if they appear over Britain.

This underscored a general theory Germany might attempt to occupy the Netherlands in an effort to establish bombing plane bases on the coast as a jumping-off point for the assault hinted by Adolf Hitler in his Munich speech Wednesday.

Cut Down Distance

Establishment of such bases, observers here said, would cut down the distance of return flights over England by 300 miles, permitting combat planes to accompany raiding bombers.

The British press saw in the abortive attempt to bomb Adolf Hitler in the Nazi beer-cellar shrine a symbol of violent opposition to the governing regime in the Reich.

"It is a prelude to that explosion which will burst out and bring the regime of barbarism down in ruins," said the Daily Express.

"It is certain that there are people in Germany who are prepared to go to any lengths to overthrow Nazi tyranny," the News Chronicle said of the blast that wrecked the beer-cellar 11 minutes after Hitler finished his address to Nazi veterans Wednesday night.

The press joined with officials in ridiculing the Nazi effort to place the blame for assassination attempt on Great Britain and Jews. "It is a German affair," the Daily Telegraph said. "No other government stoops to the infamy of the Fuehrer's methods."

WAVE OF SUICIDES

Zurich, Switzerland, Nov. 10 — (CP-Havas) —A wave of suiceds has swept through the shanty colony built at Posen, in German-occupied Poland, to shelter Germans brought out of the Baltic countries, it was reported here today.

Within a period of 10 days 30 of these Germans were said to have committed suicide. Seventy-eight of the refugees were said to have fled the colony since it opened.

Manion to Speak Over Radio Mon. at 8.30

Ottawa, Nov. 10—(CP)— Conservative Leader Manion will make an address Monday night over the national network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation on "why we are at war" it was announced last night. The address will be from 8:30 p.m. to 8:45 p.m., EST.

War Briefs

Copenhagen, Nov. 10—(CP Havas)—The Berlin correspondent of the newspaper Politiken reported today that hundreds of persons have been arrested throughout Germany, including members of the police, as result of the Munich beerhall blast which Adolf Hitler narrowly escaped. Jews in Germany are fearful that they all will be sent to concentration camps, the dispatch said. The paper said the Reich police are convinced that the bomb was placed in the Bergerbraueller by Germans.

Philadelphia, Nov. 10—(AP) — H. Gibson, former United States Ambassador to Belgium, predicts that "a lot of elements of unrest" in Germany will be touched off "the minute the Nazi regime suffers some important reversal." Just back from 18 months' travel in Europe, Gibson expressed the belief that "someone local" instigated the attempted assassination of Adolf Hitler in Munich.

London, Nov. 10—(CP Cable) — The Rhodesian Copper Producers Association today announced it had entered into a contract with the British Ministry of Supply for the sale of a large proportion of the Rhodesian output for the duration of the war. The price to be paid approximates the level ruling immediately before the war.

Helsingfors, Nov. 10—(AP)—Finnish-Russian negotiations thus far have failed to establish a basis for an agreement, a government spokesman said today, after Finland's cabinet discussed the latest report from its delegation in Moscow. Kyoesti Kallio, Finland's President, has asserted repeatedly that his country would make no concessions which would imperil her independence or neutrality.

Vatican City, Nov. 10—(AP) — Prelates reported today that Pope Pius had instructed the Papal Nuncio at Berlin to convey his felicitations to Adolf Hitler on escaping the Munich beer cellar explosion Wednesday night.

Calgary, Nov. 10—(CP)— Since the outbreak of war, admittances to Alberta mental hospitals have fallen off remarkably, Dr. R. R. Maclean Ponoka, superintendent of mental institutions for Alberta, told a service club here yesterday.

Moscow, Nov. 10—(AP)— The Russian foreign office told the German Ambassador today that Russia "received with joy" news of Adolf Hitler's escape from the Munich attempt on his life and regretted the casualties caused by the bombing. The press printed long extracts from German newspapers charging British agents with the attempt.

Vatican City, Nov. 10—(AP) — Pope Pius XII told Nicola Abele Leger, New Haitian Minister to the Holy See, today that peace will be restored to the world only if heads of government renounce the "cult of force."

Private Life Of Bund Leader To Be Probed

New York, Nov. 10 AP)—The government indicated today it would delve into the private life of Fritz Kuhn, German-American Bund leader, including his "keenly sentimental interest" in a Mrs. Florence Camp, in an attempt to show criminal intent in Kuhn's alleged embezzlement of $5,641 in Bund funds.

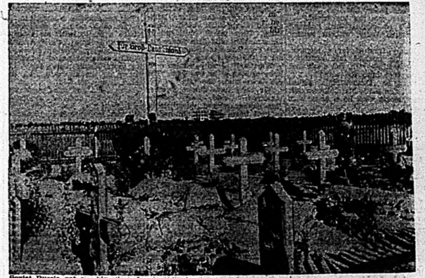
Prosecutor Herman J. McCarthy, in his 30-minute opening address at Kuhn's trial on larceny and forgery charges, described the Bund "Fuehrer" as a powerful leader with complete control of the Bund's affairs.

McCarthy said the Bund itself was a "strong" organization, with a number of affiliations. He said the Bund was formed in March, 1936, at a convention in Buffalo, N.Y., "as the successor to an organization known as 'the friends of new Germany'."

Peter Sabbatino, Kuhn's chief counsel, objected vigorously to the reference to "the friend of new Germany", but he was overruled.

Kuhn smiled at the opening of the trial yesterday as Judge Wallace warned prospective jurors that issues of race or political belief had no place at the trial.

THEIR SHARE OF POLAND



Soviet Russia got a big slice of conquered Poland. Germany, as represented by the Nazi party, also got a big chunk. These crosses mark out what German soldiers received out of the conquest. The photo is of a German cemetery in Poland. The big cross, in background, bears the inscription—"For Greater Germany."

COTTON BOUND FOR DEMOCRATIC PORT

The first cotton to be shipped to warring nations since the United States invoked "the cash and carry" neutrality scheme is shown being loaded onto an unnamed ship at New Orleans bound for an unnamed democratic port. This picture was transmitted by Phonephoto.

HITLER LEAVES BEFORE EXPLOSION

Chancellor Hitler is shown here leaving the famous Munich Beer Cellar just before an explosion brought the ceiling crashing down on ardent Nazis gathered to celebrate their Putsch of 1923. Seven persons were killed and sixty-three injured by the explosion. Rudolf Hess, No. 3 Nazi and named by Hitler as one of his successors, is partially shown, extreme right. He was reported to have been killed in the explosion, but his death has not been confirmed. This picture was radioed to New York from Berlin and then transmitted by Phonephoto.

Mixed Nuts

By DOROTHY SCOVILLE

Daisy was very carefully addressing the two pound box of mixed nuts Andre Eugene Ferguson had ordered. She did not see Frank drive past the candy shop in his electrical store truck. Jimmy, the soda jerker, told her.

"There goes the boy friend."

"He's so—distinguished looking," murmured Daisy, without looking up.

Jimmy frowned for a moment, than his freckled face registered understanding. "Oh, you mean that actor that buys the nuts?"

"And so thoughtful," sighed Daisy, "he sends his mother a gift every single week he is away from her."

"Washington?" Jimmy squinted at the package. "That where he lives?"

"And he invited me to have dinner with him Sunday," confided Daisy.

"You and Frank had a scrap the other night, didn't you?' probed Jimmy, "you haven't used the sign since then."

The electric sign over the candy shop window was Daisy's private signal to Frank. Every night at closing time, Daisy would blink the MIXED NUTS sign and down the block on the opposite side of the street, Frank would twinkle his EVERYTHING ELECTRICAL in reply. Five minutes later he would be in front of the candy shot waiting to take Daisy home. Then Andre Eugene Ferguson had come along to fill Daisy's eyes with dreaming. Frank had objected to him, and they had quarreled.

The door of the candy shop darkened. Andre Eugene Ferguson was making his entrance. Daisy forgot Frank. Forgot everything but the fluttering of her heart as Romance advanced toward her.

Jimmy, with his back to them, was watching in the mirror. Daisy seemed disappointed about something. They talked confidentially for a moment, and then Andre Eugene Ferguson was taking his way out of the candy shop.

"S'matter?" Jimmy wanted to know as soon as he was gone. "The sun looks kinda like rain."

"We can't have dinner together tomorrow," said Daisy soberly, "his mother arrived unexpectedly, so he'll have to entertain her.

A slender, blonde woman came in.

"May I help you?" Daisy inquired sweetly.

The woman inspected her with cool, blue eyes. "I think—" she said in a throaty contralto, "that you may." She looked at the display of mixed nuts.

"There's a special on those today," said Daisy.

"And they are nice," agreed the woman, "while I was in Washington my husband sent them to me from this shop every week."

"Washington?" Daisy suddenly ceased to breathe. "Your—husband?"

"Yes," sighed the woman. "For fifteen years now, I've been looking after him."

Fascinated, Daisy stared at her. Fifteen years. She wasn't young. There were tired lines about her eyes and her blonde hair was metal bright.

"It's really rather funny," she went on lightly, "but whenever he send me things, I know he needs me. The last time it was silk stockings." The woman smiled with a reminiscent tenderness. "She was a pretty little thing, too; worked at a hosiery counter."

"You—you're talking about—" Daisy moistened her lips, "about Andre Eugene—"

"Ferguson," nodded the woman, "I rather thought you might know him."

"But—but he sent those nuts to his mother!" Daisy protested wildly.

The blond woman shook her head with a pitying smile. "He calls me that sometimes." She looked at the jeweled watch on her wrist. "Dear me," she murmured. "I must run along before Andre misses me. Good night."

"There's Frank just putting up the truck," said Jimmy.

"Frank?" Daisy came out of her trance. Ran to a window with Jimmy at her heels.

MIXED NUTS flashed once, then twice.

Suddenly EVERYTHING ELECTRICAL came to life in a forgiving flash of gold. Winked once, then twice, as MIXED NUTS sparkled eager response.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking to himself in his private chair, saying, I don't know what's a matter with me tonight, I seem to be born down by a vague useless feeling. Perhaps it's just the slow inexable advance of the creeping years. Maybe there's something cheery on the air, turn on the radio, Benny, he said.

Wich I did and some music was just stopping and the announcer said, You have just heard Merry Andrews Jockers and his Swinging Devils on the roof of the Hotel Stilz, and now, to inject a rather more serious note, I want to remind all of you listeners who are over 40 that there is more than an even chance that one or more of your teeth are slowly but surely poisoning you.

That'll do that's enough, get another station for Peet sake, pop said.

Wich I did, and another announcer was saying, You have been listening to the music of The Feverish Five brought to you by The New Era Hair Institute, and now I want you men to ask yourselves frankly if your hair is as thick as it used to be.

No it's not, and as far as I can remember it never was, pop said. Yee gods keep going, he said.

Meaning another station and I got it and it was only another announcer, saying, Before you hear this evening's organ recital by Mr. Glantz stop a moment and reflect that nobody's health, poor or perfect is permanent and that axsidents unfortunately are always with us. Is your family amply provided for in case you suddenly pass from this now pleasant picture?

Help aid sucker, I'm going to the movies pop said and I said, G, pop, can I go with you, tomorrow's Satiday.

What would your mother say? pop said, and I said, She's out.

The result being he took me.

Tweed

Tweed—Rev. W. J. Walker, of Belleville, was the guest speaker at the anniversary services of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church on Sunday evening. There was a good attendance as the evening service in the United Church was withdrawn.

Mr. Walker, who is a very fine speaker, delivered an excellent address. The choir was assisted by the choir of St. Peter's Church, Madoc. Miss Audrey Joynes sang a solo.

Mrs. H. B. Herrington was the special speaker at the W. A. meeting held in the United Church Sunday School Hall. Miss M. Kerr's group had charge of the meeting. Mrs. Herrington and Miss Lucille Herrington also sang two very pleasing duets. A large number of ladies was present and enjoyed the fine address and music.

The question of assembling classes at 1.00 p.m. instead of 1.30 p.m. and closing at 3.30 instead of 4.00 p.m. at the local High Consolidated and Separate Schools is being considered and a joint meeting of the boards of these schools may be held in a short time to consider the matter.

Dr. and Mrs. M. G. Dales visited friends in Toronto during the week end.

Miss Mavis McGuire, M.A., who is teaching at Blenheim, Ont., and Miss Gladys McGuire of Queen's University were week end visitors at the home of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. McGuire.

WATERSPOUT SEEN 50 FEET HIGH

Spout Is Seen Sweeping Across Georgian Bay—Gale and Snow Follow

Meaford, Ont., Nov. 9— (CP) — Fisherman of this district talked today of a waterspout of considerable size that swept across Georgian Bay outside this harbor yesterday.

William Armstrong said the spout was 50 feet in height and that no boats were in the vicinity at the time. Later in the day a 40-mile-an-hour gale swept the bay, piling 10-foot waves against outer walls of the Meaford pier. A heavy snowtorm followed the gale.

THE RUNAWAY

Nine o'clock came; the boys stumbled up to bed. Becky did not want to go upstairs. She did not want to be Gavin's wife, shut into his room with him, conscious that the airily indifferent mood he had shown to her anxiousness all day long was changing to a mood of affection, of willingness to please her, sympathise with her. She did not want his arm about her, his kiss against her neck as she undressed.

Sarah was miserably aware of the situation, too, and Becky knew it. Her father and the boys had been receptive to Gavin's talk at dinner, had accepted unchallenged his indirect apologies and explanations of his long silence and absence, but Sarah had been watchful and wary. However strong the case he had made for himself with them, he had convinced her of nothing but his selfishness and neglect.

Now Sarah was suffering with Beck afresh. The older wife sensed perfectly the difficult position of the younger one. To rebuff Gavin, to send him off to the hotel to sleep, would be to precipitate an unpleasantness that might, by some miracle, not be in prospect at all. He might really intend honestly by his wife and child now. He might really have had a difficult and uncertain time during these long five months, struggling to find work, losing jobs, ill. Perhaps his breezy manner was the covering for a conviction of defect, a consciousness of having failed her.

If that were the case, and if Becky angered and estranged him, it must be Becky who would pay, stranded with her child before the watching eyes of gossiping townsfolk.

Sarah could not interefere here; no one could interfere. Twenty-two-year-old Becky must solve this problem herself; go to his room with him tonight and shut the world out. That was marriage.

"Everything all right now, Sally?" Becky's father asked, vaguely uneasy, half an hour later, when he was snug in bed. Sarah's whole body had been strained into an interrogation mark since they had all come upstairs. She had heard Becky's murmur over the sleepy, whimpering baby, heard Gavin's laugh and her reluctant half laugh in reply. They had been settling Gibbs for the night, as proud young parents everywhere were settling off small children at ten o'clock.

"Seems so," she had answered Spencer briefly. All her thoughts had been with Becky, never lovelier than she had been tonight. The hard business of bearing her child had thinned the girl's body to a new fineness; joy and pain and trembling responsibility had put dark amber lights into her eyes; Becky's old gaiety and generosity where her parents and the an infinitely touching grace and an infitely touching grace and gentleness now.

All through the evening Sarah had been conscious of her beauty; the beauty of the smooth neck and the low forehead against which little feathers of dark gold curled carelessly; the beauty of the smooth skin, the deep-set eyes, the wide, eager, expressive mouth. All the warm golds and browns had mingled together, brown in the gold hair, gold in the brown eyes, brown thin hand, brown, curved young breast where the striped cotton gown fell open at the throat. Her girl, her lost little girl, whose husband was seeing all this sweetness and beauty, too, watching it, glorying in it, growing kinder to her, more affectionate and responsive and appreciative every moment.

"Poor little Beck!" Sarah said half aloud.

"What say?" Spencer roused himself from a first doze.

"Nothing," she answered. But she lay long awake that night, worrying.

INSTALMENT 14

Gavin could be kind, and his kindness was the weapon against which Becky had no defense. In the first days of their marriage his mood had made the difference between joy and pain to her. His happier tempers had found her eagerly receptive; when he had been silent and cold Becky had dropped like a flower in a frost.

Tonight the old power reasserted itself. Gavin was amiable tonight, good-naturedly interested in Gibbs, amusing in his help with and comments upon the baby. Lord, he was a queer little fish! Was he honestly a pretty fair little specimen. An unusually fine baby, and already above the average in length and weight? Aw hell, didn't they tell every mother that?

Apparently Gavin was completely absorbed in watching the child. "Y'know," he continued, beginning on his shoelaces, "I've been seeing—I swear it struck me for the first time tonight—what a rotter you must have thought me for not writing. I feel terribly about that. Time went awfully fast, and I kept thinking I'd have a steady job and could take a place for you and the kid. I knew most girls wanted to be with their mothers when a baby was coming, so that was all right, but it never struck me you could be worried about me; I'll swear it never did. Now tonight," he went on, walking about the room, busy with the folding and hanging of clothes, "tonight, when your folks were so kind, and your mother cooked such a swell dinner, I began to see what a family can be like—I never had one, you know. I never had anyone to help me with homework and wipe dishes, that sort of thing. I'd have been a very different sort of person if I had. By George, I envied your brothers tonight. I thought: 'You don't know anything about loneliness and having to fight your own battles. The way I did!' I wish we were going to stay here longer. But three or four days are about all I ought to spare if I'm going to start in with Cooper."

"Three or four days!" Hope sprang in her heart. If they could really get away in three or four days! "But I thought you hadn't a job, Gavin," she said.

"Well, I haven't the job I want. But we can get along on thirty-five a week, to start with, can't we? This loafer Yelland, who's doing exactly the same work, gets a hundred. But I wouldn't get that. I'd start off for thirty-five or forty, and work up. Because we want a little home, Beck," Gavin went on, sitting on the edge of the bed now, scowling into space as he spoke. "We've got to get going, with this feller to look out for. I'd rather have less, and have it sure ...."

She came, fresh and soap-scented with her damp curls brushed loosely from her face, to sit beside him. Her eyes shone.

"Oh, Gavin, that's what I want so much! I want so terribly some little place with a garden and maybe a patio, where we can have his sun baths and some day a sandbox. I'd not mind being poor. We could live wonderfully on thirty-five a week!" He put his arm about her.

"I've treated you like a dog, Beck," he said in a lowered tone. "But I never saw it! I thought of us as well, kinder having a fight to fight out, you carrying your end here, and I mine there. I ought to have written, and I ought to have sent you money. But I didn't have it, and I hated to write and say so. It's one thing to write and send a hundred, and another to tell a hard-luck tale."

His story was strengthening as he elaborated it. Some cold little corner of her mind told her so. Plausible as it was, it was not quite plausible enough. But smothering, engulfing that tiny area of reason, was the stronger argument of the senses, those betraying senses that were so conscious of the dimly lighted room, the scents of young grass and turned earth that stole in on moonbeams through the pear-tree blossoms, the warm, heartening hold of a man's arm about her, his hard young cheek against her temple.

"Don't ever again be mean to me, Gavin," she whispered. "We've got to stay together. Whatever happens, we've got to face it together!"

"I love you!" he whispered, deeply stirred. Becky saw the glint of tears in his eyes.

x x ::

Half-past five o'clock on a June morning. The valley was already simmering in burning heat. Becky came downstairs with Gibbs. The kitchen reflected the day's day dry warmth even now. In through its two southwestern windows poured the glory of the risen sun.

All the milk had soured, and the cream was just on the turn. Becky left Gibbs in his pen and stepped over to the dairy. No sourness here; the earthy coolness of it met her like a breath of the sea the delicious smells of wet wood and new milk were mingled in that dairy sweetness that is like no other in the world.

She went back, stepped carefully the big shallow pan in her hands. Gibbs watching for her anxiously; he smiled a broad toothless smile at her. She had to catch him up, when she had set down the milk, and kiss him once, twice, three times before she could go on with her work.

There was plenty of it. The steadily mounting heat of the day brought perspiration to her forehead and set a faint pain between her eyes as she moved about. After Gibbs' breakfast, Becky pulled on an old straw hat and went into the yard to gather in the wash; She had been too tired after yesterday's blazing hours to bother with it last night. She folded most of the hot dry linen, dampened some of it and set it aside, set the breakfast table, cut bread, put on the coffee pot. The remains of a joint were in the icebox. Becky cut the meat into cubes, found onions and turnips and potatoes to put with it, covered the whole with water, scraped cold gravy in for a finish and lighted a bead of gas on the stove. Lamb stew; Gavin hated stews. Only two nights ago, finding that the main dish of the evening was corned-beef hash, he had excused himself and gone downtown to dinner. Rudeness to mother.... Inexcusable. But she would not think. One could train oneself not to think.

Becky settled down in dad's rocker to drink a cup of coffee just as the clock struck seven. There was ironing left from yesterday. She was finishing this when her mother came down, and they had a second breakfast together, from which Becky leaped up to serve her father and the boys. Dishes accumulated in the sink. The kitchen was in an uproar for a while; then Becky's father and the boys disappeared, peace came back, and the women could rest about the morning's work.

When Gibbs was off for his nap Becky set Gavin's place at the end of the kitchen table, found the newspaper and folded it with its sheets in order, set the coffee pot back on the stove, and made toast. He liked orange juice very cold and fresh, poached eggs on toast, two cups of coffee. Almost every morning he told one or other of the women that he never ate cereal or hot cakes or waffles, nothing like that. Not this weather!

This breakfast time of his was a hard time for Becky for many reasons. One was that at this time more than any other she felt keenly her mother's total disapproval of Gavin. Sarah tried—Becky knew how generously!—to disguise and hide it. But to have Becky, already tired after four hours steady work, wait on him in this fashion made Sarah's blood boil. It was only for Becky's sake that she held her tongue, that she forced herself to endure his serene acceptance of these attentions day after day, forced herself to listen to his interested comments upon the news of the world.

When the dishes and pans from Gavin's breakfast had been piled in the sink, Rebecca took the car and went to market. It was a bad time to go to town on a broiling summer morning, but it was the time Gavin wanted to get to town, and one that gave her a little interval between Gibb's imperious needs.

Very few customers were in the Exchange at this time. Millie Delaney at the stocking counter would be fanning herself with a yellow-palm-leaf fan.

"Lo, Beck. Some weather! And pa was sayin' it don't even cool off at night."

"No. I know. The baby was terribly restless last night. I hardly got any sleep at all."

"Well, you'll get worse if you and Mr. Flood go down south. Chess was sayin' he was talkin' of going down."

"I suppose so. But I'd like to stay here until it gets a little cooler."

With casual friends, met here and there, it was always the same. Becky got tired of answering, never could show how deep the neighborly questions cut her.

"Say, when you folks goin' back to San Francisco?" demanded Alma Pettit, at the post office. "How long've you and Gavin been home? Six months, ain't it?"

Some of her mother's club friends asked even more searching questions.

"Rebecca, what does Gavin do?

A photographer? Is he really? And do you mean that there isn't a demand for that sort of thing down in Hollywood?"

And then finally her father mildly joining the chorus:

"I'd encourge Gavin to take anything he can get, Becky, since he isn't particularly interested in getting into business here in Salletts. It is—it isn't particularly healthy for a man his age to be idle. No harm in a billiard game or a poker game now and then. My Uncle Ray, my mother's brother, used to be what they called luck at cards. He got over it; he settled down. But at Gavin's age—"

"I know, Dad," Becky would say. "I know you're right. And I do talk to Gavin about getting a job."

She talked to him continually whenever they were alone. She had long abandoned any consideration for his feelings; he had no feelings.

"Gavin, don't you see we can't go on this way? It isn't fair to mother and dad to land on them like this, to go on costing them money. And as long as you're out with that Perry gang down in Chinatown half the night, you'll never get a job. Mother's been wonderfully patient, you know that, but it does make her mad to have you always late for dinner, and always coming downstairs in the middle of the morning."

And sometimes she would add, "You ought to have more pride, Gavin. Everyone knows you're being supported by my people. Everyone knows I haven't any money except what my father gives me."

"I'm going to get a job. I've got something swell lined up," Gavin would say if he were in a good mood. If he were dissatisfied and impatient in the dry wearying heat of the relentless summer days, he would fling away impatiently, to go upstairs and sprawl on their bed for a sleep, or catch the bus and go into town.

Becky grew thin and anxious worrying about him. She wanted to see none of her old friends now. She was ashamed.

AT THE CAPITOL

"HAWAIIAN NIGHTS"

Graced by a youthful and vivacious cast, four lilting new song hits, original comedy and lavish dance revues, Universal's new musical film, "Hawaiian Nights", proved surprising screen entertainment when it opened yesterday at the Capitol Theatre.

Unfolding in a tropical paradise, the picture features Johnny Downs, Mary Carlisle, Constance

STORY—THREE ETC.

Moore and Eddie Quillan. Princess Luana, famed queen of the hula, leads two hundred pretty native girls in eye-filling dance numbers and introduces the exotic swing-hula for the first time on the screen.

Celebrated Orchestra

Music for the picture is offered by Matty Malneck and his orchestra, popular for their records and radio work, and the Hawaiian string band of Sol Hoopii. New popular songs in the film include "When Hawaii Sang Me to Sleep", "I Found My Love," "Then I Wrote the Minuet in G," and "Hey, Good Lookin'."

The gaily paced story deals with the adventures of Downs, the son of a rich hotel man, who is sent to Honolulu, to learn his father's business but falls in love with a beautiful girl, Miss Moore. There are romantic scenes in an outrigger canoe, and along palm-fringed beaches. Musical numbers staged in a fashionable Island night club, are smoothly woven into the drama under the direction of Al Rogell.

New Dance Routines

Jack Crosby is credited with creating the colorful dances in the picture. The screenplay was written by Charles Grayson and Lee Loeb. Max H. Golden was associate producer.

The added feature attraction brings to the screen Jack London's thrilling story of the north country, "Wolf Call", featuring John Carroll, and Movita also on the same program a Popeye cartoon and 5th chapter of the serial "Flaming Frontiers."

Rosalind Russell with Norma Shearer and Joan Crawford in "The Women," now at the Belle Theatre.

John Carroll in this action shot from the Capitol Theatre's current attraction, "Wolf Call." The film is from the famous Jack London story.

Movita and Smoky in this scene from Monogram's "Wolf Call," now at the Capitol Theatre. John Carroll co-stars in this Jack London story.

AT THE McCARTHY

"The Arizona Wildcat and Legion of Lost Flyers."

Jane Withers brings her own brand of law and disorder to the west in "The Arizona Wildcat," 20th Century-Fox production now playing at the McCarthy Theatre, and it's Jane's brand of fun and excitement at its best. This is just about the best Jane Withers picture the popular young star has ever made. Yesterday's audiences acclaimed it as swell—when it was over their cheers were still echoing.

Here is the type of picture Jane does best and the kind of role her fans are eager to see her in. What with gold missing from the mine, the stagecoach stuck up, a whole town shot up and the sheriff in cahoots with the crooks, there is enough action for a dozen pictures—and Jane's right in the middle of it. There's so much going on in "The Arizona Wildcat" that you'll miss something if you even blink your eyes.

Leo Carrillo, one of the screen's great character actors, plays a prominent part in the film and gets as much enjoyment out of his role as the audience does. He is seen as Jane's adopted daddy and between them they make things hot for the bandits operating in the town.

The story opens with a stage coach, drawn by two runaway horses, racing up the main street of Mineville Arizona. When it is brought to a halt, the bullet-riddler bodies of the driver and two guards offer mute testimony that the coach has been held up and robbed of the gold it was carrying. The sheriff (Henry Wilcoxon) rides off with his deputies in search of the criminals.

From that point on there isn't a minute's let-down. Jane and Carrillo get a hunch that the sheriff himself is in cahoots with the bandits, and of course they take it upon themselves to track down the culprits and restore law and order to the town.

In addition to brilliant performances by Jane Withers and Leo Carrillo, an excellent supporting cast, featuring Pauline Moore, William Henry, Henry Wilcoxon, Douglas Fowley and Etienne Girardot contributes splendid performances.

In addition to the above, Richard Arlen, Ann Nagle and Andy Devine head a great cast in "Legion of Lost Flyers," associate feature attraction that is a five-bell ringer of thrilling air adventures, romance, comedy, action and drama to make one sit on the edge of the seat—taking every scene in breathless enjoyment. "Lgion of Lost Flyers," is a real thriller and best of all it has been produced entirely different from the usual manner of preceding air productions. A featurette subject entitled "Adventures of a Newsreel Cameraman," and a new episide of "Mandrake the Magician" complete and add wholesome entertainment to the above swell feature hits.

AT THE BELLE

"Marx Bros. At The Circus"

With the biggest show on earth as their playground, the "Marx Bros. at the Circus," opening next at the Belle Theatre. The biggest show is a three-ringed streamlined circus, with menagerie and midway, which was built especially as the setting for the latest crackpot antics of the Max Marxians—Groucho, Harpo and Chico.

Climaxing the new Marx comedy is the longest aerial acrobatic act in the world. Although ordinarily the act would run for fifteen minutes, it continued for three weeks, six days weekly and eight hours daily, before it reached its conclusion.

It is a most unorthodox act. Instead of having professional aerialists, the Marxes and their supporting cast are the daring young men of the flying trapeze. High in the shrouds of the big top, an angered gorilla chases the villainous circus manager. The circus manager chases Margaret Dumont, and Groucho, Harpo and Chico chase the gorilla.

"Marx Bros. at the Circus" is an hilarious musical comedy that takes the audience behind the scenes of a streamlined circus while the Marxes run rampant. Harpo and Chico are circus employes and friends of Kenny Baker, part-owner, about to lose his share of the big show through the connivance of Nat Pendleton, the Strong Man; Eve Arden, the Upside-Down Girl, and Jerry Marenghi the Midget. They call in Groucho, their lawyer friend, who finally saves the circus by staging it as a society function on the front lawn of Mrs. Dukesbury, played by Margaret Dumont.

Florence Rice furnishes the romantic motif interspersed between the Marxamania, and others in the cast include Frits Feld, James Burke, Jerry Maranghi and Barnett Parker. Augmenting the cast are several of the country's biggest circus acts, including the Escalante and Pena families, and several hundred trained animals.

The picture also boasts several lavish musical numbers, with dances staged by the noted Bobby Connolly, and new songs written by E. Y. Harburg and Harold Arlen. Groucho Marx bursts into song with "Lydia the Tattoed Lady"; Kenny Baker sings "Two Blind Loves" and "Step Up and Take a Bow"; and Harpo Marx and a chorus do the unusual "Svengali Routine."

"The Women"

Norma Shearer, Joan Crawford and Rosalind Russell are featured in the funny romantic, comedy "The Women," now at the Belle Theatre.

GIVEN FIFTEEN DAYS

Tweed, Nov. 10—Donald J. Murdock, a transient, was sentenced to fifteen days in jail Thursday on a trespassing charge, and Magistrate J. L. Lloyd told him he was lucky to be alive. Murdock was found guilty of trespassing on the C.P.R.

"He was wedged between the baggage car and one of the passenger cars," testified the conductor of the fast train that passes through Tweed at two o'clock every morning. "A slight jar would have meant death."

PAPER IS CONFISCATED

Brussels, Nov. 10—(CP-Havas)—Belgian authorities confiscated last night's edition of Le euple (Socialist) because it suggested in a headline that the Munich attempt to assassinate Adolf Hitler might belong in the same category as the 1933 Reichstag fire, generally believed set by the Nazis to serve as a pretext for suppressing communists.

Netherlanders Call upon Water To Aid Them

In All Serious Crises of National Life Water Has Been Chief Aid—Flooding Already Started for Threatened Invasion of Country by Germany

DESTROY FERTILITY

Water Defence Plans Very Serious Even if No Attack Occurs as Netherlanders Run Risk of Destroying Fertility of Fields by Salt

Brussels, Nov. 11 (AP)—The German-Belgian frontier from Aachen to Eupen was reported closed today for the first time since the war began. Belgians who have gone daily to work in Germany found they were unable to enter.

(Aachen and Eupen are about ten miles apart and lie near the junction of the frontiers of Belgium, the Netherlands and Germany.)

Amsterdam, Nov. 11 (CP-Havas)—As in all serious crises of their national life, the Netherlands again have called upon water to aid them.

The flooding which already has been started and can be greatly extended very quickly is the most characteristic element of the defence system which will be used in case the threatened German invasion takes place.

The situation was studied painstakingly before it was decided to use the water defence plan, the results of which can be very serious even if no attack occurs.

Readmitting sea water to the land which they reclaimed, the Netherlands run the risk of destroying the fertility of their fields by salt. That is why the first flooding was in itself a sign of the urgency of the danger by which this country felt itself threatened.

213 Feet Below Sea Level.

Nearly two-thirds of the Netherlands is land below sea level which was protected by dikes, pumped dry, and then carefully prepared for cultivation. Full use of the water defences would affect 400 years of work and an enormous investment.

Balloons at sea! Balloons are a valuable addition to the equipment of a destroyer. When required, the observation balloon of a destroyer is towed, and the observer from his advantageous and elevated position can discern submerged submarines which could not be seen from the deck of the vessel, and he can best judge when a depth charge should be released. The balloon used in this way is superior to an airplane. Balloon observers are all experienced balloonists, for when the cable breaks, the balloon is then free and must be piloted by the crew who know how to use ballast and valve gas, thus keeping the balloon aloft until a suitable landing can be made.

War Expenditure In Canada for October Is $9,300,829

Ottawa, Nov. 11 (CP)—Canada's special war expenditures in October are listed at $9,300,829, in a report issued last night by the office of the Comptroller of the Treasury.

It was the first official government figure on war costs to be made public. There was no September figure given and as returns are sometimes delayed in reaching the treasury, it is possible that part of the total might have been expended in September.

WARTIME BRITAIN PAYS TRIBUTE TO GLORIOUS DEAD

No Parade to Whitehall and No Official Silence on 21st. Anniversary

WREATHS DEPOSITED

First Wreath to be Laid on Cenotaph Deposited by Equerry for King

London, Nov. 11 (C.P. Cable)—In a world of sandbags, boarded windows, gas masks and tin helmets, wartime Britain today unofficially paid tribute to the men who died two decades ago in the war to end war.

There was no parade in Whitehall and no official silence on this 21st. anniversary, but from early morning a steady stream of wreath bearers went to the Cenotaph.

Hon. Vincent Massey, the high commisioner, placed a wreath of poppies for Canada. Representatives of the other Dominions similarly brought wreaths.

Four Are Injured Near Campbellford

Campbellford, Ont, Nov. 11 — (CP) — Rev. and Mrs. William Stocks of Hastings and Mrs. Stocks parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Wotley, suffered only bruises and a shaking-up last night when their automobile collided with a farm wagon on Highway No. 30 near Campbellford's outskirts during a rainstorm.

The horses ran away and the driver, Charles Milne, was thrown from the wagon, suggering back injuries and bruises. The team crashed into a power line pole and one horse was so badly injured it had to be shot.

WIDE POWERS DETAILED TO SWISS GENERAL

Henri Guisan Has Right to Call All Able-Bodied Men at Any Time

POWER IS USED

Berne, Nov. 11 (AP)—The Swiss government today empowered General Henri Guisan to call all able-bodied men to the colors whenever he decides the defence of the nation requires it.

The Federal Council action followed yesterday's order, recommended by Guisan, calling an unstated number of troops to duty.

Henceforth, Guisan has the right to call up troops himself without first obtaining governmental permission. Heretofore, such power has been granted to a commander only when Switzerland was at war.

Officials said the move was "purely precautionary", although foreign observers noted it paralleled defensive measures by Belgium and the Netherlands at the other end of the western front between Germany and France.

Switzerland has been in a state of mobilization since Aug. 28, but unspecified number of soldiers had been released after that date.

EX-KAISER TO BE REMOVED FROM DOORN TO THE HAGUE

The Hague, Nov. 11 (CP-Havas)—Former Kaiser Wilhelm will be removed from Doorn, where he has been in exile since the end of the first Great War, to The Hague when the Doorn region is inundated as a defence measure, it was indicated here today. The neighboring village of Zeist already has been evacuated.

The entire region will be flooded soon, though residences built on the heights will not be affected Baarn, Princess Juliana's country seat, is among the villages to be abandoned.

Story of How Empire's Unknown Soldier Selected Told for First Time

London, Nov. 11 (CP)—The story of how the body of the empire's unknown warrior was selected for burial in Westminster Abbey was given for the first time today in a letter to the Daily Telegraph by Brig.-Gen. L. J. Wyatt, commander of the British troops in France in 1920.

Receiving notification the King had approved a suggestion for burial of the unknown warrior in the Abbey, Gen. Wyatt issued instructions "that the body of a British soldier, which it would be possible to identify, should be brought from each of the four battle areas — Aisne, Somme, Arras and Ypres—on the night of Nov. 7. They were to be placed in the Chapel of Saint Paul.

"The party bringing in each body was to return at once so there would be no chance of their knowing on which the choice fell.

"The four bodies lay on stretchers, each covered by a Union Jack, in front of the altar was the shell of a coffin which had been sent from England to receive the remains. I selected one, placed it in the shell, screwed down the lid. The other bodies were removed and reburied in a military cemetery outside my headquarters at Saint Paul.

"I had no idea even of the area from which the body I selected had come, no one else can know it."

Gen. Wyatt described the journey of the body homeward, how it went under escort to Boulogne where it was placed in a plain oak coffin with wrought iron bands.

A company of French infantry provided a guard at Boulogne Castle. They were relieved by a guard of United Kingdom and Dominion troops who accompanied the casket home on H.M.S. Verdun.

Gen. Wyatt also disclosed that six barrels of earth from the Ypres salient were put on board to spread in the Abbey tomb in which the body was to be placed.

TRANSPORTATION CONTROLLER TO BE NAMED BY GOV'T

Officer to Direct Land and Sea Transportation of Troops

TO AVOID CONFUSION

Will Co-operate With Sir Edward Beatty to Eliminate Duplication of Effort

Ottawa, Nov 11—(CP) — The Government has authorized the appointment of a transport controller with wide powers to direct all land and sea transportation of troops, naval forces, materials and supplies to the United Kingdom, Empire and Allied countries.

The authorization is contained in an order-in-council appearing today in the Canada Gazette.

The controller is to be appointed by Transport Minister Howe and will handle all applications for movement of troops, naval forces, materials and supplies made on behalf of the Canadian, British or French Governments or any other government, agencies of such governments or private parties. When such applications are made, the controller will determine the preference or priority of such movements "according to the necessity of the case."

The order-in-council said: "All transportation companies, agencies, organizations and associations and all owners or charterers of British ships registered in Canada in which cargo space may be required shall, in such matters, act upon and in accordance with the orders issued by the said transport controller, acting on behalf of the Minister of Transport.

BLAST DESIGNED FOR DER FUEHRER SAYS RUDOLF HESS

"Dastardly Plot Has Awakened Passion of German People and Taught it to Hate" Says Spokesman

HITLER PRESENT

Fuehrer Pays Tribute to "Martyrs" and Lays Wreath on Caskets of Seven Victims

Munich, Nov. 11—(AP)— Adolf Hitler placed a wreath today on the caskets of seven persons killed in a bombing of which he was the intended victim.

While cannons boomed a salute, the Fuehrer paid his respects to the "martyrs" of the explosion which last Wednesday wrecked the famous Buergerbrau Beer Hall where veteran Nazis were celebrating the anniversary of the 1923 putsch.

Flags flew at half mast throughout Germany and the nation observed a "day of sorrow" as a state funeral was held for the victims before the Field Marshal's Hall in Munich.

Rudolf Hess, Deputy Leader of the Nazi party who delivered the eulogy, declared the bombing was "one of the most dastardly plots in history" and had "awakened the passion of the German people and taught it to hate."

Designed for Fuehrer

The blast, Hess admitted, "was destined for the Fuehrer."

"Providence has always been on the Fuehrer's side," he said. "It has always frustrated the designs of his enemies."

Pope Pius Appeals for Solution of Conflict Between Capital, Labor

Vatican City, Nov. 11 (AP)—Pope Pius, in a special encyclical, today appealed for application of the "Christian spirit" toward solution of the conflict of capital and labor in the United States.

The encyclical was addressed to Bishops of the United States on the 150th anniversary of the founding of the Catholic hierarchy in that country.

The Pontiff said solution of the social question would "bring great honor to the American people".

The epistle called attention to modern "evils" which arose from "ignorance of God, disregard for his commandments or their imperfect observance."

These evils, the Pontiff declared, are "exaggerated egoism, thirst for pleasure, immodesty in address, avarice for power, hungering after riches, neglect of the poor, breaking down of family life, levity in regard to marriage, birth control and neglect of duty to one's country."

Christian Religion Ignored.

Pope Pius declared he was grieved that in so many schools in the United States the "Christian religion is ignored and human knowledge confined within the cramped limits of rationalism and naturalism."

This could not continue without dread consequences, he added.

The Pontiff urged that salaries of working men be sufficient to maintain them and their families, and that something be done to provide greater employment.

The principles of Christian ethics must be generously reduced to practice, the Pope said, if the conflict between capital and labor, between rich and poor, is to be solved in justice and charity.

Equal Opportunity.

Poverty accepted in true Christian spirit is holy and honorable, he said, and wealth carries with it heavy responsibilities because of its obligations to the poor.

"May it be brought about that each and every able-bodied man may receive equal opportunity for work

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

Ever since Hitler's mechanized forces completed conquest of Poland the same big question mark has hung over the war situation. Today it is still there but a Hitler's plans for defeating bit closer to Holland. The question mark relates to Htler's plans for defeating his enemies in the west.

Will he still further affront the moral sense of the world by making another small peaceful nation a pawn in his desperate gamble for power? Border incidents, a massing of forces on the Dutch frontier and evident alarm in Holland point to one particular answer to the question.

On the other hand he may be merely seeking concessions which he hopes Holland will make in order to avoid devastation of its territory, perhaps a naval and air base at the mouth of the Rhine.

Holland's traditional policy has been one of strict aloofness from the affairs of its bigger neighbors.

That policy saved it from serious trouble in the First Great War. No country guarantees Holland's neutrality nor its territorial integrity but there is little doubt Great Britain and perhaps France would come to its aid on request in case of a German invasion.

No one knows what Belgium would do in that case. Without Belgian co-operation it is doubtful if Great Britain or France could move their armies into Holland in time to stop the attainment of German objectives. This is one of the phases of the war in which bluff and secrecy may still play a part.

Charge Finns Intensify "Their Irreconcilability" In Moscow Negotiations

Also Charge Finns Have Increased Their Forces on Russian Border Thus Demonstrating Uncompromising Attitude

PRESS CRITICIZED

Tass Says Stalin Has Not Rejected Finland's Latest Concessions Because He Could Not Reject That Which Did Not Exist

Moscow, Nov. 11 (AP)—Charges that the Finns have intensified 'their irreconcilability' in the Moscow negotiations and also have increased their forces on Russia's border, 'thus demonstrating their uncompromising attitude', were made today by Tass, the official Soviet news agency.

The statement on the Kremlin parleys arising from Russian demands for territorial and strategic concessions declared the Finns had failed to meet the minimum Russian terms. It said:

"The English newspaper Daily Express published an exchange telegraph report from Helsingfors to the effect that 'Stalin again rejected Finland's latest concessions'.

"Tass is authorized to declare that the report of the Daily Express does not correspond with the facts. No 'latest concessions' have been made by the Finns, in view of which Stalin could not reject that which does not exist at all.

"According to the information of Tass the Finns not only do not meet the minimum proposals of the Soviet Union but on the contrary intensify their irreconcilability.

"Until recently the Finns had on the Karelian Isthmus near the Russian border only two or three army divisions on the front against Leningrad, while now they have increased the number of divisions overhanging Leningrad to seven, thus demonstrating their uncompromising attitude."

R. A. F. CONTINUALLY EXTENDING KNOWLEDGE

Reconnaissance Flights Are Carried Out Over Southwest Germany

ONE PLANE LOST

London, Nov. 11 (CP)—The Royal Air Force continually is extending its knowledge of Germany. The Air Ministry announced Royal Air Force planes successfully carried out reconnaissance flights over southwest Germany last night. This was the first public intimation of reconnaissance in that section.

The communique said that among cities over which the planes flew were Stuttgart, Manheim and Nuremberg. One plane failed to return.

This was the twenty-second reconnaissance flight, but the longest. The flights have brought valuable information and photographs.

Deny Legation Warned Canadians to Leave

Ottawa, Nov. 11 (CP)—Denial of a Canadian Press Cable from Brussels that the Canadian legation had warned all Canadian residents in Belgium to be prepared to leave the country by the weekend, was issued today from the Department of External Affairs here.

When the Brussels despatch came to the attention of the Department a cable was sent to the Canadian legation in Brussels and a reply was received that the despatch was without foundation and that "no advice of any sort has been given by the legation to Canadians in Belgium."

The Canadian Press cable which reported that the Canadian legation had warned Canadians to be prepared to leave Belgium was based on a report carried from Brussels by the Exchange Telegraph Agency.

CAPITAL PAYS TRIBUTE TO GREAT WAR FALLEN

Lord Tweedsmuir, Prime Minister King, Representatives, Place Wreaths

VETERANS ATTEND

Ottawa, Nov. 11 (CP)—Headed by the Governor General and Lady Tweedsmuir and in the presence of the overseas and garrison troops of the Ottawa district, thousands of Ottawa citizens stood on Parliament Hill today in solemn observance of Remembrance Day.

Undaunted by the fact that their sacrifices of 20-odd years ago had been in vain and that another war is raging hundreds of veterans of 1914-18 marched to the hill and stood with other hundreds of khaki-clad recruits who are prepared to make similar sacrifices.

Cenotaph Pure White Column

The temporary Cenotaph, a pure white column surmounted by a broken shaft, was again set up on the broad stairway leading to the main entrance of parliament building, beneath the Peace Tower.

Before it and strength to right and left over the spacious lawn stood the veterans and troops, surrounded by thousands of citizens.

A cold wind swept the hill but just before the ceremony the dark, low lying clouds rolled back to let a brilliant sun shine through.

At 10.45 a.m. E.S.T. their Excellencies arrived at the base of the Peace Tower and were met by Prime Minister Mackenzie King. His Excellency and members of the official party wore morning dress with service medals. All the government and diplomatic corps members were similarly clad.

Wreath Placed on Altar

Their Excellencies proceeded to the shrine in the Peace Tower, memorial to Canada's 60,000 who died in the last war, and placed a wreath on the altar which will contain the Golden Book to be inscribed with the names of those who made the supreme sacrifice.

Hepburn Calls Upon Ottawa To Probe Origin of Papers

Toronto, Nov. 11 (CP)—Anti-war pamphlets were in police hands today and Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario called upon the Federal government to investigate origin of the papers distributed in Toronto and other eastern cities last night.

Four persons were arrested in Toronto and three in Windsor for allegedly distributing the pamphlets which denounced the Chamberlain government and called upon the Canadian people to demand peace. They were charged under the Defence of Canada Regulations.

"In my opinion this is strictly a Federal matter and Ottawa should act quickly," Premier Hepburn said early today. "The Federal authorities can be assured that the Attorney-General's Department and the Provincial Police will do their part in helping to investigate this matter."

Communist Designation

The thousands of pamphlets distributed to homes in Toronto bore a Communist designation. Printed on them were the words, "Dominion Executive Committee, Communist Party of Canada, Tim Buck, General Secretary."

Section 39A of the Defence of Canada regulations prohibits circulating of statements intended to cause disaffection to the King or to interfere with ucess of the armed forces, to prejudice recruiting, safety of the State or efficient prosecution of the war.

LAKE VESSELS EMERGE AFTER FRIDAY'S STORM

50-M.P.H. Gale Drove Much of Lower Lake Shipping to Shelter

NONE LONG OVERDUE

Toronto, Nov. 11 (CP)—Gales and high winds that endangered shipping on the Great Lakes for 24 hours slowed down before noon today and vessels were able to move cautiously on their courses.

Two Canada Steamship Lines boats, the Westmount and the City of Windsor, still were aground in Lake Ontario, the former at Kingston and the latter at Morrisburg. Heavy seas were running, hampering the tugs trying to refloat them.

The Toronto lighthouse keeper estimated the velocity of the wind at 30 miles an hour at 10 a.m. It was 50 miles an hour at 4 p.m. yesterday.

A severe storm swept Lake Superior during the night, but shipping was not serious affected. Larger boats kept moving, but slowly.

On Lake Ontario and Lake Erie, scores of vessels which took shelter late yesterday and overnight emerged. A spokesman for Canada Steamship Lines said the company's vessels were moving a little behind schedule.

On land a couple of casualties were reported. A hayrick was blown on Aaron Dole, 51, at Caledonia, and he suffered a fractured ankle. Robert Hamilton, a public utilities lineman at Brantford, was blown from a pole at the height of the gale. He fell on a pile of rocks and suffered a possible fracture of the skull.

LEG FRACTURED WHEN BIKE HIT

Fifteen-year-old Clarence Cook, 34 Benjamin Street, sustained a fractured leg as the result of an accident on West Bridge Street when the bicycle he was riding was in collision with a motor car driven by Thos. Orr, 51 Cannifton Road. According to police reports young Cook mounted his bicycle from the north curb of the street near the Everett Street intersection and rode out into Bridge Street having failed to observe the west bound motor car driven by Mr. Orr. The bicycle collided with the right front fender and Cook was hurled to the pavement when he sustained the fracture. The lad was removed to the Belleville General Hospital, where Dr. J. J. Robertson reduced the fracture. The bike was also badly damaged, police stated as they added Mr. Orr had no chance to avoid the bicycle, that came out unexpectedly from the right curb.

C. N. R. Notables Present When Retired Engineers Receive Gold-Headed Canes

When the three veteran engineers were honored at the Engineer's Hall this week and presented with the conventional gold-headed canes as a token of the feelings of their contemporaries upon their retirement from the service of the Canadian National Railways, the trio included John Robinson, M. W. Kelly and H. A. (Dinny) Hogan all of this city. Many C.N.R. notables were present upon the auspices occasion that saw three of Belleville's veteran locomotive engineers honored upon their retirement after continued years of faithful service along the long steel lines.

Engineer John (Jack) Robinson is a Belleville boy being the son of the late Alderman A. Robinson and entered the service of the old Grand Trunk Railway on April 2nd, 1893 as a cleaner and was used as an emergency fireman on occasions until 1895, when he became a classed fireman. On June 20th, 1900 Jack Robinson realized his life's ambition when he became a classed engineer and for the first time controlled the throttle on a passenger service between Belleville and Brockville and later west to Toronto.

In the year 1925 Engineer Robinson was appointed to the position of Air Brake Instructor of the Central Regions of the Canadian National Railways, with territory extending from Portland, Me., to Port Arthur, Ont. This position he held for eight years, but due to railway depression this position was later abolished and Engineer Robinson returned to his post of engineer on the crack fast trains running between Belleville and Toronto only to reach the age of retirement on Nov. 30th, 1938. Mr. Robinson revealed 'the fact he never had a serious railway accident during his entire 45 years and seven months of railway experience.

As for H. A. Hogan, better known to all railroaders in the Central Region as "Dinny," he was forced to retire on Oct. 1st, 1938 owing to increased defective eyesight and joined the ranks of the retired railway gentlemen. It was on Jan. 8th, 1913, that "Dinny" Hogan made his first trip out of Belleville as a fireman on the old Grand Trunk and those were the days when the "arm-strong" stoker held preference. Mr. Hogan became a classed engineer on the Canadian National in 1918 and commenced running out of Belleville under the old station promotion rule, but after district promotion came "Dinny" was compelled to exercise his seniority as an engineer running out of Toronto, but later returned to the Belleville division. Engineer Hogan always took an active part in the labour activities of the C.N.R. being Recording Secretary and Local Chairman of the Grievance Committee of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers Lodge No. 66 for some years. He also retired in Belleville.

The biography of Mr. Kelly's railway experience was previously outlined, Mr. Kelly being one of the most valued and skilled railroadmen of his time.

During the testimonial banquet, that was tendered the three retiring engineers the evening was given to entertainment as well as honoring the special guests by the officers and members of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers Lodge No. 189. Thos. B. Skelly, general chairman of the B. of L. E., Ottawa and other out-of-town railway notables were present and spoke briefly. Chief Engineer Geo. Naylor and Secretary Wm. Fairbairn of Lodge No. 189 proposed toasts to the retiring members and C.N.R. officials. The recipients of the gold-headed canes all responded to their toasts in splendid phraseology of railway terms. The evening's program was in charge of Chairman Frank Parson, R. Muirhead, H. Leavitt, Sam Cherry, Geo. Naylor and Wm. Fairbairn.

During the program five boys from the Queen Victoria School band entertained the gathering, many of the lads' fathers being railway employees. The boys' names were Muirhead Dafoe, Cherry, Shaw and Williamson. One of the outstanding orations of the evening was given by eight-year-old Gordon Williamson, who responded to the toast to the boys' band in a very creditable manner. Charlie Morrell acted as accompanist during the community singing that saw lusty voices ring the rafters of the Engineer's Hall on Pine Street to bid farewell to three of Belleville's sons upon retirement from active railway service.

Thousand Parade at Picton To Honor Fallen Comrades

Hastings and Prince Edward County Regiment Takes Active Part

WREATHS LAID

Picton, Nov. 11. — Observance of Remembrance Day here this morning saw the largest crowd in many years present for the short but impressive service at the War Memorial. The service was preceded by a great parade in which more than a thousand took part. Veterans of the Great War were joined by members of the 1939 Canadian Active Service Force and a number of local organizations and officials. Headed by the Hastings and Prince Edward Regimental Band, the parade included eight hundred members of Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment under Lieut.-Col. Sherman Young, O.C. with their own bugle band; a large contingent of war veterans with berets and medals, members of the Canadian Legion, Girl Guides and Brownies, Boy Scouts and Wolf Cubs, members of town and county councils headed by Mayor N. McKibbon and Warden Roy Ketcheson, a number of county officials, ministers of the town, the cadets of Picton Collegiate and Vocational Institute, members of the Ladies' Auxiliary of Post 78 Canadian Legion, members of the I.O.D.E.

At the monument, many wreaths were deposited, that of the Ontario government being laid by Mrs. S. Nourse, whose husband, Major C. B. Nourse, D.C.M. and Mons Star, was one of the few originals of the Princess Patricias to return to Canada, but who was killed a year ago when his car hit a freight train. She has one son in the local regiment.

The service was in charge of Capt. the Rev. J. F. Reycraft and opened with hymn "O God Our Help in Ages Past", Psalm 46 read by Rev. H. B. Trantor, prayer by Rev. J. B. Creeggan, short address by Capt. Reycraft in which he paid tribute to those who fought in the Great War, comparing them to Abraham who had left that with which they were satisfied and happy to gain an ideal. "O Valiant Hearts" was sung. Two minutes' silence was followed by the Last Post by Bandmaster Lockyer and Reveille and the National Anthem.

All places of business were closed from 10 o'clock until noon. Members of the Legion were in charge of selling poppies and there was a generous response.

Banquet Is Held.

Heroism of the troops of 1914-18 and the ready response of others to carry on the task they started was recalled at the annual dinner of the Canadian Legion at the Parish Hall here last night. There was a capacity crowd of some two hundred veterans and their friends, and the dinner was served by the Ladies' Guild of St. Mary Magdalene Church.

Major General Constantine of Kingston and Very Rev. Dean Waterman of Hamilton were guest speakers, the former replying to the toast to the Canadian Active Service Forces proposed by Major Gordon Walmsley and Dean Waterman to the toast to Canada and the Empire proposed by Capt. the Rev. J. F. Reycraft. Lieut.-Col. Sherman Young, O.C. of Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, also replied to the toast to the C.A.S. Forces.

The toast to the Canadian Legion was proposed by John Guest, the president, and replied to by Lieut.-Col. T. C. D. Bedell of Bloomfield.

Community singing was led by M. V. Dow and Mrs. Gordon Bell of Cherry Valley and Mr. Dow gave solos. The Legion orchestra provided music during the evening.

Belleville Pauses in Tribute To Memory of 'Gallant Dead'

All Business Activity at Standstill During Two-Minute Silence

SERVICE AT CENOTAPH

Beneath sullen skies strangely reminiscent of that memorable day twenty-one years ago, Belleville today paid tribute to her gallant sons who paid the supreme sacrifice in the Great War of 1914-18. and to those who came back broken in body, to pick up the threads of civilization where they had been so abruptly severed.

The brilliant scarlet of the Poppy, blood-red symbol of those "who went west" for King and Country was everywhere apparent as representatives of veterans' organizations stood guard at street corner and intersection, selling the small flowers to an eagerly-buying, sympathetic public.

A few minutes before 11 o'clock members of the Imperial Veterans' Association, representatives of the 2nd. and 21st. Canadian Battalions, and a large number of civilian spectators, stood in silent tribute before the Memorial Cenotaph on Station Street.

Rev. A. B. Payne Conducts Service

A brief service was conducted by the Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne, vicar of St. Thomas Church, and wreaths were deposited by the representatives of the various military organizations. Two minutes' silence was observed, and a solemn hush fell over the gathering. Pedestrians on nearby streets paused in their stride to pay silent tribute to the dead, while in the distance the solemn tolling of the city hall bell denoted every ten-second period.

Downtown, busy shops and stores halted in their stride to pay tribute. Places of business, offices and factories halted as the hour of eleven drew near. On the market, busiest place in the city, rural and urban residents stood quietly as the sonorous notes of the bell tolled away seconds of Memory.

To Attend Special Sunday Service

Tomorrow, members of The Army and Navy Veterans in Canada, Belleville Branch, will observe Remembrance Day with a parade to the Cenotaph, where wreaths will be placed by war-veteran organizations, fraternal societies, the Province of Ontario and the City of Belleville. Civic, municipal, and other dignitaries have signified their intention of attending the brief service.

The Belleville Municipal Band will head the parade, which following the tributes at the Cenotaph will march to St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church for divine service. The Rev. W. J. Walker will address the veterans.

Mrs. Martha C. Moreau, 8 Victoria Avenue, war widow, who lost a husband and four sons in the Great War of 1914-18, will represent the Province of Ontario, and place a wreath on the Cenotaph.

Fine Musical Program Presented by Belleville Baptist Brotherhood

The Belleville Baptist Brotherhood presented their musical night Friday evening before a packed auditorium despite the disagreeable turn in the weather, proving once again that Belleville citizens appreciate the excellence of their local talent.

Mr. Jas. Bankier, popular tenor vocalist, sang two numbers: "His Majesty the King," and "The Fighting Temaraire" which were very appropriate, stirring as they did a patriotic sentiment.

Mr. Ed. Rupert, whose electric vibra-harp has often been heard over the air waves, contributed several pleasing numbers that included J. S. Stewart's "Golden Bells," a Negro spiritual, "Going Home" and by special request "The Old Rugged Cross." This beautiful instrument has spiritual lightness of loveliest serenity and a strange feeling of utter restfulness comes over the listener's spirit from its crystal clearness.

Two accomplished cornetists, young Ronnie Moorman and Mr. Jack Green, played that lively tune "Ida and Dot" in a manner that was wholly satisfying and later in the evening Mr. Green contributed a cornet solo, Frank Simon's intricate "Willow Echoes."

Lovers of the violin were well pleased with Mr. Gordon Brown's beautiful rendition of Fritz Kreisler's "The Old Refrain" and Lohengrin's "Farewell to Elsa" Master Jack Shaddock, a youngster with a sweet flute-like voice, sang "Who is Sylvia?' and "Sing a Song of Sixpence" and Mr. Arthur Wynne, baritone, sang, "Where'er You Walk."

Mr. Leo Riggs, whose masterly touch on the piano is always a delight to hear, was accompanist for the evening. Mr. Riggs also enthralled the appreciative audience with several pianoforte solos that included Bartlett's "The Grand Polka," Chopin's robust "Military Polonaise' and Chopin's "Minute Waltz.'

A musical recitation entitled "The Last Hymn" was very effectively given by Miss Anna Hogle, with Miss Katherine Hogle supplying musical background on the piano.

Through the courtesy of the Stewart-Warner-Alemite Corporation moving pictures of the historic royal tour across Canada, including the U.S. visit, were shown, and the hearts of the large audience thrilled as scene after scene revealed the smiling faces of the beloved rulers of the Empire.

Mr. Charles Franklin, President of the Baptist Brotherhood, capably performed the duties of chairman. The opening prayer was offered by the minister, the Rev. C. T. Olmstead. The enjoyable program of entertainment was brought to a close by the singing of the National Anthem.

Czech Entertainers Please Crowds at Stirling Social Events

Stirling, Nov. 11.—Under the auspices of St. Francis Church, Frankford, and St. James Church, Stirling, the annual chicken dinner, bazaar and dance held in the Stirling Community Hall was attended by nearly a thousand people during its two day run. Featured on the programs of both evenings were choral and orchestral offerings by a group of talented artists from the Bata Co. of Frankford, Ont.

Fine Musicians Applauded.

Coming from the land of fine music, a large group of Czecho-Slovakian choristers under the capable leadership of Wallace Pospishil, native of Czecho-Slovakia and for several years member of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra thrilled the large audience with their interpretations of native folk songs. Many capable musicians have been discovered among those who recently arrived from central Europe to make their home in Frankford and Mr. Pospishil has visions of successful choirs and string orchestras that will bring fame to the district in the near future. With nine years' experience in symphony orchestras in this country, the leader of the group intends to devote much time to the building of musical organizations here. Musical appreciation reached a new high in Stirling as this splendid choir gave several groups of songs in their native tongue in faultless harmony and well balanced tone. Long and loud were the ovations as they climaxed a splendid program with the singing of their own National Anthem and God Save the King.

The excellent dinner served by the ladies of the two churches was in keeping with the reputation already established in former years.

Bazaar and Dance on Thursday.

On the second evening of the event the four walls of the Community Hall were lined with bingo games, wheels of fortune and many other provisions for the entertainment of the large crowd in attendance. A second group of Czech musicians were present and offered a brief and delightful group of concert numbers. Displaying remarkable instrumental ability each member of the group studies sufficiently to know the meaning of each tone picture in the interpretation. The theme song of the famous native operetta 'Murina' was given in faultless fashion and from the strings of the instruments music lovers were given a tone picture of the lover's pilgrimage to St. Antonia, a festival that has gained world renown. The conductor later described this annual event from which the song came and a charming young lady of the orchestra proudly exhibited a tiny token of St. Antonia which she had brought with her from the spot where the love songs had their birth. The entire program was superb in every quality. The artists taking part were Mrs. Kravacek (piano), Joseph Mezihorak (accordion), Louis Zurek and Toni Viklick (violin), and Wallace Pospishil (cello).

Prize Winners in Draw.

Rev. Father LeSage assisted by William McGee, Arthur Duncan and Frank McGrath conducted the grand draw and the prize winners were as follows: First prize of $25.00, Miss M. Williams, Marysville, Ont.; second prize, occasional chair, Mr. J. Evans, Sturgeon Falls; third prize, Aladdin Lamp, Mrs. Archie Meeks, Maribank; fourth prize, fancy quilt, Mrs. West, Stirling; fifth prize, fancy bedspread, Miss Agnes Genereaux, Stirling.

Following the grand draw, dancing was enjoyed with music by Curly Gibson's orchestra.

Returning From India.

Word has been received by Mrs. Charles McC. Potts that her son, Edward Potts, well known throughout the Stirling district who has been engaged for some time in business activity in India is somewhere on the high seas homeward bound for a well earned vacation. Mr. Potts is scheduled to arrive in New York some time this month. He will remain in America until April.

Choir Organized.

At the close of the regular choir rehearsal at St. Paul's United Church on Wednesday evening, Rev. W. J. Scott presided over the reorganization meeting and the election of officers. During the evening constructive comments and discussions regarding future musical activities of the organization were dealt with. The following officers were elected: Choir leader and organist, Mr. G. L. Clute; president, Mrs. C. Macklin; vice-president, Mr. R. A. Patterson; secretary, Mrs. Nora Wescott ;treasurer, Mrs. Fred Jackson; social and program committee, Miss Doris Cooper, Miss Gertrude Poynter, Mr. Norman Rosebush; lookout committee, G. L. Clute, R. A. Patterson, Marietta McKee and Don Scott; mistresses of vestments, Mrs. P. Bronson, Miss Mildred White; Mr. Clute and executive to act as music supply committee. The first social event of the season will be a choir party held late this month.

St. Paul's Women's Association.

Over sixty ladies, members, officers and friends of St. Paul's W.A. were present at the home of Mrs. C. P. Linn for the regular monthly meeting of the organization. Mrs. P. N. McKee, president, was in charge of the business portion of the meeting. Mrs. Nora Wescott presented the secretary's report and read the communications and also gave the treasurer's report prepared by Mrs. R. B. Duffin, treasurer. Mrs. A. E. Good and Mrs. C. P. Linn reported twelve calls made by the visiting committee during the month. Mrs. Pitman and Mrs. A. Gordonier were appointed as visiting committee for the next month. Mrs. J. B. Thompson and Mrs. V. Richardson were appointed auditors. It was decided that the election of officers for the next year would be conducted with open nominations and vote by ballot listed. Plans of the future, discussed by the ladies include provisions for assisting in entertaining Belleville and Quinte district Y.P.U. convention to be held this year in Stirling and also plans for a potluck supper.

Fine Program.

The remaining portion of the program was directed by Mrs. Geo. Pollard, convener of the program committee, with the use of a consecration hymn, the Scripture lesson and prayer by Mrs. Pollard. The speaker of the day was introduced. Speaking on the subject "The Value of Spare Moments", Mrs. V. Richardson in her excellent address, referred to the use of spare time in the lives of all great leaders. Long hours of study contributed largely to the advance of many world figures. The speaker closed her brilliant address with the poem "Life Is a Problem".

Two excellent musical numbers added interest to the afternoon's program, Mrs. A. Andrews offering a vocal solo which was well given and Mrs. Mosier and Mrs. Clapper combining their talent in the rendition of a vocal duet. This part of the meeting climaxed with the singing of the National Anthem and the benediction. During the social period Mrs. R. A. Patterson directed a novel "quiz" contest with the following ladies taking part, Mesdames C. Macklin, E. Luery, E. Bailey, A. E. Good. Dainty luncheon was served at the close of the meeting and the thanks of the organization to Mrs. Linn, hostess, and to the program committee were briefly expressed by Mrs. C. Wright.

The committee in charge included Mrs. G. Pollard, convener; Mrs. R. B. Duffin, Mrs. R. A. Patterson, Mrs. Mosier, Mrs. S. Williams, Mrs. S. Hatton and Mrs. D. A. Burkitt.

Marmora H. S. Changes Afternoon Hours for Classes

Marmora, Nov. 11.—At the United Church parsonage, Madoc, by Rev. Alfred Poulter at 11:30 a.m. Thursday, Nov. 2, Mrs. Cynthia Sopha of Marmora to Mr. George W. Henderson of Foxboro. Mrs. Poulter and Mrs. L. Ashley were witnesses. After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Henderson left on a motor trip to Ottawa, Hull, Kingston and other points in Eastern Ontario. They will reside in Marmora.

A proclamation has been issued declaring the two hours from 10 a.m. until 12 noon on Remembrance Day a public holiday here. All stores and other business places will be closed during that time. A memorial service will be held under the auspices of Marmora Branch of the Canadian Legion at 10.45 a.m. Remembrance Day is a statutory holiday but owing to the day being Saturday the stores will close for only the two hours.

At a meeting of Marmora High School Board on Monday evening it was decided to change the noon period from one and half hours to one hour and have the school close at 3.30 p.m. instead of four o'clock. The plan was recommended by Inspector Rendall who stated it has been in operation in many of the larger centres for some years and has proved very satisfactory. It has been found that pupils who take their lunch find the noon hour long and misconduct around the school is more liable during the last half hour than at any other period. It is understood that a number of other schools in the district are also adopting the new schedule.

The women of Deloro have organized a Red Cross Circle for national service with very encouraging results. Meetings are held every other Wednesday afternoon in the Deloro hall. These meetings are of a combined business and social character and are always well attended, indicating the interest which is being taken by the women. Tea is served for which a moderate charge is made, this providing some funds which are so necessary for the work undertaken. During October 26 pairs of sox, 6 sweaters, 10 suits of men's pyjamas and 3 children's pyjamas were completed and plans are already under way for a much more extensive program. The next meeting will be held on Wednesday afternoon, Nov. 15, at 3 p.m. at which all Deloro ladies and those resident in the vicinity will be welcome.

Mr. James Bird who is teaching at New Carlow spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Orville Leonard.

Mrs. Ward of Stirling visited her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. E. Barry a few days this week.

Mr. James Nobes who recently moved to Campbellford went to Toronto last week for medical treatment and will be a patient at Christie Street Hospital for about six weeks. Mrs. Nobes accompanied him to the city, returning to her home in Campbellford on Saturday.

Mr. Ray Jones has sold his barbering business at Wellington to Mr. Bernard Burley. On Tuesday of last week Mr. and Mrs. Jones left for Toronto where they expect to reside. Mr. Jones is a brother of Messrs. Clifford and Murvis Jones of town and formerly resided here.

A meeting of the women of Marmora and vicinity will be held in the library on Friday afternoon at three o'clock for the purpose of explaining the object of the registration of Canadian women for war work. Mrs. Birdsall of Birdsall and Mrs. Fowlds of Hastings will be the speakers. All women are invited to attend.

The regular monthly meeting of Marmora village council was held on Monday evening with Reeve Linn and Councillors Warren and Neal in attendance. Only routine business was transacted. The next regular meeting will be held on Wednesday, Nov. 15, and an adjourned special meeting will be held in December to wind up the year's business.

Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Haache are spending a few days visiting in Toronto and other Western Ontario points.

A miscellaneous shower was tendered Mr. and Mrs. Glen McCall in the White Hall on Wednesday evening. The recent bride and groom received many lovely and useful gifts. The evening was spent in dancing to music supplied by Harold Auger and Charles Campion. At midnight a tasty lunch was served.

A badminton tournament and social evening was held in the town hall on Wednesday evening with a good attendance. Prizes were given and a lovely lunch was served by the ladies during the evening.

Miss Ida Gillen has returned home after visiting relatives in Pennsylvania.

A meeting of the Holy Name Society was held in the Separate School on Tuesday evening with a fair attendance. C. Nicholson, president, was in the chair. After a short business session, plans were made for work in connection with the bazaar to be held next week. Rev. H. J. Farrell gave a very interesting description of his recent visit to Ireland. Euchre was enjoyed after which refreshments were served and the gathering broke up.

CANADIAN MAYORS I SSUE PROCLAMATION

Mayor Stanley Lewis, of Ottawa, president of the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities, signs the proclamation which will be issued by mayors in cities and towns across Canada on Remembrance Day under the auspices of the federation. The proclamation calls all citizens to honor the men who died in 1914-18 by putting national interest before personal security and personal profit.

On Wednesday evening a miscellaneous shower was held in Frankford community hall in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Mervin Patrick. Many useful and beautiful gifts were received by the young couple. The evening was spent in dancing. Miss Una Smith read the following address:

Dear Mervin: We, your friends and neighbors have gathered here this evening to show our respect to you and the partner you have chosen for life. Once again you have proven your ability and this time in your choice of a helpmate. Although to many of us your wife is a stranger, she comes among us with the high esteem of her former locality. The home is the foundation of the nation and as our nation is being tested for its strength at the present time so too is our home. We feel sure that your's will be a home that not only yourselves but your friends will be proud of.

We are glad to welcome you, June into our community and we feel sure that you will be one of us from now on as your husband has been May you always remember that:

A home is not a building
Of four walls strong and grand,
But oft the humble dwelling
Is the back-bone of the land.

May the stone in the home that you build
Be made of character strong,
Joined together with mortar of lasting love,
And smiles helped along with a song.

May the sun ever shine on the inside,
And the light in the window at night,
Always beckon you home from your labor
To a haven that is ever bright.

The tears and smiles may mingle,
And the joys and sorrows flow.
In this home which you are building,
Where strong winds need not blow.

And so we wish you to accept these gifts and we hope you will be able to make use of them in this happy home. Signed on behalf of your friends and neighbors — Roy Lockwood.

Mrs. Geo. Bates of Belleville is spending some time with her nephew, Mr. Dan Frost and is visiting other friends in the locality.

R.C.C. Training
—the open door to a job!

THE value of a school's training is not measured by its promises, but by the number of its graduates who are EMPLOYED.

● A survey, conducted in October 1939, shows that of 374 R.C.C. graduates who availed themselves of our Employment Placement Free Service, 88% or 329, found early employment.
299 graduates entered Radio and Communication Services,
30 hold other positions,
28 graduated only recently and are now in process of being placed.
17 only, or less than 5%, are known to be not yet working.

● Radio College of Canada graduates have been employed by: Royal Can. Air Force, Royal Can. Navy, R.C.M.P., Dept. of Transport, Royal Can. Corps of Signals, Trans-Can. Airways, Ont. Airways, Dom. Skyways, Ont. Forestry Dept., Pan-Am. Airways, Hudson's Bay Co., Marconi Co. (Can., Eng. and U.S.A.), Philco, Rogers Majestic, RCA Victor, Can. Gen. Elec., Stromberg-Carlson Co., Bell Telephone, Westinghouse, and many others throughout Canada and the Empire.

● This record is outstanding proof that R.C.C. training in Applied Radio and Wireless Operating is practical, and is recognized by Canada's most important employers of wireless-trained men.

A REDEDICATION

Throughout the Empire Remembrance Day was observed with solemn and simple rites.

Today the world realizes that those who died in the Great War gave themselves to the cause of liberty and of defence of their loved ones. Though this was felt all through the years since that first November 11th., in the year 1918, it comes with keenest emotion as men and women, young men and girls of today appreciate that again the time of service has come, as war again rages.

With solemn thoughts and minds men and women take survey of themselves and rededicate themselves to the task which must be finished to preserve liberty against the forces of evil which are in this day represented by Nazism or Hitlerism.

MASTERING U-BOAT MENACE

Germany is losing between two and four submarines a week through the British and French anti-U-boat campaign is the conservative estimate placed by Mr. Winston Churchill, who admits that Germany may be able to produce two per week. But there is not only the gradually diminishing number of submarines in the German fleet but the loss of trained submarine crews. The personnel is the all-in-all in the final count. Britain has lost one submarine, the Oxley, through an accidental explosion, none has been sunk by the Germans.

Mr. Churchill put the naval situation thus—the German claims as to sinking or damaging numbers of warships are not true and he could fight and defeat the entire German navy with the British ships which the German authorities have claimed were sunk or damaged and which were not damaged or sunk.

The First Lord of the Admiralty also showed by figures that German surface raiders have sunk only two ships with an aggregate tonnage of 10,000 as compared with 212,000 tons sunk by German submarines. The surface raiders have been at large a long time without "appreciable damage or inconvenience to our trade."

News which must hurt the Nazis greatly is the announcement that 10,000,000 tons of shipping was landed in England in the first eight weeks of the war at a loss of less than 250,000 tons.

In the sea which has been the only theatre of full scale war, the Royal Navy has suffered a greater loss of life than all the other forces of Britain or France, on sea, land and in the air combined. That would indicate how much more active sea operations have been and how little loss has been sustained in the western front and in the air.

German U-boats were at their maximum when Germany began the war, now they are fewer and cannot hope to diminish the British navy and the merchant marine so as to cripple it.

"We are gaining a definite mastery over the U-boat attack" is the last word of the British Admiralty First Lord. "We shall suffer and we shall suffer continually, but by perseverence and by taking measures on the largest scale, I feel no doubt that in the end we shall break their hearts."

THOUGHTFUL OF PETS AND ZOO ANIMALS

Britain and France, though they have endless matters to prepare for in their defence have not forgotten to be sympathetic. The people of these lands, as represented by their governments and other authorities, have remembered the dogs and cats, and the animals in the zoos. Poisonous snakes which if released by possible bombing might cause injury and would certainly rouse fears have been put to a peaceful sleep but all the rest of the animals have been removed to places of protection and safety in the country. For cats and dogs provision has also been made by the people.

It is a sign of a civilization which cannot die that men and women who are threatened by a foe do not forget those forms of animal life which they have protected in days of peace.

In London when the war broke out there were estimated to be 40,000 working horses, 18,000 pigs, 9,000 sheep, 6,000 head of cattle and 400,000 dogs and 1,500,000 cats

OPPOSITION TO NAZI RULE

It is said that Germany is permitting some uprisings and demonstrations in seized territory in order to learn the identity of those who are guided by the spirit of opposition to the German rule, and that the Gestapo police follow up clues which are discovered.

But mass demonstrations give the Gestapo too much to do. They can have a mass clue or a clue of thousands upon thousands. If the Nazis were not used to bowing the knee to tyrany and aping the Nazi chiefs, they would realize that most of the millions whom Germany incorporated into the Reich in the seized nations in the past year and a half are opposed to Germany. They should rather suspect those who are friendly to Germany in these states, and who ape Hitler as his aping subordinates do. Austrians, Czechs or Poles who would not be loyal to their seized fatherlands surely would hardly be trusted for long by the Nazis.

Nothing can convince the peoples that German Nazism is anything else but tyranny. In fact they hope that the day of trial and tribulation will soon pass and that these enslaved states will be liberated from their oppressor.

DISTURBING SOUNDS

Twenty noises which annoy most guests in hotels in New York are listed as follows by the hotel association of that city:—Automobile horns, fire engines, signal devices on automobiles, motor cycles, buses, street cars, loading or unloading of any vehicle and the opening or destruction of bales, boxes, crates, sudden application of brakes, use of overloaded vehicles, police radio cars, radios in taxis, other radios, phonographs and amusement instruments, altercations between cab drivers, motor cycles, loose manhole covers, peddlers, hawkers and vendors, exhaust from steam engines, stationary engines or motor vehicles without mufflers, racing motors, animals or birds, erection, demolition or repair of buildings, loud speakers or other instruments to attract attention to a performance, sale or display, mechanical loud speakers for advertising, steam whistles.

These were the greatest of noises, but along comes a list of less frequent sounds from Gotham:—Soapbox orators, organ grinders, doormen whistling to cab-drivers, roller skating, stray cats, handtrucks and public utility night work.

A city like New York might be expected to have a steady low rumble or undertone of sounds of all kinds mixed up, something which a smaller city would not have. Some of the noises in small cities naturally are marked rather by their sharp nature than by the roar of a great city.

But the little city has sounds enough, late youths going home singing or humming, the pitter patter of feet on the concrete walks, the starting up of cars after stopping for stop signs, and so on.

LATE SIR CHARLES LINDSAY

The career of the late Sir Charles Lindsay, blind philanthropist, and former head of a large business concern, is one which may be held up before all people. Losing his sight at nineteen, he was not baffled, but went on with his studies at the Perkins Institute for the Blind at Boston and then entered into business as a piano tuner. From that he built up a major enterprise. When he met with success he did not forget the blind and his philanthropy manifested itself. He took interest in underprivileged youth and crippled children. So fine an example of personal courage, social endeavor and philanthropy did not go unrewarded, for the late King George Fifth honored him with knighthood in 1935. It was a worthy bestowal of honor on a worthy man.

THEY STILL SERVE

On no Canadians does the fact that very many cannot go to the front today weigh with greater weight than on the veterans. Those men who served in the years of the first world war are many of them unable to go overseas this time, on account of age or infirmity, though many others have enlisted. These men who cannot go form one of the strongest supports of the home front with many opportunities of service. Their knowledge of war and their experience make them invaluable assets to the defence of Canada and the maintenance of the proper morale and spirit of the people.

A man's name is not like a mantle which merely hangs about him, and which one perchance may safely twitch and pull, but a perfectly fitting garment, which, like the skin, has grown over him, at which one cannot rake and scrape without injuring the man himself.—Goethe.

Music is the mediator between the spirit and the sensuous life. Although the spirit be no master of that which it creates through music, yet it is blessed in this creation, which like every creation of art, is mightier than the artist.—Beethoven.

What's in a name? That which we call a rose, by any other name would smell as sweet.—Shakespeare.

Heavy Carbon

The first precious bit of heavy carbon ever pried loose from nature was exhibited recently before a distinguished group of specially invited scientists and engineers at the laboratories of Professor Harold C. Urey of Columbia University who won the Nobel Prize for his discovery of heavy hydrogen, says the New York Times.

Heavy carbon is a twin, or isotope of ordinary carbon, one of the "big four" elements of life. Ordinary carbon has an atomic weight of twelve, whereas its heavier twin has an atomic weight of 13. Carbon, one of the most abundant elements, is a mixture containing about 1 per cent of the heavy variety.

The precious heavy carbon, expected to become an extremely important new tool with which to explore secrets of vital life processes, was exhibited recently during an inspection tour of the Columbia University School of Engineering.

An Aid to the Biologist

By preparing food in which this heavy carbon is substituted for the ordinary carbon, and then feeding it to animals, the course these atoms take in the animal body can be traced. Since carbon is an important constituent of all food and plays a very important role in the tissue-building process of the body, these "tagged" atoms will shed much new light on vital mechanisms.

Professor Urey and his staff also exhibited a small vial of heavy nitrogen of atomic weight 15, in a 70 per cent concentration, the only quantity existing in the world in this highly purified state. It cost about $5,000 to produce.

Nitrogen is the universal constituent of proteins, the basic building blocks of living matter. Its ordinary isotrope has an atomic weight of 14. Its atoms can also be used as "tags" in studying vital processes involving the proteins.

A new type of heavy water, containing the heavy isotrope of oxygen, atomic weight 18, also was shown. This oxygen, however, so far has been obtained in a concentration of only 1 per cent. Ordinary oxygen has an atomic weight of 16.

Not to be outdone by the chemists, the physicists, under the direction of Dean George B. Pegram and Professor John R. Dunning, gave a demonstration of modern alchemy in which platinum was transmitted into gold by means of radium, and common table salt was made artificially radioactive by subjecting it to Columbia's powerful atom-smashing machine, the sixty-five-ton cyclotron.

Professor Dunning thrilled his distinguished audience by swallowing a quantity of artificial radium dissolved in water and becoming as a result a radioactive being. The emanations of his body were magnified through a loud speaker and could be heard in loud clicks. They could be seen as brilliant flashes.

Other demonstrations included the collapsing of a model subterranean mine roof structure by whirling it in a centrifuge to simulate the force of gravity in a real mine; the crushing of an eight-foot brick masonry pier in the compression testing machine of the School of Engineering; a demonstration of water seepage under power dams and through various types of soil structures, and a method used by Professor Colin G. Frink of Columbia to renew antique bronzes more than 2,000 years old.

Xray Treatment of Carbuncles

When we think of carbuncle we have in mind a number of boils occuring in a group. Apparently a little infection or boil starts at the bottom of a hair root, approaches the skin surface, and for some reason cannot get through at first. The infection then travels beneath the skin to the next hair and again approaches the surface. This happens a number of times so that there may be as many as six or more boils all ready to break through the skin in what appears to be one large lump.

Physicians and surgeons are very careful in their treatment of carbuncles, particularly about the face, as the poisons imprisoned may prove dangerous to life if carried to distant parts, particularly the brain.

Dr. F. W. O'Brien, Boston, in the New England Journal of Medicine, points out that the death rate among 130 hospital patients with severe carbuncle receiving Xray treatment alone or together with surgery was 3 per cent. There were no deaths among 57 patients with carbuncle on the face treated with the Xray alone. There was no evidence that the diabetic patient, in whom carbuncles are common could not undergo Xray treatment safely. The patients who were treated early, only by Xrays, recovered in a shorter time than did the others who were treated by surgery, or by surgery and Xray.

It is certainly gratifying to learn that another distressing and at times dangerous ailment is being treated so successfully by Xrays. When first the Xrays were discovered their usefulness was apparently just to make sure that a bone was broken or to locate some object in the stomach or other organs and tissues.

A point that must be remembered, however, is that Xray is now a specialty in medicine, just as any other specialty. It does not consist in just taking pictures. It requires knowledge and skill to interpret the findings and to know exactly how much of the Xrays to prescribe, and the distance and angle from the skin surface. The disappointments in treatment may be due, in many cases, to unskilled operators.

Deception's Toll

(From Hamilton Spectator)

Of all the cruel deceptions practiced in Hitlerian demagogy that of the "distribution of the world's riches" is the most ironic. The German Chancellor himself has played on it consistently. It was the Ukraine, then the colonies then the unjustified share of the British Empire. Yesterday he repeated it: There will be wars as long as the good things of the earth are not distributed equitably and voluntarily."

The people who had to listen to it; the people who had suffered the consequences of this grotesque trickery, were being put to the final test of credulity. No doubt they would believe it, for they are as numbed to independence of thought as they are to independence of action. But in these words lay the supreme condemnation of the system that Hitler and his lieutenants had developed. The ultimate lie of National Socialism was following its peoples into disastrous conflict.

The same man who could speak thus to his people, only a few weeks ago made the terrible admission that the present regime had spent $40,000,000,000 on the war machine about which he and his lieutenants boast. That vast sum was wrung from men and women who knew the horrors of the last war and dreaded the horrors of another. It was taken from workers who had already suffered the pangs of pitifully low wages and high prices. It touched every pocket, reached into every home. It could have, under other auspices, helped lift the German people to a higher standard of living among the nations of the world. With it they could have regained their self-respect and their honor. They could have had more than the "bread and circus" sops and kept up a superficial evidence of well-being and discipline.

Instead of that the German people have suffered for a military machine that was never intended only for the restoration of self-respect, or for the breaking of the Versailles Treaty, but for expansion and conquest. And no amount of territory acquired can compensate the cost that these people have paid in hard labor and sacrifice and will pay later in blood.

Small wonder that the realistic French, looking across at a country that used generous foreign loans for rebuilding its armed might; that knew from experience what an imposed German "peace" could mean, feel some resentment about the loose talk of a Versailles tyranny that should never be "repeated." Small wonder that to people who chatter about the contributions of the Beethovens, the Goethes and the Schillers, they reply with a word or two about the Hitlers, the Himmlers, the Goerings and the Goebbels. There are living among them men and women who remember two other wars in which their lands were devasted. They might well have another word for Versailles.

It is by a neutral observer, Professor James T. Shotwell, of Columbia University, that an angle of Versailles rarely spoken about is stressed. In a recent article in the New York Times Magazine he points out that "the belief that the calamities of Germany were due to the peace and not to the war was reinforced by nation-wide organized propaganda."

"The worst effect of the Treaty of Versailles upon Germany," he declares, "was not that it imposed the loss of territory or the weight of reparations. It was that, in fighting the treaty, the German people transferred their whole attention to it, and, by what appeared at the time as a supreme effort of the will, forgot or ignored the effect of the war itself.

"All the evils which the country suffered in the post-war years were attributed to the machinations of diplomats and statesmen after the soldiers' work was over. It was almost an article of faith that but for the treaty Germany could have recovered speedily from the costs of the war. But no one knew what the war, as distinct from the treaty, had cost her, and no one tried seriously to find out what proportion of the difficulties of the post-war period were chargeable to the account of each. Thus, as the process of treaty revision proved discouragingly slow, those who preached the resort to politics of power were able to carry the day."

That is something the German people have been willing to believe. In not accepting the cost of the last war, they are apparently blind to the cost of this one. It is an easy road, then, for the Hitler clique, now turning the Moscow sham to use in the home field. Never in history have working people paid such a price for their own ultimate destruction as they have in Germany and Russia. Never has the bogus doctrine of "distribution of the world's riches" played more easily into the hands of military tyrants.

Ban on Foreign Names On Menus is Urged

The first culinary congress organized in the United States came into existence at the Hotel Waldorf-Astoria, and before the first day of its existence was ended it became evident that the 200 "chefs and culinarians" from all parts of the country were determined to effect startling changes in their craft, says the New York Times.

That a minor revolution in gastronomics was impending if the all-male congress has its way was indicated in several reports prepared by its committees for ratification or rejection by the membership today.

One resolution, if adopted, should be a boon to the thousands of Americans who know only English.

"Without question," reported the committee on the bill of fare, "the American public is entitled to an American bill of fare. We are of the opinion that the bill of fare, as it is generally presented today in many hotels and restaurants, is perhaps one of the main causes for the inappreciation of fine cuisine by the American public.

"To many fancy names are used which have no meaning whatsoever. As a result, in most instances, these meaningless appellations are a puzzle to the public and serve only to dissuade those who would like to perfect their knowledge of gastronomy.

"Those responsible for the erroneous use of culinary terms should refrain from this practice, for by so doing they confuse the public and work against their personal interests. The American bill of fare should be written in English. However, where foreign names or terms are necessary these should be fully explained in English."

In a second report prepared by the Committee on the Licensing of Culinarians, the congress maintained the lofty tone of a group drawing up a new Bill of Rights.

"Qualified spokesmen for the hotel industry have repeatedly asserted that a hotel is a home and therefore its employes are 'servants'," it said. "Those spokesmen feel, we presume, that the interests of the hotel industry commands them to take that stand."

The report said members of the profession "resented" this attitude and the American Culinary Federation, Inc., recommends that "this gross injustice be righted."

To amend this status the committee urged the congress to support the American Federation of Labor "in the matter of changing the present law and providing the chef and cook with a license," as befits "skilled workers".

Hash as National Dish

What has became of so ancient an American institution and cornerstone of democracy as hash? The answer is that nothing has happened to it; it flourishes in the land, apparently as good as ever. But in that case, what becomes of Mr. Lucius Boomer's argument that a la carte service should be abolished because it is wasteful. Customers a la carte are served with "jumbo" portions, as this distinguished hotel man calls them, of which not much more than half is consumed. The rest is waste.

Formerly it was supposed that the rest became hash. Even in the fashionable caravanserais many customers like hash, if one may judge from the questionnaires about favorite dishes among financiers, intellectuals and movie stars. And, after all, what is the vastly popular hamburger, what is the national hot-dog, if not essentially hash, inside a skin or without?

The greater argument against a la carte and in favor of the selective meal, as Mr. Boomer calls it, would be not the waste of uneaten portions but the wastefulness of an excessively diversified bill of fare. With twenty entrees for the customer to pick from, the restaurant kitchen presumabely must have a supply of every item on hand. With four or five table d'hote combinations to concentrate on, the economies of mass production become possible.

American tourists in Europe since time immemorial have fallen victim to the notion that they were not hungry enough for the table d'hote and just a trifle from the a la carte list would do them. The rejected dinner, and a very good one, may cost as much as seventy-five cents. The snack from the other list runs into astronomical figures.—New York Times.

Tweed

Tweed, Nov. 11.—A number of local nimrods have set out on their annual trek to the northern woods in quest of the elusive deer.

Tweed branch of the Canadian Red Cross will make its first shipment of supplies. A great many women have been engaged in making sox, bandages and other hospital supplies.

Mr. W. E. Tummon, president, Mrs. J. C. Hayes, second vice-president, and Mrs. Geo. E. Clark attended a meeting of Cooper Women's Institute on Wednesday evening. A great many ladies were present to formulate and extend plans for engaging in war work.

Mr. John Colgan of Toronto has been engaged as manager of Beatty's meat market, succeeding James Parm.

The first of the winter series of Veterans' bridge parties was held in the local hall on Friday evening with Mr. Stafford Cassidy, local bridge expert and perennial winner of bridge prizes, again returned as winner of the prize.

Tweed village council met on Monday night, for the last regular meeting before the nominations, which will be held on Friday, Nov. 24. A number of accounts were passed. Messrs. T. E. Moffat and I. D. Corcoran as delegates from Tweed Public Library interviewed the council anent the annual grant. The council passed a motion to pay the usual grant of $150.

Mrs. Geo. Thompson was hostess to the Girls' W.A. of St. James' Anglican Church on Thursday evening when a farewell party was held in honor of Miss Lois Clark, president, who is attending the Ontario Business College in Belleville. A number of games were enjoyed by the girls with Miss Connie Morrison as winner. Miss Ana Thompson read the following address:

Dear Lois: We, as members of St. James' Girls' W.A., knowing of your intended departure and as a result, this would be your last meeting as president of our branch, we knew of no better time to express our regrets at your leaving. We shall miss you in many ways, your cheery smile and help in all work of the branch, as well as the social hour, and we sincerely hope that our loss will be some other auxiliary's gain.

We wish good health to stay with you,
And thoughts to waken laughter,
And should some days be dark and grey
We wish you sunshine after.
We wish enough of wealth for you
To keep you free from worry,
And then we wish each coming day
That God may bless and keep you.

—Fellow members and workers of the W.A.

Miss Clark was presented with a cedar chest of writing paper and envelopes.

Hydro-electric light and power is to be installed at Cloyne. A transmission line from Cloyne to Northbrook will soon be completed and the residents of the district are looking forward to the day when they will be able to illuminate their dwellings by the simple expedient of pressing a button.

Mr. Morley Fox, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Fox of Hungerford Township was presented with a wrist watch and other gifts by a number of his friends who gathered at the home of his parents recently. Mr. Fox has joined the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment at Picton. The following address was read:

Dear Morley: We, your friends and neighbors have gathered here tonight to wish you the best of luck in this worthy undertaking. You will be greatly missed in this community where you have resided.

You have shown great willingness to make this sacrifice on our behalf, and we beg you to accept this gift as a taken of our friendship, and may it often remind you, Morley, that our good wishes go with you wherever you are.

We sincerely hope that it will not be long until you are back with us again.

Signed on behalf of your friends and neighbors—Harry Cronk and James Arbuckle.

A branch of the Canadian Red Cross will be organized at Cloyne by the ladies of the Women's Institute.

Tweed Army and Navy Veterans will hold a memorial service in the Tweed Memorial Park on Sunday morning at 10:15. Following this they will attend divine service at Tweed United Church where Rev. H. L. Morrison will preach on a theme appropriate to Remembrance Day.

St. Michael's R.C. Church, Sulphide, was the scene of an interesting wedding on Saturday when Elda May, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Langevin, was united in marriage to Henry Francis McGrath, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. H. McGrath of Kingston. Rev. Dean Cullinane of Tweed officiated.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Bernice Langevin. Mr. John McGrath was his brother's groomsman. Mr. Bernard Langevin, brother of the bride, acted as usher. Master Thomas Cassidy played the wedding march. Miss Edna Cassidy sang during the signing of the register.

Guests from out-of-town were Mr. and Mrs. M. H. McGrath, Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Rice and family, Mrs. Lamer and Miss Helen McGrath of Kingston, and Miss Marjorie Langevin of Chippewa. Following the wedding dinner at the home of the bride's parents, the young couple left on a wedding trip. They will reside in Kingston.

TRENTON and DISTRICT

Trenton, Nov. 11 (Special)—At a district meeting of the Voluntary Registration of Canadian Women in the town hall, Mrs. (Col.) Birdsall of Birdsall, chairman of District No. 9 which includes the counties of Peterboro, Hastings and Northumberland explained the purpose of the work of the organization. Following her address the speaker introduced Mrs. Walter Fowles of Hastings, sub-chairman of District No. 9. The latter speaker explained the meaning of the questionnaire form which is distributed by the organization. It was announced that Canadian women are to receive similar instructions as members of the compulsory service in England and Australia. At the close of the meeting Mrs. Birdsall asked for nominations for the Trenton chairmanship which was awarded to Miss Minnie Payne. Committee assisting Mrs. Payne includes Miss Ann Sanson, Miss A. S. Hayes, Miss F. Vandervoort, Mrs. J. A. MacKenzie, Miss D. Gains. Mrs. A. T. Fleming was elected acting-secretary.

V.R. and C.W. Committee Meets.

When the committee of the Voluntary Registration of Canadian Women met yesterday it was decided to establish two registration booths in Trenton, one in A. A. Farrar's store on the east side of town and the other in Miss Shaw's shop in the central part of town. The booths will open on Nov. 20 and the closing date was set for Nov. 30. Two members of the committee will be on duty in each booth which opens in the morning at 10 a.m. and closes at 9 p.m. at night. The meeting planned to approach local ministers, heads of the manufacturing companies and principal of Trenton High School with the purpose of familiarizing them with their plan.

C.G.I.T. Meeting.

In the United Church parlors the King Street C.G.I.T. met and planned to knit socks, sweaters and scarfs for the Red Cross and needy children of Dufferin Public School. The girls' club was divided into three groups—senior, intermediate and junior—to carry out the relief work.

Evening Auxiliary Meets.

Mrs. Nostrum Sprague presided at the monthly meeting of the Evening Auxiliary of King Street United Church and introduced the guest speaker, Mrs. S. L. Terrill of Wooler, assistant president of the Cobourg Presbyterial. The program was in charge of Mrs. O. May, Mrs. C. McGuire and Mrs. Jeffreys. Refreshments were served and Mrs. Burrows, Mrs. Bayliss, Miss Rhoda Black and Mrs. Mawson convened. The president, Mrs. N. Sprague, closed the meeting with reading the benediction.

Red Cross Committee.

The following ladies were elected to the committee of the Trenton Red Cross organization: Mrs. Aylesworth, convener of checking and labelling; Mrs. W. W. Miller, convener of hospital and supplies; Mrs. C. Wilkins, convener of sewing; Miss Amelia Hayes, treasurer of work group; Mrs. W. Bain, convener of wool.

Women's Association, United Ch.

The meeting of the Women's Association of King Street United Church was held in the church parlors yesterday afternoon with the president, Mrs. Ken Crews in charge. Final preparations for the Christmas tea and sale were made and were followed by a speech in keeping with Armistice by Rev. J. U. Robbins, pastor of the church. Mrs. O. May, Mrs. J. Cox and Miss Marion Weaver took part in a musical program during the afternoon. In the last half hour of the meeting tea was served and conveners were Mrs. Milliken, Mrs. Roberts, Mrs. Jordan and Mrs. Millock.

Dr. McNeil at College School.

Dr. McNeil, treasurer and registrar of Queen's University, Kingston, gave an address last night in the auditorium of the new College Public School when members of the recently formed Trenton Lecture Club assembled for a regular get-together. The guest speaker was introduced by Mr. John J. McNabb, president of the club. The subject Dr. McNeil chose for his address was "What Have You to Declare".

Snider-Hodge Rites.

Climaxing a lon list of pre-nuptial festivities, the marriage of Miss Mary Dorothy Hodge, daughter of Mr. John Hodge and the late Mrs. Hodge of Church street, Windsor, to Mr. Reg. Snider of Victoria Avenue, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Snider of Carrying Place, was solemnized recently in lovely St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church at Puce, with the Rev. Dr. H. M. Baulin, pastor of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Windsor, officiating.

Cedar boughs and ferns formed a background for four tall standards of bronze chrysanthemums and oak leaves to provide a setting for the wedding party and the bride, who entered the church on the arm of her father, was gowned in chalk white marquisheer, fashioned on Grecian lines, the bodice softly folded to a V-neckline and the skirt featuring fullness at the hips and extending into a long train. Long monk sleeves and a hood of marquisheer, fastened at the back of the neck of the dress, shirred and folded back from her face, with one scarf over the shoulder and the othed forming a cowl, were other features, and she carried a sheaf of Harrissii lilies and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. John P. Carritte, Jr., who was her matron of honor, was gowned in Orient blue crepe cashmere draped model, with a panel of dahlia shade down the front, long fitted sleeves, a sweetheart neckline, and a full skirt extending into a train. Her turban was of the two shades of the material, twisted into a high coil effect, and her flowers were Rubrum spetrum lilies and lilies of the valley. Mrs. Frederic Bell, Jr., and Miss Gladys Carmichael in dahlia, and Mrs. Edwin J. Faust of Owen Sound and Mrs. William Colley in blue, the same color as the gown of the matron of honor were bridesmaids, their frocks fashioned similarly to that of Mrs. Carritte, but with no contrasting panel in front. Their hats were tiny turbans matching their dresses with two twisted coils in front and their flowers were also Rubrum spectrum lilies. Mr. Faust assisted Mr. Snider as best man and the ushers were Mr. Fred M. Black, Mr. Bell, Mr. Carritte and Dr. T. Ernest Armstrong.

A reception followed at the Beach Grove Golf and Country Club where further arrangements of cedar boughs were used over the fireplace and tall palms formed a background for the receiving line. The bride's table was laid with a cut work cloth and centred with the cake flanked with burning white tapers. Mrs. Snider, the bridegroom's mother wore a gown of true wine velvet made on long flowing lines with long sleeves and sweetheart neckline and a full skirt and her small brimmed hat was of matching velvet trimmed with gold leaves and her corsage of bronze Chrysanthemums.

Mr. and Mrs. Snider left later for a motor trip east, on their return from which they will take up residence at 1610 Victoria avenue, Windsor. For travelling the bride wore a frock of dawn grey sheer wool, a draped model, the sleeves studded with silver nail-heads and a black velvet coat full length with a stole of grey forming a panel in front. Her hat was a small touque made of the same two materials and she wore orchids.

Guests from out of town at the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Norman Roblin of London, Mr. and Mrs. Grant Pinney of Lennox, Mich., Mrs. P. Metcalfe of Lennox, Mrs. Pearl Parrish, Mr. Harold Beachell, Miss Leona Beachell of Glencoe, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Faust of Owen Sound, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Webster of Cobham; Mrs. Clarence Snider of Carrying Place, and from Detroit Mr. and Mrs. Carl Falkenhainer, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Cooper, Mr. and Mrs. Alex Craig, Miss Dorothy Spicer, and Mr. and Mrs. William MacMullen.

West Huntingdon

West Huntingdon, Nov. 11.—St. Andrew's W.M.S. held their November meeting at the home of Mrs. Thomas Fleming. The devotional service consisted of prayer, Scripture lesson by Mrs. Don Haggerty and the singing of appropriate hymns. Roll call was answered by the word joy. Mrs. Thomas Fleming gave a reading. Mrs. Morley Haggerty and Mrs. Milton Shaw gave a duet. The study book was in charge of Mrs. Morley Haggerty. Following the business period the meeting closed with Mizpah benediction.

United Church W.M.S.

Members of the United Church W.M.S. were entertained by Mrs. Elmer Post for their November meeting when they assembled in the forenoon and quilted a quilt. AMBULANCE SERVICE

The War This Week

By DON GILBERT

Canadian Press Cable Editor

The riddle of Germany's intentions toward The Netherlands and Belgium and the political implications of the supposed attempt on Adolf Hitler's life at Munich made the 10th week of war the most perplexing since hostilities began.

Does Hitler mean business with his army mobilized at the borders of the low countries? Or is he holding the threat of force over their heads to compel the two governments to show more cooperation economically and politically and thus alleviate the severity of the British blockade?

Does the explosion in the shrine of Nazidom at Munich, occurring 11 minutes after Hitler left the building, mean dissension within the Nazi party, possible over Hitler's Russion policy? Or was it an internal intrigue, for some purpose not yet clear, of the Nazis themselves, like the burning of the Reichstag in the early days of the Hitler regime?

Bitter Press Campaign

Sudden departure of King Leopold of the Belgians from Brussels on Monday to confer with Queen Wilhelmina of The Netherlands followed a bitter German press campaign against the two countries for their alleged supine acceptance of Britain's contraband control. It was asked whether it was under this pressure that the Soverigns the next day issued their appeal for peace—an appeal they had refused to make when Hitler launched his "peace offensive" several weeks before.

The Nazi leader lost no time in extinguishing the flicker of hope the Belgo-Netherlands appeal kindled. Speaking the next night, Hitler declared he had "held out his hand for the last time" and Germany would now speak to Britain "in the language she will best understand." To which Prime Minister Chamberlain, 24 hours later, rejoined: "oT those who speak no language but that of force, force is the only answer."

Widespread Defensive Measures

A fatal border clash on The Netherlands frontier Thursday was followed by widespread defensive measures in Holland, including the flooding of large areas of low-lying ground by opening the dykes. It was thought a German invasion of Holland might be part of a general offensive or a localized operation to gain control of ports and air bases several hundred miles nearer the British Isles than the closest points in Germany.

Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, told Parliament Wednesday that the Royal Navy was counting on Germany being able to turn out submarines at the rate of two a week. Against this the Navy is destroying them at the rate of from two to four a week, and the skill of the German crews undoubtedly will diminish as more and more of the highly-trained personnel are lost.

The Italian press came out Tuesday with an unmistakeable expression of its displeasure at Russia's new role in Europe. It denounced "Red Imperialism" and warned Moscow to keep its hands off Southeastern Europe.

AT THE McCARTHY

"The Arizona Wildcat" and "Legion of Lost Flyers."

Now playing at the McCarthy Theatre for the last time are two features that offer a perfect blend of swell entertainment. Jane Withers in "The Arizona Wildcat," is a cloudburst of fun and excitement and grand filmfare for the entire family. The co-feature, "Legion of Lost Flyers," starring Richard Arlen, Anne Nagel and Andy Devine, is also so pleasing that we guarantee that you will not be able to make a first and second choice between it and "The Arizona Wildcat," with regards to which of the two features offers the most enjoyment. We heartily recommend that you see those hits and in addition the short subject "Adventures of a Newsreel Cameraman," one of the most thrilling assignments ever given to a cameraman or recorded by the camera.

"Fighting Thoroughbreds" and "I Stand Accused."

Ralph Byrd, Mary Carlisle, Robert Allen and George (Gabby) Hayes head the cost of "Fighting Thoroughbreds," a romantic comedy-drama in which the thrills and speed of the race-track form the background, comes next to the McCarthy Theatre and with it as a companion feature attraction, Robert Cummings, Helen Mack and Lyle Talbot in "I Stand Accused," one of the most interesting and powerful court-room dramatic hits ever filmed, will be presented.

AT THE BELLE

"Marx Bros. at the Circus"

Having wrecked the opera, the races, animal crackers, horse feathers and duck soup in their previous comedy riots, the madcap Marx Bros. now turn their guns of mirth upon the circus in their newest comedy riot, "Marx Bros. at the Circus," now on the Belle screen.

To enable the Marxes to tear a circus to pieces with their picturesque antics, a complete three-ring streamlined circus was constructed, with modernistic menagerie, sideshows and all other appurtenances for their pleasure. Incorporated were scores of headline circus acts, aerialists, acrobats, clowns, equestrienne troups, and a full-sized, modernized menagerie with several hundred beasts of the jungle.

"Marx Bros. at the Circus" is the hilarious story of two circus roustabouts, Harpo and Chico, who engage a crackpot lawyer, Groucho, to prevent Kenny Baker, part owner, from losing his share of the circus—and they succeed in the most riotous fashion.

In the cast are Florence Rice, furnishing the romantic interest with Kenny Baker, Nat Pendleton as the world's strongest man, Eve Arden as the upside-down girl who walks on the ceiling, Jerry Marenghi as Professor Atom, a villainous midget, Margaret Dumont as Mrs. Dukesbury, society eyes, Fritz Feld, James Burke and dowager and the light in Groucho's Barnett Parker.

The new picture, reported to be the most ambitious of any Marx Bros. extravaganza, is replete with musical acts, dancing and new song numbers written by E. Y. Harbourg and Harold Arlen who wrote the successful song hits of "The Wizard of Oz." Groucho Marx is heard in an inimitable rendition of "Lydia the Tattoed Lady"; Kenny Baker sings "Two Blind Loves" and "Step Up and Take a Bow" and Harpo Marx and a chorus do the "Svengali Routine." The elaborate dance numbers were directed by Bobby Connolly, one of the foremost dance directors of stage and screen.

Selected Short Treats

Three selected short treats are announced for exhibition on the same program including Jitterbug Follies, a funny comicolor cartoon, the Belle Newsreel with its latest, timely events from the world over, and "Unseen Guardians," a clever and original specialty. Performances start daily at 2.30, 7.10 and 9.10 p.m.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Mystery Plane"

John Trent's flying outfit lay idle in a closet of his Beverly Hills home for several years until he was signed to play the leading role in Monogram's "Mystery Plane," coming to the Capitol Theatre.

An ex-transport pilot, Trent had not played an aviator in motion pictures since his entry as an actor. Naturally, it was a logical choice for Monogram to pick Trent from hundreds of other contestants for the prized "Tailspin Tommy" role in "Mystery Plane." Here is one actor who plays a flyer who can really fly. No doubles for Trent.

Trent is perhaps one of Hollywood's greatest flying enthusiasts, along with other movie flyers including Paul Lukas, Wallace Beery, James Dunn and George Brent. Any one of these men can be seen at any of Southern California's noted airports when not appearing before the cameras.

Trent has more than 3500 hours in the air and approximately 365,000 miles without an accident. Before he deserted his post as pilot on the Kansas City-New York run for a movie job, Trent kept busy writing for several air magazines.

"Mystery Plane" is a thrilling and timely story of a ring of spies who try to obtain a bombing device designed by Tailspin Tommy and his pals, Skeeter and Mary Lou.

Milburn Stone is seen as Skeeter and Marjorie Reynolds as Mary Lou. "Mystery Plane" was directed by George Waggner and Paul Malvern the producer.

The added feature on the same bill is "Girls on Probation," which will thrill you with its tense drama depicting the history of the workings of the probation system. The picture is a fast-moving, spectacular, exciting series of brushes between criminals and the law. The feature stars are Ronald Reegan, Sheila Bromley, Anthony Averill and Jane Byran.

Nazis Distribute Forged Document Attributed to Maurras

By LUCIEN ROMIER

Paris, Nov. 11 (CP-Havas) — The Nazi propaganda machine has distributed a forged document attributed to Charles Maurras, French Royalist leader, and ostensibly attacking France's ally, Great Britain.

This falsification distorts the position of Maurras, who, although he has been a bitter critic of French Republican regime, is no less vehemently opposed to the Hitler Reich.

The German propagandists sought to influence those Danubian and South American countries where there is an authoritarian form of government but whose leaders and youth have in recent times come more and more under the influence of Conservative French and British thought.

According to the revamped Nazi version of an article by Maurras, the French Royalist branded Britain the enemy of France, accused the British Conservatives of cupidity and recognized Nazism's "good intentions".

Such an attack is difficult to combat, and gives French counter-propaganda a challenging problem. Those who hear the Nazi allegations are not going to check up on the original Maurras statement, but will merely let the impression sink in.

Personals

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. H. Gillespie of Madoc, have left to spend the winter months in Southern California.

Mrs. S. Ervine and Bruce, are spending the week-end in Toronto the guests of Mr. and Mrs. N. A. Frame.

Lt.-Col. and Mrs. E. A. Geen entertained at Moodie Cottage, last evening in honor of Prof. Saunders following his address at the Women's Canadian Club meeting:

Under the auspices of the Red Cross Unit of St. Andrew's Church a delightful afternoon tea was held yesterday at the home of Mrs. A. Roberts, George Street. About one hundred and fifty guests attended, and were welcomed by Mrs. Roberts, who was assisted in receiving by Mrs. A. Gillen, Mrs. Stewart Robertson, Mrs. J. B. Boyce and Mrs. O. W. Duff invited the guests to the tea room. Bronze 'mums and yellow candles lent a charming air to the tea table, while in the decoration of the living room, yellow 'mums were used most effectively. Mrs. George Graham and Mrs. W. J. Walker poured tea and those who served were Mrs. R. Hart, Mrs. G. McElhiney, Mrs. J. Willson, Miss Duff and Miss Roberts. Mrs. Bateman and Miss Jessie Hayes were in charge of the tea table while Mrs. I. L. Moore acted as treasurer.

The "Happy Six", a group of little girls, who spend much of their leisure time in accomplishing good deeds for others, are now busy with their Red Cross project. Their annual tea held yesterday at the home of Mrs. S. Hibbard, 150 Dundas Street East, was for this purpose and proved a fine success. The guests were received by the President, Miss Muriel Hibbard. The tea table was beautifully arranged with a centrepiece of poppies in a crystal bowl and tall red tapers in crystal holders. Mrs. A. B. Gribble poured tea and four members of the group, Misses Joan Hamilton, Jean Meyers, Joan Watson and Barbara Cook as tea assistants very capably looked after the wants of the guests. The sixth of the "Happy Six", Miss Margaret Ann McGuire was in charge of replenishing the tea table. Miss Lillian McGuire acted as hostess to the guests in the living room. Here some of the work of the girls was on display, knitted wristlets for soldiers, and many commented on the splendid quality of the work by such young knitters. The enterprise of the "Happy Six" deserves high praise. A nice sum was realized for Red Cross work.

Following the concert at St. Michael's Academy last evening the guest artists and members of the school band were entertained at a supper party in the Collegiate Auditorium. The tea table was most attractive with bronze 'mums in a silver bowl and matching tapers. Mrs. Charles Meagher and Mrs. R. A. Flynn poured coffee, and the mothers of the band members assisted in serving. Miss Barbara Forhan, conductor of the band, presented Sister Mary Mercedes, with a bouquet of red roses as a token of appreciation of the band for her careful and patient training of the band which has resulted in such wonderful success which culminated in last evening's magnificent achievement.

Acclaimed an outstanding social success the dance held in the Trianon Ballroom by Christ Church A.Y.P.A., was attended by large numbers from the city and throughout the district. The guests were received by Rev. G. G. Wright and Mrs. Wright, Mr. Willis Jackson, president of the A.Y.P.A., Miss Jean Orr, Mr. Howard Hanley and Miss Mary Moult. Dancing was to music by the Commodores, and was thoroughly enjoyed. The attractiveness of the Ballroom was enhanced by the A.Y.P.A. crest over the orchestra stand. At midnight a delicious supper was served. Miss Jean Orr was convener of refreshments and Mrs. Orr and Mrs. Turvey very capably looked after arrangements. Patrons and Patronesses of the dance were Rev. and Mrs. A. Beauchamp Payne, Belleville; Rev. and Mrs. G. G. Wright, Belleville; Rev. and Mrs. A. McConnell, Stirling; Rev. and Mrs. F. A. Smith, Trenton; Rev. and Mrs. E. Grant, Wellington and Rev. and Mrs. F. C. Beaser, Roslin.

WEDDINGS

CHAPMAN—FRASER

A pretty wedding was solemnized on Tuesday, November 7th., in St. Paul's United Church, Stirling, by Rev. W. J. Scott, when Miss Helen Mae Fraser, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Major Fraser of Glen Ross, was united in marriage to Mr. Roy Bateman Chapman, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Chapman, Stockdale.

The bride was dressed in teal blue crepe with smart black accessories. Miss Edna Chapman, sister of the groom, was bridesmaid and wore wine crepe with black accessories. Mr. George Maybee of Stockdale, acted as groomsman.

A wedding supper was held at the home of the bride's parents with immediate relatives present. Mr. and Mrs. Chapman will reside in Stockdale.

TABERNACLE W.M.S.

The regular meeting of the Tabernacle W.M.S. was held on Thursday afternoon in the church parlours. The President, Mrs. McClintock presided and opened the meeting using the hymn "My Faith Looks up to Thee". The various reports were received and adopted. A nominating committee was chosen to bring in a list of officers for the coming year.

The president announced that Mrs. (Dr.) A. E. Best a returned missionary from West China, would address a special meeting of the W.M.S. on next Monday afternoon. The Worship Service was taken from the Missionary Monthly. Mrs. Isard read the Scripture lesson from the book of Jonah. Mrs. Bedal and Mrs. Sharp offered prayer. A hymn was sung and the meeting closed with prayer.

More Uses for The Vacuum

By ELEANOR ROSS

JUST WHAT do you think is the most helpful, the most versatile, the most wonderful of all the electrical household equipment, which we take so for granted these days? We have been studying a survey taken amongst housewives all over the country, and the vacuum cleaner seems to have won first place. The various uses for a vacuum suggested by housewives were enough to fill a small book. No woman would trade her vacuum cleaner for any other household article, for she has found that keeping carpets, rugs and upholstered furniture clean is only a fraction of the work she has turned over to the appliance.

We have gathered some of the uses suggested by various housewives for our friend, the vacuum, and are listing them here in the hope that they may be of help, especially to home-making novices. The versatile "vac" cleans and shampoos rugs and carpets, brightens their colors, raises their pile. The good old vac cleans walls, ceilings, moldings and pictures. It cleans and dusts furniture of all kinds, books, bookcases, closets, hard-to-get-at shelves, the interior of the piano, the radio—in fact, everything on which dust collects. It also cleans and will demoth upholstery, curtains, draperies, furs, clothes, blankets, pillows, mattresses.

The vacuum is also ready to clean bedsprings, to bring back mattresses and pillows to a buoyant state. It will wax and polish floors, then keep them spotless and bright. It will remove dust or dirt from bathroom tiles, difficult corners, radiators and the space they occupy.

Pick Up Threads

After a sewing bout, use the vacuum to pick up these pesky threads with which floor and furniture are generally littered. Use it after a party, to empty ash trays, to clean crumbs out of the toaster and dust from overstuffed chairs and sofas. Use it, as some housewives do, to remove cooking odors and otherwise freshen and purify the air. Use it to catch insects and remove ants from floors, shelves and sinks.

When decorating, don't forget the vacuum, for it is prepared if need be to spray paint or lacquer on walls and furniture. Out in the garden it can be used to spray flowers and shrubs and to protect them against insect pests. It will sprinkle clothes for ironing and it will do a swell job of cleaning the interior of an automobile.

Why Carrots Give Health

By LOGAN CLENDENNING, M.D.

WHY ARE carrots considered a healthy food?

"Live for a fortnight on boiled carrots only if yo uwould cure yourself of asthma," wrote John Wesley in his book, An Easy and Natural Method for Curing Most Diseases, 1769.

The reverend gentleman's opinion may not be scientifically exact so far as asthma is concerned, but it seems to indicate that carrots have dietetic virtues.

They contain, like other yellow vegetables — corn, for instance — carotene, which is the base out of which the body manufactures vitamin A.

At Vichy, the famous French health resort, carrots have been fashionable for many years. Vichy is known as a resort for derangements of biliary digestion and liver ailments. Carrots form an important part of the cure, and are served in some form or another at every meal. Did you ever try carrot pancakes?

Here is the recipe:

Half a pint of carrot puree' two tablespoonfuls butter, one egg, one-half cup of milk, one cup flour, two tablespoonfuls of baking powder, salt. Stir the butter into half a pint of hot carrot puree. Make a smooth batter with the well-beaten egg and milk added to the flour, baking powder and a little salt. Put in the carrot puree, beat well together and cook like pancakes on a hot griddle greased with vegetable fat.

NOT "JUST GROWING PAINS"

What are "growing pains" in children?

Duchamp, a French orthopedic surgeon, coined the phrase in an essay in which he pointed out that children suffer from muscular pains and aches. "Just growing pains," as a phrase, is a great comfort to parents. But that sort of comfort is dangerous because the phrase often cloaks some serious condition. Jacobi, the famous New York children's specialist, pointed out that growing pains in many instances were manifestations of rheumatism.

Effect of Oil on Gallbladder

R. K.: "Does mineral oil or olive oil have any effect on the gallbladder?"

Answer: It has been demonstrated that the gallbladder muscle which opens into the intestine responds to the presence of any kind of fat. Therefore, olive oil will open the gallbladder. Mineral oil is not fat and has no effect other than that of a general cathartic.

PLAYGROUND OF THE NORTH

By Temple Manning

When people inquire of the world traveler for a country that is different and offers everything for a holiday playground, the answer invariably in British Columbia. And anyone fortunate enough to have visited this delightful place will fully agree, for British Columbia is a playground, a real wonderland.

Take a trip to this part of the great northwest and the chances are that you will return again and again. Rocky mountains, steep and grim, snow-clad peaks that rival the Alps for size and beauty, lakes gem-like in their limpid loveliness, a marvelous coast, pine forests, streams that are a fisherman's paradise, waterfalls that are cascades of foam against the green of pine-covered slopes, a perfect climate—these are just some of the attractions of British Columbia.

There are thousands and thousands of miles of perfect motor highways. Drive over the Malachat motor drive near Vancouver and you will see scenery of surpassing beauty as your car rolls smoothly along. If you have a hankering for a perfect scenic picture, visit Mount and Lake Wapta, with its tall pines and towering mountain standing sentinel over the sapphire blue lake where glide swift canoes.

Vancouver has much to offer, as has Victoria. Both cities have excellent hotels and somehow one finds oneself quickly invited to a charming private home, for in British Columbia even the English soon lose that reserve that characterizes them at home.

Beauty Unsurpassed

There are hotels at some of the beauty spots from which wonderful vistas of snowfields and glaciers may be obtained. Everywhere the air is redolent with the tang and perfume of the pine. There are mountain and forest trails to be explored, and for campers there are plenty of sites in deep forest glades and on the shores of picturesque lakes. And salmon and trout anglers find it easy to make the record catch of which they are always dreaming and talking. And it's an ideal spot for the nimrod, for in the uplands there are all kinds of game, including mountain sheep, goats, bears, moose, elk, deer and birds of many kinds. And those who like just sights and beautiful sites will rejoice in the miles and miles of orchards, for British Columbia is famous for its fruit.

There are garden parties and tennis parties in Vancouver when the weather permits, and it is nice to linger there for a time. There aren't so many wonderful buildings, but the whole city and its environs comprise a scenic gem.

American capital has done much to make British Columbia, especially Vancouver, the place it is today. Despite the oldtime atmosphere, there is a briskness about the place that makes it especially attractive to American tourists. It is a happy blending of the old and the new.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Proper to Have Party?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

A family moved into a small town, population slightly over one thousand, and shortly after their arrival the mother gave a "dessert luncheon" for some ladies she had recently met, but who had not called on her. Was that proper?

Would it be proper for her to give a large party before being entertained? If she gave a large party, and explained that it was for business reasons, would it be correct?

We have been taking sides on this and would like to explain in detail what is proper.

Joanna

Without knowing about the customs of this small community, I don't feel very well prepared to give any adequate judgment about whether or not it was "proper" for this new neighbour to have given these parties. Nowadays in most communities of this size the social life is informal, and people don't very much stand on ceremony.

Perhaps, however, in this town of which you speak, there are certain formalities that are abided by, certain customs of hospitality. Perhaps it is the accepted custom that a newcomer does not, or should not, give a party until the neighbors have called on her. If so, I'll grant you that this newcomer should have waited to determine what the neighbors do, and then should have done what they do.

But, on the other hand, she may have come from a place where the social life was very informal, where people didn't stand on ceremony. She apparently is given to hospitality, likes to give parties, likes to have her neighbors share her home. She met some ladies whom she enjoyed and so she asked them to a party at her home. It all seems quite natural to me, and it probably did to her.

Apparently she wasn't much concerned with whether or not the ladies had called on her first. What interests me is that apparently also the guests weren't too much concerned with this formality either, for they went to her party!

However, as understanding as I've tried to be about this newcomer-to-the-community, I couldn't understand her giving a large party and "explaining that it was for business reasons". This puts a totally different aspect on her hospitality, makes it for commercial reasons, not for social reasons. This would give her hospitality an unpleasant flavor. . . and I hope she doesn't stoop to do this.

Embarrassed Her Husband

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

A point of good manners has come up between my husband and myself and as we can come to no conclusion, we have decided to appeal to you.

My husband and I were going to attend a private dance. My husband's business associate did not care to attend so he asked my husband to take his wife with us. My husband said he would and he told the young lady what time we would call for her. Then he came home and told me that she was going.

The dance was to have lasted until one o'clock, but at midnight, as I was dancing with a young man who was in charge of the events of the evening, he was informed that the orchestra was playing the last piece. My partner excused himself so as to attend to the matter, and at that particular moment my husband and the young lady who had attended with us, danced by. I tapped him on the shoulder and said, "This is the last dance, so I should finish it with you".

This remark of mine was what my husband considered so ill-mannered. We would like to have your opinion.

Two Readers

I don't like to take sides in a discussion between husband and wife, but since you are so friendly as to give me that privilege, I must, of course, be quite forthright with you. I agree with your husband that it would have been more gracious for you not to have claimed the formality of the last dance. After all, as you say, there was some confusion about the fact that that was the last dance, and so I think it would have been better had you let your husband and your guest finish the dance.

After all, you and your husband had assumed the responsibility of having this young lady as your guest, and therefore your hospitality demanded that you make her evening as happy as possible. Putting her in this awkward position couldn't have made her especially happy, and apparently embarrassed your husband. However, I am sure that you did what you did only on the impulse of the moment, and I am just as sure that your husband thoroughly understands this. So just let it blow over . . . and don't worry about it.

Queen Complex

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Recently I invited a friend to a small, informal gathering at my home. She did not come and I wondered why. Father and I asked her why she hadn't come, and her only reason was that I "hadn't informed her as to who the other guests were to be".

I would like to know whether she should have asked me, and also if I should have informed her as to what guests were coming?

Reader

What a toplofty point of view this friend of yours has. She must have a queen complex, for the names of guests on an invitation list must, of course, always be submitted for a queen's approval.

It is for you to decide whether you like this friend well enough to bother with her ridiculous and superficial point of view. I suppose you'll have to inform her who is to be at your parties. But I can't help wondering if she gets invited to many parties, if her hostesses take the trouble to appease her by submitting their lists of invited guests. Her social condescension is appalling!

For Sunday, November 12

SUNDAY'S horoscope is a particularly propitious one for all matters of church and state, with much progress in philanthropic and educational lines. There also are deep metaphysical trends, with plans for group solidarity and brotherhood succeeding. Social functions are to the fore, with happy, intriguing angles.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a productive and pleasant year, which holds promise of attaining high goals in both social and business. Aside from rich fulfilments of personal ambitions, there may be gratifying developments in advancing group interests or fraternal ideals. Make changes with proper precaution but do not fear innovation.

A child born on this day may be very active and ambitious, with expansive and generous impulses pushing it to high levels in prestige and power. Social, cultural and humanitarian trends may further such attainment, culminating in conspicuous public recognition.

For Monday, November 13

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is for an extremely lively and interesting state of affairs, with business, employment and other ambitious projects under fine impetus. This state of affairs may come from innovation, unique methods and audacious moves, even in speculative and risky chances, where timidity and lack of initiative are swept aside.

Those whose birthday it is may prepare for a lively year. There may be much initiative and audacity, with highly-stimulated forces and faculties. These may operate in the field of chance, where speculation or hazard may prove profitable. Superiors, promoters and employers may be ready to assist when ideas hold novelty or originality.

A child born on this day may be versatile, quick, energetic and have the courage to step out of old ruts and abolish worn-out traditions in business and cultural and social relations.

Making the Most Of Tall Problem

By HELEN FOLLETT

wears clothes in queenly fashion

INSTEAD of worrying about her extra inches, the tall girl should make the most of them. Fashions are in her favor—trim waists, bouncing draperies at the back, quaint Edwardian effects, long, full skirts. She can carry her sweeping draperies in a queenly fashion. The pint-size girls look as if they were dressing up in grandma's old clothes when they try to be regal.

Surveys taken at women's colleges show that the average daughter is taller than the average mother was at her age. The reasons? Better care in childhood, sensible eating habits, greater interest in athletics and outdoor life. Girl babies who are getting their vitamins, sleeping at regular hours, having sun baths—brought up according to modern medical ideas—will probably do even better.

The tall girl must stay slender; she can't afford to take on adipose upholstery. To be tall is to be lovely like a lily, but to be a Juno is not so good. As long as the frame retains its youthful outline all is well and swell.

The erect carriage is necessary to retain the lovely, graceful lines of the back and shoulders. The pose of the head must be splendid. Deviation from these rules means distorted body lines, inability to hit the bull's eye as a smart dresser.

The color of the gums is significant. When they are extremely pale, they suggest lowered vitality and general impoverishment of the system. Very dark red ones may bleed profusely, in which case they should have the attention of the dentist.

Tartar may have been burrowing under them, banking up hard, gritty substances that are caused by chemical changes in the mouth.

The healthy color is a deep coral. The gums should be firm, not receding beyond the natural line. When cleaning the teeth, brush away from the gums, never toward them. Rough treatment and a heavy brush may do damage.

C.N.R. EMPLOYEE RETIRES

COMMITTED FOR TRIAL

Cornwall, Ont., Nov. 11 (CP)—Robert Arthur, 22, of Cornwall was committed for trial on a charge of manslaughter in Magistrate's court here yesterday. The charge arose from the death of Harry Towsley, Cornwall, passenger in a car, allegedly driven by Arthur, which left the highway near here last Oct. 1 and crashed into two trees.

THE RUNAWAY

by

Kathleen Norris

INSTALMENT 15

One day when Sarah was away on an all-day business trip with her husband Becky seized an afternoon moment when Gavin was away and Gibbs asleep to take from her purse several clippings from a San Francisco newspaper. They were want advertisements. Stenographers, cooks, chauffeurs, housekeepers, housemaids, saleswomen, agents. Three she studied thoughtfully, her brows knitted.

"Wanted. At once. Young woman, good cook, no objection to small children, mountains, general housework. Salary $60."

"Wanted. Strong, good-natured girl. Piece work at home. Good pay."

"Houseworker wanted in small San Jose hotel. Cook and waitress kept. Must be clean, capable, willing. Permanent place for right party. $45."

"That first one," Becky mused, half aloud. "Somehow I like it the best. I can't see myself doing very well with 'piece work." Gibbs and I in a hot room somewhere, sewing on overalls. No, that won't do. And a small country hotel? It mightn't be so small. It would be frightfully hot, whereas the mountains are cool all summer long. 'Good Cook." I'm a good cook. 'Small children. "Well, God knows I've got reason to like small children! It might be a bedlam. But it might be that if I offered to work for, say, thirty dollars a month, she'd let me have Gibbs."

Her face grew serious; her thoughts wandered. She groped in the old desk for a pair of shears that would trim her newspaper clipping cleanly. Suddenly under her eyes were several scattered small papers.

They were acknowledgements of small loans—loans of fifty, of ten, of forty dollars. There were five—six—seven of them. One for only two dollars. They were I. O. U's from Gavin to her father!

Becky sat perfectly still, feeling the blood churn up into her face and throat. She would not believe it; she could not believe it. Spreading them on the desk, she stared at them for a long time. The largest one had the earliest date; fifty dollars. Then came the forty, and after it, in May, two twenty-five dollars. Then a ten, another ten, and the two!

It was all very clear. He had told dad some cock-and-bull story in April, and Dad had advanced him fifty, and afterward forty, probably for one purpose—for the job that Gavin was eternally sure he could take if he had a little "spot cash." The rest had been mere concessions to dad's love for Becky, his anxiety lest she learn too much about this husband of hers. Petty loans, whining and borrowing. She put sudden hands to her eyes, sat bowed and broken under the utter hopeless ignominy of it.

The latest date was more than a week old. That accounted for Gavin's bad temper these last days. Dad had stopped short. Two dollars, and then no more. If Gavin wanted money after that he could earn it.

Fifty and forty were ninety, fifty more, twenty-two more. Gavin owed one hundred and sixty-two dollars.

Becky was sitting quite still, thinking, when her mother came unexpectedly in. Becky started. "Mother....look here...." she said indistinctly. "I was looking for the old desk scissors and I happened to see these." She held out the I.O.U.s.

"Yes, I know about them," Sarah said slowly.

"Oh, Mother!" Becky's tone was despairing. "This can't go on, It—simply, it can't go on!"

"H'm!" Sarah muttered, shaking her head, not meeting the younger woman's eyes.

"What do you think, Mother?" Becky demanded despairingly.

"Well, I think there will have to be a change; I agree with you about that," Sarah began guardedly. "Gavin—it's only reasonable to suppose that Gavin will get something to do sooner or later ...." Her voice wavered away doubtfully.

"Meanwhile," Becky said in, the silence, "meanwhile I have to bear every possible humiliation with all of my old friends—that's nothing! I can bear that, but I'm always afraid—afraid of what Gavin may do or not do. I'm sponging on you and Dad for every mouthful I eat and every one the baby eats, and now Gavin's added to that—now he's settled down here comfortably too, eating and drinking as if it were a hotel and borrowing money from Dad to gamble with! I can't stand it! Can't you and dad get him to go away? I've tried. I've kept at him for days...."

"You may as well know, Beck", her mother said in a troubled reluctant voice, "that dad has tried to—to spur Gavin into something like ambition. At first dad looked for photography work for him here, but there wasn't a chance of that. Gavin,..." Mrs. Gibson hesitated delicately. "Gavin wasn't interested," she finally said. "And now lately," she went on, "Dad's been very firm with him about going away and getting work somewhere, so that he can send for you and the baby one of these days. But Gavin—he was quite rude to Dad," Sarah finished, and was suddenly silent.

"Rude to Dad!" Becky echoed, aghast.

"Yes, he—he said that if he went he'd take you and the baby and that we'd never hear of you again," Sarah answered. Sudden tears ran down her full, plain, middle-aged face and blotted out her courageous smile.

Becky displayed the newspaper clippings. "I was seriously thinking of taking a job somewhere," she said.

"What sort of a job, Beck?"

"Housework, I suppose. Cooking, maybe. Anything's better than a shop, Mother. They almost killed us at the Bon Marche."

For a while Sarah could not seem to find anything to say. "If you're going to do that, Beck, how much better to stay here!" she offered at last.

"But as long as I stay here, Mother, Gavin will stay here! When I'm gone, Dad can send Gavin away without being afraid of hurting me. And if other women have taken care of themselves and their babies, I can do it!"

"Beck," said her mother, "don't give up yet, dear. You've had a terribly hard year since first you knew the baby was coming. But what's a year out of a lifetime, Beck? Thousands of women have to endure conditions just as hard, year out and year in—"

There was a silence. It was Becky who broke it, impulsively. "Mother, you don't think we'll get anywhere, going on like this?"

"No, Beck," Sarah answered slowly. "I see how hard it is for you, dear. I see what you mean. It's hard for all of us. If things go smoothly, then Gavin is so pleasant—amusing the boys and playing dominoes with dad. And if there's the slightest criticism...."

"Don't expect me to say what I think of myself for letting us all in for this," Becky said with sudden passion. "I think it all day long, you know that! I suppose it was love. It was what fool girls of twenty think is love! And the worst of it is that when he puts his arm around me and says, 'Ah, Beck, we love each other, give me another chance!'—the horrible part of it is that I—I—"

"I know," her mother said hastily, as one avoiding pitfalls. "That's only natural, Beck. You're his wife, and whatever your reason says, it's natural for you to forgive him.... Beck," Sarah said suddenly, as one coming to a resolution, "you know my white gloves that daddy brought me home for Ida's wedding? You know, I wore them about four years ago, and I haven't worn them since?"

"I remember!" Becky laughed shakily.

"Well, there they are. Some of the women wear gloves to the club," Sarah said leniently, "but all I do is to take 'em off and work 'em into a ball. They're in my lower drawer at the back, beneath my mother's Spanish shawl. And in them, Beck, are five twenty-dollar bills. I won them in a newspaper contest years and years ago—you remember?— and I've never found anything good enough to spend 'em on. If you ever really need them, I mean if Gavin should get a promise of a job and you should want to go—Now don't cry, Beck. Why, what else would a mother want to do with her money except spend it on her children?"

Becky's head was down on the desk; her face was buried in her hands. Sarah stroked the bowed bright hair for a moment. Then she went upstairs to change her clothes and peep in on Gibbs, who was stirring.

"Beck!" she called down. "Baby awake!"

"I'm coming!" Becky gulped, put the clippings into her purse, went upstairs. She looked in at the bedroom door; saw sitting up in his crib in the dim light the red-cheeked baby with his cockatoo crest of silky black hair. "Ah, Mother, come see how adorable he looks" she said. A few minutes later, Sarah heard her laughing as she busied herself with Gibb's bath preparations, and breathed easier.

And again the days took up for Rebecca their unending, throbbing undertone. What can I do? What can I do? What can I do?

And again Gavin slept late, shaved, bathed, dressed himself carefully, drifted downstairs to an eleven o'clock breakfast, got a lift uptown from Becky on her way to market or sauntered forth to catch the noon bus.

He would come back in the late afternoon perhaps to play ball with the boys in the yard for an hour, wander about picking up a pear or a few prunes, make to Spencer Gibson some helpful suggestion about the car or go up to the orchard to chat with the fruit pickers as he smoked a cigarette.

But sometimes he did not come back for dinner or went away immediately after it. Then he might not be home until three or four in the morning if he came home at all. If he went with some of the men to San Andreas or Stockton he might not put in an appearance until breakfast time on the following day, when he would be heavy with sleep and stumble upstairs after his second cup of coffee to fall heavily into bed.

One very hot afternoon Becky and her mother went into town to see Judge Miller. Judge Miller was fat, good-natured, fond of fishing, of a mild poker game, of sitting back in a broad tipped revolving chair in his office swapping stories with his contemporaries. His father, old Nat Miller, had owned the mines to which Salletts owed its existence. He had left his son a modest fortune.

Joe Feratta worked in Judge Miller's office, the judge's own son having failed repeatedly to pass his bar examinations, but Joe was in Sacramento now, watching the famous Chet Dark case. Becky knew there was no danger of an encounter with him on this particular afternoon.

She and Sarah looked hot and pale with the heat when they went into the cool big office and faced the lolling, fat old man. He seemed pleased to see them.

They talked weather and lake fishing and the sudden widowhood of the judge's daughter Jean, who was coming home with the two little girls, and then Sarah, who was very nervous, said abruptly: "Judge, this girl wants to talk to you. She's in real trouble."

Becky's eyes, fixed on the old man, filled with tears, and her lip trembled as she said, "It's Gavin, Judge."

Musical Program of Unusual Merit Given in St. Michael's Auditorium

St. Michael's Academy auditorium was crowded to capacity last evening as music lovers from all parts of the city assembled for an entertainment whose excellence will long be remembered with pleasure. The program combined a joint recital by John Deacon, tenor, and Harold Barrett, baritone, with Mary Conper Deacon as accompanist with a concert by St. Michael's Band in whose interests the affair had been arranged. The graciousness of these outstanding artists in giving so freely of their talent to encourage the work of the small musicians was the gesture of a generous spirit.

The academy stage presented a handsome setting for the event with its background of flags, ferns and yellow chrysanthemums.

The background colors were reflected in the smart costumes of the band, the red and blue capes, the white dresses and blouses and the gold trimmed pill box hats. The band occupied places of honor on the stage throughout the evening, and as each one made his or her appearance, introduction was made by their highly efficient leader, Barbara Forhan. The band is composed of: Joan McIntyre, Bobby Young, Bobby Moher, Margery Gill, Teddy Boyle, Joseph Barrett, Theresa Meagher, Nora Fluery, Dolores Clapp, Betty Flynn, A. O'Connor, Rose Marie Scanlan, Larry Meagher, Edward Barrett, Loyola Chappelle and John Briand.

Remarkable Progress

St. Michael's Band, whose members are only three years away from kindergarten days have brought acclaim to their director Sister Mary Mercedes, their school and city with the wonderful progress they have made. Their program last evening of ensemble numbers, solo, duet and quartet selections, demonstrated their right to the laurels already won. Using regulation instruments and playing numbers that called for the most skilled technique the tiny performers added another to their list of successful appearances. Those hearing them for the first time were astounded by their finished technique, and the tone that they achieve, while those who have followed their careers marveleld at development of the past few months.

Among the interesting band numbers was "Annie Laurie" which had been featured in the Scottish airs they had played during the visit to Kingston of Their Majesties and had won them a treasured expression of Queen Elizabeth's pleasure. Besides the ensemble numbers, a tuba solo by Theresa Meagher, cornet duet by Loyola Chappelle and Margery Gill, cornet solo by John Briand, clarinet duet by Dolores Clapp and Betty Flynn, saxaphone solo by Bobby Young, drum solo by Rose Marie Scanlan, euphonium solo by Loyola Chappelle, quartet by Dolores Clapp, Betty Flynn, Theresa Meagher and Nora Fluery were splendidly rendered.

Amusing Duet

The audience was especially captivated, however, by the instrumental dialogue between Bobby Moher disguised as a girl and Edward Barrett. The dexterity of the musicians in changing tempo for each line of the amusing conversation was wonderful and the sketch itself was a novel and entertaining number.

Mr. John Deacon

The success of John Deacon, tenor, on the Canadian and New York Concert stage and in radio has carried his fame far afield. It was with a feeling of privilege that his audience welcomed him last evening. All who heard him were deeply impressed with the artistry that is his.

His songs last evening included "Morning"—(Oley Speaks); "Five Eyes" — (Gibbal; "Tally-Ho" — (Leoni); "An Irish Love Song" — (Lang); "A Page's Road Song"—(Novello); and "The Pipes of Gordon's Men"—(Hammond). In his program he stressed the descriptive piece with dramatic possibilities, so admirably suited to his voice and temperament, and presented with such fine shading; thus endowed with a splendid lyric voice he gave a skilled interpretation of each succeeding number and was recalled again and again by an eager audience.

Mr. Harold Barrett

Mr. Harold Barrett, baritone, has attained outstanding success on his radio appearances and his generous participation in various programs and it afforded his friends a rare pleasure to hear him in recital. His is a powerful voice of natural richness and beauty of tone over which the singer has perfect command. Mr. Barrett gave "Floral Dance" — (Katie Moss); "I Love Life" — (Mana-Zucca); "When You Come Home"—(W. H. Squire); "Give a Man a Horse" (Geoffrey O'Hara); "I Sweet Mystery of Life" —(Victor Herbert); "Hail King George" —(Edward St. Quentin). His rendition was marked with fervor and depth of feeling that emphasized the vigor and quality of his wonderful voice.

Perfect Accompaniment

In Mary Conner Deacon, pianist, the singers had a fellow artist of distinction. Her excellent musicianship and her perfect comprehension of the role of accompanist made of her work a masterly accomplishment. With the background of her inspired accompaniment the singers could not but give of their best. As a token of their appreciation the band presented her with a bouquet of crimson roses.

Presents Medals

An interesting part of the program was the presentation of medals to two bandmembers. Lieut. Fred Jobson, conductor of the Belleville Municipal Band, pointing out that St. Michael's band was the youngest functioning on the North American continent, said that the success they have attained can be judged by the awards individual members have merited. At the Waterloo competition of 71 bands and 5,000 musicians, Dolores Clapp and Bobby Young won gold medals, as did members of the Belleville Municipal Band. The former, the only girl among 21 entries, gave in the opinion of the adjudicator, the finest performance on that instrument that he had ever heard from one of her age; while Bobby Young, having to enter a class with boys six years his senior played like a veteran and none could touch him. Mr. Jobson presented the medals last evening and also extended greetings from Belleville Municipal which was ever ready to assist their junior colleagues.

Expresses Appreciation

In his eloquently phrased address of appreciation, Rt. Rev. J. F. Nicholson, V.G., voiced the pleasure of all on this delightful and distinguished occasion. It was with a deep sense of appreciation that the audience welcomed the appearance on the program of Mr. and Mrs. John Deacon. Their performance had shed added lustre on the international fame they so justly enjoyed. He spoke of the glowing interpretation, the subtle art of Mrs. Deacon's performance and her radiant personality which had captured all hearts. He referred to the marvellous career of John Deacon which had reflected honor on himself and his native city, proof of which was the audience's immediate reaction to his brilliant singing that showed distinguished training of his magnificent gift, enriched by his magnetic personality. Mr. Barrett's glorious voice had never been heard to better advantage. We were proud, the speaker said, to possess among us such a great artist whose shining talent was ever at our disposal. Deep gratitude was felt for Mr. Barrett's efforts arranging this concert with such fruitful success.

Monsignor Nicholson also expressed gratitude to Lieut. Jobson, Mr. Hinchey, to the local perss and to all those who had assisted, in any way, in the evening's entertainment.

Miss Loyola Chappelle was then presented with the J. M. Greene Cup for outstanding musicianship. The playing of "God Save the King", brought the memorable evening to a close.

'Toots' Holway Named Coach Of R. C. A. F. Hockey Team; 35 Hopefuls Answer First Call

Team Practices at Oshawa but Workout Not Fair Test of Ability

MANY FORWARDS

Squad, When Finally Picked, Will Represent Many Parts of Canada

Albert R. "Toots" Holway, former N.H.L. hockey player and well known Belleville hockey mentor, was named coach of the Trenton Royal Canadian Air Force senior hockey team prior to the Flyers' initial season's hockey workout at the Oshawa arena last evening, the announcement being made by Group Captain C. D. McEwen, in command of the Trenton Air Station yesterday. Directly following the appointment of Coach Holway the Flyers took to the ice in Oshawa, some thirty-five strong, in a full hour of strenuous pre-season practice. Holway's success as a coach of the Belleville juniors and his past experience in professional hockey ranks were all taken into consideration as the R.C.A.F. Sports Club decided upon the engaging of a professional hockey coach for the season of 1939-40.

With aspiring players from all parts of Canada represented on skates and others from Western Canada being unable to appear owing to the lack of equipment, the largest roster of pucksters in the history of the Trenton "Flyers" sallied forth aspiring for hockey positions in Oshawa. Several players of note in Canadian hockey circles, who are now stationed at the Trenton Air Camp were absent owing to week-end leaves, noticable being Driscoll, a goalkeeper from Montreal who obtained a try-out with the Montreal Canadiens of the National Cockel League in 1938 and "Mac" Goldie, a forward player now in the Air Force, who starred with the New York Rovers in the U.S.A. Eastern League last season.

Many Forwards Seen.

A galaxy of cosmopolitan pucksters from near and far worked out under the watchful eye of Coach Holway and Manager F/O. J. Stevenson, upon whose shoulders the business management of the Flyers rests this season, Laurie Gibson, veteran Air Force goalie, and McKenna, former Toronto Danforth Technical School net minder, stood between the 'gas-pipes' during the initial practice. Driscoll and a lad named Collins, who tended goal on the Pacific Coast were absentees. It proved a difficult task for Coach Holway to segregate the wheat from the chaff among the innumerable forwards who sought berths with the airmen, some twenty-five of the night's aspirants being front-line men, of which many were of the junior age and were ultimately discarded as either lacking in experience or too young for sturdy senior O.H.A. hockey. Jack Lafferty, former Kingston centre-ice player, made a favorable impression, while "Hal" Harrison, who patrolled the right boards for Markham in the O.H.A. playdowns last winter demonstrated his ability as a two-way hockey player who will doubtless catch a berth on the current season Flyers' club. Harrison showed class and proved he possessed plenty of ability. Sid Lockyer, of last year's Picton juniors and Doherty, who played Mercantile hockey in Toronto were others to impress of the large number present.

Veterans Satisfy.

Only three of last season's R.C.A.F. squad, aside from Gibson, answered the call, the remainder having been transferred to other units of the Air Force. "Mac" McNab, Baldwin and Jamieson of last year's team appear to be fixtures in 1939-40 as all three carried veteran experience into the practice. However, there was a marked absence of righthand shots among the aspiring forwards, only two right-wingers being in evidence, of which Harrison, the Markham speedster, was one. Other players seen hailed from Montreal, Ottawa and two former Belleville Collegiate lads, Gerow and Muncaster, also showed promise along with a host of others who wore nondescript outfits and could not be seen at an advantage.

Defence Players Outstanding.

Along the defensive lines, however, the airmen looked stronger than they have in three seasons, when four towering rear-guardsmen all with plenty of hockey background appeared to gladden the hearts of the goalkeepers. Headed by "Big Red" Cameron, former Lachine, Que. defenceman, Don Crawford of Kingston, Dryer of Acton and lastly Kenneth Higgins, former London blocker of pucks in the M-O League were all impressive and showed general inclination of good hockey ability. Cameron and Higgins stood out as two of the best newcomers to the Flyers, as the defencemen iced overshadowed the front line players of attack in early season appearange. Both Higgins and Cameron have illustrious hockey backgrounds of former seasons, while Crawford and Dryer appear to be up-and-coming youngsters. Plinkington, former Ottawa player, Steve Hook, last year's junior from New Hamburg and who is slated to play for the Belleville juniors, and two other new players rounded out the aspiring defence.

The Flyers will practice at the Oshawa Arena on Monday and Tuesday of next week, rest on Wednesday and return to the Motor City for an exhibition game with the Oshawa Generals, junior hockey champions of Canada, next Thursday night in the Oshawa Arena prior to their launching into the Van Horne Memorial Series at Kingston the following week.

Stewart to Referee In Chicago Sunday

Chicago, Nov. 1 (AP)—Bill Stewart, major league baseball and ice hockey arbiter, will make his first appearance on the Chicago Stadium ice Sunday night since he was fired as manager of Chicago Black Hawks last mid-season.

Stewart will referee the Hawks' game with New York Americans. He was a National Hockey League official before he was hired to pilot the Chicago team during the 1937-38 season. He turned in a sensational job, driving the team to the Stanley Cup after a so-so season-long performance.

But last season the Hawks slumped badly, Stewart losing his job to Paul Thompson, current manager.

FIGHTS LAST NIGHT

Duluth, Minn. — Arne Anderson, 209, Sweden, knocked out Red Bruce, 184, Pittsburgh, (3).

Dublin—Tommy Farr, 196, Wales, knocked out Manuel Abrew, 183, of Glasgow, (3).

Los Angeles—Nick Peters, 138, San Antonio, knocked out Johnny Rohrig, 138, New Jersey, (2).

Philadelphia — Tommy Spiegal, 132½, Uniontown, Pa., outpointed Bob Montgomery, 135, Philadelphia, (10).

Bucky Walters Hopes to Win Thirty Games

Philadelphia, Nov. 11—(AP)—A 30-game winner—that's what Bucky Walters hopes to be next year.

The converted third baseman, whose feat of winning 27 games on the pitching mound for the pennant-winning Cincinnati Reds won him the National League "most valuable player" award, spoke today of his hopes for 1940.

"I'm going to try and win them all," declared the 29-year-old right hander, who makes his home in Philadelphia during the off season.

"I'm pitching the same way with the Reds that I did with the Phillies," Bucky continued modestly. "I've got a better team behind me that's all.

"Of course I pitch to the batter's weakness. I try to get the ball where they hit it softest. I don't try for a strikeout except maybe when I'm in a jam.

"But don't forget once you're out there on the mound you're in the laps of the gods. Sometimes you can't get anyone out."

As for the world series, Bucky just laughs.

"I still think Joe Dimaggio must have cut across from first to third," he says of that incident in the fourth and last game when Dimaggio scored all the way from first while Ernie Lombardi, Red's catcher, lay prone on the ground with the ball only a few feet away.

Bucky is taking things easy now, but plans to play handball a lot after the first of the year.

And, oh yes, he used his loser's share of slightly more than $4,000 from the world series to finish paying for his Philadelphia home.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

Ken J. Colling

A really cosmopolitan band of aspiring hockey players answered the initial call and urge to chase the elusive rubber at the Oshawa arena last evening when the R.C.A.F. "Flyers" held their initial hockey practice of the current season. Outside of viewing the workout, there were several features. Initially A. R. "Toots" Holway, former N.H.L. puckster and more recently mentor of junior hockey in Belleville, was named chief coach of the Flyers senior team for the forthcoming season, with F-O. J. Stevenson being the club manager. The latter is an exceedingly genial fellow, a graduate of R.M.C. and one who Coach Holway can' rely upon for unquestionable co-operation. Secondly, the Flyers were afforded free practice at the Oshawa arena last night, Monday and Tuesday, presumably a splendid wartime gesture on the part of the management of the Oshawa arena, but, thirdly the Flyers will meet the Oshawa Generals in an exhibition game in Oshawa next Thursday night.

Last night's practice was called rather hastily and resulted in somewhat of a nondescript outfit having to be iced and with the result that several of the aspiring players from Western Canada were without equipment, paramountly skates. However, some 35 availed themselves of the practice and they gave Coach Holway everything, including a headache, as the over-zealous players put too much of the present-day oomph into their efforts. Along the front line of newcomers we liked Harrison, a right-winger formerly of Markham and Lafferty, one of Wally Elmer's Kingston kids, to say nothing of Legris, McNab, Baldwin and Jamieson all of whom played with the Airmen last year. The gleaming light however, was in the defencemen we were on and all being strange faces. They stole the initial practice picture, insofar as we could discern with so many cluttering the ice. There was "Red" Cameron, a towering defenceman from Lachine, Que., who will undoubtedly prove popular in Belleville, Kennie Higgins, former London M.-O. trickster. Don Crawford, another of Elmer's Kingston kids and Dryer, the lad from Acton, and we'll stop with Driscoll, the goalie who was absent last night, but who was given a trial with the Montreal Canadiens last year.

Being somewhat short of space and the compositor crying for copy, we'll reserve our further comments upon the initial workout of the Flyers until next week, when we can more fully elucidate upon their initial efforts.

Showing too much speed Coach Frank Cunningham's O.S.D. abbreviated gridsters romped through the Bay of Quinte group of the newly inaugurated six-man football enterprise of the C.O.S.S.A. without a loss by winning over the Trenton Collegiate 18-1 yesterday. Prior to the kick-off yesterday it was evident that the losing squad passed out of the Quinte loop picture and to show their superiority the lads from the "deaf school" struck a punishing blow in the initial quarter as the Kiniski-Graziano combination swung into early action for an early count. The really outstanding play was Graziano's 84 yard run for a major score, after Orser had fumbled with a touchdown within his grasp. The group champion O.S.A. squad now advance to the C.O.S.S.A. playdowns by virtue of their winning of an initial championship.

By the first of the week Secretary "Red" Townsend of the Belleville Juvenile Hockey Association, will be ready to distribute registration cards to all boys in the city, who are desirous of playing organized hockey under the supervision of proven coaches and management. Boys, who are under 18 years of age on Jan. 1st. next, can obtain these registration cards at Mr. Townsend's store on Campbell Street sometime next week, of which we will have more concrete information on Monday. It is believed the league executive will provide uniforms for the players along the same styles and patterns of N.H.L. clubs, while splendid crests will be given to the members of the winning team of Belleville's juvenile hockey loop.

Do you remember when Charley Belanger, veteran of Canada's light-heavyweight boxers, who was knocked out for the first time in his 200-battle career at New York four years ago today. Eric Seelig shot over the haymaker that laid the Winnipegger on the mat in the fourth round.

When Clark Griffith, owner of the Washington Senators, tried to buy the Baltimore Orioles for a Class AA minor league farm, Mrs. Jack Dunn said she was holding the property for Jack Dunn III, grandson of the famous seven-time flag-winner. The youth is now a freshman at Princeton.

It was an impressing sight to see some three to four hundred skaters enjoying themselves in healthful recreation at the Oshawa Arena during skating hours last night. The management of the Oshawa Arena informed us that practically all hours of the day and night were being utilized for practice for the next month and that pre-season hockey games were sure to hit the gate receipt target and register a jack-pot. The answer is artificial ice. With nearly 2,000 at the Airport and business on the uptrend, artificial ice in the Hume Arena another season would undoubtedly prove a splendid dividend, simply because it is during that period prior to the opening of the O.L.A., that big profits in skating and hockey are realized. There aren't so many expenses entailed.

SPORT SPICE— Doug Runions counted a goal and an assist as Port Colborne lost to Toronto last night.... Roy Covert, former Belleville puckster now with the Washington Eagles, registered the Eagle's first goal as his team beat Queen's 6-4 last night.... Tommy Farr won a fight over one Manuel Abrew in Dublin yesterday only to have old Larry Gains challenge the winner. wonder if they roll 'em out in wheeled chairs over 'ome? ....Today's feature football attractions are Balmy Beach at Sarnia and Western at Queen's ....As erly as last night motor cars were passing through Belleville trekking east and bearing signs—"Yes, Western".. Kingston is the mecca of Eastern Ontario football fans today, but we favour Western, despite the heavy going.... Belleville Redmen and the Air Force were both accepted into the Van Horne Series last night.

TORONTO LEAFS PLAY TWIN BILL THIS WEEKEND

Stanowski, Kampman and Don Metz Will Not be Used Due to Injuries

HORNER TO PLAY

Leafs Have 22 Men and All Can be Rested Until Fully Recovered

(By the Canadian Press)

Toronto Maple Leafs begin their round of week-end National Hockey League double-headers tonight better equipped to stand the strain than ever before.

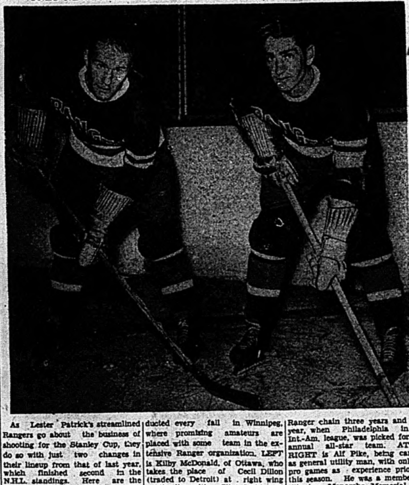
The preference of Ontario fans for Saturday night hockey has presented the Leafs with gruelling schedules in the past, for usually they have been tired for Sunday night engagements in United States cities. No other club has run up against quite the same trouble.

But Manager Conny Smythe is carrying 22 players this year, whereas only 11 can be dressed for the game, and every man is likely to see a good measure of service in the Leafs' still week-end assignments. Eleven times they play at home Saturday and swing south for games the following night.

The Leafs tackle the Rangers at Toronto tonight and at New York tomorrow night in Madison Square Garden's first hockey date of the new season.

With defencemen Wally Stanowski and Bingo Kampman and wingman Don Metz all recovering from injuries, Toronto would be up against it if the slim player limit of other winters were being carried. As it is, these three can rest until fully recovered. Captain Red Horner, kept out of the opening night victory over Boston with an infected foot, will replace Stanowski on the defence for the Ranger engagements. Coach Dick Irvin can make variations easily at New York if tonight's showing doesn't please. New York Americans, beaten by Montreal Canadiens in their opener Thursday, will oppose the Black Hawks at Chicago tomorrow. Boston's world champions may have to play without defenceman Johnny Crawford in their meeting with the Red Wings at Detroit Sunday. Crawford crashed into the end boards in an exhibition last night at Owen Sound, Ont., and X-ray examination of an elbow injury was to be made today.

ONLY NEWCOMERS WITH 1939-40 EDITION OF N.H.L. RANGERS



As Lester Patrick's streamlined Rangers go about the business of shooting for the Stanley Cup, they do so with just two changes in their lineup from that of last year, which finished second in the N.H.L. standings. Here are the newcomers, both products of Patrick's famous "hockey school," conducted every fall in Winnipeg, where promising amateurs are placed with some team in the extensive Ranger organization. LEFT is Kilby McDonald, of Ottawa, who takes the place of Cecil Dillon (traded to Detroit) at right wing on the line with Clint Smith and Lyn Patrick. He's been in the Ranger chain three years and last year, when Philadelphia in the Int.-Am. league, was picked for the annual all-star team. AT the RIGHT is Alf Pike, being carried as general utility man, with only 11 pro games as experience prior to this season. He was a member of Winnipeg Monarchs, Memorial Cup winners of 1936-37.

Brilliant Offensive by O. S. D. Wins Bay of Quinte Title As Squad Downs Trenton 18-1

Winners Pile Up Big Score in First Quarter and Then Coast to Victory

GRAZIANO A STAR

Backfielder Runs Length of Field for Touchdown After Recovering Loose Ball

Displaying a brilliant running attack with a series of forward passes, the O.S.D. defeated Trenton High School on the O.S.D. campus on Friday afternoon by an 18-1 count and won the Bay of Quinte group championship of the C.O.S.S.A. for six-man football. The student bodies of both schools were out in force but the Trenton students did not have much chance to enthuse for the O.S.D. squad simply ran wild in the first quarter to run up a 17-0 count and from there till the end held the opposition safe. Graziano emerged the hero of the pastime with a run of 84 yards for a touchdown, when he grabbed a loose ball behind his own line after Orser had plunged over and evading the tacklers streaked for the opposite goal line and pay dirt. The safety man for the Trenton squad made a valiant effort to overcome the fleet-footed runner but it was no go and Graziano ended up behind the line but pretty well exhausted.

All in First Quarter

The story of the game can be well told in the first quarter. After the kick-off Kiniski intercepted a forward pass and the parade started. Graziano was shoved through for twenty yards on a line plunge and on the next play Kiniski broke around the end for a touch down with Graziano kicking the extra point. Shortly after the kick-off Robertson recovered a loose ball and on the next play, May threw a 35-yard forward to Robertson and he went the rest of the way for another major count. Graziano again kicked the extra point. Trenton at this point came to life and with a series of end runs and line plunges by V. Burtt and Orser carried the play into O.S.D. territory and "Nipper" Burtt carried over the line but the ball was knocked out of his hands and Graziano recovered before it touched the ground.

Evading the tacklers he worked his way over his own goal line and gathering speed hiked for the promised land. The Trenton team was taken entirely by surprise with the rapid turn in events but tried vainly to stop the forward march but Graziano outsped his opponents and another touch was in the bag for the O.S.D. The kick was blocked and half time was called with O.S.D. having a large margin of the play.

O.S.D. Shows Superiority

In the third period neither side were able to make much headway although the O.S.D. showed superiority in general results. Their tackling was better and their plays were run off more smoothly than the opposition. Kiniski threw a 40-yard forward to Robertson and with pay dirt in sight the Trenton line held on two plunges and May was forced to kick to the deadline for a point. In the fourth quarter Trenton carried the play to the opposition but a better line held them at bay until the final minute, when Johnson was in position to kick to the deadline for the only point Trenton obtained in the contest.

Graziano was the outstanding star of the contest with Kiniski, Robertson and May showing fine form in the pinches. Frank Cunningham in charge of the O.S.D. kept his team intact until the issue was beyond doubt and then sent in his second stringers and they displayed the some fighting courage as the first team and Trenton was unable to gain only one point against them. "Nipper" Burtt and his brother Frank were the best for the visitors with Johnson showing good form in the tackling department. The O.S.D. squad are worthy champions of the district. The line-ups:

O.S.D.—Snap, Robertson; wings, Bartu and Barton; quarter, Bruce May; halves, Kiniski and Graziano; subs, Boadway, Hazlett, Murphy and Parent.

Trenton—Snap, F. Burtt; wings, Wilson and Orser, quarter, Weller; backs, Johnson and V. Burtt; subs, McKibbon, White, Weeks and McCaughey.

Prominent Athletes, Crummer, Somerville, Promoted in Army

London, Ont., Nov. 11 (CP)—Two prominent athletes are included in the list of promotions in the non-permanent active militia issued by Brigadier D. J. MacDonald, Officer Commanding Military District No. 1.

In the Royal Canadian Army Service Corps, Ammunition Company, First Divisional, Charles R. (Sandy) Somerville was promoted to a Second Lieutenant. He has won the Canadian amateur golf championship six times and the United tSates amateur once.

G. Keith Crummer, a track and field man, becomes a Second Lieutenant in the Kent Regiment (machine gun) under the promotions. He is a former Canadian intercollegiate champion in the javelin and discus throw, shot put and pole vault.

A speeding up of the war-time program in the military district is seen in instructions issued by Brigadier MacDonald for the establishment of ten schools of instruction for the non-permanent active militia. The schools include artillery, signals, machine gun and rifle training and will be set up at London, Woodstock, Galt and other nearby points.

Trainer Earl Sande is shipping the Maxwell Howard and Hay John Whitney stables to Columbia, S.C., for the winter . . . Larry MacPhail is hunting in the Ozarks and may come back with Joe Medwick.

Cravat, the race hoss, also is an artist's model and has been the subject of several oil paintings . . . The list of fight managers feuding with Mike Jacobs grows and grows. Johnny Ray, Billy Conn's pilot, is the latest joiner.

SEABISCUIT TO RACE AGAIN

Still hopeful of seeing his great horse, Seabiscuit, surpass the record earnings of Sun Beau, Charles S. Howard has his last year's handicap champion back in training at Tanforan, Calif., planning to run in a race there, and then, if all goes well, possibly shoot for the $100,000 Santa Anita handicap in March. The picture shows the legs of the mighty racer—one of the most travelled and durable campaigners during 1937 and '38—being bandaged before a workout. Great care must be taken at all times to protect a thoroughbred's valuable legs from bits of flying metal or glass or even from his own hooves.

Gracie Fields To Sing to Troops

London, Nov. 11—"It's going to be a lovely crossing if there are no U-boats mucking about," Gracie Fields, actress, said today as she left England on her way to Capri, in the Bay of Naples, by way of the fighting front. Before reaching Capri, in about two weeks she will sing for the British troops in France. Her first concert there will be Tuesday.

"I can't go through France and only give one sing-song for those great lads," she said.

PUBLIC NOTICE
VOTING ON QUESTIONS

NOTICE is hereby given that a statement of each of the questions to be submitted to a vote of the electors at the Annual Municipal Elections for the election of a Council for the Corporation of the City of Belleville to be held on Monday the 4th day of December, 1939, is hereinafter correctly set forth.

FIRSTLY

Electors will have the opportunity of voting on the following question:

"Are you in favour of suspending the Annual Municipal Elections for a period of two years and / or for the duration of the present war, provided it continues beyond two years from the date hereof?"

SECONDLY

Electors will have the opportunity of voting on the following question:

"Are you in favour of an application being made to the Legislature to pass an Act extending the period for which members of Council are elected from a one year to a two year term and providing for retirement of one half of the members each year?"

NOTICE IS FURTHER GIVEN that the Mayor of the Corporation of the City of Belleville or a member of the Council duly appointed for that purpose shall attend at the Mayor's Office in the City Hall in the said City of Belleville on the 28th day of November, 1939, at the hour of two o'clock in the afternoon and if requested so to do, shall appoint in writing signed by him two persons to attend the final summing up of the votes given for and against the Questions, and one person to attend at each polling place on behalf of the persons interested in and desirous of promoting the proposed Questions and voting in the Affirmative thereon, and a like number on behalf of the persons interested in and desirous of opposing the proposed Questions and voting in the Negative thereon.

Certified correct and dated at Belleville the 10th day of November, 1939.

J. WILFRED HOLMES,
City Clerk.

GAME WARDEN'S FOOT CRUSHED

Herb McCabe of this city and Game Warden for this district, was taken to the Belleville General Hospital late last night following an accident in the woods north of Cloyne yesterday. Mr. McCabe is suffering from a bady crushed foot sustained when a large stone rolled upon his foot while he was on official duties with another Game Warden yesterday. Only meagre details of the accident were available today, but Dr. R. A. Flynn, who was inattendance, stated that the injured foot was badly crushed. It was not learned how the accident occurred, however.

Goyer's Sextette Inter-Form Winners

Vern Goyer's sextette won the Inter-form six-man football championship of St. Michael's Academy this week, defeating Captain Dick Barrett's team in the play-offs that concluded the complete season's schedule. All games were played on the East Belleville playgrounds, with Jack Doran, athletic director at St. Michael's Academy in charge.

The championship team was composed of Vern Goyer, Captain, D. Menna, Ray Peets, Harry Taylor, Bob Sheppard, Don Barrett, Sam Domenico, Bernard Meagher, Bob Bunton and Bill Lynch.

Police Blotter

An automobile driven by Charles Niles, 290 Albert St., collided with the street barricade on Bridge St., during last night's heavy rainstorm resulting in only the breaking of one lantern. The light was later replaced by the City Public Works Department. Mr. Niles told P. C. Thomson he had been trailing another motor car in the rain and had failed to see the barricade as his view was obstructed by the front vehicle. Only damage to the lantern resulted, however.

Clarence McCoy found himself minus a two-ton truck, which he had parked on Coleman St., last evening, when he returned to procure the vehicle early today. The vehicle had been stolen, McCoy, informed police after a thorough search of the surrounding district without results.

No arrests were necessary in Belleville last night leaving the police station cell block available to shelter ten transients who thought protection from the heavy rain of the night.

'In War as in Peace We Stand by British Commonwealth' Says Premier Smuts

Johannesburg, South Africa, Nov. 11— (CP-Reuters) — "We must be prepared", Prime Minister Jan Smuts said in a statement today, "to go to the assistance of British Colonies in Southern Africa in case of danger to them and us.

"Even our neighbor Mozambique (Portuguese) must be able to rely on our assistance in an hour of danger. In war as in peace we stand by our friends of the British Commonwealth. This is the policy which we have preached to them. It is still our policy."

(British colonies in the Southern half of Africa include Northern and Southern Rhodesia, Tanganyika, Kenya, and Uganda.)

'WORLD IS WITH US'

Later a parade filed solemnly past the tomb of the unknown soldier beneath the Arc de Triomphe, where stood President Lebrun and other high government officials. In contrast to the mass military display that has marked the occasion in former years, only a few young soldiers from the front took part in the ceremonies.

Britain and France United

After the parade President Lebrun addressed the nation by radio, setting forth the French and British motives for making war.

"The democracies of the west", he said, "in a complete identity of view, have made a stand so that liberty, justice, truth, respect for the individual, fidelity to the sworn word, shall remain the basis for relations among men and states, so that small nations shall not run the risk of being stricken out one after another from the map of the world and so that principles of civilization for which the generations have struggled and suffered in the past shall remain always alive and respected."

"The world is with us", he declared. "It understands that allied success has a general human interest. This is our justification. This is our pride. It is a guarantee of our victory."

Paris Placed on the Alert By 70-Minute Air Raid Warning Late Friday Night

Results of Anti-Aircraft Fire Not Determined — Mass Flights and Artillery Barrage on Two Sectors

INFANTRY ATTACKS

French Counterattacks Regain Positions and Inflict "Numerous Losses" on the Germans

Paris, Nov. 11 (AP) — Military sources said German reconnaissance planes swarmed over northern France early today, many of them flying over Belgium.

Paris was placed on the alert by a 70-minute air raid warning, from 4:45 a.m. to 5:55 a.m. (10:45 p.m. to 11:55 p.m. EST, Friday).

Results of anti-aircraft fire were not determined.

The alarm, coming on the 70th day of the war and on the 21st anniversary of the first Great War Armistice, was the sixth from Paris.

Military sources said that yesterday German mass flights aided a German artillery barrage on mile-long fronts in two undisclosed sectors of the western front.

These were followed, they said, by infantry attacks reaching the French second advance lines before French counterattacks regained the positions and inflicted "numerous losses" on the Nazis.

The French general staff today, however, reported in a communique: "Reduced activity on the front during the night."

WARTIME BRITAIN

As if mirroring the feeling of the nation, the weather itself was grey.

Poppies Bloom Everywhere

The British legation poppy bloomed everywhere, and with it was the French cornflower, symbolic of two nations side by side in arms. Nearly 2,000,000 poppies were flown from France by special plane.

The first wreath laid at the Cenotaph was from the King. While traffic proceeded along Whitehall, Commander Harold Campbell, equerry-in-waiting, placed the King's wreath at the base of the monument, saluted and departed.

At intervals soldiers, sailors and officials carried wreaths from a porch of the nearby Home Office, and paused for a moment. To avoid an assembly in Whitehall, a timetable was drawn up for the various delegations.

A Polish military mission was lead by General Norwid-Neugebauer in depositing a wreath.

Some Observe Silence

Although there was no cessation of work, thousands of people observed two minutes' silence. In many city offices the staffs stood. Three or four hundred people lined Whitehall on either side and observed the silence when Big Ben boomed 11.

During the silence a woman ran from the pavement toward the Cenotaph, crying "Hypocrites! Hypocrites! Twenty years after the war!"

She allowed a policeman to lead her away.

One Armistice feature— the service in Westminster Abbey—remained unchanged and the congregation was as large as formerly. A majority of those there were women, many wearing the medals or ribbons of relatives who died in the last war. Men who served in the first Great War, many of them disabled, sat alongside members of the 1939 fighting forces.

The afternoon press printed Armistice Day editorials.

"It was only an armistice after all," began The Evening News.

The Evening Standard said that "where we once failed we have resolved the next time to triumph."

Britons mourned the fallen of the last war in a country keyed to meet the threats of the new conflict.

Nation-wide Silence Omitted

For the first time the nation-wide silence at 11 a.m. was omitted because sirens signalling the time might be mistaken for air raid warnings.

For the first time also, the memorial service at the Cenotaph in Whitehall was abandoned because the large outdoor crowd might have meant a risk of life in case of an air attack—a threat underscored by reports that Germany might move air bases nearer England by driving into the low countries.

While the press headlined reports of Nazi troop movements on the borders of the Netherlands and Belgium, officials were silent on allied plans to meet any invasion of those nations.

Even if allied troops were invited by the Netherlands to aid in that country's defence against Nazi invasion, it was doubtful whether such a procedure would be feasible. Serious difficulties might stand in the way of convoying troops across the north channel waters and landing them under heavy fire.

Little Damage Results in City From Friday's High Winds

A ripping nor-wester, that approached gale-like proportions at times roared out of the blue last night, leaving in its wake broken limbs and branches of trees in the city, and spreading dead leaves and other autumn debris to the four corners of the compass.

Little or no property damage, however was reported in the city, Hydro representatives said today that services had not been disrupted while telephone crews stated that all lines had remained intact despite the severity of the wind.

City fire squads were called out on two different occasions to reduce chimney blazes caused by the strong winds, while luckless householders of the city saw their efforts of the past two days, when they meticulously raked and cleaned lawns and gardens of dead leaves and other debris, and placed them in piles for removal, go to naught as the capricious winds broadcast the piles in scattering formation over their property.

In the rural districts the wind severity was felt at its peak. Duck hunters crouching in blinds, awaiting the arrival of the feathered "dinners," saw their camouflaged covering whirled from above their heads A few fences in the vicinity of Rednersville were reported levelled, but no major damage to property is said to have occurred.

POPE PIUS

in order to earn daily bread for himself and his own," the Pontiff said. "We deeply lament the lot of those—their number in the United States is large indeed—who through robust, capable, and willing cannot have work for which they anxiously are searching.

"May the wisdom of governing powers, far seeing generosity on the part of employers together with speedy re-establishment of more favorable conditions effect the re-States is large indeed—who though to the advantage of all."

Prefaces Plea.

The Pope prefaced his plea for peace between capital and labor by saying:

"We desire to touch upon another question of weighty importance, the social question, which, remaining unsolved, has been agitating states for a long time and sowing amongst classes seeds of hatred and mutual hostility. You know full well what aspect it assumes in America, what acrimonies, what disorders it produces. It is not necessary therefore that we dwell on these points. The fundamental point of the social question is this, that goods created by God for all men should in the same way reach all, justice guiding and charity helping."

Pope Pius in assailing divorce said: "Oh, if only your country had come to know from the experience of others rather than from examples at home of the accumulation of ills which derive from the plague of divorce. Let reverence for religion, let fidelity toward the great American people counsel energetic action that this disease, alas too widespread, may be cured by extirpation."

Gratification was expressed by the Pontiff for the effective use of the press and radio in spreading religion.

Barge, Loaded With Two Bombers, Sinks

Attempt Will be Made to Raise the Planes

New York, Nov. 11—(AP) — A barge loaded with two Lockheed bombers consigned to the British Royal Air Force sank early today in quiet waters while tied up at Pier 12, at Stapleton, Staten Island.

The barge, less than ten years old, was awaiting the arrival of a British vessel to transfer the bombers for shipment overseas.

Detectives said there was neither wind nor high waves when the craft went down, although for the past week the barge had been buffeted by strong winds.

The barge, the Capitol, was owned by the Merritt-Chapman Wrecking Company whose officials also expressed astonishment at its sinking.

Lockheed representatives immediately ordered an attempt to raise the planes which they said would not be damaged by the submersion. The bombers were crated in two sections, with the engine and fuselage in one container and the wings in another they had previously been flown to Floyd Bennett Airport from California.

Another barge with three bombers on board lay at an adjoining pier. Police started an inspection of the craft for possible signs of tampering.

MADOC STUDENTS WIN PLAY-OFF OVER TWEED 7-5

Madoc H. S. Given Two Point Lead in Central Hastings Football Finals

Tweed, Nov. 11 (Special)—Madoc High School nosed out their Tweed rivals by the narrow margin of 7-5 in a hotly-contested contest on the latter's gridiron on Friday afternoon. The game was total points to count for the championship of the C.H.H.S. League. The playing field was in excellent shape despite the two-inch fall of snow of the previous night which had entirely disappeared before the game got underway.

A strong wind blowing right down the field throughout the entire game made accurate or long kicking and throwing exceedingly difficult. Few forward passes were attempted by either team. Madoc was unable to complete either of their attempts, while the locals completed one in four.

Possession of the ball passed from one side to the other repeatedly in the first half as the lines of scrimmage held well and forced a kick on nearly every third down. Harris for Madoc booted a couple of singles in this half to put the visitors in the lead which they never relinquished. Several times the locals were in position to kick singles but elected to try for major scores, losing possession of the ball when they failed to gain yards.

Munro gave the visitors a decided advantage when he was bucked across the line for an unconverted touchdown late in the third quarter to make the score 7-0 for Madoc, as the winners took full advantage of a following wind.

In the final quarter the home team had the advantage of the wind and soon worked the ball down the field for a try, which they failed to convert. Again the locals lost two or three golden opportunities to kick for singles which might have turned the tide. Final score, Madoc 7, Tweed 5. Second and final game will be played in Madoc on Thursday.

G. Wagar again made a nice job of kicking, out-distancing Harris throughout the game. Rivers, Courneyea, Connor, Luffman and Porritt played well for Tweed, with McCoy, Munro, B. Hawthorn and Harris starring for the winners.

Madoc — Quarter, Munro; flying wing, Hawthorn; halves, Stewart, Harris; snap, Phillips; insides, McBain, Demille; middles, Hawthorne, Downey; ends, McCoy, White; subs, White, Poulter, Scott, Armstrong.

Tweed — Flying wing, J. Wagar; quarter, Doyle; halves, Courneyea, Luffman, G. Wagar; snap, Connor; insides, Meagher, Porritt; middles, Price, Fisher; ends, Rivers, Langevin; subs, Larkins, McTaggart, Vance.

Officials—Hart, Marmora, Calnan, Tweed, Cummings, Madoc.

5,506,600 Pounds Cheese Exported To U. S. This Year

Toronto, Nov. 11.—The rapid rate at which Canada has been shipping cheese to the United States recently is indicated in official figures from Ottawa. For the first ten months of the current year shipments crossing the border amounted to 5,506,600 pounds, with a value of $789,361, which compare with 1,572,300 pounds at a value of $273,845, shipped in the like period of 1938. Of the ten-month total, 3,062,700 pounds were exported last month, so that October shipments this year approximately twice the volume of exports of the entire ten months of last year.

Demand remained slow for medium grades on the egg market, and prices on this grade declined in both sections. The market generally has maintained a firm tone all week, although shipments to Northern Ontario were light. Pullets comprised the bulk of the shipments.

The butter market had a quieter day. Buyers apparently had taken on sufficient supplies during the last three days to cover their present requirements. Some of the trade awaiting the report on cold storage holdings also helped to slow down activities. Prices held steady at the previous levels.

Montreal Produce.

Montreal, Nov. 11 (CP)—Produce market prices here, as reported by the Dominion Agricultural Bureau, follow:

Butter — First grade creamery prints, job price, 29c; first grade solids, job price, 28½c.

Eggs — Graded shipments in used free cases, selling price, A-large, 45c; A-medium, 39c to 40c; A-pullets, 32c to 33c; B-large, 26c; C, 20c. Receipts, 229 cases.

'Panacea!'

By OSCAR JONES

The office door flew open with a bang, and for a long level moment Dr. Ritchie stared at his demure daughter, so busily typing statements on the rickety old office typewriter; then with a ponderous sigh he went slowly over to his medicine-cabinet and sat down at the small desk there. After a long moment of thought, he swung around to the girl still busily typing and eyed the soft rose-blush of guilt on her smooth cheeks and noted the added sparkle of mischief in her merry eyes. It was too much, more than even a practiced surgeon could stand and with something strangely bewildered in his voice, for all its stern rebuke, he said:

"Lou-Anne, you don't have to tell me you did it, but it would help a heap if you'd tell me why! He—" here Dr. Ritchie blew his nose violently—"was my best friend, as was his father before him!"

"What," asked Lou-Anne Ritchie inocently, "have I done to make that a past tense, dad? Up to last night I thought you couldn't even chase a refractory tonsil without the collaboration of Dr. Bill!"

"Well, that's true, my faith in Bill's skill is almost beyond the realm of human faith; and now—"

The old man stared winkingly out of the window at the brown landscape.

"Yes? Now?" prompted Lou-Anne, swinging around from the typewriter and looking at her father with very much the same light in her eyes that a mother might have when looking at her son.

"You know well what's happened," roared the aroused professor of ailments and medicines. "You've gone and egged him into falling in love with you after letting him romp with you as a friendly playfellow all these years! And," thundered the furious doctor, "you may thank yourself for ruining his career, for he won't be worth a dented picayune from now on!"

And Dr. Ritchie glared malevolently at the ceiling, chewing his short, stubby mustache and rocking back and forth on his heels, far too experienced in warfare with this strange daughter of his to trust even so much as a glance in her direction, much less a thought as to what she might be thinking.

He knew he'd need every one of his mental cylinders when she did start the defensive!

"Uh," came in a soft, husky voice from the region of the typewriter, back of Dr. Ritchie, "you recall, of course, that you married, and lots of folks call you successful despite the blight of having me around."

And Dr. Ritchie gasped as though he'd had a dash of cold water flung in his face.

He hadn't thought of this!

"It would receive my whole blessing," he defended with stiff dignity, "if I even remotely dreamed that you had such honorable intentions in mind!"

"Well," went on the husky voice, "you never can tell. I'm only twenty-six and I do seem to have faint recollections of other offers of matrimony before!"

"Bah!" snorted Dr. Ritchie, scornfully.

"He has the nicest blue eyes I ever did see," dreamily commented Lou-Anne, and for a brief moment it seemed as though this remark were going to precipitate an unseemly death by apoplexy for her enraged father, but he was spared, and with a roar not unlike a pampas bull he charged out of the room and stormed up the stairs, listening with acutest ears for the mocking laughter he fully expected to hear.

But for once Lou-Anne Ritchie actions of her explosive parent.

She was, indeed, looking off beyond the distant horizon, and one versed in such things might have said that she was probing the future with wistful, hungry eyes, for despite her record as a man-hater, Lou-Anne had in reality known her moments of unhappiness, and it was not because she played with each succeeding victim and then tossed him away again, carelessly, but rather because she was searching ever for some one to conform to her ideals, and failing to find that some one or, rather, finding in each one something that violently clashed with her ideals, she went on hiding the wistful hurt under a teasing, gay banter.

And now, suddenly, last night she had been fooling in rough, tomboy fashion with Bill, as had been her wont ever since she could remember, (Bill was 36 and she 26) and of a sudden he had twisted her about from her wrestling hold and, handing her the book she had been scuffling with him for he had placed both hands on her shoulders and told her soberly, with a hint of huskiness in his fine voice and a trace of eager hope in his deep blue eyes, of the love he had always felt for her ever since he had first seen her as a motherless little flapper of 15, and he a serious, sober interne going "across" with the A.E.F!

And Lou-Anne, shaken beyond her control, had flashed him a wonderful look from her misty eyes and begging for time had fled to hide in the sanctity of her room and dream.

And now dad was horning in in true professional fashion.

Why must medical men think they can hold their finger on the pulse of a nation and prescribe cure-alls for every one?

Just as if, mind you, she were one of his nasty old experimental germs ready to bite Dr. Bill and lay him low!

But morning proved another thing, and that was that Lou-Anne could do a heap of thinking during ten hours of night, and, according she was hurriedly packing her bags and wiping large alligator tears from either eye as she worked, thinking of the note she had written Bill—for his own good!

She guessed she'd live up to the honor of the Ritchies if it was the last thing she did and required such minor sacrifices as giving up the one and only man she had ever been able to tolerate during all her stormy, tempestuous life!

"Where," demanded a stern voice that made her nearly jump a foot, "do you think you're going, Lou-Anne Ritchie?"

And Lou-Anne found herself looking up from her dusty Pullman chair into the wonderful blue eyes of Dr. Mill, who after that first glance threw caution to the winds, not even considering a lady from Boston who occupied the chais opposite, as with a catch in his voice he gathered Lou-Anne into his arms and sat down again in her chair, wiping the tears from her streaky little face with his own immaculate handkerchief and praying with all his might for an extra long dark tunnel.

"Dad said that I'd s-s-spoil your career; that I was a vamp, and I just couldn't stand it, not when I loved you so, Bill!" And Bill never did know that Lou-Anne's tears were of fear; fear that he wouldn't follow her in time!

Perhaps, just perhaps, Dr. Ritchie knew more about diagnosis, prescribing and cures than even Lou-Anne guessed! At any rate, he gave them his blessing!

Small Pigs Sensitive to Cold

When a little pig is born it is very sensitive to cold and seeks warmth by huddling as close as possible to its mother. When the mother shifts her position she is very apt to lie on some of her young. This is the cause for the high mortality rate in the raising of young pigs.

Little pigs born in a brooder house soon find the brooder. This leaves the sow free to move about the pen without endangering the lives of her pigs.

Some good lots of hogs marketed out of the Belleville district during the week of November 10th are as follows:

DRAMATIC PICTURE OF GERMAN RAID ON THE FIRTH OF FORTH

an invasion of the French under Louis XIV in 1672, was first modernized in 1874, and now forms the eastern front of the country's system of fortifications.

The water defence is supplemented by permanent and temporary fortifications on dry land which provide bases for army operations.

Tank Barriers On Roads.

Tank barriers have been arranged on all roads, and the numerous bridges over rivers and canals can be blown up by land mines at a given signal.

Of the three great defence zones, the first covers the central commercial and industrial provinces, including the cities of Amsterdam, Rotterdam, Utrecht, The Hague, and Leyden. In it is the "new water line", which runs from Muiden on the Zuider Zee to the Meuse River, passing east of Utrecht.

This region has secondary defences around the mouth of the Meuse and on nearby islands, along the Holland Deep, and at the entrance to the Zuider Zee. All the "polders," or fields, in the central district can be inundated.

A second line of fortifications passes east of Amersfoort and swings around to the west.

At the ends of the "water line" sea water can be used for flooding, and at its centre water is available from the Rhine, the Waal and the Meuse.

Enormous Dikes Built

Strong North Sea tides push the river waters back deep into the Netherlands. Enormous dikes have been built along the rivers, which are connected by a dense network of small and large canals.

As soon as hostilities began last September, the Netherlands government made careful preparations for inundation. In particular, they arranged to saturate the soil with water before flooding, so that any aggressor would encounter deep mud instead of solid ground.

Under flooding conditions the water is seldom more than 20 inches deep. This is enough to stop infantry and tanks, but not enough to float armored vessels and small transport boats.

Thus it would be extremely difficult for land troops to pass the water barrier protecting the centre of the country, between the Zuider Zee and the North Sea.

Farm Lands Not Protected

But the rich farming provinces, such as Groningen, Freisland and Limburg, are not protected by water. Their defence against aggression has been entrusted to the army, supported by permanent fortifications built years ago and reinforced this fall by a system of field organizations.

A series of naturally strong positions is available the; Ijessel line in the north, the Meuse line in the south, and the three rivers in the centre.

The Meuse line, together with the Juliana Canal, which is the equivalent here of the famous Albert Canal in Belgium, covers the southern provinces of Limburg and Brabant almost completely and almost directly at the frontier.

The Ijssel line is built along the course of this stream, which was originally a canal dug by the Roman General Drusus to hold back Germanic invasions, but now flows naturally. It protects the province of Gelderland, and a part of Overyssel.

The northern provinces, Friesland, Drenthe and Groningen, lack an natural line of resistance strengthened by concrete fortifications. A light system of fortifications has been built right on the frontier.

600,000 Men

The Netherlands has an army of about 600,000 men. The country has not been involved in war for more than a century, since 1831. During peace time national defence was entrusted to a small active army of four divisions General mobilization has now made available a much larger force, mostly infantry.

This force is not very mobile, but is perfectly adapted to its purely defensive task. There are only two regiments of cavalry, but each infantry regiment hase a cycle detachment. The bicycle has been very popular in this perfectly flat country.

The Netherlands has a very good air force, with foreign planes of types used by Germany and Great Britain as well as planes built here.

Rome, Nov. 11—(CP) — Italian newspapers published reports today that the Germans plan to start an invasion of the Netherlands next Wednesday.

According to the reports, the invasion would be preceded by a press campaign against Holland and would be accompanied by an offensive on the French front.

The reports appeared as Italy celebrated the seventieth birthday of King Victor Emmanuel, her sovereign for thirty-nine years.

In Rome military pomp honored the monarch with an artillery salute from Janiculum Hill and a massing of troops of the Rome garrison in the square facing the tomb of Italy's Unknown Soldier.

The King spent the day at his summer villa at San Rossore, where he was joined by members of his family, including his daughter, Queen Giovanna of Bulgaria.

QUICK ACTION OF FIRE DEPARTMENT SAVES HOUSES FROM FLAMES

Prompt action on the part of city fire squads prevented what might have been serious conflagrations last night, when two chimney fires occurring simultaneously at No. 2 Elm Street and 102 Station Street threatened to get out of conrol in the van of the strong prevailing winds.

Fanned to a red glow, the blazes roared up and around the chimneys, but prompt application of chemicals reduced the flames before any serious damage was done.

Latvian Pastor And Journalist At Bridge St. Church

Rev. Oswald A. Blumit who was official delegate from Lithuania to the Sixth Baptist World Congress in Atlanta, Ga., will be in Belleville on Sunday and speak in Bridge Street United Church at the evening service at seven o'clock and at 8:30 o'clock. Before he could return home to the work in his church in Latvia almost on the border of Soviet Russia, the war broke out with the German invasion of Poland and his return has been delayed.

He is the pastor of North Latgale Baptist Church which is the largest and oldest in Latgale Province of Latvia and which for a long time was the only Baptist Church in the Government of Vitebsk of Czarist Russia. He has established two orphan homes and a Christian Central School. This work is now very much imperilled during the present conflict, he states. As a preacher and journalist he has travelled extensively in most European countries especially in Germany, Lithuania, Poland and Latvia and is in possession of intimate knowledge of life and conditions in those countries.

He was in Berlin last November when the Jewish synagogues were burned and he witnessed their destruction, the work of burning being largely superintended by men in uniform. He says: I was present in the home of a Lutheran pastor when the police arrived and arrested him. I was staying with Roman Catholic priests as well as with Baptist ministers. I am able to give some idea of the inside affairs in the life of the common people of Germany.

He will give an illustrated address at 8:30.

Pictures will be chiefly descriptive of Latvia, though some of them will be of Poland and of Germany. All pictures are recent of 1938 and 1939.

Red Cross Appeal To be Featured by Nationwide Broadcast

This week-end will witness the launching of one of the most intensive drives for humanitarian purposes ever staged on this continent. Every single radio listener will have an opportunity of hearing about the war-time drive for funds by the Red Cross. Because the Red Cross is an international organization plans have been completed to make the American and the Canadian Red Cross appeals combine for greater effectiveness in this period of world-wide emergency. On Saturday evening, Nov. 11, the American Red Cross will broadcast an hour's program on the three national broadcasting circuits in the United States. In addition, the program will be picked up by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation and sent over the entire C.B.C. chain in Canada as well as being carried by a number of independent Canadian stations. Details of the program are not available, but Red Cross officials advise it will be of an all-star nature and will include a personal message from President Roosevelt.

Following in its wake on Sunday evening, Nov. 12, between 9 and 10 p.m. EST the Canadian Red Cross will broadcast an hour's program of speeches and musical entertainment. Included will be a speech delivered by His Excellency the Governor-General, Lord Tweedsmuir, from Ottawa, president of the Canadian Red Cross. Other addresses will be given by the Prime Minister, the Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, the Opposition Leader, Hon. R. J. Manion as well as other Canadian notables. This program will be carried by the entire Canadian Broadcasting Corporation network as well as by all independent stations in Canada. This is probably the most extensive nation-wide radio program ever before carried in Canada.

BLAST DESIGNED

"Similarly the great crime of the present war will end to the benefit of the Fuehrer and the Reich. Victory for the Reich will bring definite peace to the world.

"We say to our enemies: You wanted to take the Fuehrer from us; he is closer to us than ever and we are stronger than in the past."

"The last thought of the victims", Hess said, "was of Adolf Hitler. Their death brought to the full consciousness of the German people that our Fuehrer, too, was to have been a victim."

Hitler, who had addressed the gathering in the Buergerbrau Hall left the meeting only 11 minutes before the explosion.

When Hess finished his 12-minute eulogy, Hitler approached the coffins, placed wreaths on them, and gave the Nazi salute.

Lull in Operations

The services came during a lull in operations on the war front. A communique issued in Berlin this morning by the High Command said:—

"The war relapsed into comparative inactivity. In the west there was only minor scouting and artillery activity. One French captive balloon was brought down at Kolmar by a German pursuit plane."

A commission investigating the Buergerbrau explosion, in which 63 persons were injured, announced it had uncovered "positive" evidence that parts used in construction of the infernal machine causing the blast were of "foreign origin."

Messages congratulating Hitler on his escape continued to pour in.

A military expert, writing in Hitler's newspaper, Voelkischer Beobachter, claimed Germany's military power had been strengthened by acquisition of artillery and war supplies during the Polish campaign.

TRANSPORTATION

Issue All Orders

"And in respect to railway transport, the said transport controller shall issue all orders for such transportation to the Railway Association of Canada, acting on behalf of the railway companies concerned."

The controller will co-operate with Sir Edward Beatty, president of the Canadian Pacific Railway and recently appointed Canadian representative of the British Ministry of Shipping, in all matters concerning shipments required by the British Governments in the war.

The Government decided on this policy after Mr. Howe reported to the cabinet, recommending such an appointment to maintain supplies and services. The order-in-council stated the report said "it is desirable to provide for control of transportation by land and water in order to avoid waste, confusion and duplication of effort on the part of the various agancies of transport." The report said it was necessary "to the end that the movement of troops, naval forces, materials and supplies required in the prosecution of the war and the maintenance of supplies and services necessary to the life of the community may be made in a prompt, efficient and orderly manner, having regard to the degree of importance, for the time being, of each particular movement."

TURKISH PACT DISTINCT VICTORY FOR DEMOCRACY

Prof. R. M. Saunders of Toronto Tells Women's Canadian Club of Development of Turkey Since Great War

The Turkish stand against the demands of Russia and Germany has stiffened resistance of the Balkan States and Finland against the dictator nations, R. M. Saunders, assistant professor of history at the University of Toronto, declared here last night.

Speaking before the Belleville Women's Canadian Club in the parlors of Bridge Street United Church, the speaker pointed out that the modern Turkey, a product of twenty years of westernization, turns her face to the west instead of the east. She has become imbued with the liberalism and democratic principles of the western nations, and if forced into conflict will throw in her lot with the Allies. "It is a distinct victory for democracy," he said.

"The Turkey of today is not the decadent, morally corrupt 'sick man of Europe' that it was twenty years ago," Mr. Saunders said. "Turkey is a strong virile nation, a dignified state that now commands the respect of the entire world. We should be proud to have an ally of this type," he added.

The stand of Turkey has had a double effect, the speaker said, not only has it stiffened the attitude of the Balkan and other states, but has aligned the Moslem world with her. Morally the leader of these states which hate Communmunism, what she has done has so profoundly affected Mohammedism that its adherents will follow Turkey in her stand with the democracies.

Position Precarious

Turkey's position when the present war was declared was a precarious one, the speaker said. "She was afraid that trade relations with Germany would drag her into the war. Then came the Russian demands that the Straits be closed, certain territorial concessions be made, and permission to establish naval bases in the Sea of Marmora and the Dardanelles."

Turkey knew this was not the Russia that came to her aid years ago, but the Russian Bear of the Czarist regime.

If these concessions were granted, it would mean that Britain and France would have to fight to get through the Straits. This would shut Turkey off, leaving Rumania at the mercy of Germany.

Turkey remembered how much she could trust Germany and the present-day Russia. She refused the demands, and chose Britain and France, which was a culmination of a process in which Turkey had turned her face to the west. The treaty with Britain was made last spring, but the terms had not been made public.

If the Straits had been closed as Russia demanded, Rumania would have been at Germany's mercy and her oil diverted to Nazi channels, Mr. Saunders said. If they remained open, British and French ships could assist in defending Rumania. Then if Russia chose war, the Straits would be open for the Allies to assist Turkey. On the other hand if British and French ships sank Russian boats in the Black Sea, Turkey would have to pay the cost. But if she is faced with the issue, Turkey will not only defend herself but throw in her lot with the Allies. She has become the moral leader of the Balkan States and if she sides with the Allies, it will mean a tremendous blow to the dictator nations.

Astonishing Changes

In the early minutes of his address Mr. Saunders drew a graphic word picture of the astonishing changes in Turkey that have drawn the admiration of the entire world for the past twenty years. "From the old morally corrupt, decadent Ottoman Empire, through the application of Western democratic principles, Turkey has changed in the last two decades to a strong virile young nation," he said.

"The old Turkey, 'the sick man of Europe," was surrounded by neighbors who seized every opportunity to declare war and get what pickings they could It was dragged into the World War because it was tied to Germany. Then came the treaty which stripped the old Ottoman Empire to the bone.

"Then from her ashes rose a new virile Turkey," Mr. Saunders said. "Under the leadership of Mustapha Kemal, one of the greatest geniuses the world has ever produced, and his Young Turkey party, a new country emerged. Kemal has done what no other man has ever done. A military genius, he drove the French out of Cilicia and the Italians out of Anatalia. Then came sudden recognition by Russia. This in turn enabled Turkey to get control of states that were formerly Turkey. And," the speaker added, "Turkey has never forgotten that act. That is the reason she has stated that Turkey does not desire war with Russia, 'mainly through a sense of gratitude'.

"Emboldened by the sudden Russian support, she drove the Greeks out of Anatolia and in 1922 reoccupied Constantinople. That was the official end of the old Ottoman Empire," he said. "In 1923 France and Britain signed the Treaty of Lausanne. Now they have a National Turkish State which is purely Turkish, consisting of fourteen millions of people."

Then Turkey made her most important move, the speaker said. "The decadent state, of Ottoman despotism turned to the west instead of the east, and in 1926 created a thoroughly democratic constitution, elected by universal suffrage."

The country now is under the leadership of a benevolent dictatorship rather than democracy, Mr. Saunders pointed out. "This was unavoidable because of Mustapha Kemal's personal prestige. He was commander of the army, president of the state and head of the People's Party. He succeeded however in getting political education for his people and the future looks bright for an honest democratic regime in Turkey.

"From Islam," he said, "the Turks inherited social democracy, and this is one of the things that helped them in the right direction, but everything else in Islam has been pushed aside.

Break With Mohammedanism.

"The break with Mohammedanism is one of the most astonishing things in history," the speaker declared.

In 1924, Turkey ceased to provide funds for Mohammedanism. She put an end to their schools. In 1926 the ancient Moslem legal system was abolished and in its place was put a modern western nationalistic legal code. Old laws one hundred years old were ripped up overnight. Polygamy was abolished and marriage and divorce were made civil. Women's status was placed on a western basis. The Gregorian calendar replaced the Moslem one. In 1928 Turkey declared her independence from Islam. There is now no official religion in the state, for the Turks have learned the fear and hatred caused by state religious domination, in one hundred years of subservience and are determined that it will not happen again, Mr. Saunders said.

"Another startling reform of Mustapha Kemal was the change from the Moslem Koran to the western alphabet. In five months every sign in Arabic was out of the way, and the people were versed in the western ideas, a truly remarkable performance," the speaker asserted. "Kemal ripped out of the language all words that were not Turkish. He translated the Koran from Arabic to Turkish. Fezzes and turbans were declared obsolete and western hats ordered worn in their place. Surnames were adopted, with Kemal himself taking the name of Kemal Ataturk."

"The changed status of women from that of cattle to their present high plane is a symbol of the Turkish trend," the speaker said. "The veil was abolished, and women were given suffrage. Today some of the finest political leaders in Turkey are women.

Economic progress of the country advanced at the same time, Mr. Saunders said. In 1928 large public works programs were placed in effect. Railroads and other projects were built. In 1933 a five year industrialization program was opened. Coal mines, oil wells were opened and many other industrial activities engaged in, until today as a result, Turkey is one of the soundest states, economically, in that part of the world. All this has been done by the Turks themselves, for the nation has learned the terrible lesson of catering to grasping greedy nations.

The foreign policy of the rejuvenated state is one of peace. It is a strongly nationalistic state, and nationalism has been the strong driving force of the new nation. The new Turkey was born in war, but she has proven a nation of peace signing treaties of amity with her neighbors. This was done partly in fear of the ancient enemy Italy, the speaker asserted.

Mr. Saunders was fittingly introduced by Mrs. C. E. Argue, president of the Canadian Club, who also voiced appreciation of the splendid success at its conclusion.

25 YEARS AGO TO-DAY

(By The Canadian Press)

Nov. 11, 1914—General Louis Botha defeated General de Wet's rebel commando 24 miles east of Winberg, Orange River Colony, taking 250 prisoners. British gunboat Niger sunk by Germans off east coast of England. Germans captured Dixmude and Allies retreated from St. Eloi.

Nov. 12, 1914—Russians threatened Krakow in Galicia and advanced on Erzerum, fortified city in Turkey-in-Asia. German troops pierced British lines at Ypres.

FINE SELECTION CHICKENS OFFERED

Prices Range from 85c. to $1.25 Each According to Quality

EGGS STEADY

Cold raw winds with just a hint if snow failed to deter farmers and other growers of produce from displaying a better than usual offering of farm, garden and dairy edibles at the city Saturday market.

Offerings in all phases were fairly heavy with prices showing little or no change from quotations of a week ago. Eggs remained at last week's levels in spite of the fact that the wholesalers advanced their prices one cent per dozen. Vendors offered choice "A" selects for 45 cents the dozen, with mediums and lower grades selling at 42 and 40 cents the dozen.

Farmers' butter prices were firm with single and double rolls offered at a flat price of 30 cents the pound.

The chicken offering was heavy for this time of the year with prices ranging in the vicinity of 23 and 25 cents the pound. Choice weighty young birds were offered at from $1.25 each with six-months old chickens selling at from 85 cents each. Fowl in varying qualities was priced from 65 cents. A few ducks were offered today at prices quoted between $1.00 and $1.10 each. Dressed pigeons were offered at two for 25 cents.

Apples Unchanged.

Fall and winter apples provided the only spot of color to an otherwise drab market. Prices were steady with Snows, MacIntosh Reds, Tolman Sweets, Northern Spies, Greenings and other popular winter varieties selling at $1.00 the hamper for No. 1 grade. Domestics were offered at a few cents less. A small quantity of winter pears were on display selling at 40 cents the six-quart basket. Blue and white grapes moved sluggishly at 30 cents the basket.

Choice winter cauliflower featured the vegetable offering which one enterprising vendor separating the "flowers" from the leaves, and selling it in berry box lots at 10 cents each. Heads were offered from 5 and 10 cents each as was some choice winter cabbage. Carrots at 50 cents the bushel, beets and turnips at 60 cents, and onions at $1.25 for sixty pounds rounded out the display.

Lots of Fish.

There was plenty of fish to choose from, for lovers of this food. Fresh lake trout and whitefish was offered at 25 and 20 cents the pound respectively, with mudcats offered at 15 cents the pound. Lake herring sold at 4 and 5 for 25 cents, with pike moving slowly at 10 cents the pound. A few pickerel were offered at 18 cents, while mullets sold at three for 25 cents.

Six and seven weeks old pigs descended on the market today in good quantities with prices ranging from $4.50 to as high as $6.00 each. Transactions, however, were slow, and up until a late hour few sales had been made.

WINTER SCHOOL EXECUTIVE MEETS

Annual Five-Day School to be Held in Belleville Jan. 22-26

The executive of the Bay of Quinte Winter School met here Thursday evening with Dean Franklin Taylor of Albert College presiding. It was decided to hold the annual five-day school for training young people for Christain Service again in Bridge Street United Church from Monday, Jan. 22 to Friday, Jan. 26, 1940, with a closing banquet to be held in Holloway Street Church. Rev. H. A. Mellow will act as president in the absence of Rev. H. B. Neal, now moved to Renfrew. Rev. Roy H. Rickard, M.R.E. will be Dean of Studies. A committee is preparing the program but it is anticipated that in addition to the daily group sudy courses in the Bible, Missions and Specialist Leadership, there will be five evening meetings, open to the public to include a dramatic festival under the direction of Miss Marie Lockhart; an amateur night under Miss Lucille Herrington and Harold Kitney, an illustrated lecture and a fun night.

George Greer of Port Hope is secretary-treasurer and Mrs. Donald Baxter of Bloomfield, registrar. Rev. Dr. James Semple, honorary president, was present. The meeting was held at a dinner at Dicken's Restaurant.

Wind Fans Marsh Fire Near Shannonville

Lighting the sky with a lurid red glow that could be seen for miles, a fire that cut a swath a half-mile wide through the marshes south of Shannonville last night, attracted hundreds of curious spectators.

Fanned by the strong breeze prevailing the flames swept rapidly through the long dry grasses, veering in various directions as the wind gusted in sudden squalls from the northwest.

Owners of property near the edges of the marshes maintained a watch in case the rapidly moving flames got out of control. Although reports this morning stated that some damage was done, no confirmation could be obtained.

NOW UP TO GERMANY

Britain Will Give Earnest Consideration to Any German Proposal Which Will Halt German Aggression

London, Nov. 13—(CP)— Authoritative quarters asserted today that the King's reply to the Netherlands-Belgium peace move meant Great Britain would "insist on full reparation of wrongs done by Germany to her small neighbors."

It was also reported that Anglo-Russian trade negotiations have reached the point of exchange of lists of commodities to be sold under any agreement reached.

Britain showed no signs of hope that Germany would seek peace by accepting the conditions laid down in the King's response.

A caustic speech by Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, a few hours after the King replied, showed how slender the present chances for peace were considered. Newspapers republished Britain's broadly stated aims and called attention to a proviso in President Albert Lebrun's answer to Queen Wilhelmina and King Leopold—that Germany should repair "the injustices which force has imposed on Austria, Czecho-Slovakia and Poland."

(Adolf Hitler has said that Germany would make no peace which called for restoration of Poland as an independent state.)

King George and President Lebrun were answering the proposal of King Leopold and Queen Wilhelmina, made one week ago, that they help the belligerents find a way to peace.

King George said Britain would give 'most earnest consideration' to

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Flat sky! Ask anyone to describe the shape of the sky, and all will say in substance that it looks like a flat dome resting on the horizon. But why should not the top of the dome look as far away as the sky of the distant horizon? The explanation seems to be that haziness of the horizon sky makes for indistinctness and thus gives the idea of great distance, whereas the clean, pure sky of the zenith, just on account of its distinctness, gives the idea of nearness Anything that looks hazy or indistinct seems far away: that is everyday experience The sun and moon both look larger at the horizon than high in the heavens because in the first case they are projected against a far-away sky, and in the second case against a near sky.

$3,000,000 DRIVE FOR RED CROSS NOW UNDERWAY

Nation-Wide Appeal Broadcast Given by the Country's Leaders

Toronto, Nov. 13—(CP)— The $3,000,000 war drive of the Red Cross was away to a flying start today under the impetus of a nation-wide appeal broadcast last night by the country's leaders.

Canada heard earnest appeals from the Duke of Gloucester, by Lord Tweedsmuir, Prime Minister Mackenzie King, Conservative Leader Manion, Hon. E. L. Patenaude and Norman Sommerville, Chairman of the Canadian Red Cross Society.

The task before the Red Cross right now could best be judged by its record of performance in the first Great War, the Prime Minister said as he endorsed the appeal. "The magnitude of its present task may vastly exceed that of the last Great War," he added.

A Proven Servant

A proven servant of the national life in time of peace, the Red Cross became in addition, in wartime, "an auxiliary of government" Mr. Mackenzie King said.

Canada was told the Red Cross was not unprepared in this crisis. Within three days of the declaration of war, it was at work in every province.

However, its ability to carry out its work of aiding the sick and wounded depended directly on the support given it by every Canadian.

SMUGGLING ATTEMPT CHARGE BRINGS FINE

Buffalo, N.Y., Nov. 13—(CP)— Irving Leon, proprietor of a clothing store in Hamilton, was fined $25 in U.S. Federal Court here on a charge of attempting to smuggle into the United States a $21.50 suit for a customer, Warren Rath of Hamburg.

The suit was purchased earlier this year, and when Rath ascertained he could not bring it in duty free, according to evidence given before Federal Judge John J. Knight, Leon offered to deliver it personally. The suit, with only a $10 deposit paid on it was confiscated and Mr. Leon's automobile seized. He pleaded guilty to the smuggling charge and paid the fine as well.

GERMANY BEHIND HITLER VIEW OF W. RUPERT DAVIES

President of The Canadian Press Addresses Toronto Canadian Club

DEALS WITH RUSSIA

Toronto, Nov. 13—(CP) — The war guilt is not Adolf Hitler's alone, but must be shared by the German people who "supported him and idolized him," W. Rupert Davies, publisher of the Kingston Whig-Standard and President of the Canadian Press, told the Canadian Club of Toronto today.

"I am sick and tired of hearing people say, 'we must not blame the German people'," he said. "Why not? They put Hitler where he is. They supported him and idolized him. They made no protest when he seized Sudetenland, nor when he marched into Austria, nor yet when he seized Czecho-Slovakia in direct violation of his widely published declaration about not having any further territorial ambitions.

"We have been fooled by the German people just as the society crowd in England were fooled who wined and dined and lionized that astute apostole of Nazism, Herr Von Ribbentrop."

Mr. Davies, who visited the capitals of Europe immediately before the outbreak of war, said he was convinced the German people are "right behind Hitler." He found no German who was not enthusiastically sympathetic with everything Hitler was doing.

Expects a Long War

As a result, Mr. Davies said he expected a long war, which could only be shortened by a "revulsion of feeling in Germany against Hitler's iniquitous marriage of convenience with Russia." He said Germans were violently opposed to Bolshevism in any form.

"It is just remotely possible that if Russia continues to use the alliance for her own territorial aggrandizement and to spread Bolshevism again in Germany, the German people will revolt and will turn against Hitler and line up with England and France against Russia," he said.

"I say it is a remote possibility and, I think, a very remote one."

In the first weeks of the war, Mr. Davies said, thousands of letters turned out by the German propaganda machine were received in England through the mails. They were a tirade of abuse against Britain and a justification of everything Germany had done.

"Did they have any effect on the people who received them?" he asked. "Not the slightest. Is it then reasonable to assume that the letters dropped in Germany by the Royal Air Force will not have any more influence with the German people than their letters had upon us?"

FINNISH-SOVIET TALKS ON VERGE OF A BREAKDOWN

Only Last Minute Modification of Russian Demands Will Ease the Tension

TERMS NOT STATED

Stumbling Blocks Believed to be Demand for Naval Base and Revision of Border

Helsingfors, Nov. 13—(AP)—The Finnish Foreign Office announced today that its delegation in Moscow would leave for home tonight, suspending the lengthy negotiations by which Russia has been seeking concessions from Finland.

The Foreign Office announcement was made shortly after 2 p.m. (8 a.m. EST).

Previously Foreign Minister Eljas Erkko had said that only "last minute" modification of Soviet demands for territorial concessions could prevent recall of the Finns from Moscow.

The negotiations were initiated Oct. 7 after Russia had won concessions from Latvia, Estonia and Lithuania, strengthening her military position in the west and north.

"There are no indications that further progress through negotiations is possible," Erkko said in an interview. "There is a last minute chance but we have come so far it is difficult."

DEATH OF GIRL WILL BE PROBED

Reta Doefler, 17, of Waterloo, Dies at Hospital at Hamilton

Hamilton, Ont., Nov. 13—(CP)— Inspector of Detectives A. J. Chamberlain said today the death of Reta Doefler, 17, Waterloo, who died during the night at the General Hospital, is under investigation.

"The girl's parents said last night that she had been to her work last Friday and that she left home after supper and did not return," said Inspector Chamberlain. "We are informed that she came here that evening and took a room on James Street North. Going straight to her room, she was not seen on Saturday. Hearing moans yesterday, the landlady found the young woman gravely ill."

The young woman had given the name Mabel Brown and age 20, when she rented the room but her identity was learned correctly upon her admission to hospital.

Knife-like Wing Will Enable U. S. Plane to Exceed 500 M.P.H.

LANGLEY FIELD, Va., Nov. 13—(AP)— The fastest airplane yet built powered by the most efficient air-cooled engines will emerge soon from the laboratories of the United States National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics Research Workers here said today.

A new knife-like wing, which is a military secret, will enable an airplane to fly at speeds of 500 miles or more because it will nearly eliminate the "shock wave" which develops on a wing surface when the plane's speed approaches the speed of sound (about 740 miles an hour.)

The new engine will have three times the power of present engines.

Such terrific power increase created another problem—new propellors which can utilise the power available. The committee's engineers are at work on propellors of larger diameter. They may have four or six blades instead of the present two or three

U. S., CANADIAN PACIFIC COAST ROCKED BY QUAKE

Vancouver, Portland, Tacoma and Seattle Survey Damage Caused by Shock

BUILDINGS CRACKED

Seattle, Nov. 13 (AP)—An earthquake described by University of Washington geologists as the heaviest in their seismograph's records rocked large areas of the Canadian and United States Pacific Coast shortly before midnight. The seismograph registered the shock at 11:48 p.m. (2:48 a.m., Monday, E.S.T.).

Officials and businessmen in Vancouver, B.C., Portland, Tacoma, Seattle and other cities surveyed damage caused by the shock that lasted approximately one minute.

Damage, however, was not expected to be great, consisting mostly of cracked walls in some buildings, broken water mains and broken power lines.

A check by state and other officials indicated no one was injured.

In all parts of Seattle residents rushed to the streets in night attire and many spent the remainder of the night in auto camps.

Section of Bank Falls

A corner section of the National Bank of Washington in Tacoma, weighing approximately 250 pounds, crashed six floors into an alley. Some plaster damage was reported in the State Capitol at Olympia.

N. M. Breck, Capitol watchman, said it felt as "though the whole building was jumping up and down." He said it broke some glass but did no serious damage. Olympia reported hundreds of persons fled into the streets.

HANNA LEEMAN DIES AT CHATHAM

Shock and Exposure When Car Plunges Into Water Causes Death

Chatham, Nov. 12 (CP)—Hanlan Leeman, 38, of 1245 Lincoln Road, Windsor, died in the Public General Hospital Saturday night, an hour after being admitted, from shock and exposure. His car plunged into three feet of water in a deep ditch in Dover Township.

E. N. Leeman, a brother of the victim, and H. W. Leeman, a cousin, were in the car at the time of the accident, and escaped injury.

According to information obtained by Provincial Constable J. B. Sheff, who investigated the accident, the three men were returning after a day's duck hunting at Mitchell's Bay when the car went into the ditch at the intersection of the Winter Line and the Fifth Concession Road.

Hanlan Leeman, who was driving his own car, failed to see warning signs and crashed through a guard rail. The car turned turtle and the three men were trapped inside. They were able to keep their heads above water until Ronald Pinsonneault, a young farmer, who saw the accident, opened the door and liberated the three men.

Dr. L. A. Glenn, who attended the men, said that none suffered broken bones, and only minor bruises. The shock and chill produced a heart condition for Hanlan Leeman, which grew progressively worse despite all efforts to stimulate him.

It is not likely an inquest will be held.

Mrs. Leeman, widow of the deceased, was formerly Miss Lillian Vesterfelt of this city.

Russia Wages Campaign In Press Against Finland

Moscow, Nov. 13—(AP)—Russia waged a campaign of "press pressure" upon Finland today after disclosure of widespread Russian naval demands upon the Finns.

Soviet newspapers printed a long official news agency dispatch from Helsingfors painting a gloomy picture of conditions there and predicting the Finnish Government would reject Russian "offers."

The dispatch alleged there had been frequent conflict between the men of the regular Finnish army and reservists because the reservists favored agreement with Moscow.

The news agency, Tass, predicted the Finns could not stand the economic and financial strain of the present situation "longer than from four to seven months."

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

Tension in Holland arising out of suspicions of German intentions towards that peaceful kingdom eased somewhat as the weekend passed but the second Great War remained essentially a war of words. Actually there has been no sustained military effort directed towards an obvious objective since German and Russian troops completed the subjection of Poland.

Winston Churchill's declaration Sunday that Britain and France would continue the war until the other side had enough came on the heels of the joint peace appeal by the Queen of the Netherlands and the King of Belgium. Thus it is up to Germany to show its will to peace in some concrete form if anything is to come of the Dutch-Belgian peace move.

While the warring nations in the west mark time and German plans remain wrapped in the obscurity of inaction, Soviet Russia continues its pressure on Finland. Publication in an official Russian newspaper of a demand for a slice of Finnish territory in the north adjacent to the Soviet port of Murmansk gave a new turn to the month-old negotiations between the two countries.

As the Russian press is strictly controlled, it is safe to assume that what Soviet newspapers say today has already been said by the government or will be said shortly. Thus the Russians appear to be gradually raising the ante in the Finnish negotiations while the Finns claim they have gone as far as they can in meeting Russian demands.

NO GROUNDS FOR UNEASINESS SAYS PREMIER DE GEER

Premier of The Netherlands in Radio Broadcast Says There is No Cause for Alarm

MINISTERS MEET

Conference at Border Came as Surprise at End of Week Marked by Appeal for Peace

Brussels, Nov. 13 (AP)—Belgian officials said today that the replies of Great Britain and France to the Netherlands-Belgian mediation proposal still left "working room". The next step, they said, was to await Germany's reply.

It was stated officially that mediation negotiations were continuing and, as Foreign Minister Paul Henry Spaak returned from the Netherlands, Belgian tension continued to ease.

It was announced that direct Brussels-Berlin sleeper train service would be resumed tomorrow.

The Belgian parliament convenes tomorrow but only routine matters are scheduled for the opening day.

The Hague, The Netherlands, Nov. 13—(AP)—Premier Dirk Jan De Geer told The Netherlands today "there is not a single ground for uneasiness" in the nation despite "many rumors causing alarm" in the past few days.

Making his first radio speech since he became Prime Minister last summer, De Geer said the fear of imminent dangers for The Netherlands was caused by reports circulated abroad and by "certain measures of our government."

The belligerent nations, he said, have the darkest expectations about the intentions of their enemies for the worst, suppose that the worst already is at hand and "in good faith easily believe that the violation of our neutrality is likely."

"Therefore, I advise you to gird yourself against this belief," he said, "and remember that neutrality also requires a certain state of mind."

2 PASSENGERS, PILOT MISSING

Plane Believed to Have Been Forced Down on Lake Labarge

Whitehorse, Y.T., Nov. 13—(CP) —A pilot and two passengers were missing in a Whitehorse and Yukon route airways plane today, believed forced down on Lake Labarge where a family of six earlier was reported safe but stormbound.

Aerial searchers, seeking a trace of pilot Jesse W. Rice and passengers Mike McKallion and D. H. Anderson, said they sighted what they believed to be a portion of a plane's wing tip but were unable to identify it because of fog.

BRITAIN, FRANCE TO REDUCE TROOPS IN NORTH CHINA

Troops Left in Area Only Sufficient to "Maintain Order"

BENEFIT TO JAPAN

Tokyo, Nov. 13—(CP)— Great Britain and France today notified Japan of their intention to reduce the troops they maintain in North China.

British Ambassador Sir Robert Craigie informed Foreign Minister Kichisaburo Nomura that Britain would leave in the area only sufficient troops to "preserve order." French Ambassador Charles Arsene Henry announced similar action, but the number of troops to be withdrawn was not stated.

(The present French forces consist of a colonial infantry regiment, two batteries of artillery and a light tank company—about 1,500 men in all.)

British garrisons at Peiping and Tentsin will be reduced to the total of one large-sized company, it was disclosed.

The decision by Britain and France has been communicated to all signatories of the Boxer Protocol of 1901 under which the foreign powers assumed the privileges of stationing forces in North China.

Benefit to Japan

In Japanese Government circles the move was hailed as the first concrete benefit Japan has derived from the war in Europe.

These quarters believed Britain's action might lead to settlement of the Tientsin blockade dispute and possible even to a general compromise relating to China as a whole.

The War Office in London said the reduction was "for reasons of military convenience arising from the conflict in Europe." It was not disclosed whether the troops released would be sent to Europe.

Britain has been maintaining one infantry battalion, consisting of about 750 officers and men, in the Tientsin-Peiping area — her only troops in North China.

Paris, Nov. 13 —(AP)— The Foreign Office said today the number of French troops in concessions in China had been reduced, leaving a force sufficient to guard French property and assure order. The troops recalled, it said, will be used elsewhere.

Glassy Surface Causes Pilot to Misjudge Altitude

Plane Turns Over and Only the Floats Show Above Surface When Rescue Party Arrives — Pilot Crawls Through Window to Safety

TRAPPED IN CABIN

Robert Graham Jr., Nephew, and Bruce Graham Dive Into Water and Bring Body Out of Cabin to Surface but Resuscitation Efforts Fail

LATE LT.-COL. GRAHAM
Former Mayor of Belleville, Past President of the Chamber of Commerce, prominent manufacturer and lawyer, and active in social life and philanthropic enterprises, and well-known military figure who lost his life in a plane crash at Weslemkoon Lake on Sunday.

Death wrote a dramatic finish to an airplane pleasure cruise over Weslemkoon Lake yesterday morning when a pontoon equipped monoplane owned and piloted by Ellsworth Rogers, Toronto radio executive, turned over while attempting to land on the glassy surface of the water, carrying Lieut.-Col. R. J. E. Graham, prominent Belleville barrister, to his death.

Rogers, in spite of severe shock from submersion in the icy water, managed to crawl through the window of the cabin and fight his way to the surface.

Members of the hunting party to which the men belonged, who witnessed the accident from the shore sped in a motor launch to the scene, about one half mile from the lake landing, and rescued Rogers from the water.

Previous to his rescue, Rogers had made several ineffectual attempts to rescue Colonel Graham, who was trapped in the cabin and whose heavy clothing prevented him from escaping through the open windows of the plane.

Robert Graham, Junior, a nephew, dived into the water in a futile effort to rescue the trapped man, and a few seconds later Bruce Graham, a brother, plunged below the surface in an ineffectual attempt to rescue Col. Graham.

The badly damaged plane was towed to the nearby shoreline where Bob Graham again dived in the water and succeeded in bringing the body of Colonel Graham to the surface.

His face showed signs of injury, which possibly dazed him and prevented him from making any immediate attempt to rescue himself from the submerged cabin of the plane.

The plane was practically submerged with only its pontoons showing above the surface of the water.

ADMITS STEALING AND SELLING CLOVER SEED

London, Ont., Nov. 13—(CP) —Stewart Clark, 22, of the Strathroy district, pleaded guilty in county police court today to stealing clover seed valued at $175 from the barn of William Ebetz, Metcalfe township. He was remanded a week for sentence.

Clark sold the seed to a Mount Forest dealer.

SMITH ADMITS FOUR CHARGES

Former Head of Louisiana State University Appears in Court

Baton Rouge, La., Nov. 13—(AP) —James Monroe Smith, former Louisiana State University President who was arrested near Brockville, Ont., last summer, liquidated 27 state embezzlement and forgery charges in district court here today by pleading guilty to four of the charges.

Judge Charles A. Holcombe imposed a sentence of from five to 15 years in the state penitentiary.

Dr. Smith previously entered guilty pleas to federal mail fraud and income tax evasion charges and received a 30-month sentence.

He was tried and convicted with four others on still another mail fraud charge involving L.S.U.'s purchase of hotel furnishings. Smith's sentence in this case also was 30 months. The federal penalties are to run concurrently.

The two dozen other state charges against Smith here were nolle prossed by District Attorney Dewey J. Sanchez upon the educationist pleading guilty to the four embezzlement and forgery counts.

Charges lodged against Smith's relatives that they aided his escape to Canada following his sudden resignation June 25 also were dropped.

LARGE BEAR SHOT

The heading of this story might well be "Stock Market Tragedy" for it directly concerns the demise of a bear at the hands of a Bull Street resident.

Today Mr. W. M. Adams, Bull Street, member of a hunting party that has been searching the deer runways in the vicinity of McCarthy's Mills, is exhibiting with more or less pride the carcass of a large two hundred and fifty pound Bruin, that became too curious while the boys were on the lookout for the elusive bucks.

Perhaps it was the maternal instinct of the mother bear that caused her to turn savagely when she sighted the hunters in the distance. Two small cubs at her side, dashed into the safety of nearby undergrowth, when a well-directed shot brought the bear crashing to the ground an inert heap. The cubs escaped.

Today bear steaks will be on the Adams family menu.

DONALD FREEMAN HURLED FROM BIKE

Donald Freeman, Charles St., escaped serious injury when he was hurled from his bicycle into the side of a motor car on Dundas St. yesterday afternoon. The force of the lad's body striking the side of the motor car resulted in a broken side window. The automobile, which was being driven off Dundas St. into Church St., was driven by R. Campbell, 66 Pinnacle St. Apparently the cyclist failed to see the motor vehicle as it turned, police stated today, as Freeman's west bound bicycle collided with the side of the motor car. Fortunately the lad on the bicycle escaped without serious injury.

S. LOUNSBERRY FALLS FRACTURING THIGH

Falling heavily when he slipped on the doorsill, Mr. S. Lounsberry, elderly resident of James Street suffered a fracture of the thigh last night. He was taken to Belleville General Hospital where today his condition was reported to be fair.

The injured man had just returned from Victoria Avenue Baptist Church where he has been the senior deacon for a number of years, when the accident occurred. A valued employee of the Belleville Sargent Company, Pinnacle Street, Mr. Lounsberry has been with that company for a long period of time, and his absence today from his accustomed place in the plant was the first in a number of years.

TWO CARS AND SET OF PLATES STOLEN

Two motor cars and a set of licence plates were reported stolen to police authorities over the week end. Napanee police reported the theft of a Ford coach bearing licence plates number 86-N-81, while from Peterborough came information that a 1938 Ford coach had been stolen from that city also, the latter vehicle was equipped with Ontario licence plates number 85-U-47. Attendants at Boyce's used car lot on Front St. reported the theft of a pair of licence plates, number 53-N-44, which were removed from a parked car over the week end.

HORSE IS STRUCK BY PASSING CAR

For the second time within a week a horse was reported struck by a motor car on the 4th concession of Sidney Township. Early last night Joseph Rochon, 149 Pinnacle St., was proceeding east along the concession road when suddenly a horse, that had been wandering at large along the side of the road, ran in front of Mr. Rochon's car. Following the collision the horse galloped away, apparently unhurt. When reporting the incident to the police last night, Mr. Rochon said he was informed the horse was the property of a nearby farmer, George Tucker, Sidney Township. Last week under the same conditions, a horse ran into the path of a motor car driven by W. W. Head, Peterboro, resulting in considerable property damage also.

ACCIDENT CAUSED BY ICY PAVEMENT

The season's first major motor crash, as the result of icy pavements, resulted in two automobiles being badly damaged after collision at the intersection of George and East Bridge Sts. late last night. Fortunately no person sustained injuries, although both vehicles were badly damaged and needed the services of a tow truck to move them. Sergt. S. C. Martin, R.C.A.F., was proceeding southerly on George St., he told Sergeant Arthur Booth of the police department. As he applied the brakes of his car to stop at the Bridge St. intersection, the vehicle skidded on the icy pavement and directly into the path of an east bound car, driven by Jack E. Dickens of this city. The force of the impact could be heard for some distance. The vehicle driven by Sergt. Martin skidded and later struck a hydro pole, breaking the pole. Wheels, fenders, radiators and the entire side of Sergt. Martin's car were badly damaged. Sergeant Booth and P. C. Wright directed traffic in an effort to keep the traffic from congesting until the two wrecked vehicles were removed by tow trucks. Glass was broken in both vehicles, but fortunately no injuries were sustained by any occupants.

Dr. Best, Medical Missionary Gives Talks on War Conditions in China

Yesterday was a memorable day in the history of Tabernacle United Church because of the visit of Dr. A. E. Best, M.A.,M.D., who spoke at all three services. Dr. Best was born in Madoc, Ont. He attended Grenfell High School in Saskatchewan, Victoria College, Toronto and the Medical College, Toronto. He was appointed to West China in 1914. From 1916 to 1922 Dr Best was superintendent of Fowchow General Hospital. In 1923 he joined the West China University as Professor of Internal Medicine. He also works in the Men's Hospital in Chengtu. During furloughs he has taken post-graduate work at Toronto University, Johns Hopkins, Harvard and Saranac Lake. He was awarded the Rockefeller Fellowship in 1922. He is a member of the China Medical Association, the West China Border Research Society and the Society of Parasitologists. Large gatherings were present both morning and evening. In the morning he confined his remarks largely to the present conditions in China at war with Japan, painting word pictures of the awful destruction of life and property by the Japanese and the part the Missionaries were playing in looking after the wounded and the refugees. A million people in China were homeless today because of war.

His lantern-slide lecture in the evening contrasted life today with life twenty-five years ago when he went there, gave pictures of terrible scenes of bombed cities, life of the Chinese people and the splendid work of the medical missionaries in curing disease, alleviating suffering, preventing sickness and training doctors and nurses.

So interesting was his address with slides at the Sunday school that the children asked him to go on when the time came to stop. The last slide in the evening was a picture of the Generalissimo of China and his very brilliant wife, both Christians. Dr. Best told how when they passed through Chengtu they called all the missionaries together and she in English and he in Chinese, thanked them for all they had done and were doing for China, and asked them, by letter and person to convey to the church in Canada their sincere appreciation for making this work possible in China. With this picture on the screen the large congregation stood to sing with deep emotion "Blest Be the Tie that Binds." The pastor in thanking Dr. Best asked the congregation to stand in appreciation and said he felt that after this day our resolve would be strengthened to not "eat our bread alone."

While in the city Dr. and Mrs. Best were the guests of Mrs. Best's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Taylor, 312 Foster Ave.

Miss Dorothy Powell, of Caron, Sask., niece of Mr. E. R. Taylor, accompanied the Bests over the week-end.

Creation of Ideal Conditions Should be Aim of Youth Today

Students of Albert College Hear Inspirational Oddress at Victoria Ave. Baptist Church

High ideals are held out for the youth of Canada today, the Rev. C. T. Olmstead told the students of Albert College at a special service in Victoria Ave. Baptist Church Sunday evening as he preached on the theme, "Facing Life."

"In a rapidly changing world we look back sometimes and compare the old order with the new and what we see shocks us because much in life today is so shocking. The child that dressed up every Sunday and went to church with mother and father because it was the customary thing to do gets a shock when he grows older and discovers that today such is not the universal custom. Now all is so different and we are prone to criticize the customs that exist today."

The preacher pointed out that the hurling of criticism merely for the sake of finding fault was of no value in an attempt to change an undesirable condition. "Criticize what is by creating what ought to be. Set your aim high and persevere," urged the minister.

"Someone has said that the soul of perseverance cannot be beaten. Imprison it and you get "Pilgrim's Progress"; shut it up in a log cabin and it comes out the White House; blind it and you get "Paradise Lost"; deafen it and you have the "Moonlight Sonata"; hand its manuscripts back a hundred times and at last we get a poet for homes. It takes patience to persevere to make dreams come true."

Students of Albert College assisted with the service. Mr. Milton Lake, President of the Student Council, read the Scripture lesson from the 8th chapter of St. John, vs 12-31. Mr. Robert Craig, President of the Student Christian Movement offered the evening prayer, and splendid vocal solos were rendered by Mr. Ronald Mercer. Mr. Arthur Wynne led in a sing-song of favorite hymns at the beginning of the service.

During the service, members of the congregation stood bowed in silent prayer out of respect for the late Lt.-Col. R. J. E. E. Graham, whose father had been a member of the board of directors of Albert College and whose son is a student at that institution.

Jaywalkers Confused By Enraged Car Owner

Detroit, Nov. 13—(CP)—Charles Jenkins, 36, and Ennis Lee, 25, inadvertently walked into the side of a new automobile Sunday. The enraged owner jumped out and started to argue: Pulled out a revolver and fired two shots at Lee, both of them wild. The car owner then hit Jenkins over the head with the pistol butt, jumped back into his machine and sped away. Jenkins and Lee were so confused they didn't even get his number.

Memorial Service At Emmanuel Church

A congregation which filled Emmanuel Church last night assembled to honour those who gave their lives in the last Great War, and to pray for protection of those of Canada's sons who will shortly be taking part in the present conflict.

S.O.E., L.O.B.A. and L.O. lodges were strongly represented. Poppy covered grass upon which stood a cross was placed in front of the chancel, and wreaths were placed there by H. Revell for the Sons of England; Mrs. Charles Bankey for the Ladies' Orange Benevolent Society; H. Lott for the Loyal Orange lodges, and C. Wheeler for the church. After the wreaths were placed, the church lights were extinguished, leaving only a spot light focused upon the cross, and the Last Post was sounded by George Wardle. A two minute period of silent Remembrance and prayer followed, while a picture of the National War Memorial was shown upon a screen, after which Reveille was sounded.

"There is No Death" was sung by Walter Rose, and "In Flanders' Fields" by Harry Rose.

The sermon was preached by the rector, the Rev. S. R. Foreman who said "If we remember those fallen heroes simply because they nobly gave their lives for us, we have failed them. We must remember why they fought. It was to maintain freedom, civilization, Christianity and to draw nearer a permanent peace. And unless we ourselves have striven toward that goal, they have died needlessly." He said that while nations have talked peace, they have thought war, and under such conditions, there could never be peace. He spoke of the era of permanent universal peace foretold by the prophets of old, stating that while nations want to fight, and trample down Christian ethics to do so; while they endeavoured to take away our freedom, and the freedom of other peace loving nations; while they are for war while we speak peace; the only way to obtain peace is by the sword. When the enemies of peace are destroyed, then, and then only, may we expect any sign of the Golden Age spoken of by the prophets. Those who fell in the last war, started that campaign. Those who take part in this will be futhering the endeavour; until finally that day of true peace will be ushered in and we shall "win more glorious victories still, along the saner, nobler paths of peace."

Crerar Pays Tribute To Canada's War Dead At Vimy Ridge

With the British Forces in the Field, Nov. 13—(CP—Cable)— Hon. T. A. Crerar, Canadian Minister of Mines and Resources, and Brigadier H. D. G. Crerar, former Commandant of the Royal Military College at Kingston and military adviser to the Canadian War Mission to London, yesterday bowed their heads in tribute to Canada's war dead at Vimy Ridge.

For two minutes they stood bareheaded and silent before the giant memorial, inaugurated at Vimy by King Edward in 1936.

The Canadian Minister and Brig. Crerar made the pilgrimage to Vimy Ridge after visiting the front line British positions with the Empire statesmen who have been conferring in London.

WOMAN SUSTAINS FRACTURED JAW

Riding in Car Driven by Husband and Struck by Another Vehicle

Mrs. Frank Wood, Peterborough, sustained a fractured jawbone resulting in several teeth being damaged when an automobile driven by her husband, Frank Wood, was struck by another motor car, driven by Leo Forestell of Marmora. The collision happened on Highway No. 14 about two miles north of Belleville early last evening. Kenneth Vivian, Shannonville garage owner, who was riding with Forestell sustained other injuries and was taken to the Belleville General Hospital suffering from shock.

The ice-covered pavement was attributed the cause of the collision. Sergeant H. E. Thompson, O.P.P., revealed after minute investigations. Forestell was proceeding southerly prior to the crash and informed Sergeant Booth his motor vehicle had skidded slightly on the crown of the road after which it went out of control and collided with Mr. Wood's north bound vehicle. Both cars were badly damaged about the radiators and front fenders. Dr. G. J. Cronk and Dr. P. R. Ross attended the injured persons at the scene of the accident. The two injured persons were taken to hospital, while other occupants escaped with only slight injuries and shock.

WINTER COMES HALTS BALMY INDIAN SUMMER

Snowfall Leaves Thin Skin of Ice Upon Highways Making Traffic Difficult

Old Man Winter called a sudden halt to the almost balmy Indian summer of the past few days, when he drove out of the north last night in the wake of a snowstorm to envelop the city and district in an icy grip.

Feathery snowflakes that fell early in the day only to disappear into a slippery wetness when they contacted the earth, paved the way for a greasy slippery icy surface that occurred as rapidly lowering temperatures brought a freezing atmosphere.

Highways, travellers reported last night, were extremely dangerous to motorist. Several automobile accidents occurred in the city and vicinity as drivers attempted to keep their vehicles on the highway.

Highways Icy

Truck-drivers halting in the city last night, stated that the main thoroughfares were coated with a thin skim of ice, while in the ditches snow to the depth of two and three inches was apparent. Several cars had been seen in the ditches between this city and Kingston, they said.

Unfortunate car owners, who left their automobiles outside last night, paid the price of water-filled radiators, garage and service station owners reported today. Many radiators were frozen and had to be towed to garages for "treatment."

Solid ice tipped the edges of marshes, swamps and low-lying land in the rural districts while the Moira River in parts was ice-coated along its banks.

Citizens Shiver

City workers, who had not taken the precaution to don warm clothing, shivered in the low temperatures on their way to work today. Spiralling smoke curling from chimneys bespoke renewed activity in cellars and basements, where householders coaxed additional heat from furnaces and other warmth producing apparatus.

Deer hunters, however, welcomed the change in atmospheric conditions. One returning to the city today after three days spent in the northern woods, stated that the present low temperatures were conducive to good hunting, which prior to Saturday had been noticeably conspicuous by its absence. He reported deer, however, to be fairly plentiful in the district some fifteen miles north of Weslemkoon Lake.

Gen. McNaughton Not Worrying About Soldiers' Clothes

Calgary, Nov. 13 (CP)—Praise for the fine showing by Canadian Active Service Force units across Canada, and for the splendid way they had overcome difficulties, was expressed here Saturday by Major General A. G. L. McNaughton, Officer Commanding the First Division, Canadian Active Service Force.

General McNaughton snatched a moment from a Remembrance Day crowded with military activities to express his admiration for those who will serve under him overseas in the First Division.

While the C.A.S.F. is still short of equipment, "we have not been worrying about appearances," General McNaughton said.

"We don't care, for instance, whether all the troops are equipped with regulation boots, or whether their uniforms are a bit old, just so long as the clothing—whatever it is—is comfortable and warm enough to protect the men."

12½ Cent Gas in Detroit

Detroit, Nov. 13—(CP)—Regular gasoline was being sold by a majority of stations here today at eight gallons for $1 following a one cent a gallon reduction in the tank wagon price by major oil companies in the area during the week-end. It was the second time in two weeks that oil companies have reduced their tank wagon prices to the dealer, having reduced the price by 7-10 of a cent a gallon Oct. 31.

GLASSY SURFACE

Artificial Respiration Applied.

Dr. J. H. Forrester, Belleville physician, who was present, and other members of the hunting party applied artificial respiration for a lengthy period, but to no avail. It was estimated that Colonel Graham was in the water some twenty-five minutes.

The two men had been on a pleasure jaunt over the lake and were returning to the hunting lodge when the tragedy occurred. Gliding down to the water, the glassy surface of the lake caused the pilot to misjudge the altitude, a pontoon-tip flicked the water and the plane turned completely over.

Cause of Accident.

In a statement to Chief Coroner Dr. J. J. Robertson, Rogers said "It was one of those rare occurrences when a pilot attempting to land a plane on the surface of water that is glassy in appearance, cannot correctly estimate the distance between his machine and the water".

Mr. Rogers, a firm friend of the Graham family had been flying his plane to the hunting grounds for a number of years.

Dr. Robertson stated that he had known him for a number of years and was an experienced pilot. "The extreme cold weather that prevailed had apparently partially frozen the controls of the machine, making it difficult to handle. It was an accident purely and simply, and after investigating the full circumstances surrounding the tragedy I do not deem an inquest necessary."

Members of the hunting party which left here on Nov. 3 included Dr. J. H. Forrester, A. MacLean Haig, Squadron Leader R. A. Cameron, R.C.A.F., R. B. Graham, a brother, R. J. Graham, a nephew, S. Gordon Robertson, and Fred Deacon, all of Belleville.

Native of Belleville.

Born in Belleville

Born in Belleville forty-three years ago of United Empire Loyalist descent, son of the late R. J. and Mrs. Graham, the late Lieut.-Colonel Robert James Earl Graham received his early education in the public schools of the city. He was a graduate of Belleville High School and St. Andrew's College, Toronto, and when but a youth attended McGill University for a period of two years.

At this point the superlative qualities that later brought him into prominence asserted themselves and he offered his service to King and Country. Donning the khaki of His Majesty's Canadian Artillery he distinguished himself on the Fields of Flanders, returning to Canada, when still but a youth.

His brilliant fertile mind became attracted to the legal profession upon his return and he immediately enrolled at Osgoode Hall from which he graduated to join the legal firm of Ponton, Ponton and Graham here.

Re-Organized Battery

But the glamor and color of his regiment still remained with him and in 1920 he re-organized the 34th Battery Canadian Field Artillery, assuming command with the rank of Major. The first camp the unit attended was held locally under Major Graham's supervision. Then followed period of inactivity, and he went back to the militia as commanding officer of the 9th Field Artillery Brigade with the rank of Lieut.-Colonel. He remained as its head for the full period of command of four years, relinquishing it to his successor in accordance with militia regulations.

The late Colonel Graham took a distinct pride in the community, which gave him birth and to which he has devoted a loyalty well worthy of emulation. He followed with keen interest municipal affairs with the result that in 1924 he contested an aldermanic seat and was elected, a position he maintained for a period of two years.

In the council chamber he was a keen discerning alderman. His opinions were often sought and his fertile brain conceived advantages not only to the immediate ward he represented but to the city as a whole. His ability to solve problems of a municipal nature and his readiness to promote and work for those things of civic benefit earned a place for him in the hearts of the ratepayers of the city that culminated in his election to the office of Chief Magistrate of the city.

At the time of his election in 1926 he was the youngest man in Canada to hold the office of Mayor. He was then only thirty years of age.

For some time he was solicitor for the City of Belleville.

He was one of the most active members of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce and served as director for many years and was a Past President of the organization.

Active Rotarian

His broad generosity, and far-flung interest in things other than municipal, earned for him the wholehearted respect and esteem of many other phases of life and activity. His sympathetic character, soon found itself in ready alignment with the service work of Rotary. He became one of the Belleville Rotary Club's most highly esteemed members. He gave unselfishly of his time and efforts to the furtherance of the club's aims and ideals, and it was not long before his fellow clubmen honored him with the presidency. His most recent efforts in the service club, in which he contributed no small factor in its ultimate success was the inaugural regatta held here this year. He was honored by the members of the newly formed Rotary Yacht Club with the commodoreship of that organization.

His executive ability and keen business acumen carried him to further fields of endeavor. He was president of the Belleville-Sargent Company, hardware manufacturers here. He was a past president of the Bay of Quinte Country Club, which under his guidance rapidly advanced to the forefront of Eastern Ontario rendezvous for lovers of golf, tennis and other sports. He created an atmosphere in the inner confines of the club that bespoke genial camaraderie, so typical of his own personality.

Highly Esteemed

He was highly respected in Masonic circles. A member of Moira Lodge No. 11, Quinte Friendship Chapter No. 227, R.A.M., King Baldwin Preceptory No. 6, and Rameses Shrine Toronto, he commanded the respect and esteem of all with whom he came in contact. "Bob" as he was known to his intimate friends and family circle, was hailed as a "prince of good fellows" by both social and business associates. Possessed of a personality that immediately drew people to him, he was the acme of good fellowship, and a man that many were proud to call a friend.

His sudden passing came as a distinct shock to business, professional, industrial and social circles of the city and district. Members of the legal profession today mourn an honored and respected associate. Business circles of the city will miss a highly valued capable executive.

Col. Graham was a member of Bridge Street United Church.

Surviving Colonel Graham are his widow, formerly Frances C. Leonard, daughter of the late Dr. R. A. Leonard, Napanee, a son Ralph, two daughters, Barbara and Grace, at home, two brothers, George and Bruce, Belleville and two sisters, Mrs. Jamieson Bone, Belleville and Mrs. R. C. Mair, Dartmouth, N.S.

Belleville in its entity today stands aghast at the tragic passing of one of her distinguished sons.

At the Sunday evening service, the pastor, Rev. Dr. James [illegible]ple, referred to the unfortunate accident, paid tribute to the life of the late Col. Graham and expressed sympathy with the family in their sorrow and loss.

The regular meeting of the city council which was to have been held this evening (Monday) has been postponed to Wednesday evening out of respect to the late Col. Ex-Mayor Graham and to Mayor Bone, his brother-in-law.

Tributes to Col. Graham

"The late Colonel "Bob" was an outstanding Rotarian. He served the club as president, and on different committees to the credit of the club and himself. He was generous to an extreme, and his time and talents were ever at the disposal of Rotary. The sympathy of every Rotarian goes out to the family," President Howard Clarke of the Belleville Rotary Club, said in tribute to the late Colonel R. J. E. Graham today.

Chamber of Commerce

"In the passing of the late Lieut. Col. R. J. E. Graham, the Belleville Chamber of Commerce has lost one of its most interested and constructive members. He had been a member since the inception of the organization and was one of its past presidents. President A. MacLean Haig, head of the Chamber of Commerce said in tribute today: "He was always very active in an endeavor calculated to bring industries to the city and in any other work of the Chamber of Commerce. His keen appreciation of the responsibility of a citizen to the community in which he lived, makes his type one which we can ill afford to lose. The Chamber of Commerce extends its deepest sympathy to the members of the family," President Haig said.

J. O. Herity, Secretary-Manager Chamber of Commerce:

"The deplorable accident which has brought to so sudden a termination, the career of Colonel R. J. E. Graham, has occasioned profound sorrow throughout our city and far beyond its confines," Mr. J. O. Herity, Secretary-Manager of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce, and District Governor of Rotary, said in tribute today.

"Among those who have been intimately associated with him in his eminently useful and public-spirited activities, his sadly premature demise has come as a personal bereavement. His devotion to the general welfare manifested so continuously and in such varied directions, gave him an unique position in popular regard," Mr. Herity said.

"His death has left our community and our country poorer indeed. An able industrialist, a true friend, a high-minded patriot has gone from our midst at the very noonday of his life and usefulness," he concluded.

Magistrate Pays Tribute

"It was with regret I learned of the untimely death of the late Col. R. J. E. Graham and his sudden passing came as a great shock to myself and this court," His Worship Magistrate E. J. Butler, K. C. remarked at the close of today's city police court when paying tribute to the late Col. Graham, who was drowned at Weslemkoon Lake yesterday.

"Col. Graham was a past president of the Hastings Bar Association and commanded the respect of all his colleagues in this district. The law profession in Belleville suffered a severe blow in Col. Graham's death," concluded His Worship as he related upon the fine qualities of "Bob" Graham, as he was known to his barrister friends.

Worry Exhausts the Nerves

Only in recent years have the serious consequences of worry and nervous disorders been fully realised. And as they are realised, the value of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food becomes better and better appreciated.

Worry makes you nervous and irritable and sleepless. It destroys memory and the ability to concentrate the mind. It ruins digestion and makes you feel tired and downhearted and discouraged. Why not fight off worry by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to restore nerve force to the exhausted nervous system?

You will not be using it long before you find yourself resting and sleeping better, less irritable and nervous and looking on the bright side again. Your friends will soon tell you how much better you are looking and you will know again the joy of healthful living.

"It is not alone on behalf of the Red Cross that I join with others in making this appeal," said the Prime Minister. "Our own hearts will need much in the way of consolation before this terrible conflict is over. The only real consolation we shall ever have will be found in what we ourselves have done, or may yet be able to do, to lessen the sacrifices and the sorrow, the horrors of war may entail."

In a message read by Mr. Sommerville, chairman of the Canadian Society, the Duke of Gloucester, chairman of the British Society, said Canada would find her effort in the field would require the "full assistance of the Red Cross Society." The Duke was confident Canadians would make it possible for that aid to be given.

The problems faced by the Red Cross are as vast and varied as those of the army itself, Lord Tweedsmuir, President of the Canadian Society added. As with the army, the Red Cross had to be prepared for any emergency. Civilians could show their gratitude to those making heavy sacrifices through this direct medium.

Dr. Manion listed some of the duties of the organization in the first Great War, noted its broad peacetime activities, and stressed the necessity of making it possible to continue the whole program now. The sacrifice of contributing to its funds would be light indeed compared to the sacrifices made by thousands of others.

Facing Nation of Paranoiacs Capacity Congregation Told at Remembrance Day Service

Rev. W. J. Walker Delivers Masterful Address to War Veterans at St. Andrews Church

"HITLER, A MADMAN"

Last Post, Reveille, Poppy-Decked Pews, Add to Impressiveness of Service

"We are facing today a nation of pseudo-paranoiacs, men who cannot reason, who will not reason, madmen whose only god is conquest. If this sway sweeps through the entire civilization then we shall soon be at each others throats and exterminate ourselves," the Rev. W.J. Walker, declared yesterday morning in an impressive Remembrance Day service held in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

Speaking before a representative congregation of army and navy veterans, civic and municipal officials, city fraternal organizations and members of His Majesty's Royal Canadian Air Force and the Canadian Active Service Force, that filled the spacious auditorium to overflowing, the speaker denounced Adolf Hitler as being a "madman, insane, frustrated in his aims and blaming the world for his earlier defeats, until his frail mentality could not stand the pressure, and he became a paranoiac, flooding the nation with pamphlets until they are now pseudo-paranoiacs."

A Lunatic World

Deploring the state of world conditions, that period between the end of the last war and the beginning of the present one, Mr. Walker declared the world was a vast madhouse with God departed. "It was a hell upon earth," he said, "with children of war profiteers living in luxury while those of veterans walked the streets starving. There was a great falling away from the church. Churches were well nigh empty; drunkenness was ripe, morality was low. Why the war? The answer of the Christian Church is 'Sin'. The whole race of men is responsible for war, with its dictatorships and other existing conditions. We are living in a lunatic world, and until we become rationally minded we shall always have war," he said.

He levelled sharp criticism at Britain's pacifist leaders in the years preceding the present war. "We blushed with shame at the rape of Ethiopia, while Britain stood by, impotent because she was not equipped to meet the emergency. The pacifist leaders cut the hair of Samson among the nations, and we were held in shame because we were not ready."

Not Die in Vain

The glorious dead did not die in vain, as some United States organizations would have it, Mr. Walker said, stressing the fact that this was not an Armistice Day but a "Holy Remembrance Day." "A careful analysis," he said, "shows they did not die in vain although history shows the dreadful aftermath when the Devil unleashed his hordes of evil that possessed the souls of men. Hatred, and enmity struck the world like an epidemic of disease.

"The only precious thing left out of the mess of sordidness is the sacrifice of our comrades, who died to save the world and democracy, and whose sacrifice, in spite of the hypocricy and sordid things of today, shines out like a diamond in the sinful greedy world. They had no thought of revenge. They pitied the world and mankind, and they lived that they might lay down their lives in order to better the world and mankind."

"That thought must never die," Mr. Walker declared. Each Remembrance Day brings it home to us, and also the thought that we are not worthy to stand around the monuments of the world."

Only in the past two or three years has the real significance of Remembrance Day been brought home to Britain, the speaker said. "It is not simply a placing of symbols on cenotaphs then going back to the devilish round of things, and in the past two years the British Government has tried to right the wrong of the act."

Chamberlains Gesture Christian

'Chamberlain's gesture at Munich was a Christian act," Mr. Walker said, "but he was not dealing with Christian people, but people who knew not the ways of peace, but only of the sword. He realized that the time would come when compromise would be not feasible. Continuous aggression must be met only one way, with the inevitable result, war."

"I question the intelligence of certain groups of men who would denounce the government because it entered the war in defence of Christian ideals, the speaker asserted." The aggressor must be met with his own weapons. War is the price man must pay for the savage instincts that have been his for ages, instincts rooted in us that must be suppressed."

"Our comrades died, not to win the war, but to lead the nations to a true conception of the brotherhood and fatherhood of God. The last war was never finished, the present one is but its continuation, and as long as those evil forces are loose in the world there will always be war."

"The day will dawn," Mr. Walker concluded, "when comes not Armistice, but a true peace. Those men who lie in Flanders Fields, happy are they, but in passing they left us a brief message, 'Carry On.'

"Take up the quarrel with the foe.
To you from falling hands we throw
The torch; be yours to hold it high
If ye break faith with us who die
We shall not sleep; though poppies grow
In Flanders' Fields."

A solemn hush fell over the crowded auditorium, as the minister announced the observance of the "Two Minutes Silence." Then the mellow notes of "Last Post" sounded in the stillness of the church, followed by "Reveille," blown by Sergeant J. Finden, A. L. I. (tank). The National Anthem brought to a close a service that will long be remembered by those who attended.

Outstanding was the fine musical contribution given by the choir under the leadership of Mr. Charles Kilgour. Under his able baton the beautiful anthem "How They Do Softly Rest," was sung during the taking of the offering.

The church was taxed to its fullest capacity. Chairs brought from the Sunday School failed to fill the requirements of the overflow congregation, and many heard the service from the vestibules at the front of the edifice.

Wreaths Laid at Cenotaph

Previous to the service, veterans and associates held a brief memorial service at the cenotaph on Station Street, which was conducted by Mr Walker. The story appears in another column.

FINNISH-SOVIET

Asked whether the negotiations might be resumed later in event of a breakdown Erkko replied: "That depends on circumstances."

Points Specified

The Foreign Minister did not specify the points on which the negotiations were stalled. Observers expressed belief the stumbling blocks were Russia's demands for a naval base on Finnish territory at the entrance to the Gulf of Finland and revision of the southern border between the two countries on the Karelian Isthmus.

Erkko hinted at this interpretation when he said to an American newspaperman:

"I believe there is a place called Sandy Hook outside New York harbor. How would you like to hand that over to some one?"

He shrugged off as "part of the game" a weekend barrage of Russian press attacks on Finland's "obstinacy," but added: "When press attacks are inspired we have to take them into consideration as part of the discussion."

Press Issues Warning

The Russian press comment included a warning from the newspaper Trud, Soviet trade union organ, that Finland is playing "a dangerous game" which "may have grave results."

An article in the Red Fleet, Russian naval newspaper said that to protect Leningrad the Soviet must gain control of both sides of the Gulf of Finland as well as Finnish areas on the Arctic Coast west of Murmansk.

Finland now has access to the Arctic Ocean through a narrow strip of land between Norway and Russia.

The ladies who waited on table were Mrs. D. Houston and Mrs. B. Coles poured tea. Mrs. Arnold Portt, Mrs. Johnson, Mrs. Henry Toppings, Mrs. Harold Crane.

The dance in the evening was a great success. The Wilson orchestra of Napanee added much to the evening's enoyment. Midnight lunch was served by all the ladies, everyone had a good time. The winner of the quilt was Mrs. German, Front Road. The proceeds for the day were $139.20 clear.

"NERVES" SHE CALLED IT

Losing interest—losing friends—she never went out any more—always too tired. "Nerves," she thought — but it was her kidneys, the filters of her blood, that needed attention. Delay meant danger. She took Dodd's Kidney Pills at once. The improved action of her kidneys helped to clear away blood impurities and excess acids. Fatigue, headache, backache, lack of energy, disappeared. 117

The Stars Say

For Tuesday, November 14
By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

A DAY of decidedly mixed influences is read from the predominant lunar and mutual aspects. There will be a highly-stimulated spirit of initiative and adventure, with close attention to a reorganization of old and static conditions which seem to enjoy a definite spurt through study and hard work. This diligence and clear appraisal of long-stagnant circumstances should culminate in a general stabilization of the affairs, increase of possessions and a sounder financial footing. Hazardous situations call for very wise and sagacious management.

Those whose birthday it is may expect a lively year in re-establishing affairs on sounder foundations after a period of sluggishness and defeat. The energies will be under high impetus for this, with the judgment clear and with plans built on a system of new values. The latter concern property, finances and other major issues. But there are hazardous situations which cann for vigilance and acumen, lest there be legal entanglements or some perilous use of funds.

energetic, profound, studious and well equipped to overcome adverse situations. Results should mate-

Eighteen Injured During Communist Rally

When a picket line of 200 "patriots" was formed at a gathering held by Communists in Detroit, rioting soon followed, resulting in 18 injuries, 6 of them to women. The original meeting, at which William Z. Foster, several times Communist candidate for the U.S. presidency, was to be the speaker, was attended by around 1,000 adherents, and some of the battling "patriots" and Reds are shown in this violent scene.

LATE LT.-COL. R. J. E. GRAHAM

News of the death of Lieut.- Col. Robert J. E. Graham, at Weslemkoon Lake on Sunday shocked this community where he was born and where he spent his entire life except for the years of his service overseas during the Great War. The manner of his death in the landing of a plane in which he was riding with a friend, Mr. Ellsworth Rogers, of Toronto, who was at the controls, added poignancy to the sense of regret and sorrow which citizens of all ranks feel at the death of this stalwart native son who, not yet at middle age, had been able to make an unforgettable contribution to the life and benefit of his city and district. He was one of the outstanding of the younger men of this community, whose service was always at the call of every interest which would improve or develop Belleville and which had the welfare of the citizens at stake. He had served well for a man of only forty-three years and the past twenty years or more had been filled with efforts in many spheres. He had enlisted when little more than a mere boy to serve his country in the Great War. He had served his city in which he had had a marked career in municipal life by the time he was thirty years of age of which the citizens are proud. As alderman and mayor he was alert to every call for the opportunity to benefit Belleville and her citizens as well as the industrial and manufacturing interests of the city and district.

Col. Graham possessed fine personal qualities and gifts. He was one of the most companionable of men and was hospitable to a marked degree. Indeed in his home he was the soul of hospitality in a public as well as a private capacity. His quality for friendship and his leadership were marked in other ways, by his wide associations with philanthropic organizations where his personal interest was manifested in a most generous style. Socially he was popular. He possessed the happiest of temperaments. In his presence everyone was at ease for he was an ideal host and friend.

He was capable of tireless energy and into his every effort he put zeal and effort.

His interests were wide. He was an ardent sportsman, and spent many happy days at his camp at Weslemkoon Lake. He liked executive work, he was well trained in the law, he liked social life and made his home what the ideal home should be.

Belleville will be the loser in the tragedy that has cut off a life of a citizen beloved by all who knew him well.

CANADIAN MINING BOOMS IN 1939

The stimulated Canadian mining industry is expected this year to produce approximately $450,000,000 in new wealth. The output of the gold and base metals mines is now at levels never before reached and gold production alone will approximate $185,000,000.

The significance of Canadian metal output with the German War raging cannot be over-stressed. Gold, nickel, copper, lead, zinc, silver and platinum metals are pouring out of the mills and refineries of this country in a flooding stream at a time when metals are the lifeblood of our armies. Oil production is at an all time high. Coal output is increasing. Asbestos and aluminum tonnages are on the upturn.

The outlook for the mining industry was never better. Gold is now bringing the producers $38.50 an ounce and the output in 1940 should exceed $200,000,000. There are ten times as many gold mills as there were in 1914 and gold is now recognized as a prime war munition. The Canadian government has wisely refused to penalize the gold producers and has offered every encouragement to swell the volume of the vital metal which has won wars before and will do so again. In 1914 Canadian output was only 773,178 ounces; today it is at the rate of 5,000,000 ounces annually. The value of an ounce of gold has nearly doubled in the interim.

Productive capability of our base metals, as compared with 1914 is indicated in the following tabulation:

	1938	1914
Copper, tons	285,265	37,867
Nickel, tons	105,286	22,759
Lead, tons	209,464	18,168
Zinc, tons	190,753	3,628

Canada leads the world in nickel, platinum and radium production and is rapidly attaining second place in gold. It is amongst the world leaders in the output of lead, zinc, copper and silver. It has added to its list in recent years radium, selenium, cadmium, uranium, tellurium, iridium and rhodium.

Canadian metallurgical and reduction processes are the most advanced in the world. Producers of metals and minerals in the Dominion have successfully competed in the world market throughout the depression and have recorded the remarkable performance of increasing volume and value of mine output in a time of unparalleled financial stress.

The creation of nearly half a billion dollars of new wealth annually has a natural reaction on the national economy. There are at this time some 112,000 people directly engaged in mining in Canada, with an annual payroll in excess of $140,000,000. As an instance of the buying power created by this outpouring of new money it is computed that the gold camp of Kirkland Lake spends $1,100,000 monthly, mainly in the southern and eastern areas of the country.

The rise of mining to a place of paramount importance has created something like a revolution in the Dominion's manufacturing industry. There are now produced in Canada nearly 90% of the machines and supplies required for the winning of metals where a few years ago an equivalent percentage was imported.

The transportation industry has been significantly affected by the stimulation of mine production. Whole sections of transcontinental line which was slated for abandonment have been revived and reconditioned to serve the mines. The only railway branch built in Canada in two decades was provided last winter to serve the newly opened Quebec gold belt.

In the November 9th issue of The Northern Miner a special annual review of the Dominion's mineral industry is presented. In 136 pages there are provided in articles, tables and pictures a comprehensive outline of the essential facts. Articles deal with gold, base metals, war minerals, currencies, mine wages, the buying power of the industry and other allied subjects. The whole presents a stimulating picture of present activity and expanding outlook.

NOW IT'S A FIVE YEAR WAR PLAN

Chancellor Hitler has said he has ordered plans on the basis of a five year war by Germany.

This did not meet with the first view of the German Chancellor who saw a "lightning war" against the Poles. He immediately realized that it would not be sudden when Britain and France entered the conflict, and therefore he planned a peace proposal. So far he has not struck with the full might on the western front, though his sea marauders have been active but are suffering heavily, and there have been times when it was thought that the blow would fall. Now the centre of interest has switched to the Netherlands frontier.

There is no doubt that he dearly wants to get out of this war by any means possible, but peace as he would have it would really mean a victory for Nazism because he would still be capable of doing damage to the security of nations.

His threat of a five year war does not frighten the Allies. They are in the hostilities until the world is cleansed of Nazism. Hitler, it may be sure, does not mean to fight for five years. He would be pleased if he had the material, resources and man power to do so but he has not.

The war still stays without the full fury breaking out. The German Chancellor may doubtless make many moves calculated to bring a cessation of hostilities, even though he has said he has made the last offer which was rejected by Britain and France. He has spoken of talking "to the English a language they surely will understand." That is his latest threat.

REPATRIATION OF GERMANS

How will those persons who have been espousing Nazism in other lands and those persons of German birth who living in other lands have kept their pride in Germany, feel if called upon to return to Germany and be repatriated? They have been happy outside Germany and have built up their homes in various countries in Europe. Windsor Star refers to these people:

Now that there is a possibility of their being repatriated to Germany, and having to give up the homes they have built in their present locations, they are not so energetic in their Germanism. Because of native ability and industry, they have some of the best farms and businesses in their new countries. They do not relish the idea of relinquishing them to be put on poorer soil, or to start business anew, in Germany or in those districts taken by Hitler from Poland. They are piping down on their Nazism and some of them are even changing their names."

Months ago some Germans left Western Canada and assailed the Dominion because of the Canadian attitude to Hitler. Those people are back in Germany and probably are not so pleased as they thought they would be when they were saying goodbye to Canada. Probably they regret their return to the land of the Nazis.

NINE FATALITIES IN THE PROVINCE OVER THE WEEKEND

Fatalities, including three drownings and three automobile accidents, claimed nine lives in Ontario during the Remembrance Day weekend. A hunting accident, a fall and a case of lockjaw made up the total.

At Fesserton, near Midland, Jack Lownes, 19, Fesserton, drowned Saturday when a canoe in which he was riding with Jack Braithwaite, 21, Fesserton, overturned. The body was recovered Sunday. Braithwaite swam ashore, collapsed, and was found unconscious on the beach. He said he and his friend had been duck-hunting.

Ten-year-old James Tetue drowned at Pembroke last night when he slipped into the water from the icy surface of a boat slip at the Pembroke dock. The body was recovered.

Jack Mullen, 70, Huntsville, died on the way to hospital at North Bay after he was shot accidentally while on a hunting trip near Kiosk in Algonquin Park. Details of the accident were vague.

Donald Robinson, 19, Napanee, died in hospital there Saturday of lockjaw, following an injury suffered when he stepped on a nail. Edgar Purcell, 35, Pembroke district farmer, died in hospital Saturday of a fractured skull believed suffered when he fell from a loft in his barn. He was found unconscious on the floor of his barn.

Hanlin Leeman, 38, foreman in a Windsor automobile plant, died in hospital at Chatham Saturday night an hour after his car plunged into three feet of water in a Dover Township ditch. He died of shock and exposure. The car overturned and Leeman and two companions, who had been duck hunting with him, kept their heads above water until liberated by a farmer. The passengers escaped injury.

Patrick O'Sullivan, 53, known to westend Toronto residents as "the Mayor of Brockton," was killed in that city when struck by an automobile driven by Lawrence Crooks, 37, Toronto.

Losing balance while attempting to shut the door of his automobile as he drove along the Middle Road near Freeman Saturday, George E. Collins, 58, Niagara Falls, N. Y., fell to the pavement and died of a fractured skull. The driverless car, containing his wife and two children, who were not injured, crashed through a fence and stalled in a field.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Traumatic Neurosis — Damage to the Personality by Shock

If an individual has been in a motor or other accident, or has been wounded in battle, there is likely to be some physical injury—a broken bone, a cut or scrape, the mark of the bullet or piece of shell—will be found on his body. He will thus get compensation or pension for the shock to his nerves.

What about the individual who has been in a motor accident, has been under shell fire for hours daily for a period of weeks, but has no visible mark of injury on his body? That this individual may be entitled to compensation or pension due to the "shock" is now admitted by the physicians of compensation and pension boards.

What is called traumatic neurosis is where the individual has been through some accident or occurrence which has so affected his nerves that he is unable to do the mental and physical work of which he was capable before the accident or other occurrence. 'Trauma' means injury and 'neurosis' a discorded state of the nerves yet no real injury to the nerves is present.

In discussing traumatic neurosis in the Medical Clinics of North America, Dr. Abraham Myerson, Boston State Hospital, says:

"In the first place, no emotional shock, no resulting disturbance in mood or mind is valid (holds good) 'legally' as a cause for recovering compensation or damage, unless there has been physical damage accompanying it. Thus, if an individual is tremendously or injuriously frightened by a fire which has taken place near him, unless he has been struck by falling timbers or has stumbled and struck himself; or has been wet down by water; or has inhaled an appreciable and damaging amount of smoke the individual will not receive compensation even if his nervousness or neurosis prevents him from ever being able to resume his previous occupation."

If, however, he can show some injury, however slight, the emotional disturbances are also considered in awarding compensation, but it is the physical injury that counts most with the compensation or pension board.

Now, we all know that a shock to one individual without any physical injury can do more damage to his personality and earning ability than a broken leg can do to another. We also know that the fact that he is likely to get compensation or pension may cause an individual to "remain disabled".

We must be patient, therefore, with compensation and pension boards because, while they do not have to recognise traumatic neurosis unless evidence of injury is present nevertheless most of the boards try to be fair.

AS FRENCH LINER WENT DOWN AFTER U-BOAT ATTACK

Mortally hit by a German torpedo the French liner Bretagne is shown sinking, somewhere in the Atlantic. It was reported that 14 persons lost their lives in the torpedoing of the liner, which was en route from the West Indies with 124 passengers. Officers of the Bretagne said that the submarine fired on the lifeboats that were taking the passengers from the stricken ship. Although the sinking took place last month, the photo has just been released and was radioed from London to New York.

FAMILY DINNER
FISH PARTY DINNER
makes ANY dinner complete

WHETHER it be for the main course at the family dinner, or as an item in a party dinner, FISH lends pleasing new tastiness to the menu. Many thousands of women in Canada have learned of the food value of Canadian Fish and Shellfish; of the many different varieties available all the year 'round, either fresh, frozen, smoked, dried, canned or pickled; and of how easy it is to prepare delicious meals with FISH from inland waters or from the sea. Plan to serve Canadian Fish to your family several times a week, either for lunch or dinner.

DEPARTMENT OF FISHERIES, OTTAWA:

OVEN COOKED FILLETS OF FISH
(Cod, haddock, halibut, whitefish, sole, etc., may be used.)
The fish may be cut into pieces of suitable size for serving or the fillets may be left whole. Dip each piece into salted milk (one-half tablespoonful of salt to one-half cupful of whole milk or diluted evaporated milk), toss into a pan of sifted dry bread crumbs, coat thoroughly and place in a well-oiled baking-pan. Sprinkle with oil and place in a very hot oven —500 deg. Fahr. Bake until the fish is tender and the crumbs nicely browned (about 10 minutes). Serve with Tomato, Hollandaise, Caper or Tartar Sauce.

Relieve the Misery Without Dosing

Rub chest, throat and back thoroughly with Vicks VapoRub at bedtime. Right away, VapoRub goes to work... two ways at once.

VapoRub acts on the skin like a warming stimulating poultice. At the same time it gives off medicinal vapours that are breathed direct into irritated air passages. This direct, double action continues for hours after restful sleep comes. Often by morning most of the misery is gone.

Why risk increased discomforts by drastic "dosing"—relieve misery externally with VICKS VAPORUB

Roslin

Roslin—The Anglican Church Hall was the scene of a happy gathering on Thursday evening, November 9th., when over two hundred relatives, friends and neighbors assembled in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Ernie Davis (nee Mary Johnson) who were married recently and presented them with a miscellaneous shower.

The early part of the evening was spent in social intercourse and dancing. About 11 p.m. Rev. F. C. Beazer called the gathering to order. Mr. and Mrs. Davis were seated before a table laden with many beautiful and useful gifts and Miss Whiteman read the following address:

Roslin, Ontario
November 9th., 1939

Mr. and Mrs. Ernie Davis:
Dear Ernie and Mary:

It is with a feeling of much pleasure that we, a few of your relatives, friends and neighbors, meet together this evening to do honor to you on this the most momentous event of your life, that of your marriage.

Mary, you have been one of us during your entire life, and now as you are leaving our community to make your home elsewhere, you take with you the best wishes and good will of all. Ernie, although you are a stranger perhaps to many of us as yet, to you we extend a welcome strong and true. We hope to know you better in the near future and we would like to congratulate you on your admirable choice of a life partner. Then to you both our wishes go that your journey through matrimonial seas may be a successful one and that at last, you will anchor safely in the harbor of your dearest wishes and dreams. Our earnest prayer is that you may find much happiness in the home you are about to consummate. As token of our esteem and good will we ask you to accept these gifts and in using each article, may you often be led back Memory's Lane to one small corner of the earth, that of the community of Roslin.

May God's richest blessing guide and direct you through the years to come.

Signed on behalf of the community:

Newton Wilson
Charles Hart
Stanley Carter
Percy Vance
Roy Vance

The bride and groom very graciously thanked their many friends for the lovely gifts and invited all to visit them in their new home.

All joined in singing "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows."

Lunch was served and dancing resumed till the wee small hours.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Burleigh and Mr. Eugene Tracey furnished the music for dancing.

Members of the Roslin Women's Institute met on Thursday afternoon, November 9th., at the home of Mrs. Clapsaddle for their regular monthly meeting. There was an attendance of twenty-three.

With the president, Mrs. White, occupying the chair, the meeting was opened in the usual way. Routine business was dealt with. Mrs. W. Wier offered her home for the second part of the demonstration in vegetable cookery and it was decided to have a Pot Luck dinner the same day, proceeds to go toward Red Cross work. Messages of thanks were received from representatives of the three local churches, for the donations given by the W. I. toward the upkeep of the cemetaries.

It was decided to make application for the government grant and to send for a travelling library.

Mrs. N. Sills was in charge of the program. Several selections from the song sheets were sung. Mrs. Sills gave a talk on the motto, "Thought Give Heartache or Peace."

Mrs. Beazer gave the topic for the day "What Price Peace." Miss Blanche Reid played an instrumental selection. Mrs. H. Sills read a poem, "Our Flag." Mrs. H. Chisholm read a paper on "Remembrance Day, 1939." Mrs. Slingerland read a poem "Hope." Little Miss Evelyn Sills played a piano selection and Little Misses Evelyn Sills, June Sills, Ruth Reid and Isabelle Bates sang a chorus.

The program was brought to a close with the singing of the National Anthem and O Canada.

Lunch was served and a social hour enjoyed.

Bonarlaw

Bonarlaw, Ont., Nov. 13. — On Wednesday evening, Nov. 8, District Deputy Grand Master William J. Barlow, Madoc District No. 45 I. O. O.F., paid an official visit to Stirling Lodge I.O.O.F. No. 239 accompanied by his installation staff as follows: Bros. T. H. Prest, Clayton Burkitt, Geo. E. Thompson, Sidney Mason, Roy Brown, C. S. Eastwood and J. F. Baker. Other members of Springbrook Lodge also attended. The installation of the Stirling officers was performed however by District Deputy Grand Master Nelson Fardell of Kingston, District No. 49 and staff as follows: Bros. J. B. Nelson, E. Grant, J. Campgell, H. Watson, J. Walker, A. Snyder, E. Hughes and M. Wallace. They were also assisted by Bro. H. G. Orser, pianist.

The officers of Stirling Lodge installed were as follows: Noble Grand, Fred Kent; Past Grand, Charles Carter; Vice Grand, R. S. Finkle; Recording Secretary, J. B. Thompson; Financial Secretary, E. T. Ward; Treasurer, H. E. Hulin; Warden, Wesley Farrell; Con., Guy Bradshaw; Chaplain, Walter Warren; R.S.S., W. Fitchett; L.S.S., E. Heagle; R.S.N.G., Arthur Andrews; L.S.N.G., William Anderson; I.G., J. Cranston; O.G., E. Fox; R.S.V.G., William Patterson; L.S.V.G., Roy Walker.

After all business had been attended to a splendid lunch was served and after the toast to "The King" many of the brethren present made brief addresses. Many compliments were paid to Bro. Fardell and staff for the splendid manner in which he installed the officers. Bro. Fardell thanked the members of Stirling Lodge and D.D.G.M. Barlow for the invitation to this district and the wonderful reception he had received.

A pleasing feature of the evening was the presentation of a fifty year jewel to Bro. H. Ashley and a 25-year jewel to Bro. J. B. Thompson from Stirling Lodge. The presentation was made by D.D.G.M. W. J. Barlow who complimented the brothers on their splendid work in the order and hoped they would live to enjoy many more years of useful service. Fitting replies were made by both recipients thanking the lodge. Bro. Thompson especially valued the jewel he received, it being one worn by his late father, Bro. C. W. Thompson, an active member of Stirling Lodge for many years.

Vocal solos were contributed by Bros. H. G. Orser and J. F. Baker. "Auld Lang Syne" concluded a very pleasant evening.

GOERING LECTURES GERMANS

Berlin, Nov. 11 (CP-Havas)—Marshal Hermann Goering lectured the German people today on their critical attitude toward wartime hardships. But he also ordered government officials to be polite in enforcing Nazi decrees.

Speaking in his capacity as commissioner in charge of the "home front", Goering said: "What still causes criticism is the relations of administrations in charge of supply with citizens. On this point I desire, particularly in connection with the obtaining of ration cards or indemnities, that even the slightest friction be avoided."

The Field Marshal denounced the trouble-makers who "ceaselessly importune officials with their troubles." Some have been punished, he said, and if complaints do not end they will be punished more severely.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Nov. 13—(CP)—Spotty strength on Toronto Exchange today was shown in the industrial section. The Massey-Harris Stocks, Fanny Farmer and Bell Telephone were features. Massey Pfd. advanced 2 to 62, Bell Telephone gained 3 to 165 and Fanny Farmer firmed a fraction to a new high for the year at 25. Steels, Utilities and Foods were well up.

Mining issues traded in moderate volume and a few gains in the Golds were off-set by recessions. Western Oils sold down on the news that allowable production had been cut from 26,000 to 20,000 barrels daily because of the falling off in consumption since the freeze up. Home Oil dropped to around 2:40 for a loss of 17 cents and Calgary-Edmonton, Royalite and Anglo-Canadian were lower.

WALL STREET

New York, Nov. 13 (AP)—A few steels, aircrafts, rails and specialties were accorded mild favor in today's stock market, but numerous issues were neglected.

The list exhibited indefinite trends at the start, firmed up a trifle later, then again turned spotty around mid-day. Dealings were exceptionally slow and prices mixed near the fourth hour.

Small gains were posted for Distillers, Hiram Walker and Dome in the Canadian list. Lake Shore lost nearly a point. Dominion 4's were under considerable pressure in the bond market.

Douglas Aircraft, on the "big board", attracted buyers for a while in the morning as the company disclosed nine months' net of $3.97 a share against $3.19 in the 1938 period and a backlog as of Nov. 3, of $75,486,713.

Hog Quotations

Toronto, Nov. 13 (CP) — Unchanged prices were boarded on reporting bacon-hog markets today.

Liveweights — Brantford $8.25, Chatham $8.35.

Dressedweights — Barrie $11.50, Brantford $11.25, Chatham $11.45, Hull $11.30, London $11 plus transportation, Peterborough $11.05 plus transportation, Stratford $11 plus transportation.

LIVESTOCK

Toronto, Nov. 13—(CP)—Cattle trade picked up at mid-session after a slow opening on the Toronto Livestock Market today. The calf and sheep divisions held steady while a firm tone marked lambs. No hog price was established. Cattle holdover from last week was 400 head.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Livestock Branch were: Cattle 4,930; calves 1,530; hogs 1,280; sheep and lambs 2,320.

Prices were strong on good quality steers and heifers and about steady on other cattle. Good butcher steers and heifers sold at $7.25-$7.50 with common grades selling downward to $5. A few weighty steers made $6.65-$7.60, butcher cows ranged from $4-$5 and canner and cutters brought $3.25-$3.75. Good butcher bulls traded at $5-$5.50 and bolognas $4.50-$5. Fed calves ranged from $7.50-$9 and good stockers made $6.50-$7 with some stock calves selling at $7.35. Common stockers sold downward to $5.50.

Choice veal calves traded at $10-$11 with common vealers at $6. Grassers brought $5-$5.50.

Previous close on off-truck hogs was $8.60.

Good ewe and wether lambs delivered by rail sold at $9.75-$9.85 with a few lots at $10. Good lambs delivered by truck made $9.50-$9.75. Bucks and heavies sold at $1 discount and culls made $7-$7.50.

Sheep ranged from $2.50-$5.50 cwt.

Montreal, Nov. 13—(CP)—All Livestock prices held firm on Montreal Livestock Markets today according to the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

Receipts—Cattle 1,445, calves 1,826, sheep and lambs 3,009, hogs 2,583.

Good steers made from $7-7.50, mediums $6-$6.75 and commons $4.50-$6. Heifers ranged from $4-$6. Good cows brought $5.25, mediums $4-$4.75 and commons at $3.50 to $4. Canners and cutters $2.50-$3.25. Good bulls brought $4.50-$5.25 with commons mostly $3.50 to $4.

Veals ranged from $7-$10 for common to medium good kinds with an odd top at $10.50 with the bulk going between $8.50 to $9. Drinkers made $5.50 to $7, grassers $4.25 to $5 with the bulk between $4.50 to $4.75.

Good ewes and wethers held at $9.75 with heavy lambs cut $1 per hundred weight, culls and bucks $2 per hundred weight. Sheep made $3 to $5 the bulk going between $3.50 to $4.50.

Produce Market Remains Quiet

Toronto, Nov. 13— The Toronto open produce market was generally quiet on Saturday with price changes slight.

Light sales were recorded at previous levels on the wholesale butter market. The stock figures apparently had no influence in dealings, although some of the members of the trade felt that they were not as favorable as the figures of Oct. 1 would seem to have indicated. On that date cold storage holdings in Canada were 7.8 million pounds below a year ago, while on the first of November the decline from a year ago was 6.5 million pounds, indicating a decrease in the domestic disappearance of butter during the month of October.

Informed sources point out, however, that substantial quantities of butter went into private cold storages during September and that these supplies were probably drawn upon during last month. The domestic disappearance in September amounted to 27.3 million pounds, an increase of 7.1 per cent when compared with the same month of 1938, and an increase of 12.2 per cent when compared with the previous month.

Business remained practically at a standstill on the wholesale cheese market, but prices continued firm at former levels. The latest report from Ottawa reveals a favorable stock position in view of heavy exports and a decline of 17 per cent from a year ago in the October make. Amount of cheese in cold storage on Nov. 1 was 42,103,796 pounds, representing a decrease of 2.1 million pounds from the corresponding date of last year.

A fairly good movement continued in pullet and lower grade eggs, but buyers were cautious in purchasing grade A-large and particularly A-medium.

The Pontiff spoke on the occasion of the 50th anniversary celebration of the Catholic University of America, Washington, D.C., from his private studio. He talked approximately seven minutes.

NO GROUNDS FOR

Meanwhile, collaboration of The Netherlands and Belgium in efforts to mediate the war and at the same time prepare for any other eventuality was emphasized by an urgent meeting near the border of their foreign ministers.

Came as Surprise

The conference last night at Breda, between Paul Henri Spaak of Belgium and Eelco N. Kleffens of the Netherlands, came as a surprise at the end of a week marked by a joint appeal for a negotiated settlement of the war and extraordinary measures for defence of the two lowland countries.

The exact purpose of the conference was not disclosed but, since it followed by a few hours inconclusive British and French replied to the mediation proposal it was presumed, in part, to concern furtherance of the peace effort of Queen Wilhelmina and King Leopold.

Authoritative quarters held that the replies from King George and President Albert Lebrun—in effect putting any further peace move up to Germany—could not be interpreted as complete rejections.

Examine Offer Carefully

No formal reply had been received from Germany but the German Minister to The Netherlands has informed the Hague foreign office that the mediation offer would be examined carefully.

Despite official reassurance, Netherlanders and Belgians remained anxious over reported German troop concentrations along their borders with which Germany might conceivably attempt to outflank the Maginot Line and reach coastal bases for assaults on Britain.

De Geer said Holland's own defence measures had been misinterpreted and "it would be a fatal error on our part to conclude from these measures that threats to our frontiers had increased."

He declared recent Netherlands precautions "for the strengthening and intensifying of our mobilization" were necessary because tension on the western front "seemed to have increased."

Measures Reviewed

De Geer reviewed precautionary measures taken by Holland during the last war and through other periods of intensified defence measures because of "certain temporary conditions which made it necessary for our preparedness to be more effective" and added:

"In all those cases the outcome was to prove that the people's fears were groundless. The present situation must be considered in the same light.

"Acute danger does not exist any more than it did in the first days of September when all our defence forces were mobilized."

Prepared For Anything

The Premier said Holland's mobilization was in preparation for any development.

"We were obliged to do so because those who want to respect our frontiers do not, as belligerents, trust each other's pledged word.... Our mobilization gave them the guarantee they needed." (Germany, Great Britain and France have pledged that they would respect the neutrality of the Netherlands and Belgium.)

Mobilization must remain flexible according to the tension on the frontier, he stated.

Urged Not to Court Danger

He urged Holland not to court danger by nervousness and thus risk losing "the blessing which God has given us—the vocation of stimulating peace and thus serving others."

It was this vocation, De Geer declared, which led Queen Wilhemina and King Leopold of Belgium to make their peace mediation offer. Great Britain answered the offer yesterday by saying the issue was up to Germany.

"Should these endeavors again fail," he added, "we and the governments of other countries for which peace is preserved will at a later date be able to take new steps in the same direction."

ALLIES TO FIGHT

any German proposals which might "afford real prospect of achieving" Britain's avowed aim to halt German "aggression."

Mr. Churchill declared the Allies would fight "until the other side have had enough." He, too, listed restoration of Poland and Czecho-Slovakia as an aim of the Allies.

The British sovereign's answer, sent after consultations with the Dominion governments and France, drew on the words of Prime Minister Chamberlain for the renewed declaration that Britain is fighting "to secure that Europe may be redeemed from perpetually recurring fear of German aggression.... and to prevent for the future resort to force...."

France to End Enterprises of Force

President Lebrun, similarly, declared that "France has taken arms to put a definite end to enterprises of violence and force" and concluded:

"Today it is up to Germany, not France, to pronounce herself for or against this peace to which aspire all countries whose security and independence are menaced by her action."

Churchill Says Small Countries Menaced

Mr. Churchill pictured the Netherlands and Belgium as menaced by German arms.

"I shall not attempt to prophesy whether the frenzy of a cornered maniac will drive Herr Hitler into the worst of all his crimes," he said. "But this I will say without a doubt, that the fate of Holland and Belgium, like that of Poland, Czecho-Slovakia and Austria will be decided by the victory of the British Empire and the French Republic."

He said the Allied strength on the land and in the air was growing constantly, that Britain's anti-submarine forces had been trebled and that "we are far better prepared to endure the worst malice of Hitler and his Huns than we were at the beginning of September."

"I go so far as to say that if we come through the winter without any large important event occurring we shall in fact have gained the first campaign of the war," he said.

Mr. Churchill, a frequent critic of Mr. Chamberlain's foreign policies before becoming a member of the war cabinet, recalled his differences with the Prime Minister but added, "he is a man of very tough fibre and I can tell you that he is going to fight as obstinately for victory as he did for peace."

All Enslaved if Naziism

"If we are conquered all will be enslaved," he concluded, "and the United States will be left single-handed to guard the rights of man."

The King's answer to the sovereigns of the Lowlands said that Britain, the Dominions and France "would always be willing to examine a reasonable and assured basis for an equitable peace."

"The immediate occasion leading to our decision to enter the war was Germany's aggression against Poland," the note said. "But this aggression was only a fresh instance of German policy toward her neighbors.

"The larger purposes for which my peoples are now fighting are to secure that Europe may be redeemed, in the words of my Prime Minister in the United Kingdom, 'from perpetually recurring fear of German aggression' and to prevent for the future resort to force."

Mr. Churchill spoke of Hitler and his "boastful and bullying Nazis" with contempt

"They are looking with hungry eyes for some small countries in which they can trample down and loot as they have trampled down and looted Austria, Czecho-Slovakia and Poland," he said at one point in his address.

At another point he said: "The whole world is against Hitler and Hitlerism. Men of every race feel that this monstrous apparition stands between them and the forward move which is their due and for which the age is ripe."

He intimated he believed Germany did not bomb England because she feared reprisals and said he had the conviction that "that evil man over there and his cluster of confederates are not sure of themselves as we are sure of ourselves, that they are harassed in their guilty souls by the thought and by the fear of ever-approaching retribution for their crimes."

The quake appeared to extend over an area from Portland, north through Longview, Aberdeen and the Grays Harbor district, Tacoma, Seattle, Everett and Vancouver and then east almost to Spokane. All communities reported from three to four distinct shocks.

Registers For 20 Minutes

In Seattle, Howard A. Coombs, Assistant Professor of Geology of the University of Washington, said the shock, the heaviest recorded in the 15 years he has been at the university, registered on the school's seismograph for 20 minutes although it was only strong enough to be felt for a few seconds. He added that the shake was strong enough to upset the needle on the seismograph.

A high tension wire fell in the Tacoma tideflats, causing a flash seen several miles despite a heavy fog. It started a fire in a St. Paul and Tacoma lumber company shed on the waterfront. The blaze was quickly extinguished.

In the Grays Harbor area, which includes Aberdeen, Hoquiam and Raymond several water mains were broken and several telephone lines were disrupted.

DR. MOLONEY DIES, ILL FOR TWO MONTHS

Ottawa, Nov. 13—(CP)—Funeral services will be held here tomorrow for Dr. Paul Joseph Moloney, Provincial Health Officer of the Ontario Department of Health for Eastern Ontario from 1912 to 1935. Dr. Maloney, 73, died Sunday.

After the service here, the body will be taken to Peterborough, Ont., and then to Ennismore for burial following a service at St. Martin's Church there.

A native of Ennismore, Dr. Moloney had been seriously ill for the past two months.

Snow Cruiser Awaits Loading

Boston, Nov. 13—(AP)— The United States Antarctic expedition's 27-ton snow cruiser rolled safely into Boston army base today, where it awaited loading aboard the motorship North Star for its voyage to the south polar wastes.

One minor accident marred the final 20 miles of its mishap-interrupted trip from Chicago. The great vehicle knocked off the glass globe atop a highway arc-light in Wellesley, but none of the 30-odd early morning spectators was hurt by the shower of glass.

SANTA CLAUS PARADE FAVORED

A proposal that a Santa Claus parade be undertaken in Belleville early in December is receiving serious consideration by the merchants of the city. A meeting is being called for Wednesday morning, November 15 at 10 o'clock at the Y.M.C.A. to consider the matter, and all merchants are asked to attend.

NAZIISM AND HITLER ONE

Hitler Looks on Self as Divinely Ordained to Lead Fatherland

(By Dewitt Mackenzie, Associated Press Staff Writer).

New York, Nov 13—(AP)—The attempt on Adolf Hitler's life at Munich has raised the vital question as to the strength of his leadership and what would have been the effect on the Nazi regime and its conduct of the war if anything untoward had happened to him.

Hitler's dictatorship is unique in that he is not only a political but, to a great many of his followers, a spiritual leader. Naziism has been described as a religion, in contrast to a purely political creed like Fascism. Naziism is simply the Hitler credo in which he has been accorded the position of a messiah by a lot of his admirers. That is to say, Naziism and Hitler are one and the same thing.

Crushing Hitlerism

When one stops to consider this it provides a key to what the Allies have in mind when they talk about "crushing Hitlerism." Hitler himself has made it clear he regards himself as divinedly ordained to carry out his personal program for the Fatherland. Beyond this he has made no public claims to spiritual leadership, though there hasn't been any indication he has discouraged his followers from making such claims on his behalf.

It is a matter of recorded fact that this idea of spiritual leadership has gripped a large number of people, though there is no way of gauging just how widespread this is. One sees its manifestation in numerous ways. For instance, some churches read Hitler's autobiography, Mein Kampf, from the pulpit in place of the Bible.

Perpetuation of Doctrine

This background raises the question as to the manner in which such a religious-political doctrine would be perpetuated. It assuredly would call for a remarkable leadership.

Hitler has designed Field Marshal Herman Goering as his successor. Goering is credited with having wide capabilities, and he is popular with the people as a whole. However, there is a far reach between the personalities of Hitler the austere leader and the smiling Goering who revels in his gaudy uniforms and the good things of life. It is putting it mildly to say Goering, or anybody else, would have to show tremendous speed to take over the Hitlerian job and save Naziism from a collapse.

Series of Accidents Early Saturday Evening Reported at Tweed

No One Involved Was Seriously Injured Although Much Damage Done to Vehicles

Tweed, Nov. 13—(Special)— Between five-fifteen and six o'clock on Saturday evening a series of accidents was reported to Chief Constable J. C. Hayes. Fortunately none of these accidents resulted in serious injuries to the persons involved in them, although considerable damage resulted to some of the motor cars concerned.

Shortly after five o'clock an urgent call came to Chief Hayes and Dr. M. B. George that an accident had occurred on No. 37 a short distance north of Tweed. On proceeding to spot designated, the police officer was unable to find any trace of either the car, or cars, involved, or their occupants. On investigation Constable Hayes learned that only one car, a small green truck, was concerned and that the injured passenger was in the truck which had apparently continued on into Tweed.

While investigating a second accident which occurred a short time later two miles south of Tweed, Chief Hayes observed a small green truck pass the scene of the accident at a high rate of speed. The officer gave immediate chase and on overtaking the truck, arrested the driver, John Richardson, and the injured passenger, Gerald Wycott, both of Trenton.

Wycott was found to have extensive head injuries and to be bleeding freely. On questioning them it appears that Wycott had gotten out of the truck at a point north of Tweed and had fallen sustaining the injuries referred to. The two men appeared before Mr. Chas. H. Kerr, J.P. and were remanded in custody. The investigation is continuing.

In the second accident which occurred on Highway No. 37 two miles south of Tweed, near the foot of the sand hill, two cars were involved. Mr. Miller Johns, manager of Tweed Hydro, was on his way to Belleville, when he was blinded by the lights of a passing motor car.

Failing to see a light delivery truck drawn up on the right side of the road for the purpose of discharging passengers he crashed into it from the rear.

No one was injured but the front of Mr. John's car sustained extensive damage. Chief Constable J. C. Hayes investigated and it is understood that no charge will be laid.

The third accident occurred also on No. 37 Highway a short distance north of Tweed, when a motor car owned and operated by Mr. Roger Rose, Tweed, encountered a herd of cattle.

Mr. Rose's car was badly damaged but he was uninjured nor was any of the cattle seriously hurt. Chief Hayes investigated the accident.

AIR-RAID SIRENS SOUND IN PARIS

French Anti-Aircraft Fire Drives Off Reconnaissance Enemy Fliers

Paris, Nov. 13—(AP)—Shrilling air raid sirens sent the civilian population of Paris to cover early today for the seventh time since the war started and military sources announced later that German reconnaissance planes had flown over the area.

The announcement said the planes had been driven off by anti-aircraft fire but did not specify the number involved.

The sirens sounded the warning at 4.20 a.m. (10.20 p.m., EST Sunday) and ended the alarm period at 5.20 a.m. It was the second early morning alarm of the weekend, one having put the city on the alert for 70 minutes before dawn Saturday.

Sounds of heavy anti-aircraft fire could be heard today and the faint sound of airplane motors was believed by observers to have come from German reconnaissance planes attempting to approach Paris.

Quiet Night on West Front

The war ministry's morning communique reported only a "quiet night on the front as a whole."

General Raymond Pigeaud, a division commander and holder of the Croix de Guerre, died of wounds in Val de Grace Hospital last night.

The announcement by military authorities of his death, the first of an Allied General in the 10 weeks of war, gave no details of when or where he was wounded.

Following the first air raid warning there was anti-aircraft gunfire this afternoon, beginning at 3.20 p.m. (9.20 a.m. EST.)

The guns, which ring Paris, fired intermittently for 20 minutes, but no alarm was sounded in Paris.

Hastings Bar Assoc. Pays Tribute to the Late Lt.-Col. Graham

"It was with deep regret, that I learned of the untimely death of my friend and fellow practitioner Lt.-Col. R. J. E. Graham. Among the members of the legal profession Lt.-Colonel Graham, or "Bob" as he was more familiarly known, was highly respected and esteemed for his professional ability, integrity and lastly as a true friend. A Past President of the Hastings Law Association, Lt.-Colonel Graham always took an active interest in its affairs and his counsel in matters pertaining to the legal profession in this county and throughout the province will be keenly missed", stated R. D. Arnott, K.C., M.P.P., President of the Hastings' Bar Association today upon learning of the regrettable accident and death of Lt.-Colonel Graham and in speaking in tones of deep regret for his colleagues.

DOZEN ROOMS OF COMMERCE SCHOOL WRECKED BY VANDALS

Toronto, Nov. 13 (CP)—Vandals, presumably in search of money, broke into Western Technical-Commerce School during the weekend and wrecked the contents of a dozen rooms. Papers and books were strewn about while all high-grade alcohol in the chemistry rooms was taken.

Little money was obtained, all school funds having been in the vault which was untouched. In the school cafeteria, pies and jam were scattered in all directions.

WELSH GUARDS PARADE THROUGH PARIS STREETS

Paris, Nov. 13 (CP-Havas) — A battalion of khaki-clad Welsh guards paraded through lanes of cheering Parisians today on their way to the front.

Preceded by a fife and drum corps and singing Welsh airs, the soldiers marched with a smooth uniformity broken only when a hand would shoot up to catch flowers tossed by some enthusiastic onlooker.

There were shouts of "Long live the Britons!" and "Hooray for the Tommies!" as they entrained for the Maginot Line.

LATVIAN PASTOR TELLS OF SCENES IN CENTRAL EUROPE

Preaches in Bridge Street United Church — Tells of Arrest by Gestapo of Lutheran Pastor at Whose Home He Was Visiting

A story of life as he saw it in Germany and in East Europe was told by the Rev. Oswald Blumit, of Latvia, a Baptist pastor of one of the eastern provinces of this Baltic republic, at Bridge Street United Church on Sunday evening. He spoke before a very large congregation on the words of Scripture wherein is mentioned that ideal state when the swords shall be beaten into ploughshares and spears into pruning hooks and when shall make war no more.

He declared that if there is a prophecy which should stir the emotions of mankind and make man shout, it is this. He declared that the only time when there had been peace in twenty-five years was on the day of armistice Nov. 11 1918.

He was a boy in the year 1918 and yet old enough to understand something of the movements of the time.

There are hundreds of interpretations of the causes of the present war. But the pessimists were right when they said there would be war for it has come.

"The League of Nations was founded, it is true, but the heart of man was the same. Until the heart is changed there will be wars and wars," he said.

He spoke of great German names, Beethoven, Mendelssohn and Luther, who believed in simple Bible truth. But in Germany a year ago he had seen children aged ten to twelve years chasing to prison men fifty to sixty years of age, as if they were animals and throwing sticks at them. He had seen a boy inside prison, unconscious, who because he could not reply to the guard, was threatened by the latter. Mr. Blumit told the guard the boy was unconscious. The guard told him to shut up or he would knock his head off. That was Germany a year ago.

On the other hand he and two other visitors to Germany went to a Lutheran church, packed to the doors with people standing. They were mainly older people and were listening to an old preacher. Mr. Blumit said that the pastor prayed for the deliverance of his country from false teaching. The people had known him for forty years. He was fearless and had nothing to lose but his life.

"I judged everyone was in sympathy with him, but no one went up to thank him at the close of the service. We foreigners went up and he invited us into his home. He said he loved his country. He had a large family and all sat down together with the servants and joined hands and sang grace. Then two young men knocked at the door. The door was opened and the men said "Come." They were the German Gestapo police. The aged pastor rose, kissed his wife, went away, and never came back.

Contrasting Germany and Russia he said: "Godless Russia has more of Christianity than pagan Germany. Russia has been pagan from the outside, not pagan inside. Germany has been Christian outside and pagan within."

In Russia religion was very ancient. The Bolshevik of 1939 knows "Russia remains incurably religious, though outwardly godless, and blasphemous," he said.

Mr. Blumit crossed the ocean with Russian engineers. They first said they did not like religion but they changed their mood after some conversation. They asked him if he would come with them to the service on board the liner the next day which was Sunday. They all attended, and solemnly placed their hands together.

Mr. Blumit said to himself: "Poor Bolshies, you're losing. Jesus Christ is going to win."

The thirty-six engineers kissed him at parting with him.

He declared of Russian people—"They will shake off Bolshevism."

Of the Communists he said they have special organizations to ridicule Christianity, "but a little shaking of the dust one of these days and the people will be religious."

Mr. Blumit recounted the story of a little girl who became an inmate of one of the orphan homes he conducts in Latvia, to show how the heart of a little one could be won, and to reveal her generosity and kindly response to the surroundings in which she was placed.

Mr. Blumit told of the stress which the Nazis of Germany and the Communists had laid on training youth, so that where they might have been veterans of service they now are veterans of destruction.

He said he would add to the phrase "swords changed to ploughshares," the words of prophecy "and the Germans and Russians shall turn from a godlessness to Christianity." The task is to win them for Christ.

At an after service he showed slides made of events in east Europe.

Rev. Dr. J. Semple, pastor of Bridge Street Church, conducted the service.

GRACIE NOTCHES WINNING GOALS IN BOTH GAMES

Cleveland Barons Move Into Second Place in Section by Double Victory

INDIANS BEATEN

Indianapolis Runs Win Streak to Four Before Going Under

(By The Canadian Press)

Cleveland Barons have served notice that they are not going to give up their International-American League Hockey Crown without a fight.

Shoved into the background as Springfield Indians and Indianapolis Capitols gained an early lead in the respective sections, the Barons showed during the week-end that they are still very much in the fight.

While Indians and Capitols went down to their first defeat in five games, the Indians last night and the Capitols Sunday, Cleveland won two games to tie for second place in the Western section, two points behind Indianapolis who have played one more game.

The Barons beat Syracuse 3-2 last night as Bob Gracie, a former Montreal Maroon, scored the winning goal with less than four minutes to go in the third period. Gracie got the winner Saturday night too, his third period counter beating Philadelphia Ramblers 5-4.

Stretch Win Streak

Springfield stretched its winning streak to four straight Saturday with a 5-2 victory over New Haven Eagles but the Canadien farm team came right back last night to score a 4-3 win, featured by Bill (Pee Wee) Summerhill's two goals and a penalty shot goal by the Eagle's Bob McCully.

Pittsburg Hornets ended Indianapolis' winning streak Saturday as Harry Currie tallied twice in a 3-1 victory. They came back last night, however, with a 2-0 shutout over the luckless Ramblers who have yet to win a game.

In the other games, three last period goals brought Rhode Island Reds a 3-1 victory over the Hornets last night while Syracuse edged out Hershey Bears 3-2 Saturday. The Bears, like the Ramblers, haven't won a game but they have tied once.

Western Ontario Mustangs Win Intercollegiate Title By Nosing Out Tricolor 13-8

Mustangs Go Through Season Without a Loss but Will Not Play for Dominion Title

IMPERIALS WIN

Sarnia Defeats Balmy Beach Westmounts for O.R.F.U. to Earn Right to Meet Title

By JACK CALDER

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Down in sunny southwestern Ontario, where the football is fondled in the cradle, the banners were out today for two great winning teams.

University of Western Ontario Mustangs captured the intercollegiate senior championship Saturday by coming from behind in the closing minutes to defeat Queen's 13-8 at Kingston. The wild horses in purple became the first Canadian senior team in years to go through a season undefeated and untied.

Sarnia Imperials, as dangerous a power as ever on the home gridiron, played alertly and resourcefully to turn back Toronto Balmy Beach's threatening youngsters 7-3, entering the Ontario Union finals with Montreal Westmounts. The Imps haven't been beaten in Sarnia since 1933.

Those were the most important developments as the eastern schedules ended, though the biggest upset was reserved for the Interprovincial Union. The Royals, without a victory or a tie in two years, held the Dominion champion Toronto Argonauts to a 6-6 tie in Montreal and the other two leagues couldn't have produced anything quite so startling as that.

Open At Ottawa.

The settings for the start of the two-game, total-points finals in the O.R.F.U. and the Big Four next Saturday were partly settled. The Argos will meet the Rough Riders at Ottawa, since the Riders finished one point ahead. Though the Westmounts were one point up on Sarnia, they couldn't make up their minds where they would open.

Western dashed back the last possibility of an intercollegiate playoff by scoring 12 points in the last five minutes, after Queen's had put up just as stern a fight as had been indicated by three straight victories. It was a battle of an inspired tricolor team against the greatest college backfield in a long time and in the end the Mustangs' lightning thrusts worked as they always have.

Joe Krol passed to Harry Szumlinski at the Queen's 15-yard line with five minutes left and after Harry had plunged five more on first down he passed laterally to Lyn Thompson, who streaked over the goal-line untouched. The Mustangs blocked a kick moments later and George Oliphant picked up the ball to run across the final stripe. Sure-footed Clem Faust converted both touches.

Blocked Kick Helps.

A blocked kick gave Queen's its touchdown in the first quarter, George Carson romping fifteen yards on picking up the bounding ball. Ding McGill converted and tacked on another point with a wide placement kick, Jack Brown rounding out the tricolor total with a single point. Thompson kicked an early point for Western.

Two backfielders finished their college careers in a blaze of glory as the University of Toronto defeated McGill 19-7 at Toronto in the conclusion of a disappointing season for both schools. Lou Somers scored two Toronto touchdowns and Charlie Prince kicked two field goals, two converts and a single. Bob Keefer scored the McGill touchdown after a 70-yard march and converted. Alex Hamilton kicked the other point for the Redmen.

Quarterback Jimmy Shanks snatched a loose ball in the second quarter for the deciding Sarnia touchdown. Big Susie Turner, the Balmy Beach snapback, shot the ball off line and it broke from Eddie Thompson's hands. Ike Norris dribbled it 25 yards over the goal line and Shanks fell on it. Moroz converted and Hank Galloway made the Imperials' seventh point with a last-minute kick.

Thompson Real Smart.

Thompson, wisping his way around the Sarnia ends, proved the game's running star and kicked a 22-yard field goal for the Toronto points. But all the chances he set up went almost for nought in the face of Sarnia's determined stand.

The Westmounts ran out their string with a 20-1 victory over Peterborough Orfuns, who didn't win a game all fall. Don Crowe's kick gave the Petes an early 1-0 lead but Montreal soon began to run up points when Lauri Mathieu fell on a loose ball for a touchdown, Ray Mullins passed to Johnny Ferraro for another and Tommy Burns plunged for the third.

The Argonauts may not have Coach Lew Hayman on their bench when they open at Ottawa, because of Hayman's violent protests over the play that brought the Royals their touchdown. Ernie Hamilton, president of the Big Four, said that a one-game suspension might result from the catch's action in jostling an official at the sidelines.

Argos Protest Play.

The Royals recovered a fumble at the Argonaut 10-yard line and on second down Bill Davies went over the goal-line. The double blue claimed vehemently that the play had been stopped when the ball was fumbled and Charlie Peck and Clary Burt of the Argos and Paul McGarry of Montreal were ruled from the game for the fracas that followed.

Bill Stukus passed the Argos into position to score their touch and threw the pay-off ball to Charlie Peck. Earl Selkirk converted for Toronto and Andy Anton for Montreal.

The Rough Riders showed tremendous power again in overwhelming the Tigers 25-7 at Hamilton. Tony Golab scored two Ottawa touchdowns and Andy Tommy, who costarred with Golab in running the Tigers ragged, got another. Jack Taylor grabbed a loose ball for the fourth, while Tony Manorek got the only Hamilton major score.

CALGARY BRONKS DEFEAT BOMBERS

Secure Six-Point Lead in First Game of Western Grid Playoffs

..Winnipeg, Nov. 13—(CP)—Calgary Bronks rolled home to the foothills today with a six-point lead in the Western Interprovincial Football Union championship series tucked securely in their saddle bags.

Bronks were too rough for Winnipeg Blue Bombers in the series opener here Saturday as they smothered all the Bomber tricks but one, then cut loose with late-game aerial antics that carried them 70 yards to a converted touchdown and 13-7 victory.

The total-points union final ends at Calgary Saturday and if Bronks protect that hard-earned lead they will break a long-time jinx. Calgary last won a Western senior grid title in 1911 although they have reached finals 12 years, including the last four.

Six thousand fans saw the grid classic open at Osborne Stadium on a hard dry field with freezing temperatures softened by a warm sun. They saw Bomber's usually versatile offensive held by the tight Calgary defence to an occasional dazzling sortie by twinkletoes Fritzy Hanson and one completed pass—a pass that went for a 70-yard gain and a touchdown.

Recreation Alleys

A special game was played at the Recreation Alleys Saturday night, a team from the Superior Alley of Napanee and the Holland Plumbers. The Superior boys were a little too good for the Holland boys. For the Superior, B. McCutcheon was high with 180-182-163—525 and for the Plumbers Lum Carson was high with 208-146-302—656.

Ramping Gopher Machine from Minnesota Hurdles Tough Team 20-7

(By Bill Boni)

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Nov. 13—(AP)—Iowa's Nile Kinnick, jarring John Kimbrough of Texas A. and M. Missouri's Paul Christmas and Banks McFadden of Clemson have clinched their places in the 1939 honor roll of "Saturday's heroes" of the gridiron.

Four backs who stand out in long array of expert passers, plungers, blockers and ball carriers, they contributed notable performances to Saturday's United States college football program.

It was a Kinnick, a 60-minute man for the fifth straight time, who scored the touchdown and then drop-kicked the extra point that gave Iowa a 7-6 decision over Notre Dame, dropped the Irish from the all-winning ranks, and left Tennessee, Texas Aggies and Cornell as the only front-line teams both unbeaten and untied.

Kimbrough ploughed over a soggy field for 52 of his team's 127 yards and bucked over the touchdown that brought the Aggies' triumph by 6-2 over Southern Methodist.

Lives Up to Notices

Christman, bally-hooed to the stature of a giant Dizzy Dean, lived up to his press notices. Completing 12 of 26 passes for 146 yards, packing the ball for 57 yards, passing to one touchdown and scoring the other two, and punting, blocking, intercepting passes and calling signals beside, he put on a one-man show, that buried New York University 20-7.

Of the quartet, McFadden was the only one who didn't score. But this triple-threater connected for two touchdown passes, one on a play that covered 75 yards, and helped rush the ball into position for the third as Clemson beat back Wake Forest 20-7 in the southern conference headliner.

Gophers Beat Wolverines

The mid-west and the east contributed the majority of the other form reversals. Minnesota scored a 20-7 victory over Michigan; Purdue upset Northwestern 3-0 and Michigan State, going out to the West Coast, gave Santa Clara a surprisingly stubborn fight before going down 6-0.

In the East, Princeton handed Dartmouth a 9-7 licking, its first of the season; Harvard scored a 15-0 triumph over Army after seven years of soldier successes; Penn State defeated Pennsylvania 10-0; Cornell kept its clean slate intact with a 14-13 defeat of Colgate, and fought a revamped Yale team to a 14-14 tie.

The two advances Rose Bowl nominees, Tennessee and Southern California, swept on unchecked. The volunteers downed the Citadel 34-0. Southern Cal humbled Stanford 33-0.

BREEDERS ASK CHIEF STEWARD BE APPOINTED

Want Horseman With Racing Experience and One to Ensure Supervision

MUST DEMAND RESPECT

Breeders Disapprove Long Post Parades and Newsmen in Official Capacity

Toronto, Nov. 13—(CP) — Hope that the Incorporated Canadian Racing Association will soon announce appointment of a chief steward to supervise racing was expressed here in a report issued by the Thoroughbred Breeders' Association.

The report was issued yesterday after a special committee of the Association held several meetings. It will be discussed at the next meeting of the I.C.R.A.

"Regret is expressed that a horseman with racing experience and the necessary qualifications to ensure proper supervision to act as chief (presiding) steward has not yet been appointed", the report said.

"Such a man is greatly needed to improve existing conditions and it is to be hoped that the I.C.R.A. will very soon be able to announce the appointment of a steward, who, by his actions, will demand the respect of owners, trainers, jockeys and the public generally."

The report disapproved of the alleged manner in which the fund to compensate jockeys and others for medical attention and hospital expense is being handled.

Matters Disapproved

Other matters the report disapproved included:

The practice of long post parades;

The employment of newspapermen to act in any official capacity for any jockey club or Racing Association;

The language used at time by some I.C.R.A. officials;

The failure by stewards and starters to properly discipline jockeys and others for actions not conducive to good racing.

The report suggested:

Installation of a telephone system on all tracks to permit improved supervision by Patrol judges who thus could report immediately.

Shortening of races for Canadian-foaled two-year-olds.

The taking of steps to eliminate unfit or undesirable horses.

Walter (Turk) Broda, Toronto—Let only one goal slip by as Maple Leafs drew 1-1 and won 1-0 in week-end games with New York Rangers.

Billy Taylor, Toronto — Gave the Maple Leafs a tie with the Rangers Saturday night with his first National Hockey League goal.

Joffre Desilets, Chicago—Scored both goals for the Black Hawks in a 2-1 decision over New York Americans.

Kenny Kilrea, Detroit—Got the winning goal and aided in the other as Red Wings whipped Boston Bruins 2-1.

Belleville Redmen Secure Berth in Van Horne Memorial Series

Six teams will face the barrier in the Van Horne Memorial hockey series in Kingston this year, including three military teams, Queens and two civilian clubs. The teams entered are the R.C.A.F. "Flyers", holders of the George Van Horne Memorial Trophy, the Belleville "Redmen", Queens seniors, Smiths Falls, Royal Canadian Artillery, (Kingston) and the Kingston Signals, Smiths Falls and the R.C.A. being new entries. The series will open on Wednesday night at the Jock Harty Arena with the Belleville Redmen drawn against the Royal Canadian Artillery team.

A single schedule was adopted with the top four teams clashing in a post-schedule play-off series. In the first round semi-final playoffs sudden death games will be played, while in the league finals the best two games in three will decide the series championship.

The Van Horne schedule:—
Nov. 15—R.C.A. vs. Belleville
Nov. 17—Queens vs. Smiths Falls
Nov. 20—'Flyers' vs. Signals
Nov. 22—R.C.A. vs. Smiths Falls
Nov. 24—Queens vs. 'Flyers'
Nov. 27—Signals vs. Belleville
Nov. 29—R.C.A. vs. Queens
Dec. 1—'Flyers' vs. Belleville
Dec. 4—Signals vs. Smiths Falls
Dec. 6—R.C.A. vs. 'Flyers'
Dec. 8—Belleville vs. Smiths Falls
Dec. 11—Signals vs. R.C.A.
Dec. 13—'Flyers' vs. Smiths Falls
Dec. 15—Queens vs. Belleville
Dec. 18—Queens vs. Signals.

Dec. 22 will start the series semi-final playdowns, with the second game schedule for Dec. 27th and the Van Horne finals will then open on Dec. 29th., continuing Jan. 1st and 3rd if necessary.

Turk Broda Has Two Shutouts to His Credit and Season Only Started

BRUINS DEFEATED

Boston Not So Strong Without Shore and Have Yet to Register First Win

By ROBERT CLARKE

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Two degrees above Mr. Zero was the "thermometer" reading today for the efforts of Walter (Turk) Broda as National Hockey League "charts" showed Toronto Maple Leafs holding first place in the standing with a draw and two victories in three games played.

An interesting sidelight of each N.H.L. season is the race among netminders for the shutout championship. Last year the honors went to Frankie Brimsek, the sensational Boston Bruins' rookie who marked up ciphers against the opposition on 10 occasions and came to be dubbed Mr. Zero by the sportswriters. In this new, young season the pudgy Broda is holding the spotlight.

While the Bruins and Brimsek were going down to defeat in the two games they have contested, Broda and the Leafs have ridden high. Against the best opposition that the league supposedly is able to offer—the Bruins and New York Rangers—Broda has been scored upon only once in 190 minutes of hockey. Two of his three goaling efforts were shutouts.

Broda's first shutout came Nov. 4 when the Leafs walloped the Bruins 5-0 at Toronto. He "relaxed" his vigilance Saturday night as the Leafs played to a 1-1 overtime draw at home against the Rangers, but came back with a "goose-egg" against the Rangers last night at New York as the Leafs won 1-0.

Bruins Need Shore

Meanwhile, the Bruins, evidently in need of the great Eddie Shore, continued their amazing backslide by dropping a 2-1 decision last night at Detroit to the Red Wings. At the same time, in the only other game of the week-end, Chicago Black Hawks squeezed out a victory by the same score in a home game against New York Americans.

Toronto's week-end victory and draw put the club in first place a point ahead of the idle Montreal Canadiens, winners of their only two starts. In the game at Toronto, rookie Billy Taylor, junior star last season with Oshawa Generals, whipped home a goal in the second period, that made up fo ra first-period, that made up for a first-Rangers. Gordie Drillon fired the game-winning score in the third period of the Leafs-Rangers set-to in New York.

Ross Has Headache

The outcome of the Boston-Detroit game was a first-class headache for Manager Art Ross, who has been used to seeing his Bruins of the past few seasons starting the schedule with a string of victories. The result lent credence, too, to predictions from other camps that the Bruins without Shore for their road games will not be the Bruins of the 1938-39 season.

Shore, owner now of the Springfield Indians in the International-American League, intends to play only in home games after Dec. 15 that he might devote as much time as possible to his interests with the Indians.

The Wings, gaining their first victory after losing one and tying one, topped the Bruins on a goal by Cecil Dillon in the second period and another by Kenny Kilrea in the early part of the third period. The Bruins got their goal when Milt Schmidt whipped home a shot less than three minutes from the end of the game.

Joffre Desilets put on a one-man show to lead the Hawks to their second victory in three games. Desilets scored both Chicago goals, getting the first near the start of the second period in a long shot and winning the game with a goal 33 seconds from the end of regulation time after Murray Armstrong had scored for Americans in the 11th minute of the third period.

Pat Dengis of Baltimore Captures Thirteenth Marathon in Fifteen Starts

Yonkers, N.Y., Nov. 13—(AP)—Pat Dengis, the transplanted Welshman who runs 20 miles nearly every night in the year, won his 13th marathon in 15 starts when he captured the 1939 National Amateur Athletic Union Championship for the third time.

Dengis trains for these things by cantering more than 100 miles every week around Baltimore, where he lives. In the process of running 67 adversaries bow-legged Sunday, he cracked a four-year-old course record and carried his two closest competitors to new records, too.

The old mark of two hours, 38 minutes, 43 seconds was established by John Kelly of Boston in 1935. Dengis lowered it to 2:33:45.2. Gerard Cote of St. Hyacinthe, Que., who finished second, was clocked in 2:35:33, and Kelly, himself, checked in at 2:37:06.

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Brietz, Associated Press Sports Writer).

New York, Nov. 13—(AP)—Farmers around Brookfield, Conn. are trying to get Squire Gene Sarazen, the golfer, to run for Congress..... Arturo Godroy, the Chilean, gets in today to start training for Joe Louis and Henry Armstrong is due Wednesday to ditto for Lou Ambers.

Milwaukee papers again are spiking reports St. Louis Browns will be moved there next season. ..Latest hot stove league talk has the Giants sending Zeke Bonura and cash to the Phils for either Guy Higbe or Hugh Mulcahy. ..Jimmy Calleran, the Piedmont League umpire who was hit by a bottle in Richmond last summer, still has trouble with his eyes.

Joe Dimaggio told 'em on the coast Joe McCarthy changed his signals for the World's Series this year for the first time since Di Mag joined the Yanks. ....Coincidence: Billy Conn and Gus Lesnevich who tangle at the Garden Friday night, have appeared in the same number of bouts—54.

Ike Moore, 18-year-old Houston third sacker, was one of the best-looking prospects on the Texas lots last summer. He is a card, sure enough....walks and talks in his sleep, eats hot tamales in the summer (but won't touch 'em in the winter) and plays golf with nothing but a putter and he signed with the Dodgers over the Cards.

FRANK BRIMSEK

Boston Bruins

One of the most sensational debuts ever made by a player in the N.H.L. was that of Frank Brimsek, who made the major league grade with Boston Bruins last year, and while doing so captured most of the honors within his reach. He played the first three games of last year for the Bruins while Tiny Thompson was out with injuries, but shortly after the latter's return Art Ross sold him (Tiny—not Frank) to Detroit Red Wings, and Frankie's been in the Boston cage ever since. He's of Czecho-Slovakian descent, stands 5 feet, 9 inches, weighs over 170 pounds and has had years of stardom predicted for him by practically everyone connected with hockey. Last year he won the Vezina trophy, awarded to the goalie with the fewest goals scored against him, and the Calder trophy as the year's outstanding rookie—as well as being one of the cogs in the Bruins' successful Stanley Cup drive. Born in Eveleth, Minnesota, 25 years ago. Best feat so far in his career, two strings of three successive shutouts.

TO PLAY FOR TITLE

Ottawa, Nov. 13—(CP) — Hamilton Itali-Canadians and Toronto Malverns will play home-and-home games on Nov. 18 and 25 in the Eastern Canada Junior Football playdowns and on December 4 will meet Ottawa Gladstone's in the eastern final, it was learned here last night.

Three military, two civilian and Queen's University seniors were all admitted into the George Van Horne Memorial Cup series in Kingston over the week end. The teams entered are the R.C.A.F. "Flyers", defenders of the series trophy, Eddie Thomas' Belleville "Redmen," Queen's University, Smith's Falls and two Kingston military teams, Royal Canadian Artillery and the "Signals," the R.C.A. and Smith's Falls are new entries this year. Eddie Thomas' squad was given the opening date assignment, which we feel was somewhat unfair to the Redmen, who haven't had an opportunity to avail themselves of a single practice. The Van Horne Memorial executive might have at least drawn two Kingston clubs in the opening game of the series, as there are three Kingston clubs entered and they have had the advantage of a full week of practice.

As the schedule of the Van Horne series is only a single schedule, with each club meeting the other once, a single loss means a serious blow to any club concerned and it appears as though the Redmen have been given what's generally known as "the business" by being drawn against the Kingston Artillery on Wednesday. Following a 15 game schedule the first four clubs in the final standing will meet in a semi-final play-off with the two ultimate winners of this round clashing in the finals for the series championship. However, Skipper Thomas is not complaining and early today was endeavouring to procure a practice hour at the Jock Harty arena for either tonight or Tuesday if possible in order to avail his Redmen of at least one workout before the locals play on Wednesday. Incidentally the Redmen of last year are intact while several new players are reported to be in town including Herb Windsor of Prescott and another forward from Eastern Ontario.

Coach "Toots" Holway took his R.C.A.F. "Flyers" to Oshawa this afternoon, where they will practice tonight. On Tuesday the Flyers will again take to the ice following a practice of the Peterboro seniors in Oshawa, while on Thursday the Airmen meet the Oshawa "Generals", last year's Memorial Cup winners, in an exhibition game in Oshawa as the Flyers do not play in Kingston until one week from tonight. The irony of the whole thing is that two hockey teams, that make their home ice at the Hume arena during the O.H.A. campaigns, are playing in Oshawa and Kingston this week, while in Belleville the fans have to be satisfied with verbal or newspaper accounts of the activities and progress of the local clubs during the period when modern travelling facilities are free from the hazards of snow, sleet and cold weather and during a season when the public is anxious for sporting activities.

We learned on good authority over the week end, that the R.C.A.F. Sports Club intends to sponsor and enter two teams into the O.H.A. this coming season, presumably a senior "B" squad and either an intermediate or junior team. Regarding the latter there seems to be some misunderstanding as to exactly what status the second team will assume. Laurie Gibson, who has been tending to the goal-minding business up around the Airport for the past three seasons, would like nothing better than to take over the coaching of the second Flyer team, we have been given to understand. Just learned from Ed Thomas that he had procured an hour for practice at the Jock Harty arena in Kingston tonight from ten to eleven p.m. It seems there is a junior doubleheader in Kingston tonight and "Dutch" Dougall, genial manager of the Jock Harty arena, agreed to let the Redmen practice after the games. Skipper Thomas is going to try and arrange for a second practice Tuesday and furthermore he doesn't think much of the Van Horne heads decision in putting the Redmen on in the opening game of the schedule, especially with three clubs located right in the Limestone City.

Do you remember when Frank J. Navin died suddenly four years ago today shortly after his American League Tigers gratified his long-standing ambition to see them win the world baseball championship. He owned the Detroit team from 1908 until his death, and was succeeded by Walter O. Briggs.

Rogers Hornsby, who piloted Baltimore of the International League last season, is among the applicants for the managerial job on the Hollywood Pacific Coast League club, it was revealed last week. Others who have applied for the berth include Hack Wilson, Red Kress, Frank Shellenback, Babe Herman and Bill Cissell.

For the second time since they entered the senior intercollegiate football wars, Western University was crowned champions of all they viewed, going through their schedule without sustaining a single loss. The Mustangs' 13-8 win over Queen's on Saturday came as Bill Storen's team rose to dizzy heights with a last period attack that netted them 12 points. Wally Hilton, a football product of the Belleville Collegiate, was prominent in the new champions' backfield. Incidentally Western won the intercollegiate honors in 1931. Balmy Beach missed a chance to get into the senior O.R.F.U. playdowns when Sarnia beat the Balmies 7-3 Saturday and earned the right to meet Montreal in the moneyed series. Of course Ottawa and Toronto Argos will playoff in the Big Four. Argos didn't look any too impressive against the Montreal Royals over the week-end with a 6-6 tie.

SPORT SPICE—"Billy the Kid". Taylor, former Oshawa junior, scored the only Leafian goal as Maple Leafs and Rangers played a 1-1 tie Saturday. . . . The bedlam that followed Taylor's goal all but shook the roof off the Maple Leaf Gardens. . . . The Pedens, Torchy and Doug, Canada's gift to six-day bike racing, won the big race at Chicago last week. . . . The Toronto Maple Leafs took over the leadership of the N. H. L. last night by virtue of Gord Drillon's last period goal as Leafs scored a 1-0 win over the Rangers in Madison Square Gardens. . . . Detroit won their first game of the season, beating Boston, while Chicago won over Americans, leaving the Bruins and Amerks without a win this season.

HONEYMOON TRIP ENDS ABRUPTLY

W. Honeywell Charged With Reckless Driving After Allegedly Hitting Man

Ottawa, Nov. 13—(CP)— The honeymoon trip of William Honeywell, 23, of Woodroffe, Ont., and his bride of a few hours ended abruptly in the police station here Saturday when he was charged with reckless driving following an accident on the Prescott highway.

Driving to Kingston, Honeywell allegedly struck Thomas Dale, 77, of Ottawa with his car. Dale was taken to hospital here and his condition is reported as good. Honeywell will appear in court tomorrow and at present is on $500 bail.

Freighter Chased All Night by U-Boat

Boston, Nov. 3—(CP)— British seamen in port here told today how a submarine cut a freighter in two with a torpedo and then chased them all night in mid-Atlantic until the submarine was eluded at dawn.

Because the attacked vessel's markings had been painted out, they could not identify her although she was less than 400 yards away when torpedoed. British naval vessels apparently rescued most of the crew and took them to an undisclosed port.

The U-boat appeared at dusk and after the attack destroyers dropped depth charges, the liner's crew said.

CHARGE FOLLOWS ACCIDENT

Iroquois, Ont., Nov. 13—(CP) — Walter Merkley of Iroquois was arrested on a charge of reckless driving following an accident Saturday in which the automobile which he was driving swerved into a ditch four miles east of here.

Mrs. Elizabeth Mellon, a passenger in Merkley's car, received a head cut which required four stitches, while Merkley was cut about the face.

INSTALMENT 18

Judge Miller swung about in his chair, lifted fat finger tips together and shot a glance over his pig rimmed spectacles at Becky. "What's trouble, Becky?" he said with his favorite fatherly air.

"Everything!" Becky answered with a forlorn laugh. "Gavin's just—not anything," she went on, weakening with every word. "He's not working, he goes away and I don't know where he is, he's—well not satisfactory!"

"Aain't satisfactory, eh?" the judge said, narrowing his eyes. "Not satisfactory. Well, I don't know how many of us are, Becky. We're a pretty poor lot, we men, ain't we, Sarah? I s'pose that's why they put it into the contract, 'better or worse,' eh?"

She hated him. With all her heart Becky hated him, the big fat, comfortable, smiling old man who could loaf about this office having other lazy, comfortable old men come in and talk to him, having Jean come back with two babies and make much of darling daddy, having that cabin and that launch up on the lake for fishing whenever he felt like it. What did he know of the burning needs of a woman of twenty-two, longing to be protected, to be sheltered, to have a home for her child, to have some support for her pride and dignity?

"Got t' the point where you want to talk divorce, eh, have ye?" Perry Miller asked. Becky's color rose under her transparent brown skin.

"I have to, Judge," she said feebly. Sarah had tried to brace her for this meeting, had told her that she must speak up, make her case strong.

"Oh, toe-toe-toe, now! Maybe 'tain't so bad," the old man said, as if speaking to a small child. "Let's look into this. Sometimes we get all riled up.....hot weather..... nerve, eh?"

"Gavin hasn't treated Becky right from the very beginning," Sarah put in firmly. The judge moved a fountain pen with a fat hand on the desk blotter.

"What's trouble?" he said again. Becky began to speak, more bravely and composedly this time. She had been married for almost two years. In that time Gavin had gambled, had borrowed money, had left her for five months without any knowledge of his whereabouts, had come to her mother's house to idle, to borrow more money.....

"Now looky here, Becky," said the old man with an air of reason, "I don't know's you want to get any divorce from Gavin. He ain't been any too successful, but most of us kinder racketed around when we were kids, and it didn't keep us from settlin' down. What d'you think of this, Sarah? It ain't goin' to help Becky with her old friends here if she kicks this feller out."

"Things can't go on as they are, Judge," Sarah persisted. "It's just getting so we can't any of us stand it, it's money, money, money, and it's gambling—"

"Don't drink, does he?" The judge looked up shrewdly under bushy white eyebrows.

"No. He isn't a teetotler," Sarah admitted grimly, "but you couldn't say he drank."

"I could say he drank," Becky thought, remembering dark early morning hours at the Golcondita, remembering his heavy snoring while she lay awake in the room, his breath scented with sour fumes. But she said nothing aloud.

"Drink's bad," the old man said, shaking his head. "Yes sir, that's bad. If a feller gets drinking hard .....I have the woman in here all the time....." He rambled into reminiscences of divorce cases, repeated at length his advice to the injured parties. "Now Gavin come in here yesterday—or maybe 'twas the day before," he presently said. "He kinder suspected that you's thinking of something like this, and he dropped in and we had quite a talk about it."

"Gavin came to see you?" Becky asked, incredulous. Light seemed to break upon her. Oh, if he would—if he only would..... "But—but he didn't want a divorce?" she stammered.

"Nope. But he suspicioned you's thinkin' of one," the old man answered.

Becky's heart quickened to anger. He had forestalled her! "He doesn't want it," she said dully.

"No sirree, bob!" Judge Miller answered with an air of triumph, an air of having trapped her. "That's just what he don't want, Beck. He wants his wife and his child and his home, same's any other man. Why, you'd feel ashamed," the old man went on, dropping his voice to an affectionate and reproachful note, "knowin' you as I do, and knowin' your folks, I just know you'd be ashamed, Beck, if you could have heard him talk and seen the tears in his eyes. 'I've not been much credit to her,' he says. 'She married me when I was just about dyin' of pneumonia. She stood by me, and I haven't had much luck since. I was to Arizony, and workin' down there in the movies when my little boy was born, and I just couldn't wait to get up here and see him, and see my wife,' he says. 'She ain't got no right to divorce me for nonsupport,' he said. 'I'm lookin' high and low for work—at Jackson and Placerville and Sonora and everywhere.' You and your mother go home and think this over. Gavin's a nice feller. He's out fishin' with me couple times last month, and I's sayin' afterward to Mrs. Miller that I don't never want no nicer company. If you left him, and got custody of the child, he'd want his son a coupla months every year, and who's benefited by that?"

"Why waste words on this old chucklehead?" Becky thought, icy scorn at her heart. "He just adores to hear himself talk. He doesn't handle divorces anyway; Ike Lansing does."

"You see, Becky, you divorce this feller, who's a perfectly harmless feller, and liked by everyone," the old man said as the two women presently rose to go, "and the whole town talks. I'll grant ye Gavin's a little gay—a sport, as they say these days. But if you wanted a husband that'd come home every night and read the paper, how is it you give Joe the boot?"

White-faced, silent, Becky descended with her mother to the street and the car with smoldering rage in her heart.

"The old fathead!" she stormed, jerking the gears. "We could see Ike Lansing?"

"I don't know," Sarah said dubiously. "Ike takes such terrible cases."

"Well, we won't go today," Becky conceded, turning the car toward the home road. The unending question began in her heart again? What shall I do?

A night or two later the crisis came. They were talking in their room before dinner, Becky and Gavin, when something he said made her face him suspiciously with the sudden a most frightened question: "Gavin, you've not borrowed money from Joe Feratta?"

"What makes you think I did?" Gavin asked, unalarmed.

"What you just said," Becky said in a voice of steel. "You said you wished you had Joe's money, that his pocketbook was filled with twenties. You said, 'I'd like to get hold of a few, and my note with them.'"

"Did I?" Gavin asked, seemingly amused. But she knew from his tone that he was chagrined at having betrayed himself. "Well, I've been kinder rambling on here about Joe because I think he's a mutt," he added, "and I think he gets all the breaks."

Becky, Gibbs in her arms, came to sit on the side of the bed. Her eyes were tragic. "Gavin, you didn't borrow money from him!"

"Hell, why the heck not?" Gavin demanded. "He's got it."

"You didn't!" Becky said.

"Oh, I happened to run into him. I was coming out of Miller's office. The old man is for me, see? He says that as long as you came home of your own free will to have a baby, and your folks won't put me out—I'd like to see them try it!—you haven't got any kick coming. I ran into Joe in the hall and told him we'd been having a hard time—Why not? It's true, isn't it? He had a crush on you and he'd do anything for you. Shucks, I'll pay him back. He'll get his money.."

Becky was not listening. She was breathing hard, her face red. She carried the child to his crib. Gavin lay silent, scowling.

"I'm sorry I told you," he presently said sulkily.

Becky spoke in a sharp whisper. "If you get the baby roused you'll have to stay up here with him!"

Gavin got to his feet, put his arm about her as she opened the hall door to go down to dinner. "Don't be mad at me, Becky," he said.

"I'm not mad," Becky assured him wearily, indifferently.

Three nights later, fifteen minutes before the late bus went through to Jackson, Becky sat at the kitchen table, writing a brief letter. A packed suitcase stood beside her; she had brought the small car to the end of the barn lane before dinner, parked it there, where no one in the house could hear the engine. Gibbs, shawled and blinking and pleased with the novel procedure, was on her arm.

"My own dearest Mother, I am running away again...."

x x x

Becky ran up two flights of narrow stairs scented with boiling onions, dirty clothes, unwashed bodies, filthy kitchens and garbage barrels. She opened a narrow doorway on the third floor and was at once in a cold kitchen in which with other kitchen furnishings there was a couch bed. The room was dark in the late December afternoon. A thin woman in a wrapper, who had been bending over the couch, turned to look at her as she came in.

"How is he?" Becky flung off her coat and hat, sank to her knees beside the couch and laid her cold hand over the hot little hand of the baby whose dark head was moving restlessly on a pillow.

"He's awful sick," the woman said in a whisper.

"I don't know...." She wouldn't believe it. Gibbs, quite himself only a few days ago, just a "little upset" yesterday, couldn't really be ill today. The leaden weight that had tugged at her heart all through the long day in the shop sank deeper, heavier. Gibbs was sick.

"He'd ought to be in a hospital," said Mrs. Bevvins of the floor below. "You've got a cold yourself."

"Yes, I know. I gave it to him, I think. Thank you for watching him," Becky said. She had ice and orange juice in a cup now; she put the drink to the child's lips, her arm supporting him, her voice tender in his ears. "Drink a little, my darling. It will make you feel better," she murmured.

The other woman stood watching. The room, which was one of two composing the apartment, had two narrow windows on a crowded grimy street in the Bronx.

"Mis' Gibson," said Mae Devvins, "how'd you happen to come to New York?"

Becky was changing her clothing now; she was buttoning on a sleazy comfortable bungalow apron. "Oh, New York sounds so good, to girls anywhere else!" she said in an abstracted undertone. She sat down beside the couch as she spoke, and laid a cloth rung out of ice water on the baby's forehead. "I had a chance to come," she added. "A woman wanted to send her little girls to their father, who lived here. She didn't mind my bringing Gibbs, and it seemed a great chance for me. That was more than two years ago. I got my fare and two hundred dollars; I was sure I could get along."

Exhausted Carrier Pigeon From U-Boat Found at Mexico City

Mexico City, Nov 11 (CP) — The story of a carrier pigeon that fell in a village outside Mexico City with three messages, presumably from a German submarine, spurred anew last night rumors of submarine activity in Mexican waters.

The pigeon was found in the village of Tercoco, near a lake of the same name. One message in German was dated in mid-October aboard the "UZ69", and gave a position in the Gulf of Mexico.

(Jane's fighting ships, authority on vessels, does not list a German submarine with the designation "UZ69".)

The message gave a greeting in German, presumably from a sailor to a friend in Mexico City. There were two other messages in code.

An Indian found the bird and news of its strange messages finally reached here today.

The German legation repeatedly has ridiculed reports that German submarines are near Mexico

BELLEVILLE PAYS TRIBUTE TO ITS 'GLORIOUS DEAD'

War Veterans, Dignitaries, City Organization and Troops in Colorful Parade

WREATHS LAID

Beneath sullen overcast skies from which fluttered feathery flakes of snow, Belleville's war veterans, augmented with a detachment of the Royal Canadian Air Force, members of the Canadian Active Service Force, city organizations, and civic, municipal and parliamentary dignitaries and a large representation of the citizenry paid reverent tribute to the nation's glorious war dead in impressive parades and memorial services yesterday.

To the stirring music of the band of the Royal Canadian Air Force under the baton of Flight-Sergeant Tommy Cooper, and the Belleville Municipal Band under Lieut. Fred Jobson, veterans and associates swung along in rhythmic tread to the Memorial Cenotaph Station Street, where wreaths were placed by representatives of the various organizations.

After the brief service there the parade swung down Station Street to Church to St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church where on impressive Remembrance Day service was conducted by the Rev. W. J. Walker.

Headed by the Belleville Band, the parade left the armouries shortly after ten-fifteen o'clock. Behind the band came His Worship Mayor Bone and members of the City Council, and Charles Cameron, M.P., R. D. Arnott, M.P.P.; followed by members of the Imperial Veterans' Association. The bobbing berets of Canada's famous fighting divisions followed with the blue berets of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Canadan Legion immediately in the rear. Members of the Officers Training School of the Argyll Light Infantry (Tank) under Lieut. Col. A. B. Gribble, and senior officers of the regiment marched in the van of the crack band of the R.C.A.F. Following was a smart detachment of the blue-uniformed members of the Air Force. Khaki-clad members of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, represented their unit.

Large Parade

As the parade swung along Front Street traffic was halted. On the pavements crowds of pedestrians bared heads as the colors passed, and stood at attention as veterans and others marched by.

Another large crowd awaited arrival of the parade at the Cenotaph. Veterans' units and organizations were formed in a square about the Memorial. The Rev. Mr. Walker offered a brief prayer and wreaths were placed at the base of the monument with Mrs. Moreau, war-widow who lost her husband and four sons in the Great War, placing the wreath of the Province of Ontario in the place of honor. In turn followed wreaths placed by representatives of the Argyll Light Infantry (Tank); The Army and Navy Veterans; Belleville Retail Merchants' Association; the City of Belleville, with Mayor Jamieson Bone officiating; St Julien Chapter I.O.D.E.; Argyll Chapter, I.O.D.E.; the Masonic Lodges of Belleville, and the Knights of Columbus.

Two Minutes Silence

A reverent hush fell over the gathering as the minister announced the observance of the "Two Minutes Silence." Traffic halted. Pedestrians bared their heads. Veterans sprang to "Attention" as the seconds of memory slowly ticked away.

The haunting notes of "Last Post" blown by Bugler Sergeant J. Finden, A.L.I. rang out in the cool morning air, followed by the lively tones of "Reveille." The National Anthem brought to a close a service that was as impressive as it was brief.

Led by Traffic Officer Sam Ervine, the parade moved off along Station Street to Church and thence to St. Andrew's Church.

City police under Chief Alexander Kidd, directed traffic along the route of march during the parade. Following the church service the parade formed up along Church Street and swung down Victoria Avenue to Front Street to East Bridge and the Armouries where it was dismissed.

THE BEST WAY TO PACK TOBACCO

Getting his product to the smoker in perfect condition is one of the important consideration of the tobacco manufacturer. A large loosely filled package does not keep the tobacco in as good condition as a smaller package containing the same quantity of tobacco which is firmly packed. The tobacco in the smaller package, not only keeps better, but it also smokes better and retains its full flavor. The latter type of package is that now used in connection with DAILY MAIL Cigarette Tobacco—the brand which has achieved such outstanding popularity among men who roll their own cigarettes. It contains the same quantity and quality and sells at the same price as formerly. You certainly get full value for your money in a ten cent package of DAILY MAIL Cigarette Tobacco.

NAZIS MAY ATTACK NETHERLANDS TO DIVERT ATTENTION

British Ambassador to U. S. Says Treaty With Soviets Causes Concern in Germany

ACTION NEEDED

Swathmore, Nov. 11 (AP)—The Marquess of Lothian, British Ambassador to the United States, said today Adolf Hitler may be compelled to launch some drastic movement—such as an undertaking against the Netherlands—to divert attention from differences among the German people.

Here to speak at Armistice Day exercises at Swarthmore College, Lord Lothian declared in an interview the differences were occasioned by the German treaty with Soviet Russia and are based on concern over the ultimate consequences the pact will have on the Reich.

Professor Says Model Boys Often Become Insufferable Husbands

Grand Rapids, Mich., Nov. 11 (AP)—Model boys often become insufferable husbands, an expert told the Michigan Public Health Conference here. Dr. Bert I. Beverly, Pediatrics Professor at University of Chicago, said the model boy who has never given his mother a moment's worry will grow into a detestable person and an insufferable husband.

Municipal Elections Show Promise of Keen Competition

Electoral guns on the far-flung municipal fronts of the county are beginning to lay down warning barrages. The first blast from the forthcoming scenes of polling skirmishes comes from Tweed where Reeve Charles Kerr has announced himself as being definitely in the field as a candidate for re-election.

Ex-Reeve W. H. Sayers possible contender for the Reeveship thus far is non-committal as to his intentions but there is a strong feeling in the community that Mr. Sayers will contest the position.

According to semi-official sources the Township of Elzevir and Grimsthorpe which has been administered for the past twenty-seven years by the dean of county councillors, Reeve James Moore, will likely produce a candidate to run against its popular head.

Anticipation of an election caused the village of Bancroft to advance its nomination dates from January to December. Other municipalities are beginning to feel the election urge and reports garnered from the various centres would indicate that unusual interest is being shown in municipal affairs throughout the length and breadth of the county.

Viscount Gort Attends Ceremony At Memorial

With the British Expeditionary Force in France, Nov. 11—(CP)—Viscount Gort, British Commander in-Chief, left general headquarters today to attend Armistice at a memorial erected on the site of the battle of the last war.

Lord Gort was accompanied by General Blanchard of the French forces. French and British troops drew up and stood in silence for two minutes at 11 o'clock.

BRUSSELS GOV'T BANS PAPERS

Le Pays Reel, Organ of Rexist Party, Banned Because of Attacks on Britain

Brussels, Nov. 11 (CP-Havas) — Extremist organs of the right and left were banned last night by the Brussels government.

The ruling prohibited publication of Le Pays Reel, organ of the Fascist Rexist party, because of its attacks on Great Britain.

The same measure suspended the Communist Flemish weekly Het Vlaamsche Volk and the Radical Walloon newspaper Wallonne. It also forbade importation of Der Steurmer, German Anti-Semitic weekly.

Legal proceedings were instituted against Le Peuple, Socialist, on the basis of laws respecting attacks on Foreign Chiefs of State. The paper published an allegation that the Munich time bomb might have been set by Nazi leaders themselves. It likened the explosion in the Munich beer hall to Reichstag fire of 1933.

EGYPTIAN KING ESCAPES INJURY

Disgruntled Employee Flings Bottle of Acid at Royal Carriage

Cairo, Nov. 11 (CP-Havas)—King Farouk escaped possible injury yesterday when a disgruntled employee of the Finance Ministry flung a bottle of acid at the royal carriage as it was passing through the streets of Cairo, authorities revealed last night .The bottle fell to the ground without causing any damage. The man was arrested. Authorities said the act had no political significance.

Bayside

Mrs. Moore has returned home after spending some time at New York.

The fowl supper at White's Church was held on Tuesday night. The ladies served supper to a large crowd of about 350. Donald Henderson furnished music and a good program was given.

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Bellham (nee Miss Muriel Jones) who were married on Saturday afternoon.

Mrs. Flindall of York Road attended the wedding on Saturday of her niece, Miss Muriel Jones, and spent a few days visiting relatives here.

War Briefs

Brussels, Nov. 11 (AP)—Cheered by veterans of the last war, King Leopold of the Belgians laid two wreaths on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier as his nation celebrated Armistice Day amid growing anxiety over the current European situation.

Lodz, Nov. 11 (AP)—This Polish textile centre was formally annexed by Germany today as part of the federal district of Wartheland.

Montreal, Nov. 11 (CP)—W. F. Schayler, representative of a British aircraft company at Portsmouth, said last night in an interview that every large city in Canada will have at least one and probably two training stations for airplane pilots in connection with the scheme for training British Empire airmen in this country.

"The training camps will have to be kept in the urban areas and not in the country," said Schayler, who recently completed a tour of a number of Canada's aircraft plants.

Mexico City, Nov. 11 (AP)—Naval authorities issued instructions today for enforcement of an executive decree by President Lazaro Cardenas closing all Mexican ports to belligerent warships, submarines and airplanes. The president's decree was aimed at preserving Mexico's neutrality.

London, Nov. 11 (AP)—Sir Robert Craigie, British ambassador to Japan, and Masayuki Tani, Japanese vice-minister of Foreign Affairs, authoritative quarters said today, discussed general British-Japanese relations in a two-hour conference in Tokyo yesterday.

CANADA'S FIRST DIVISION CHIEF IS HARD WORKER

Scientist as Well as Soldier General McNaughton Has Definite Idea of Nation's Part in Present Conflict

By CARL REINKE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Nov. 13 (CP)—As Major-General A. G. L. McNaughton, C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O., flies from camp to camp on a premobilization inspection of the Canadian force he is to command overseas, it is pointed out in the Capital his selection for that post may well have been based on requirements the general himself outlined ten years ago.

At that time, as chief of the general staff, he stressed the rapidly increasing importance of the engineer in modern warfare and the necessity of a "broad knowledge of engineering and science in general".

Just such knowledge has this man of unquestioned ability, vision and prodigious energy who at the age of 31 commanded Canada's heavy artillery at the close of the last war, and at 42 was chief of the general staff, department of national defence.

By temperament and training General McNaughton will have few peers among the allied leaders at the front, it is believed in Ottawa. No jingoist or drum-beater, he brings to his present post a rare combination of scientific detachment and fighting determination to carry out the job at hand, whatever it moy be.

Essentially a realist, he has the faculty of reducing the immediate problem to concrete terms, while never losing the perspective view. That quality makes it possible for him to be a practical army leader and skilful strategist and, at the same time—realizing clearly what war is—a worker for a permanent system of maintaining world peace.

Trained as an engineer at McGill University, where he also did post-graduate work in high voltage problems, General McNaughton found that scientific training invaluable as an artillery officer in the First Great War. After that war he continued in Canada's permanent force on the headquartirs staff, rising steadily until he was named chief of the general staff in 1929, which post he held for six years.

Tried Organizer.

It was his proven administrative and organizing ability, coupled with a sound training in the fundamentals of science which commended him for the presidency of the National Research Council. He occupied that position from 1935 until his appointment to command the C.A.S.F. overseas, early in October, and will probably resume the council presidency on his return. While chief of staff, General McNaughton interested himself particularly in the forestry, signals and engineering branches of the service. Working in the laboratory with Lieut.-Col. Arthur Steele he devised a cathode ray direction-finder in 1932.

General McNaughton brought new life and purpose to the research council. Its staff, selected from the cream of the country's scientists, was fired with a new zeal working under his purposeful leadership.

Completely engrossed in developing the tremendous possibilities of such a scientific organization, the general could often be encountered fighting uot some immediate puzzle—coat off, tie slackened, hair ruffled, only conscious of the problem before him.

An indefatigable worker, he expected as much from those who worked with him. One of the finest possible tributes was recently paid him, even if unconsciously, by the head of one branch of the council.

"He works hard and he expects us to work just as had," this man said. "But we don't mind because we feel that under him the council is going some place."

General McNaughton—who, significantly, was referred to as "the president" and never as "general" around the council—was responsible for considerable expansion and intensification of the counsil's activities. He directed personally the organization of a high voltage laboratory, where some fine original work was done, and for expansion of aeronautics work.

Opinions On Defence.

In his military as in his scientific work, General McNaughton viewed his particular field from the broad viewpoint of the national interest. As chief of staff he had definite ideas of what Canada's defence forces should be but they were definitely conditioned to the needs of the situation, not to personal ambition.

Typical of this breadth of vision is a speech he made here April 8, 1929, shortly after becoming chief of staff. "The principle underlying a militia defence organization is that of a nucleus force round which the defence resources of the nation can be crystallized in emergency," he said then. "Theoretically, its size, relative to the man-power of the nation and the completeness of its organization, equipment and training, depend inversely on the time which may be considered to be safely available for mobilization."

He considered it the duty of the army heads always to know definitely what could be done in a given time, starting from a given level of organization. A dominant role in that picture was occupied by a large body of highly-trained engineers of various specialties, now a far cry from the days of Marlborough who in 1716 first separated the artillery from the engineers.

General McNaughton has ardently supported the increasing of qualifications for engineer officers effected in recent years, although the question in Canada, on mobilization, is mainly one of organization, rather than training, because of the number and variety of skilled engineers in a new country, and the increasing tendency of army and civil engineering requirements to differ less and less.

While he never felt Canada should have a large peacetime army, he never failed to stress the need of a small, highly trained force which would provide the core and instruction for a wartime mobilization of civilians.

"The one thing which cannot be extemporised is a plan that is any good but if you have a good plan quietly prepared and your officers think about it and understand it, it is usually to extemporize the material sources to carry it out," he once said.

Mechanics and Air.

In the field of military strategy, General McNaughton rates with the best. Convincing evidence of this is provided by comparing the recent writings of some of the more publicized international military tacticians with a speech the general made at the Canadian National Exhibition on Aug. 24, 1935. Five years ago, outlining his own prophetic conception of the mechanics of this war, he said:

"These new armies will be smaller, faster-moving, harder-hitting and with a very long range of action. They will require the mobilization of the whole industrial resources of the nation for their support.

"Aircraft have become of the very first importance, not only in an auxiliary role as the eyes of a commander for reconnaissance, but also as a primary means of attack both on the forces in the field and on the civil population as well in areas far distant from the zone of operations. And there is a school of thought abroad which sees in the consequent destruction of cities and in the slaying of women and children a perfectly legitimate method of attacking the will to resist of an enemy people." This was five years ago.

As to his personal place in the war General McNaughton feels there's a job to be done, and he had been delighted to do it, that's all.

"We must put Hitler and those who think like him out of power. Let's get done with it and get back to do the things some of us want to do," he says. In his case, he is anxious to resume his work with the research council.

At the same time he warns against impatience on the part of the public. Canada's defence policy has always been based on the assumption that this nation could take advantage of its geographical isolation to mobilize in time of danger, rather than maintaining a large army at all times. That preparation is going on now.

General McNaughton has frequently been honored for his works. Twice wounded and thrice mentioned in despatches in the First Great War, he holds decorations of Companion of the Order of the Bath; Companion of the Order of St. Michael and St. George; Companion of the Distinguished Service Order; Hon. LL. D. McGill University, 1920; Hon. D. C. L. Bishop's University, 1937.

In 1914 he married Mabel Clara Stuart, daughter of the late Godfrey Weir of Montreal. They have five children.

Advertising and Merchandising the Inseparable Twins of Business

Speaking before the Vancouver Junior Board of Trade, Volney Irons, advertising counsel, said that advertising and merchandising are inseparable twins.

"Merchandising brings the goods to the store and advertising brings the customers to the goods.

"Too many merchants are trying to get along with the methods of 40 years ago, when they could pile their goods on the sidewalk and wait for people to come along.

"Living habits have changed. Then people bought what they needed. Now they buy what they want.

"Last year American department stores spent $134,000,000 on advertising—three per cent of their turnover. This is not enough.

"The magnitude of the advertising opportunity can be gauged by the fact that in 1938 subscribers paid $460,000,000 to U.S. papers, and that was by no means their entire circulation.

"If you don't get the results you expect from advertising, don't blame the publications. The paper sells space and readers. You write the advertising.

"It's up to you to make full use of that space. Few do.

"You must use enough space to carry the load of your advertising. Economy in that is waste.

"You are talking to a parade of customers, not a mass meeting. You persist and insist—pound away, say it over and over.

"And remember, the twins are inseparable. You can't merchandise without advertising, and you can't advertise without merchandising."

DROVE TEAM OF MULES IN FRANCE 9 MONTHS 'WITHOUT SWEARING'

Toronto, Nov. 11 (CP)—"I drove a team of mules in France for nine months without once swearing," Rev. Norman Rawson of Hamilton, told the Sappers' Association banquet last night.

"That was what decided me to join the ministry, for I figured that any man who could handle a team of mules like that would have no difficulty with a choir or Ladies' Aid Society. Nothing does a preacher more good than to get out with a bunch of old sweats just before Sunday and that is one of the reasons I am here."

HEAVY GUNNERY IS MATHEMATICAL WITH SHELLFIRE

Good Deal More Exciting Than Schoolroom Figuring but Combines Science With Adventure

By GUY E. RHOADES
(Canadian Press Staff Write)

Somewhere in England, Nov. 13.—It takes a lot of training to turn out a competent heavy artillery officer, a man who understands maps and survey work, has a knowledge of explosives and aerodynamics and can apply this knowledge while hell is cutting loose all around him.

At an artillery school this correspondent watched the practical end of such training, watched firing practice on the ranges and saw officers in their classrooms. They get their mathematical schooling out of books, but they must go into the field to find out if they can apply it.

Gunnery is something like the game of pinning the tail on the donkey, except that there are men available to tell you how far and in which direction you are wrong.

Eyes of the artillery are the observation posts, stationed on high ground commanding a good view of the intended target, and in communication by field telephone with the firing points.

The technique is like this: The observation officer lies on the ground with a contour map before him. On it is marked the location of his battery. He spots through glasses, say, a machine gun nest which would impede the advance of infantry and must be demolished or frightened into leaving.

He seeks to plot its exact location on his map and measure its distance, height and direction from his battery. Then he calls his estimation of the distance and bearing to a signaller lying beside him. The signaller repeats it over the 'phone to the signaller at the battery. The battery signaller tells it to the officer who plots it on a map on a plane-table, checks the bearing and figures the elevation of his guns from a table giving elevations for various distances for his particular weapons.

May Be Short Or Long.

The guns are set and fired. From the observation post the officer sees the puffs of earth and smoke made by the bursting shell. Usually he finds his first estimates wrong. The shells drop behind the target or short. So he tries again, lengthening or shortening his range by degrees as the shells drop long or short until he scores a hit or gets sufficiently close to cause his enemy to evacuate the post.

Often it is a long process, but the officer seek sto complete it as economically as possible because shells are expensive and take time to make.

One of his greatest handicaps comes from drifting clouds which cast fleeting shadows across his target, obscuring it altogether, or changing the light to such an extent that the perspective is altered and the objective appears closer or farther than it actually is.

Besides, the observation officer, his signallers and the men at the guns must be able to concentrate in the face of an infernal din and despite the realization that their fire may bring a reply from the enemy that would place them in imminent danger of their lives.

FRONT PAGE WAR-MINDED IN ENGLAND

News of Conflict Relegates Paying "Ads" to Inside Pages in Papers Slimmed by Paper Rationing

By PAT USSHER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Nov. 13 (CP)—The day by day story of the war, filtered through the fine mesh of censorship, is the dominant topic in Britain's newspapers.

Familiar place names have been replaced by expressions like "Somewhere in England", "On the Western Front", "In Wessex", "Somewhere in the Midlands".

The war itself or war-related activities affect every page and every department. News columns, pictures and even advertisements reflect the country's preoccupation with the struggle which the British government has declared can only end with the overthrow of Hitlerism.

War practically monopolizes the front page. Check of one wartime edition of the Daily Telegraph and Morning Post showed that its entire front page, with the exception of two two-line items, was devoted to news of or connected with the war.

Conserve Paper.

Newspapers have been reduced in size by two-thirds to conserve newsprint, most of which is imported in peacetime from Sweden. The Times, which used to average 22 pages, now has shrunk to 16 pages. The Telegraph has dropped from 20 to 14 pages on the average and other newspapers accordingly. London afternoon papers, always small in size, are even smaller. The Star prints a six-page edition, the Evening News eight pages.

War brought the Daily Mail into line with other London dailies which print news on their front pages instead of devoting them to lucrative advertising. The Times is now the only London metropolitan daily with a "dead" front page. The Telegraph switched to front page news a few months ago. Provincial newspapers, however, are more conservative. Many continue to confine news to inside pages.

Almost all photographs portray war scenes. Of those that don't a majority are of weddings hastened by the war. One issue of the News Chronicle had front page pictures of the commanders of Britain's first and second army corps in France. The same issue also ran pictures of Gracie Fields broadcasting, British troop convoys in France, Madam Orbay, wife of the head of the Turkish military mission in London, and of a German village captured by the French.

War In the Ads.

The ads have a war slant too. Manufacturers of nerve tonics proclaim their wares as indispensable during the existing period of strain. Tailors assert their efficiency at making service uniforms. Publishers stress the value of books to banish blackout blues.

An old-established advertising firm ran its own advertisement in the press, announcing that it has carried on business through the Peninsular War of 1814, the Waterloo Campaign, the Crimean War, the Boer War and the First Great War.

LUMBER COMPANY AT BAPTISTE ONE OF BEST KNOWN IN ONT.

One of the most widely known lumber operations in Eastern Ontario is that of Martin Bros. Lumber Company, whose headquarters are at Baptiste, Hastings County, Ont. More than 30 years ago the business was founded by Jennings and Bailey and is now conducted under the title of Martin Bros. Lumber Company, Whitney L. Martin being sole proprietor. He was born and raised near Listowel and when seventeen years old went to Baptiste. There he spent the first three years in the manufacturing end as well as serving his apprenticeship in the logging camps and sawmill. In the meantime he learned all about the National Hardwood Lumber Association's rules, and believes that this is very important, to the owner of any lumber business. It is almost essential for the key men in a sawmill to know thoroughly, or at least have some considerable knowledge, of grades.

Some sixteen years ago Mr. Jennings, one of the founders of the business, retired, and a year later W. O. Bailey, Garfield F. Martin and Whitney L. Martin, obtained a provincial charter under the name of the Bailey-Martin Lumber Co., Ltd. That year they acquired the mill and equipment of the William Hughes Estate and a portable mill. The firm operated three mills until the fall of 1927, when Mr. Bailey retired. G. F. Martin and W. L. Martin then formed the Martin Bros. Lumber Company. They operated as partners until two years ago, when Whitney L. Martin bought out the interests of his brother, but still carries on under the same name.

The mill is a circular steam feed, with a capacity of about 20,000 feet per day, and was built in 1938. It is on the shores of Lake Baptiste, and the firm has piling space for 3,000,000 feet of lumber between that and the C.N. and I.B. and O. railway. The siding is known as Hughes' siding and has a capacity of ten to twelve cars, being eight miles west of Bancroft. The logs are brought down to the mill by a steam tug, the hardwood in cribs and the softwood in booms. The tow is approximately 18 miles and the tug makes a trip each day while the mill operates.

While Martin Bros. Lumber Company do handle some softwoods, birch, basswood and maple are their specialties. They market about 2,000,000 feet of lumber annually in addition to their several thousand railway ties. Most of their product is turned out at their own mill, but they also have contracted for the output of six portable mills this season. They report that the prospects for the coming year are very good.—Canadian Lumberman.

WOMEN SATISFY AS CAMP CHEFS SOLDIERS AGREE

Auxiliaries Do Much of it in Blighty Camps and They Hope to Get to France—Good at Other Army Jobs Too

By DILYS THOMAS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Eastern Command Headquarters, England, Nov. 13 (CP)—Women of the Auxiliary Territorial Service, eager to go to France, have taken over many duties from soldiers at the Eastern Command Headquarters and are regarded by the Tommies as All the army cooks at the headquarters have been replaced by women, and girls are working as clerks in the office and in the pay office; as mess servants, store women, private car drivers and ambulance drivers.

A number of the First Aid Nursing Yeomanry whose job it is to drive and maintain ambulances are attached to the headquarters. They are expert motor mechanics and many of them do repairs to their ambulances which are mainly converted lorries.

"We were incorporated into the A. T. S. on its formation but we still keep our own individual entity," said one girl. "We do all our own maintenance work, except workshop jobs which naturally have to be handed over to the Royal Army Service Corps. Punctures, engine and chassis adjustments are all done by the girls.

"At the moment we are dealing with accidents and illnesses among the troops in barracks in this area but we are all on tip-toe to go to France. However, we have heard nothing about that."

Cook For Hundreds.

Girls in the cookhouse cook for about three hundred men and women. There's no gas or electricity here and huge coal-burning cookers which have to be lit early each morning and kept going all day are used for cooking.

"I don't think any of the girls were cooks before joining," the leader cook said. "They are simply wonderful. Practically every day we have to prepare and cook two hundredweight of potatoes for dinner. We have one man to help with the stoking."

"A. T. S. women are allowed out of barracks while off duty," an officer said. "Their passes expire at 10 p.m. and 'lights out' is at 10:30. That may sound early but the girls are up very early in the morning.

"Moderate make-up is allowed. It would be an awful mistake if we lost our feminine individuality because we are doing this job."

Age limit for the A. T. S. is from 18 to 43. Rate of pay for a volunteer—a private in ordinary army language—is 30 cents a day with uniform provided and all food found. Allowances for dependents are under consideration.

SPOT GUN RANGE FOR BULL'S EYE ON TOY TERRAIN

Classes for Rookie Artillery Officers and Refreshers for Veterans Learn from Working Models

By GUY E. RHOADES
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Somewhere in England, Nov. 13 (CP)—There is a lot more to artillery work than firing guns accurately and officers have to know how to move their weapons across country as quickly and economically as possible, with the least possible chance of being seen by the enemy.

To save unnecessary bills in the early stages of such training young officers or reservists taking refresher courses work on "Stockbridge" models of whole sections of countryside, reproduced in miniature with all the hills, valleys, rivers, roads, buildings and settlements.

Experienced officers lecture them, explaining that to go from point A to point B which might be six miles away and over an exposed hill they should take their equipment into the valley between A and B and go around the base of the hill, and so forth.

They then practice estimating distances on the model. Knowing its scale and inches to the mile, they are asked to estimate the distance and direction of B from A, to calculate the required elevation and bearing of a specified gun firing from A to target at B.

Tell-tale Smoke Puffs.

Under the model a man wheels a smoke-producing apparatus, calculating the exact point at which the officer's shells would land, according to his elevation and bearing. At that point a man sends up a puff of smoke to tell the officer how accurate was his aim.

It is an indoor reproduction without guns and on a model about 30 feet long of the work done later on the ranges with live weapons, contour maps, field telephone sets and complete observation post personnel and gun crews.

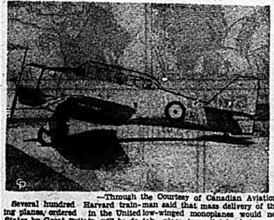
Officers say it takes a lot of practice to become a competent judge of distances, to tell whether a target on the far side of a valley is higher or lower than the observation post, to spot the presence of such objects as pill boxes, comauflaged ehemy advance posts an dthe like.

It comes to them with practice, however, like a tenderfoot's acquisition of ability to find his way in the woods without a map or compass.

ACCUSED PLANNING KINGDOM FOR SON

Viscount Rothermere, RIGHT, wealthy British publisher, who was accused by the Princess Stefanie Hohenlohe Waldenberg of plotting to make a kingdom of Hungary with his son, Edmond Cecil Harmsworth, LEFT, as its ruler. The charges were made by the princess' counsel, Gilbert Beyfus, acting for his client. She claims she acted as the publisher's foreign political representative for several years.

TO BE DELIVERED IN CANADA



—Through the Courtesy of Canadian Aviation

Several hundred Harvard training planes, ordered in the United States by Great Britain, will be delivered in Canada and used to train Empire pilots, according to a spokesman for the British air mission, now in Canada. The spokesman said that mass delivery of the low-winged monoplanes would not take place immediately, but sometime in the near future. Capable of a a speed of 250 m.p.h. the Harvards are powered by a 500-h.p. Pratt and Whitney Wasp engine.

AT THE BELLE

"Marx Bros. at the Circus"

Graduating from the opera and the race track, the Merry Marx Bros.—Groucho, Harpo and Chico—invade the realm of the circus for their newest riot of comedy, "Marx Bros. at the Circus", at the Belle Theatre and it can be rated as a must-see picture as a comedy hit of the year.

A streamlined, circus novel in its design, serves as the background for the Marxian monkey-shines, with a modernistic midway, a menagerie that pictures scores of caged animals in their native habitats, and the varied back-scene activities of a huge circus thrown in for good measure.

The picture, although the Marxes corner most of the footage with their comedy pranks, carries a weighty cast that includes Kenny Baker, Florence Rice, Eve Arden, Margaret Dumont, Nat Pendleton, Fritz Feld, James Burke, Barnett Parker, and a very promising young midget actor, Jerry Barenghi.

Chico, as a roustabout, and Harpo, as assistant strong man in the story, engage Groucho, "Legal Eagle", to save Kenny Baker from losing his half of the circus to a group of conspirators—the strong man, the midget and the upside-down-girl who walks on the ceiling. The deed is accomplished successfully but in a series of uproaring episodes that challenge description.

Outstanding comedy highlights are Harpo's strong man scenes, Groucho enticing the stolen wallet from the Upside-Down-Girl by dancing a rhumba with her on the ceiling, and the wild chase of all participants on the flying trapeze at the top of the big tent.

Musical numbers, featuring Kenny Baker and Miss Rice, are beautiful in their staging and Harpo and Chico contribute to the musical melange. Marvyn LeRoy produced and Edward Buzzell directed the picture which is an all-round gala production that has everything of corking good entertainment.

Selected Short Treats

Three selected short treats are announced for exhibition on the same program including "Jitterbug Follies" a funny comicolor cartoon, "The Belle Newsreel" with its latest, timely events from the world over, and "Unseen Guardians", a clever and original specialty.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Girls on Probation"

Crime and punishment, innocence and vindication are the twin themes of "Girls on Probation," a melodramatically exciting film produced by Warner Bros. with Jane Bryan and Ronald Reagan in the leading roles, which is now playing at the Capitol Theatre.

As the title indicates, the picture gives a sympathetic exposition of the workings of the system of probation, which has come to be an important factor in the modern concept of penology.

Ordinarily the benefits of the probation system are extended to first-offenders who are clearly guilty of the crimes of which they have been convicted, for the purpose of preventing them from becoming hardened criminals because of one misstep.

In the situation pictured in "Girls on Probation" the social value of the system is even more strikingly presented, for the heroine of the Warner film is actually innocent of the crime of which she is convicted, and it is only probation which saves her from a long prison term and the possibility of her becoming a bitterly anti-social, if not downright criminal, member of society.

The film is anything but a tract, however, for the story, dealing largely with criminals, is a turbulent, fast-moving tale showing how the heroine becomes innocently involved in a series of encounters between a ruthless bandit and the police.

In addition to Miss Bryan and Reagan, the cast also includes, in important roles, Anthony Averill, Sheila Bromley, Henry O'Neill, Elisabeth Risdon, Sig Rumann, Dorothy Peterson, Esther Dale and Susan Hayward.

The production, which was based on an original screen play by Crane Wilbur, was directed by William McGann, who was picked for the job because of the success of "Alcatraz Island," his last previous directoral essay into the field of penology.

The added attraction on the same programme is America's favorite comic strip "Tailspin Tommy" in "Mystery Plane" with John Trent, Marjorie Reynolds, Milburn Stone. Universal's News Events of the day concludes the bill.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Fighting Thoroughbreds"

A thrilling romance of the Kentucky race-track "Fighting Thoroughbreds" featuring Ralph Byrd, Mary Carlisle, Robert Allen and George (Gabby) Hayes, is one of two swell feature attractions now playing at the McCarthy Theatre, the second feature presentation "I Stand Accused" with Robert Cummings, Helen Mack and Lyle Talbot in the principal character roles, is a powerful drama of a criminal lawyer—who was more criminal than lawyer. The picture takes two barristers, just out of college, and throws them upon the world. The two find that life hasn't been awaiting their genius, and that the profession is already overcrowded with capable attorneys. Robert Cummings, one of the young lawyers seizes upon an opportunity to serve a gangster and then, finding how easy it is to earn big money for ignoring scruples, becomes an underworld mouthpiece. Tom Beck, his pal, sticks to honor and poverty while awaiting his break.

Events move swiftly and powerfully to the point where the lifelong pals find themselves bitter opponents and working for the downfall of the other. Helen Mack, beloved by both, and Leona Roberts, as Cumming's mother, add to the drama and poignancy by being drawn into the middle of the quarrel. The exciting situation is enthrallingly worked out and Cummings is made to see the light of honor.

The entire cast is capable with Cummings, Beck and Miss Mack sharing acting honors.

CANADIAN FEELS DARK NIGHTS OF WARTIME EUROPE

Sharp Letdown from Bright Lights of Canada and an American Liner to Blackout of British Port

(The following story by Gladys M. Arnold, Canadian Press correspondent in Paris, describes the impressions of a Canadian girl arriving in England in wartime.)

Southampton, Nov. 13 (CP)—It's night. From Vancouver to Montreal the cities are lakes of twinkling electric stars. New York—which I left only a week ago—was a symphony of flashing color and moving lights.

Southampton is in pitch darkness.

What war means — what light means—what darkness does to you—these cannot be realized until you creep out into the Atlantic and every turn of the propeller carries you farther away from light-bathed North America into the darkness which shrouds Europe.

Three hundred of us bounced around in that huge transatlantic liner Washington for a week. She was built for 1,100 passengers and a lot of cargo. She carried a sprinkling of French, English and Canadians, a girl's, Scottish pipe band, a couple of dozen Irish relatives of New York policemen and a few mall bags. That's why we bounced. But the ship was a fountain of light.

The small "stars and stripes" at the masthead fluttered in a spotlight. Decks, cabins, lounges and light. Huge portholes blazed with light. Huge flags painted the full length of the vessel's sides were ringed with light.

But there was something terrible in the thought that out there, a little beyond the line of vision in the blackness, other ships — our own ships, Canadian, British, Australian, French — were creeping along, feeling their way in the darkness with portholes closed, windows blinded, doors tight and instinctively (surely) voices lowered. What must they have felt to see the Washington steaming by in an aura of electricity? That God's greatest gift to man is—light!

Firm But Dark.

At last—the port of Southampton. It's good to feel the earth under one's feet again, to see busy streets and smell the breath of autumn. Little by little the corner shadows eat into the streets, however. The sun sinks, the twilight falls—and no lights come on. Now the whole city is swallowed in obscurity.

Double-decked trams crawl along packed with human beings. Almost complete blackout now. A dimmed red globe illuminates before the behind, and another is found in the centre of the upper deck roof. Others have all windows painted dark blue. It takes courage to force one's way in the gloom.

The motorman illuminates your fare with his flashlight. Inside you suffocate among strange odors and the touch of strange cloth or hand. In time your nose takes on a new intelligence. Among the clammy human odors it picks out the acrid sheep's smell of Harris tweed and the horsey adors of a soldier's uniform. A sudden breath tells you your neighbor to the left has been eating fish; beer, tobacco, new leather, and menthol wafts back and forth until you are glad to stumble out into the night again.

Now a dim red glow is to be seen near the ground along the streets at intervals. Black shades cut out but a sliver of color. Some of these indicate parked cars, but most of them mark the entrances or show the signs which read "Air Raid Shelter—270 People". The doors are protected by small fortresses of sandbags.

One by one the doors close. The word "open" in dimly glowing metallic paint indicates a restaurant. An hour later it seems as though one had stepped out into a city of the dead. Total darkness and silence. But quickly eyes and ears become accustomed to the gloom. After colliding with several blacker spots you realize these are other people and slowly you begin to detect their approaching footsteps in time to dodge.

The buildings seem deserted, lifeless. One might be back in the ancient city of Pompeii. But soon imperceptible hairlines of light indicate doors and windows. Soon one sees outside doors left slightly ajar so that the inner doors with the familiar "open" upon it may be seen. Pushing through these and then through the folds of thick curtains one comes upon an ordinary bar, or drugstore, cinema, restaurant or tobacco shop. But the whole has a mysterious, almost fantastic, night club air about it.

Soon one can detect voices behind these black windows and doors; a strain of music, the crackle of a radio and slowly the whole pulsing life of the city begins to murmur around you like the life in a forest at night. Southampton is still there—alive—carrying on—"business as usual" living and laughing and eating and sleeping — but with the blinds pulled down.

Little Benny's Note Book

Me and Puds Simkins and Glasses Magee were walking along talking and arguing, and we saw Sam Cross standing alongside of a baby carriage in front of the drug store, Glasses saying, What's you doing, Sam, minding somebody's baby?

Yes and I wish I wasn't Sam Cross said. I'm supose to be going an important errand, and if I'm late I'll catch heck and maybe even get a licking, so what do I care for any old dime for minding some old baby? he said, and I said G, did she promise you a dime? and Sam said, Yes and you guys can have it if you take my licking too.

Giving us a idea, and we said, Well hay, Sam, G, Sam we'll mind it we'll take the job if you want to go Sam.

Okay, that suits me perfect, when she comes out you can just say you're my substitutes, Sam Cross said.

And he ept on going, me saying, G, a dime, that's 3 cents apiece and a exter cent to toss up for, and Puds Simkins saying, Here comes a lady out now, I bet this is her.

Wich it was being a little round ladd with a pointy nose, saying, Well, what's this, where's Samuel?

Proving she even knew his name, and I said He had to go, and Glasses saying, Us 3 are minding your baby for him for you.

Well such a boy, he isnt even do his ant a little favor without calling in every boy in the nayborhood, the lady said.

And she started to push the baby away, and I said, Did you promise him anything? and she said, Yes I promised him I'd tell his mother if he wasn't here when I came out, but I suppose I'll have to overlook it considering the circumstances.

Us 3 proberly being the circumstances and we all claimed we would never trust that darn liar again.

Being what we always say about Sam Cross.

MAN VICTIM OF 2ND. ATTACK

Montreal, Nov. 11—(CP)—Roland Vaillancourt, 21, who left hospital last Saturday after recovering from injuries suffered when he was beaten up and left unconscious in a vacant lot, was found unconscious again last night in suburban Ville St. Michel, his hands and feet bound and his body cut and bruised. He told police he had been attacked by several men, tossed into an automobile where he was bound and then thrown from the car as it sped through the northeastern section of the city.

MAGISTRATE CALLS HUSBAND "COWARDLY CREATURE"

Guelph, Ont., Nov. 11 (CP) — Regretting he couldn't order the cat-o-nine tails, Magistrate Watt today sentenced Harold J. Brown of Guelph to two months in the county jail for assaulting his estranged wife. When R. B. Hungerford, Brown's lawyer, opined that the sentence was unnecessarily severe, his Worship said it was the maximum but not enough in a case like this.

Mrs. Brown said her husband had broken the lock of a door to gain entrance, then struck her, but Brown maintained he merely pushed her, and she had struck her head. Magistrate Watt called Brown a "cowardly creature."

LIMERICK KING DEAD

How to Overcome Piles And Rectal Sorness

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is highly recommended, is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

Dionnes' Nurse Weds Shortly

Callander, Ont., Nov. 13—(CP)—The Dionne Quintuplets are going to lose one of their best friends soon—pretty, auburn-haired Molly Estella O'Shaughnessey, their nurse for 3½ years, who today set the date for her wedding to Charles MacMillan, of North Bay.

Miss O'Shaughnessey, youngest daughter of Mr. R. O'Shaughnessey of Cobalt, will be married early in December in North Bay to the son of N. A. MacMillan and the late Mrs. MacMillan.

The Quints have become strongly attached to Miss O'Shaughnessey during the years she has been with them. She escorted them into the ante room at Queen's Park in Toronto last May to meet the King and Queen.

THREE DROWNED NEAR VAL D'OR

Car Plunges Into Thompson River North of Mining Village

Val D'Or, Que., Nov. 13—(CP)—Three men were drowned last night when the automobile in which they were riding plunged from a bridge into the Thompson River three miles from this northern Quebec mining centre.

Cards found in the clothing of two of the men bore the names of A. Bernier, 50, of Cadillac, Que., and J. Dorion, 35, of Montreal. The third was not identified immediately.

Witnesses said the machine swerved to the side of the bridge and rolled down the embankment into the river.

LOOK OUT FOR YOUR LIVER

It may be the cause of your troubles. Buck it up the right way, with Fruit-a-tives. Feel grand.

Your liver is the largest organ in your body and most important to your health. It pours out bile to digest food, gets rid of waste, stores energy, allows the proper nourishment to reach your blood. When your liver gets out of order food decomposes in your intestines. You become constipated, stomach and kidneys can't work properly. You feel "rotten"—headachy, backachy, dizzy, dragged out all the time.

Rid yourself of these miseries, as thousands have—with Fruit-a-tives, for 35 years Canada's largest selling liver remedy. Fruit-a-tives stimulate your liver, bring prompt relief—make you feel like a new person. Get Fruit-a-tives at your druggist's today, 25c, 50c.

WEDDINGS

MOORMAN—McCONNELL

A quiet wedding took place Saturday afternoon at five o'clock in Westmoreland United Church, Toronto, when Edna Irene, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Delbert McConnell, Point Anne, Ont., became the bride of Albert Charles Moorman, son of Mr. William Moorman and the late Mrs. Moorman of Belleville.

The church was beautifully decorated with baskets of Autumn flowers and Rev. Mr. Hunter performed the ceremony.

The bride given in marriage by her father wore a gown of sapphire blue velvet with wine velvet hat and matching accessories. Her corsage was of Talisman roses.

Miss Ila McConnell, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid. She wore a frock of maroon crepe with black accessories and corsage of red roses.

Mrs. Claud Whitehead, aunt of the bride was matron of honour and was attired in violet crepe dress with black accessories and corsage of yellow roses.

Mr. Charles Taylor was the best man.

A dinner was served at six o'clock at Cole's Tea room on Yonge Street.

The young couple left for the States, the bride travelling in a green dress with green coat with mink trimmings and green accessories.

DUNNING—BLAKER

White chrysanthemums made a stately setting for the wedding at Christ Church on Saturday afternoon at three o'clock of Eleanor Blanche, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Blaker, and Flight-Sergeant Douglas Frederick Dunning, R.C.A.F. of St. Thomas, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. D. Dunning of Ottawa. The ceremony was performed by Rev. G. G. Wright.

Given in marriage by her father the bride was a charming picture in her floor length gown of dolce blue velvet fashioned in hour-glass style with bustle back, sweetheart neckline and puffed sleeves. Her velvet turban of matching shade had a shoulder length veil and she carried white chrysanthemums.

Miss Eleanor Noble, Toronto, as bridesmaid, wore a lovely floor length gown of Burgundy velvet, with tiny velvet doll hat and shoulder veil. She carried a nosegay of baby 'mums.

Mr. Lionel Blaker, brother of the bride, was groomsman and the ushers were Sergt. E. L. Leichnitz and Sergt. A. Spruston, R.C.A.F., St. Thomas.

Mr. George Maybee, organist of Christ Church, played wedding music and during the signing of the register the choir sang "O Perfect Love".

A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, 29 Earl Street. White chrysanthemums were effectively used in the decoration of the rooms. Mrs. Blaker received, wearing black crepe and lace, with silver jacket, and corsage of roses and Mrs. Dunning in black sheer, with corsage of red roses received. Buffet luncheon was served. The groom's gifts to the bride were a Gruen wrist watch and an opal ring, to the bridesmaid, a cameo necklace and bracelet, to the groomsman a Yardley set and to the organist a cigarette lighter. The bride's gift to the groom was a Schaeffer pen and pencil set. The groom who during his boyhood and later while stationed at Ottawa, was a valued member of the choir of St. George's Cathedral, Ottawa, was the recipient of a beautiful electric clock, handsomely inscribed with the names of the rector, choir leader and choir members.

Later Flight-Sergeant and Mrs. Dunning left for St. Thomas R.C.A.F. station. The bride travelled in a black crepe dress with gold accessories and seal coat.

Presentations

A pleasant evening was spent at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Fox of Hungerford Township on Saturday, November 4. The event was a farewell for their son Morley who recently joined the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment at Picton. About one hundred guests were present and after a few hours of dancing and card playing, the gathering was called to order and the following address read:

Dear Morley:

We, your friends and neighbors, have gathered here tonight to wish you the best of luck in this worthy undertaking.

You will be greatly missed in this community where you have resided.

You have shown great willingness to make this sacrifice on our behalf and we beg you to accept this gift as a token of our friendship and may it often remind you Morley, that our good wishes go with you wherever you are.

We sincerely hope that it will not be long until you are back with us again.

Signed on behalf of your friends and neighbors:

HARRY CRONK
JAMES ARBUCKLE.

Morley was presented with a lovely wrist watch and other gifts. The address was read by James Arbuckle and Harry Cronk made the presentation.

Morley expressed his thanks and appreciation for the gifts and after singing "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow," lunch was served.

On Thursday evening, Nov. 2nd, a large number of friends and relatives gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Mitchell, 2nd of Thurlow, in honor of their daughter and husband, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Woods (nee Alma Snider), who were recently married, and presented them with a miscellaneous shower, including silver, pyrex, linen, chinaware, and cheques. The crowd was called to order and Miss Lorena Haight read the following address:

Belleville, Ont, Nov. 2nd, 1939.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Woods,—
Dear Alma and Gordon:

On this happy occasion of your marriage we have come as neighbors and friends to spend a social evening with you, to express our congratulations on this first milestone of your lives together.

We come with the most sincere good wishes, for you are both worthy of the best that we could wish for you in the future years.

You, Alma, have been a classmate among us and we have ever found you loyal and cheerful and worthy of the name of friend.

Gordon, while we are not so well acquainted with you, we realize you are to be commended upon choosing as your life partner one who has endeared herself to us all.

Our hope is that the coming years will be full of happiness while your lives shed an influence of good on all with whom you come in contact.

Should clouds arise, we grant that they
With silver may be lined.
But quickly vanish even those,
Leaving no trace behind.
And happy may your voyage be
With sunshine all along,
To brighten both your paths and make
Your lives one grand sweet song.

We ask you to accept these gifts and may they in the years to come remind you of the many happy thoughts which surround this gathering here tonight.

Signed on behalf of the community:

DORIS ATKINS
LORENA HAIGHT
REG TERRY.

The bride and groom very graciously thanked their many friends and relatives for the lovely gifts and invited all to visit them in their new home.

They all joined in singing "For They are Jolly Good Fellows," after which a very delightful lunch was served and all wended their way home towards the late hours of the evening.

HONOR NEWLYWEDS

The home of Mrs. Ben Morton on Trent Road, was the scene of a happy gathering on Wednesday evening, when friends and neighbors of Avondale community assembled for a miscellaneous shower honoring Mr. and Mrs. Cameron Morton, (nee Dorothy Parsons).

About fifty guests were present and Mr. Frank Reid acted as chairman. Mrs. Clarence Holmes read an appropriate address and the gifts were presented by Mr. Clifford Champaign and Mr. Clarence Holmes. Bride and groom made suitable replies and "They Are Jolly Good Fellows" was sung. A dainty lunch was served at the close of the evening.

The address follows:

Mr. and Mrs. Cameron Morton:
Dear Cameron and Dorothy,—

We your friends and neighbours have gathered here tonight to extend to you our congratulations on your recent marriage and to wish you many happy years of married life together.

Since coming to our community Cameron, we have found you to be a good neighbour—always ready to lend a helping hand. We congratulate you on your choice for a wife and feel your future is assured with a nurse to care for you.

Dorothy, we extend the right hand of fellowship to you, and welcome you into our community, where we hope you will feel at home.

As a slight token of our regard and esteem for you, we ask you to accept these gifts, not for their value but for the friendship and good wishes that go with them.

May the Giver of all good gifts continue to bestow upon you, Health, Happiness and Prosperity and may God be your Guide in the establishing of another Christian home.

"A red geranium or two to keep the corners gay,
A little patch of grass to trim, a pair of maple trees,
A path that leads up to the door,
And home is made of these.

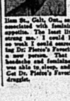
Some windows for the sun to find,
And curtains white and neat,
Good neighbours to the right and left,
And just across the street,
A kettle singing on the stove,
A couch that's built for ease,
A dog that wags his tail at you,
A home is made of these.
The smell of cookies baking or of onion in the stew,
And free to go around and about, as you would like to do,
Of course there will be times of trouble and disease,
And times of song and laughter, for every home is made of these."

Signed on behalf of your Avondale Neighbours, Clifford Champaign, Clarence Holmes.

Belleville, November 8, 1939.

ANNUAL BANQUET

The annual banquet of the Cannifton Y.P.U. was held on Tuesday November 7th., with an attendance of 250. It was an even greater success than in former years. The decorations were in pink and green. A number of Young Peoples' Unions from the surrounding district were present and contributed to the programme. Miss Myrtle Reid of Belleville, was chairman and song leader. The Guest Speaker for the evening was Rev. W. R. Merrick of Selby, a former pastor. His address was greatly enjoyed by all present.



NERVES HELPED

ONE of the best things a woman can take for nervousness is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, prescribed by a physician who specialized in women's ailments. Mrs. James Johnson of 17 William St., Galt, Ont., says: "I had bad headaches associated with feminine weakness and had no appetite. The least little noise completely unstrung me. I could hardly sleep and became so weak I could scarcely get about. After taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription I felt like a new person. That upset condition and the headache and feminine weakness disappeared, I was able to sleep, and I regained my strength." Get Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription from your druggist.

GERMANY REJECTS JOINT OFFER OF MEDIATION

Lowland Nations' Envoys Informed By Von Ribbentrop

Formal Reply to Offer of November 7th., by Rulers of Holland and Belgium Will be Sent to The Hague and Brussels Tonight

REPLY IS BRIEF

Answer is Said to Have Stated Germany's Reply Was Based on Answers Already Received from Britain and France

Berlin, Nov. 14—(AP)—Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop informed the Belgian and Netherlands envoys that Germany's reply to the joint mediation offer from the Lowland Nations would be a polite "No."

The formal reply to the offer made Nov. 7 by the Queen of the Netherlands and King of the Belgians will be sent tonight to The Hague and Brussels with instructions to German envoys that it be presented tomorrow, informed sources said.

The note was said to be only a page and a half in length and was drafted by Von Ribbentrop, who informed the two small nations of its contents today.

Von Ribbentrop was said to have stated Germany's reply was based on answers already received by the two sovereigns from Great Britain and France which he said rendered peace impossible at this time.

(The French reply, delivered Sunday, declared it was up to Germany to repair "the injustices which force has imposed on Austria, Czecho-Slovakia and Poland" before peace could be discussed.

(Britain promised consideration of any German proposals which might "afford real prospect of achieving" Britain's avowed aim, "to halt German aggression.)

INSULT ADDED TO INJURY

Shelbyville, Ind., Nov. 14—(AP)—Burglars who broke into Virgil Messmore's house weren't satisfied with searching the place. Before leaving, they let in a flock of chickens. When Messmore and his wife returned home, they found chickens perched on the furniture in every room.

Why The Weather?

Artificial atmospheres! Artificial climates were created by man as soon as he learned to shelter himself in caves and to warm himself by fire of his own making. Now we have artificial atmospheres. These are produced for several reasons, the more common are: (1) to create conditions in hospital rooms, usually with more than the ordinary concentration of oxygen, for the treatment of certain diseases; (2) to raise the oxygen content in enclosed cabins of balloons and airplanes when at high elevations to the usual sea level amount so as to prevent any physical disorder of pilots or passengers; and (3) to change the ordinary conditions in greenhouses or locally outside of temperature, humidity, wind, light and amount of carbon dioxide for the better growing of certain plants.

Trawler Docks With Mine Lashed To Masthead

Lowestoft, England, Nov. 14—(CP)—Lowestoft fishermen have taken a tip from Von Tromp and Blake, rival Dutch and British Admirals of the 17th century.

Von Tromp carried a broom at the masthead of his ship to show he was going to sweep his enemy off the seas. Blake replied by fixing a whip to his masthead to lash his foe into defeat.

A Lowestoft motor trawler has docked with a mine lashed to the masthead. It was found in the trawl nets while on a North Sea fighting expedition.

FLEMISH DEPUTY IS EXPELLED

Belgian Accused Socialist of French Sympathy — 11 Flemish Deputies Walk Out

Brussels, Nov. 14—(AP)— Amid an uproar which lasted half an hour a Flemish Deputy who accused a Socialist colleague of French sympathies was expelled today from the Belgian Chamber of Deputies, precipitating a sympathy walkout of 11 other Flemish representatives.

The incident began when a Communist opposed the routine re-election of a chamber committee. A Socialist should "go to Berlin."

Socialist Hubin, who favors joining France, began to speak and Flemish Deputy Florimond Grammens shouted "go to the French Chamber."

Amid the confusion the Chamber voted the expulsion of Grammens, who was led out by the sergeant-at-arms.

SOVIET PAPERS ASSAIL U.S., BRITAIN, FRANCE, TURKEY

Moscow Bolshevik Publishes Cartoon of U. S. Ship-Owners

CHARGES BY RED STAR

Moscow, Nov. 14 (AP) — Russian newspapers today attacked the United States, Great Britain and France and for the first time in recent months criticized Turkey.

A cartoon in the Moscow Bolshevik pictured United States shipowners as violating neutrality legislation by registering ships in foreign neutral countries such as Cuba, Panama and Chile to trade with Britain and France.

The army newspaper Red Star said Britain and France, encouraged by their pact with Turkey and United States repeal of the arms embargo, were seeking to organize a Balkan bloc under their domination and also gain control of the Dardanelles.

An article in Pravda, Communist party newspaper, accused the Turkish Ankara Times of trying to "split" Germany and the U.S.S.R. Pravda denounced as lies reports attributed to the Ankara paper that Russia and Germany "are preparing a division of India" and that "Russia is going to let Germany occupy the Balkans".

MILK-DRINKING TAKEN SERIOUSLY BY GUN-MAKERS

British Workmen on Bren Gun Manufacture Turn Out Product at Top Speed

PEAK YET TO COME

Gun-Making Requires Highest Skill as Gun Has 172 Parts

By Harold Fair

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Somewhere in England, Nov. 14—(CP Cable) — Milk-fed British workmen are turning out trim Bren gun as fast as is humanly possible and the peak of production has not yet been reached

The intricate manufacturing process involved in turning out the light machine-guns for the British troops was explained to newspapermen at a huge arms plant here.

Workmen take milk-drinking seriously at the vast factory. They guzzle more than 500 quarts daily. A plant official said they started the practice in line with the health ministry's fitness campaign and fewer influenza casualties have been reported in the last year although he did not ascribe this entirely to the milk regiment.

Manufacture Standardised

Bren gun production has been standardised according to manufacture plans outlined in an arms manual. Canada has had copies of the manual for a long time the official said, and Canadian technicians have been at the plant. A former employee is aiding Canadian production.

Gun-making requires the greatest skill and precision. The gun has 172 parts and 3,174 manufacturing operations are involved. The process was demonstrated from the time a 46-pound chunk of steel left the forge until the steel became a gunbody weighing less than seven pounds.

British Destroyer Sunk By Hitting German Mine

Place and Time of Sinking of Destroyer Are Not Made Public

1 DEAD, 6 MISSING

British Warships Sink Two German Freighters, Scuttled by Their Own Crews —German Crews in Lifeboats Picked Up by British Warcraft

By PAT USSHER

Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Nov. 14—(CP Cable) — The Admiralty today announced a British destroyer struck a German mine and sank. One of the crew was listed as dead and six were missing.

The announcement did not disclose when or where the accident happened and did not give the name of the destroyer. More than 70 of the crew were picked up and landed, 15 of whom were injured.

The destroyer was the fifth British naval vessel lost in the war. The others were the aircraft carrier Courageous, 515 dead, the battleship Royal Oak, 810 dead, the submarine Ox'ey, 53 dead, and the auxiliary vessel Northern Rover, 27 dead.

BANCROFT CHURCH BADLY DAMAGED BY FIRE TODAY

Our Lady of Mercy Roman Catholic Congregation Sustains Heavy Loss

ALTAR DESTROYED

(Bancroft, Nov. 14.—(Special to The Ontario Intelligencer) — Fire, believed to have originated in the basement as the result of over-heated pipes, completely gutted Our Lady of Mercy Roman Catholic Church here this morning. The loss is estimated at between four and five thousand dollars, Rev. J. F. Kennedy of the parish revealed.

Smoke was first seen emanating from beneath the eave-troughs by Mrs. John Wiggins, who immediately sounded the alarm. The village volunteer fire department, with the aid of chemicals, stayed the blaze until practically all of the church vessels and sacred ornaments were carried to safety, with

Deny Liner Queen Mary Armed for Combat

New York, Nov. 14. — (CP) —A charge by German papers that the British luxury liner Queen Mary is armed for combat was denied here today by an official of the Cunard White Star Line, operators of the vessel. He said the ship did not carry guns either on her deck or in her holds and added:

"We have the right to arm her (for defensive purposes). But she is not moving".

The Queen Mary has been moored at her New York pier since the day after war was declared. Under a camouflage coating of mud gray paint, she appears anything but the Queen of the Seas that she is.

Small Countries Stick Out Chests, Won't Knuckle to Domination

By DEWITT MacKENZIE

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

New York, Nov. 14 (AP) — The many small countries of Europe, taking courage from each other, are sticking out their chests. Bent on maintaining their neutrality, they are showing a sturdy determination not to knuckle under further in the matter of their independence and territorial integrity.

The Finns' daring rejection of Russian territorial demands, the vigorous preparations of Holland and Belgium to defend their neutrality against aggression if necessary, the reported new Balkan agreement tending towards defensive cooperation under Italian sponsorship—all these developments mark a hardening of the political temper of the continent.

It is significant, as showing the trend of affairs, that in all instances this attitude is the outgrowth of fancied or real dangers emanating from Germany, Comrade Russia or both. The Anglo-French allies haven't inspired fear among the lesser states.

Thus a large number of little nations in southeastern and western Europe, while not openly hostile to Germany, are decidedly on the defensive against the Reich.

This represents what seems from this distance to be a moral gain for the allies.

So delicate has become the position of some of these small states that it wouldn't take much bullying to set them to using the arms which they have ready at hand. And there is indication of a growing tendency among them to support each other.

MAN FOUND SAFE AFTER TWO-DAYS' WANDERING IN BUSH

Pembroke, Ont., Nov. 14—(CP)—After wandering in the bush for two nights and a day, Paul Laroche of Chalk River, was found safe today about six or seven miles from where he was last seen before becoming separated from a hunting party.

John Bedard of Chalk River found Laroche who was reported in good condition after his experience. He told Bedard and other members of the searching party that he lighted a fire and shot a rabbit for food.

MOTORMAN IS CHARGED

Thorold, Ont., Nov. 14—(CP) — Thomas Edward Drake, motorman of the express car which collided with a Niagara, St. Catharines and Thorold main line car at Thorold on Oct. 11, was arrested yesterday on a charge of criminal negligence by St. Catharines police. He was taken to the Welland Cuonty Jail. The case was remanded for one week and bail was granted at $4,000.

William King, Port Colborne, was killed in the accident and nine other persons were injured.

'Cat's Eyes' for Blackout Developed in 20 Minutes

London, Nov. 14 (CP)—With the war in its eleventh week and a good proportion of the population in bondage and sticking-plaster as a result of collisions in the black-out, W. E. Hardy, optical expert, comes forward with scientific suggestions for the development of "cat's eyes".

You can teach yourself to see in the blackout in twenty minutes, says Mr. Hardy.

Canadians, far from the threat of aerial attack, might care for the lesson just in case the city electric power fails.

First, do not expect to develop "black-out" eyesight immediately on leaving a brightly-lit home or office. It takes twenty minutes for the human eye to get properly accustomed to complete darkness, according to Mr. Hardy.

"While the eyes are being conditioned to darkness no light of any kind should be used, even a single flash of a torch will spoil everything, making it necessary to start the conditioning all over again," he says.

Point two: Never look directly at what you want to see in the darkness. "If you hear a person approaching, direct your glance a little to the right or left of where you think he is and you will see him more clearly than if you stare straight at him. This is because of outer portions of the retina are more sensitive to dim light than the central portion.

Mr. Hardy did not advise citizens as to what they should do during that first twenty minutes.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

Termination of the Finnish - Russian negotiations does not necessarily mean either the abandonment of Soviet demands on the northern republic or an immediate recourse to force of arms. Secure in its great wealth and man-power the Soviet Union can wait and, without moving a man or a gun across the border, make things tough for the Finns.

It is not an easy thing for a small country to maintain its army on a war footing and keep its defences ready to meet an attack. By maintaining a constant threat a powerful nation can put a weaker one to expense and inconvenience which may in time wear down its resistance.

The near future probably will bring a revelation as to Soviet intentions. Already, however, the Russian press has hinted at a prolonged campaign of intimidation and suggested Finland can not stand present conditions for more than a few months.

Finland is not the only small neutral state on which the burden of keeping its defences in readiness bears heavily. The cost of maintaining the Swiss army in a state of mobilization is a severe burden on the treasury of that republic. Holland and Belgium are forced to maintain large numbers of men under arms and a considerable part of Holland is under martial law. Over a long period such measures put a severe strain not only on the resources of a small country but on the temper of the population.

When a country is actually at war there are compensations not present in a neutral state. The immediate sense of danger, intensified patriotic sentiments and the will to victory make it easier to bear the higher taxes, the restrictions on personal liberty and the interference with commerce which go with a condition of military preparedness.

SINK-ON-SIGHT NAZI SEA WAR IS INDICATED

Submarine Attacks Without Warning Are Suggested in News from Berlin

'PUBLIC NOTICE' GIVEN

Germans Claim 2 British Flying Boats Destroyed but British Say None Lost

By CHARLES NICHOLS

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Germany threatened a sharp offensive at sea today as naval and merchant shipping casualties on both sides mounted abruptly.

The Nazi press hinted—in terms strikingly similar to those used more than a month ago when Great Britain placed defensive guns on her merchantmen — that U-boat commanders would fire without warning on armed merchant vessels.

The controlled German press called defensively armed vessels "pirates" and named twenty-nine British and five French ships as being in that category. It told civilians they would travel on those ships at their own risk.

U-boat attacks have declined sharply in the last month, despite the earlier Nazi threat to sink defensively armed vessels on sight.

Ultimatum From News Report.

The Berlin correspondent of the New York Herald-Tribune said submarine crews at Hamburg had refused to go on raiding trips unless they were released from the necessity of coming to the surface before attacking. According to this report the British Aerial Anti-Submarine Patrol is so effective that U-boats are attacked almost as soon as they show themselves.

For this reason, the correspondent said, U-boat attacks had been transferred to such comparatively unpatrolled areas as the coast of Spain. Even there, however, they have to deal with convoying naval units.

Total Losses At Sea.

The latest losses at sea lifted the toll to 120 vessels and the total known tonnage destroyed to 489,117. Great Britain has lost 65 ships, Ger-

AUSTRALIAN AIR MINISTER SWORN IN AT OTTAWA

Hon. J. V. Fairbairn is First Man in History to be So Honored in Another Dominion

ATTENDS AIR PARLEY

Ottawa, Nov. 14—(CP)— Hon. J. V. Fairbairn former Australian Minister of Civilian Aviation, who is in Ottawa in connection with empire air training plans, today was sworn in at Government House here as Minister of State for Air as a result of the reshuffle of the Australian government.

It is believed to be the first time in history a Minister of one Dominion has taken the oath of office while in another Dominion. A cable from the Governor General of Australia to the Governor General of Canada yesterday requested that Mr. Fairbairn be sworn in. He was already a Privy Councillor in Australia.

The oath was administered by Sir Lyman Duff, Chief Justice of Canada in the presence of Lord Tweedsmuir. Mr. Fairbairn arrived in Ottawa on Oct. 31, and has since been engaged with British, Canadian and New Zealand air officials in mapping a plan by which aviators from the sister Dominions and the United Kingdom may receive their advanced training in Canada.

Investigate Death Of Waterloo Girl

Hamilton, Nox. 14 -(CP)— Further investigation is being made into the death here Sunday of Reta Doefler, 17, of Waterloo, and it is probable that an inquest will be held at a later date, A. J. Chamberlain, Inspector of Detectives said today.

Dr. D. G. McIlwraith, coroner, Inspector Chamberlain and Detective Herbert Witthun held a conference this morning when the report of the autopsy was received but they did not reveal its contents.

The young woman was removed to the General Hospital Sunday from a rooming house where she had been found gravely ill in the room she rented Friday night when it is alleged she left her Waterloo home. After taking the room, she was not seen again until her moans attracted attention Sunday, Police were advised.

TENDERS ACCEPTED

Ottawa, Nov. 14—(CP)— On behalf of Finance Minister Ralston it was announced today that tenders had been accepted for the full amount of $25,000,000 Dominion of Canada Treasury Bills due Feb. 15, 1940.

Communist Activity in Canada Should be Investigated Says Drew

Stratford, Ont., Nov. 14—(CP)—Lieut.-Col. George A. Drew, Ontario Conservative Leader, urged in an address to the Stratford Board of Trade last night that the Canadian government order an inquiry into Communist activity, similar to that of the Dies Committee on un-American activities in the United States.

Col. Drew pointed out that confessed Communists had testified before the Dies Committee and claimed that Canadian Communist activity was financed from Russia.

"There are less Communists in Russia today than in any other country in the world," he maintained.

The Conservative Leader said he was in favor of organized labor but opposed to Communist organizations and agitators. Every organizer in the Congress of Industrial Organizations, he declared, is a Communist.

Col. Drew also addressed a meeting in the interests of the Stratford Branch of the Red Cross Society of Canada.

Vast Air Scheme Empire Training Is Taking Shape

Some Fields of National Air Line Will be Basis for Gigantic Plan

SURVEYS ARE MADE

Work on New Air Bases Will Get Under Way This Autumn and be Carried On During Winter

Ottawa, Nov. 14—(CP) — Use of some Trans-Canada Air Lines' landing fields as a nucleus for the Empire air training scheme has been decided upon by the conference here between delegates of Britain, Canada, Australia and New Zealand.

Formal announcement last night that T.C.A. airports would be the basis for the vast scheme of flying facilities necessary to train up to 25,000 fighting pilots a year for the Empire's air forces confirmed earlier reports that the National Air Line would play a vital part in the training scheme.

T.C.A. has built up a string of completely equipped, modern flying fields at major cities from the Atlantic to the Pacific and along the trans-continental routes emergency landing fields are located every 50 or 100 miles.

It is not considered likely that all big urban airports will be used extensively for training empire pilots but many of the smaller fields at which transport planes are not landing several times a day will be utilized fully.

Assistant Secretary Resigns

Washington, Nov. 14—(AP)—Harry L. Brown, Assistant United States Secretary of Agriculture has tendered his resignation to Secretary Henry Wallace, effective tomorrow, associates reported today, but neither Wallace nor Brown would comment on the report. Friends said he was resigning for "personal reasons."

Germans Deny Ex-Crown Prince Has Been Executed

Berlin, Nov. 14 (CP-Havas) — Foreign reports that former Crown Prince Friedrich Wilhelm of Germany has been arrested and executed were denied in authoritative German quarters last night. The ex-Crown Prince is living quietly at his Potsdam estate, it was said.

SEES JAMES BAY POSSIBLE BASE

Hon. Dr. Manion Points to Potentialities of Area

Ottawa, Nov. 14—(CP)—Conservative Leader Manion sees James Bay as a possible spot from which an enemy airplane carrier in wartime might send planes to threaten every point in Canada between Quebec and Winnipeg.

Speaking on a national network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation last night on "why we are at war" Dr. Manion said "Canada would indeed be quiet vulnerable" should Great Britain and France be defeated by Germany and referred to statements he made nearly a year ago regarding James Bay as a potential enemy airplane carrier base.

"I have already pointed out, nearly a year ago in the House of Commons," he said, "what had already been demonstrated by Lieutenant Carter in the Canadian Defence quarterly, that every important point in Canada, between Quebec in the east and Winnipeg on the west, is within bombing distance of a plane carrier in James Bay.

"And while that is true today, how much more true may it be 10 years from today."

8,000-Ton British Ship Sunk by Mine

London, Nov. 14—(CP)— The 8,003-ton British freighter Matra sank in the North Sea last night after an explosion, presumably that of a mine. Two sailors were killed and 22 injured. (The Matra was owned by Thomas and John Brocklebank, Ltd., and her home port was Liverpool.)

'Coronation Scot' Train Is Now in Baltimore

Baltimore, Nov. 14—(AP)— The war appears to have sidetracked Great Britain's crack train, the "Coronation Scot", 3,000 miles from home.

The luxurious train, which began a 3,100-mile tour here before going to the New York World's Fair, has returned and may remain in Baltimore indefinitely.

Shipping circles said the steamer Belpamela, which brought the "Scot" across the Atlantic, was busy elsewhere and expressed belief other locomotive-carrying vessels were too occupied with war duties for Great Britain to take the train home.

The "Scot" is being dismantled and stored at the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad's Mount Clare shops.

BLAZING CHIMNEY CAUSES NO DAMAGE

Fire department squads were called out yesterday to No. 8 Harriet Street where a blazing chimney threatened to get out of control. The blaze was reduced with no damage.

35 PRISONERS AT COUNTY JAIL

Thirty-five inmates are at present housed in the Hastings County jail, Governor G. H. French stated this morning. This number is slightly in excess of that of the corresponding period a year ago.

BEAR ON DISPLAY

A young bear, weighing in the vicinity of one hundred and twenty-five pounds, which was shot in the north country, attracted the attention of Front Street pedestrians yesterday. The animal was on display in the windows of Clark and Miles, Front Street butchers.

LARGER NUMBER UNEMPLOYED REPORTED

Registrations of unemployed of the city and district are well above those of a year ago, and are increasing rapidly, Employment Office Superintendent William Ross stated today.

Influx of outside residents in the hope of securing employment on highways and other government projects is given as the reason for the high number of registrations.

PAYMENT OF TAX ARREARS IN RURAL MUNICIPALITIES RISES

Indicative, perhaps of the upward trend of conditions in the rural municipalities of Hastings County, the sale of lands for taxes held the other day brought in an amount of unpaid taxes that exceeded amounts paid in former years by a substantial sum, according to Countp Treasurer James Haggerty.

Only thirty outright sales out of two hundred and twenty-five lots offered, were made, another low figure, the treasurer said. The greater majority of lots left were redeemed through the payment of tax arrears.

Unsold lots laid over to an adjourned sale that takes place early in December, also reached a new low in numbers, Mr. Haggerty said. The Township of Thurlow has but four lots to be offered for sale; Rawdon, 2; Sidney, 10; Tyendinaga 10; Huntingdon, 4; Hungerford, 11; Marmora Township, 1; Lake, 6; Elzevir, ; Tudor, 12; Cashel, 1; Limerick, 5; Mayo, 2; Carlow, 3 and the Village of Bancroft, 3.

PLENTY OF MATERIAL FOR RED CROSS WORK STATES I. G. HEFKEY

Rumors prevalent to the effect that the local branch of the Red Cross Societp was experiencing a shortage of material for the production of socks and other garments, were dispelled yesterday by Mr. I. G. Hefkey, its President.

"There is plenty of material available," he said, adding the opinion that the fact that the work quarters of the society above Shaw's Men's Furnishing Store will be closed this week with the exception of one day, may have been responsible for the rumors.

"The work-rooms will close," he said, "because of the fact that the National Campaign for funds for the Red Cross Society of Canada is now in progress."

COUNTY COUNCIL WILL DISCUSS GOV'T. PROPOSAL

Thorough discussion with possible resolutions resulting, anent the recent proposed legislation to suspend municipal elections for a period of two years after Jan. 1, 1940 or for the duration of the war, will feature the forthcoming session of the Hastings County Council, officials of that organization prophesied today.

Interest in the proposal is said to be running high throughout the rural municipalities, and an interesting debate is looked for at the December sitting of council which starts its four-day session on December 5.

WOMEN MEMBERS CANVASS COMMITTEES ASKED TO MEET

Women members of the Red Cross canvassing committees are asked to congregate at the Y.M.C.A. tonight at eight o'clock (Tuesday), Campaign Chairman Howard Clarke announced today.

Men canvassers are requested to meet at the same place tomorrow (Wednesday) night at eight o'clock where important business relative to the national campaign of the Canadian Red Cross Society will be discussed.

CLAIM BOUNTIES ON WOLF PELTS

Wolves or wild dogs, take your choice, are again conducting depredations in the rural sections of the northern part of the county. Two pelts, one definitely a wolf, another of uncertain origin were brought to the office of County Treasurer James Haggerty, the other day by residents of northern municipalities in an effort to collect the government bounty of fifteen dollars.

One of the animals was killed by an automobile driven by a man named King, of Steenburg, when it dashed across a road ahead of the car. The other animal was shot by J. Radcliffe, Huntingdon Township, in a field at the rear of his farm.

DOGS BLAMED FOR KILLING OF CHICKENS

Dogs were blamed for the killing of four chickens in the city yesterday, Thomas Thorne, city pound custodian revealed today. Mrs. Wm. Mitchell, 26 Howard St., complained to police authorities that two dogs had entered her premises and had killed four of her prize chickens. Later Mr. Thorne ascertained the names of the owners of the destructive dogs and subsequently arrangements for restitution were completed. The owners of the dogs were warned to keep their pets under better control in the future.

OBITUARY

LESLIE HALLETT.
(West Huntingdon).

West Huntingdon, (Special), Nov. 14 — Leslie Hallett, a well-known and highly esteemed resident of this district died in the Belleville General Hospital on Monday evening, Nov. 13th. He had been in failing health for some time and entered the hospital twelve days ago.

The late Mr. Hallett, who was unmarried, was born fifty-three years ago in the 6th Concession of Huntingdon Township, near Fuller his parents being Mrs Hallett and the late Mr. Simeon Hallett. All his life was passed in this district where he was engaged in farming. In religion he was a member of the United Church at Fuller and fraternally he was a member of Thomasburg Loyal Orange Lodge.

Surviving to mourn his loss are his aged mother, one brother, James Hallett, of Demorestville, Prince Edward County and one sister, Mrs. Robert Gay of West Huntingdon.

The funeral, which will be under the auspices of the Orange Order, will be held from his late residence at 1.30 o'clock on Thursday afternoon.

MORRIS ALYEA
(Consecon)

Morris Alyea, the two months old son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Alyea of Consecon, Prince Edward County, died in the Belleville General Hospital on Monday, Nov. 13. The child was a patient in the hospital for sixteen days.

GEORGE FROST
(Trenton)

George Frost, husband of Ella B. Hayes, passed away at the family residence in Trenton, on Monday, Nov. 13, in his 76th year. The funeral will be held on Wednesday afternoon.

CAR SIDESWIPES PARKED TRUCK

Edward Henn, City, Detained Pending Charge Reckless Driving

Considerable damage resulted to an automobile driven by Edward Henn, 52 South George St., when the motor car sideswiped a parked truck on Dundas St. shortly after 1.00 a.m. this morning. According to P. C. Evans who investigated the crash, Henn had proceeded south on Front St. and after partially negotiating a left hand turn onto East Dundas St., had sideswiped the parked truck resulting in considerable damage to his motor car.

Henn was later detained at the police station pending a charge of reckless driving, police authorities stated today.

Police Circles Quiet

Otherwise activities were rather quiet and serene in and around city police circles during the past 24 hours. An abandoned bicycle was recovered by police and is awaiting an owner at the police station.

Last night's sudden drop in the temperature resulted in 15 transients seeking shelter at the police station.

TORONTO HUNTERS DELIGHTED WITH THEIR GOOD LUCK

Party of Six Gets Deer Quota Near Buckshot L. —Treated Well by Residents of Northern District

PLENTY OF DEER

Enthusiastic over the deer-hunting facilities of the northern districts, six scarlet-clad nimrods from Toronto drove into the city yesterday with six handsome "trophies of the chase" strapped to their automobiles.

"One of the best hunting places we have ever seen", one of the party stated, adding that they had shot their quota a few miles north of Buckshot Lake. The first time the sextette had ever hunted in that region, they were loud in their praises of the treatment accorded them enroute by residents, also of the "layout" of the country where they hunted.

"There appeared to be plenty of deer," another said, "and we had little difficulty in obtaining our share, after we had become acquainted with the district".

"Coming back? I should say we are. We'll be here next year, and in all probability bring half of Toronto with us," he smiled.

Two Bancroft Men Given Jail Terms

Two Bancroft residents were sentenced to serve three months in the common jail in default of the payment of fines levied after the pair had been convicted of breaches of the L.C.A. in County Police Court held before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd at Madoc yesterday. The men's names were given as Robert Loyst, 25 and John Murphy 26, both of Bancroft.

The pair were apprehended by Provincial Constable Stan Palmateer, Bancroft, recently and found to be illegally in possession of liquor. Both young men intimated to the court they were unable to meet the assessed fine which resulted in the jail terms in default thereof.

Given Suspended Sentence

Harry Griffin, a Madoc youth, appeared on a charge of the theft of a pair of gloves. Griffin readily admitted his guilt and was given a severe lecture and a suspended sentence. "Maybe his hands were cold," suggested Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C. as he concurred with the court in the matter of a suspended sentence under the circumstances. Several motorists paid the minimum fines possible after pleading guilty to speeding charges, preferred under the H. T. A.

SAYS SOVIET IDEA IS WORLD REVOLT

Rev. Dr. E. A. Walsh, S. J., Refers to Sinking of Athenia and Attempt on Hitler

Boston, Nov. 14—(AP) — The suggestion that Russia might have been involved in the sinking of the Athenia and the recent apparent attempt to assassinate Hitler has been advanced by Rev. Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, S.J., Regent of Georgetown University's Foreign Service School.

He noted, in an address last night before the Foreign Commerce Club of Boston, that the United States Government still is investigating the sinking of the Montreal-bound British ship, with its loss of American and Canadian lives, and that it has not accused Germany of firing the torpedo.

"The conviction was voiced in Washington that the sinking of the Athenia was due neither to an English or German submarine, but to a Russian craft," Dr. Walsh said. "That horror could have brought no profit to Germany, rather a universal revulsion and a loss of the little support she still retains among neutrals. It is unthinkable that England should deliberately massacre her own nationals as well as Americans."

Asserting that Soviet Russia never has abandoned its "dreams of world revolution," Dr Walsh said that nation could have profitted if the Athenia incident caused the United States to become entangled.

The bombing attempt on Hitler's life, he continued, "argues the presence of some secret organization paving the way for schism and confusion best adapted to Moscow's program."

KIWANIANS ENJOY SOCIAL EVENING

Club Entertains Lady Guests With Bridge and Dance at Trianon Ballroom

Entertaining their ladies, the officers and members of the Belleville Kiwanis Club held a bridge, dance and social evening at the Trianon Ballroom last evening during which fun and frivolity reigned supreme. The evening's entertainment was arranged by the directors of the club, who introduced numerous novelties all of which proved most popular and pleasing to the fair guests.

Bridge was played during the early part of the evening with Mrs. Herb Muir and Mrs. Bruce Bottum winning the ladies' prizes while Kiwanians Herb Muir and Charles Tripp presented the highest individual men's scores. Later dancing was enjoyed with Phil Huddlestone at the piano.

Two novelty dances, with prizes being presented the lucky winners, resulted in much merriment. Kiwanian Morley Wyman was the recipient of one honor when he received a prize for dancing with the most recent bride on the floor, the lady being Mrs. Fred Rawson. Mrs. J. W. Imlah proved quite equal to the occasion of producing President Dick Flynn before the master-of-ceremonies in the shortest time following the announcement. President Flynn was taken quite by surprise when the "bring forth the president" command was heard.

Mercury Drops To 10.5 Degrees During the Night

"King Winter" swept down out of the north with its season's wintry touch last night until the mercury dipped to 10.5 degrees above the zero mark early today. Heavy flows of anchor ice were observed drifting slowly down the Moira River by early risers, while smaller pools and shallow bodies of water in and about the city were completely frozen over and to a thickness reported in some incidents to have been fully a quarter of an inch of ice.

With weather possibilities and prognostications all indicating milder weather in the offing, citizens were somewhat unprepared for the sudden cold spell.

Evidence of yesterday's first heavy snowfall of the season was still to be seen early today, but with the advent of a mid-day sun the snow started to melt beneath the sun's rays.

N. B. READY FOR ELECTION

Saint John, N.B., Nov. 14—(CP) —Pre-election fervor increased hourly in New Brunswick today as 98 candidates for provincial legislature seats prepared to go before the people next Monday.

There are 17 constituencies and 48 seats, for each of which Liberal and Conservatives have been nominated. Only nominees outside the two major parties are one for the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation in Saint John City and an Independent Liberal in Madawaska.

EMPIRE MINISTERS SEE FRONT LINES

Hon. T. A. Crerar Among Those Who Visit British Troops and Defence Positions

With the British Army in the Field, Nov. 14 (CP Cable)—Eager, inquisitive Empire statesmen ploughed through ankle-deep puddles, slithered across fields to pools of mud by incessant rain and in a crowded Sunday saw that part of the front where Great Britain's forces stand ready for action.

The five ministers representing the Empire overseas who have been conferring in London, accompanied by Anthony Eden, Dominions Secretary, toured the forward area of the British zone right up to the front line positions.

Among them was Canada's representative, Hon. T. A. Crerar, Minister of Mines and Resources. Attired in civilian dress, in an overcoat, soft hat and brown shoes, Mr. Crerar presented a contrasting figure to the other statesmen who came prepared for rough going.

R. G. Casey, Australian Minister for Supply wore gum boots but disdained a hat. Peter Fraser, New Zealand Minister of Education, carried an umbrella and a gas mask over his arm. He wore galoshes and tucked the ends of his trousers in his socks.

Colonel Deneys Reitz, South African Minister for Native Affairs, carried a shooting stick and during the morning produced a pair of brown gum boots, while Sir Muhammad Zafrulla Khan of India, bearded and wearing a fez, had gum boots, a muffler and stout walking stick.

Visit Blockhouses.

They climbed inside concrete block houses, saw infantrymen working in a fire trench, were taken into a gun pit and looked out through the embrasure alongside the barrel of a Howitzer. They had a close view of how miles of countryside were being steadily converted into a line of modern field defences by gangs of quiet, active technicians of Great Britain's stalwart army.

At the headquarters of the British army in France I found General "Tiger" Gort smiling in the rain. "And why shouldn't I smile after the heartening messages I have just received?" he asked. He referred to the voluntary pledges of loyalty and the whole-hearted support brought to him directly by the official representatives of the Empire's overseas family.

The empire statesmen motored from Paris in a drenching rain with Mr. Eden to tell the British commander of the collective determination of their countries to place the full weight of their resources behind the mother country in the war.

Greeted by Viscount Gort

Viscount Gort had been told I was the first Canadian newspaperman at the British front.

Shaking me by the hand he said: "We are always glad to see a Canadian. I do hope you are getting enough news."

When I told him I had come to the corps headquarters with the commonwealth party he remarked that the visit would prove historic and was one which "thrilled me to the quick."

It must have thrilled the Empire statesmen also. For inside General Gort's quarters the Empire visitors were given a frank account of Britain's war aims by Viscount Gort. He also explained the disposition of the British Expeditionary Force and outlined the Allies' alternative plans of strategy.

Seldom, if ever, has a group of civilians been the recipient of such a fund of military confidence.

There was a light interlude during the day when the party had assembled in a howitzer gun pit. A young second lieutenant brought round the "visitors' book" in which Mr. Eden and the five ministers wrote their names—and opposite them the names of the countries they represent.

From the gun pits we passed some billets. The men's dinners were being prepared and Mr. Eden explained "I know that smell."

Mr. Fraser went inside one of the billets—a barn—in which the troops sleep on straw spread on the ground. He asked a corporal standing by if it was not a trifle 'bumpy.'

Lunch on Sandwiches

The party then drove on some miles till they came to the boundary of the first and second corps—a roadside cottage in a stretch of open country. Here General Brooke, General Officer Commanding the second corps, was waiting for them.

Everyone got out of the cars, paper bags were produced and standing up or sitting down, on stones or anything else that could serve as a seat, the ministers and generals and the rest dipped hungrily into bags and pulled out sandwiches.

By this time the weather had cleared and the sun was shining. It was an unforgettable scene. The tall Duke of Gloucester, senior liaison officer at general headquarters, tapped a cigarette on his case as he discussed military matters with the New Zealand Minister of Education.

Mr. Eden, hatless and with his overcoat discarded, munched his French bread in understanding silence opposite a munching Canadian Minister of Mines. And sitting on an ancient, empty petrol tin, Col. Reitz held his paper bag and looked thoughtfully back no doubt to other open air meals in wartime France of other days.

The lunch finished, General Brooke led the party to the top of a hill and with a map held in front of him by his aide-de-camp, explained the layout of the second corps among the units of his command. The minister's tour Sunday afternoon took them among other places to the sector held by a battalion of guards. Thereafter they

Collision Occurs Between Unlighted Wagon and Car

Harness Stripped From Horse as Car Strikes Animal Near Shoulder

CHARGES PREFERRED

The harness on a horse hauling a load of coal along North Park St., at 5.30 p.m. last evening was completely stripped from the animal after an automobile had collided with the horse and coal wagon. There was no lights displayed on either vhicle at the time, which investigating police contend was after dark. The motor car was driven by Carl Demille, 16, while the coal wagon and horse were in the custody of Lou Rushlow, of Belleville.

Demille informed Sergeant H. E. Thompson, O.P.P., that the fuse of his motor car had blown out only a few moments prior to the crash and he was endeavouring to proceed to the nearest garage for repairs. Rushlow also admitted displaying no lights on his wagon. The left front fender of the motor car struck the horse along the front shoulder, tearing the harness. The animal bolted and the sudden lunge resulted in the remainder of the harness breaking and stripping completely off the animal. The horse only moved a short distance from the point of impact. Bruises were noticed on the animal's front shoulder and hip.

Sergeant Thompson today reported the incident to Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., Country Crown Attorney, who instructed the officer to prefer charges against both parties concerned.

MILDER WEATHER IS PROMISED

First Cold Snap Sends Mercury Tumbling in Province

Toronto, Nov. 14—(CP)—A sudden cold snap in Ontario today sent the mercury down to 11 degrees above zero at Ottawa and 13 degrees at Kingston, while Hamilton showed a new low for the season of 22 degrees. The mercury fell to 21 at Toronto.

The drop in temperature covered roofs and grass with a mantle of frost.

The weatherman forecast somewhat milder temperatures tomorrow after a fair and cold day throughout Ontario today.

MOTORS ON SUNDAY

Amsterdam, Nov. 14 (AP)—Hollanders will be able to use their automobiles next Sunday without fear of penalty for the first time in six weeks. Motorless Sundays are being abandoned due to the arrival of large supplies of gasoline. Rationing of gasoline supplies is expected later..

RELIGION, LAND BASIC PROBLEMS IN BALTIC STATES

Rev. Oswald Blumit, Latvia, Baptist Pastor and Journalist, Tells Rotary Club Russian People Disgusted With Communist Leadership

LATVIANS RELIGIOUS

[illegible]

Mr. Blumit Declares Latvia Will Never Become Communist Because of Small Farm Problem

Not until the solutions of two important problems, religion, and the freedom of distribution of land, are satisfactorily worked out, will the Baltic nations of Europe enjoy lasting peace, the Rev. Oswald Blumit, Latvian journalist and minister told the Belleville Rotary Club at their weekly luncheon yesterday.

Religion in Latvia in 1917 was in a deplorable state the speaker said. "In neighboring Russia the Communist Government ruthlessly persecuted religion yet in a manner that Christians could oppose. The largest religious leader in Latvia was a Greek Orthodox movement leader, whose 34,000 parishes suffered more harm from internal dissension than that caused by Communism."

Religious leaders in Russia were weeded out, executed, or sent to Siberia, Mr. Blumit said. "This is one of the real reasons why the people of Russia are disgusted with Communist leadership. The Soviet Union is a [illegible] people move in and out with difficulty. The popula[illegible] cannot speak for or against the government and all because a small minority of men have seized the military reins to try and change the gr[illegible]

Religion and Peasantry

The Latvi[illegible] [illegible]lized the two basic foundations of a peaceful state, religion and the peasants. "Not a school teacher in Latvia can conduct classes unless she is a member of a recognized religious group", the speaker said.

The land, formerly owned by few landowners is now distributed among 200,000 peasants in small farms. The result is happy communities that own their own homes, radios, automobiles and modern farm implements.

"During the past five years there has not been one single unemployed man in Latvia, in fact," the speaker declared. "We have had to import 80,000 Polish laborers to assist in the development of the country."

The country owns no minerals, no oils, no raw materials. There was not one cent in the National Treasury, not one soldier in the army when it was under the Russian yoke. Today it boasts a highly trained army of 200,000 men equipped with modern planes, tanks, etc.

Alliance With Russia

"Recently we were forced into a military alliance with Soviet Russia," Mr. Blumit stated, "it was either that or fight. At the time we could not see where Britain and France could give us material assistance and the moral help was insufficient, so we signed. Russia sent 50,000 soldiers to be billeted in our country, to win it over, but Latvia will never become Communist because that party has abolished the small farm system which is the main industry of our country."

During the past twenty years, Latvia has become very religious, the speaker said, "Since 1934 a Ministry of Religion has been added to the Government Cabinet, whose duty it is to study religious tendencies. Now 60 per cent of all Latvians are ardent members of some Christian Church. The speaker believes that the day will soon come when Latvia will be entirely free from Communistic influence, and able to maintain its independence.

234,000 National Songs

Tremendously nationalistic, the Latvians have composed 234,000 songs about their nation. The National Anthem starts with "God" while the name of the Almighty is engraved on every coin of the realm, the speaker pointed out.

The Latvian and Lithuanian language was illegal up until 1901 when it was a crime to speak it. Yet it is the origin of the Prussian language, that came into being some three centuries ago.

Swastika Stolen From Latvia

Hitler stole the Swastika emblem from Latvia, the speaker said, demonstrating his point by showing a Swastika water-mark on a Latvian passport issued to him in 1923. Latvian patriots preserved the language by secreting booklets and passages of scripture in religious figurines, he said. "It was through the efforts of the Roman Catholic Church that the language was preserved."

"Today Latvia stands between the Godless Red of Russia and the Pagan Black of Germany. But 5 million people are determined to stand for culture, morals and religion and not to take on either red or black symbols of Nazism or the Soviet. They are pro-British and unless the democratic nations win, foresee another long period of vassalism to Soviet or Nazi" he said.

Communism a Crime

A correspondent for a communistic paper, the speaker said he was soon convinced that communism was a crime. He became a Christian and went to London, England, to study, where he was [illegible] the ministry. He gave up his hobby of collecting stamps to "collect homeless children." At present, he said, in the church in his home town in Latvia, three hundred children are being cared for.

"While we are on the border of Communist Russia," Mr. Blumit said, "there is not a single Communist in Latvia that can make active propaganda."

World United Only in Christ

In closing the speaker appealed to the clubmen to "help strengthen the Christian cause and let Christianity contribute the best in thought and service in rebuilding Europe and the world. "The day will come," he said, "when the sword will be laid down, but that will come only when there is one world leader, not Hitler or Stalin, but Jesus Christ."

"If religion and land be given the people, then Europe will once again dwell in mutual respect and peace."

The speaker was introduced by the Rev. James Semple, and club appreciation was voiced by Rotarian . G. Hefkey. Guests at the luncheon included : resident Dr. D. Flynn of the Belleville Kiwanis Club, President Bill Hurst of the Belleville Kinsmen Club, Rotarians Art Black and Claude Graham, Trenton, Bud Harrison and Walter Henry of Toronto and the Rev. D. T. McClintock and S. G. Robertson of Belleville.

Tribute to late 'Bob' Graham

During the luncheon tribute was paid to the memory of the late Rotarian Col. "Bob" Graham by President Clarke, who extended sympathy of Belleville Rotary to the bereaved family. One minute's silence was observed, while the usual community singing and collection of fines was omitted in respect to the late member.

AT THE BELLE

"In Name Only"

With Carole Lombard, Cary Grant and Kay Francis in the top row characterizations, "In Name Only" comes next to the Belle Theatre with one of the most high-powered, costly stellar casts ever assigned to one picture.

One of the very few screen entertainments to develop the "other woman's" side, "In Name Only" tells with emotion-gripping power how a wily wife strives to bar the loss of her husband to another woman with whom he has fallen in love. Although the wife openly admits that she does not love her husband, she wants to keep him only for the luxuries and social position he gives her.

The situation develops—with the wife's unscrupulous fight to retain her status and to keep her husband's parents ignorant of the true circumstances—to a stirring climax, after a lightning fast series of stirring highlights which mark "In Name Only" as one of the year's most significant productions.

Miss Lombard's role as the waiting woman represents a departure from her recent cycle of comedienne portrayals, Grant depicts unhappy husband, while Miss Francis plays as the selfish wife. Charles Coburn, Helen Vinson, Katharine Alexander, Jonathan Hale and Maurice Moscovich have important supporting roles in "In Name Only".

Joe Penner's New Comedy.

Said to be the funniest of all Joe Penner's screen offerings, "The Day the Bookies Wept" is the added laugh hit feature with Betty Grable as the funster's leading lady.

The plot revolves around the efforts of a group of Brooklyn taxi-drivers, who have been losing steadily at the race track, to get revenge on the bookies by buying a horse of their own and entering him at long odds.

Penner is one of the drivers. He is a pigeon-fancier, and he is in love with the sister of a fellow driver. He doesn't care for horses, but the boys swiftly attend to this. They raise $500, and sent Penner with it to Kentucky to buy a race horse. A pair of crooks sell him a supposedly worthless nag, which he brings back in triumph. The taxi drivers send Penner out to the Jamaica track to train the horse.

The horse loses consistently, and the odds on him in each race go higher. Penner's fiance, irritated by his addiction to a horse instead of her, gives him an ultimatum. He must win the next race and then quit, he promises to do so. Thereafter things come in quick succession. The boys prepare to bet their shirts on the horse. The pair of crooks arrive in town, and knowing the horse to be a "drunkard", send a barrel of beer around to his stable. The results make for one of the funniest offerings of the season, and afford Penner an ideal vehicle for his merry making abilities.

Betty Grable is featured as a vivacious heroine; the supporting cast includes such well-known players as Richard Lane, Tom Kennedy, Thurston Hall, Carole Hughes, Bernadene Hayes and Jack Arnold. With its hilarious fun-poking at the lighter aspects of horse racing and at bookmakers' methods, the picture constitutes a real cinema entertainment.

"Information Please"

The first of the popular series "Information Please" will be presented on the same program.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Fighting Thoroughbreds"

"Fighting Thoroughbreds" an exciting story of horse racing that at times will make you cheer; featuring an excellent cast, including Ralph Byrd, Mary Carlisle, George (Gabby) Hayes and Robert Allen is now playing at the McCarthy theatre and in addition as a companion feature, "I Stand Accused" a powerful drama of two young lawyers who take opposite sides of the fence in their careers, one taking to defending criminal cases and the other to prosecuting, how eventually the story ends brings to the screen one of the best stories of exciting dramatic achievement seen on the screen so far this season. An exciting subject "Stranger Than Fiction" also is now at the McCarthy theatre.

"Beware Spooks"

Joe E. Brown, one of the screen's greatest comic characters, will be presented next at the McCarthy theatre in "Beware Spooks" one of the best laugh hits ever produced. "Beware Spooks" is a brand new role for a grand laugh star, its Joe the Cooper, in a whopper of a comedy. Spectacular thrills, stirring drama and heart-warming romance will be found aplenty in the second feature presentation "Konga" an action-packed outdoor adventure hit with Fred Stone, Rochelle Hudson and Richard Fiske in the major roles.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Girls On Probation"

"Interesting as well as thrilling" was the obvious verdict of the audience which sat engrossed throughout the opening showing at the Capitol theatre of "Girls on Probation," a distinctly unusual Warner Bros. picture—and full of tense dramatic action. Aside from the interest aroused by the story of the picture, another element of distinct importance to many persons in the audience was that this production gave youthful Jane Bryan her first full-rounded opportunity to demonstrate the remarkable acting talents which have caused many wise people in Hollywood to call her the most promising young actress in pictures today.

Sharing the acting honors with Miss Bryan is Ronald Reagan, who gives a performance that is both forceful and charming as the young attorney who saves the heroine of the tale from utter disaster.

Anthony Averill, darkly handsome, adds another to the gallery of sinister villains he portrays so well, and Sheila Bromley gives a highly effective portrayal of the sly, vindictive "friend" who causes all the troubles of the "girl on probation."

Competent as the actors were, they would probably have been not nearly so effective had they not had a script of real significance as the basis of their work. "Girls on Probation" is perhaps the first adequate and sympathetic presentation in motion picture history of the workings of the probation system. And on the same programme

"Mystery Plane"

The adventures of daredevil Tailspin Tommy are the latest local screen fare, and Monogram's "Mystery Plane," introduces the new series in a thrilling story of men with wings.

"Mystery Plane" starts with the early life of Tommy Tomkins, and tells of his devotion to Captain Brandy Rand, former famous war ace. When Tommy grows up, he becomes "Tailspin Tommy," "world's greatest pilot," according to Betty Lou, who loves him, and Skeeter, Tommy's best friend.

Three characters are in all the pictures. They are John Trent as "Tailspin Tommy"; Milburn Stone as "Skeeter"; and Majorie Reynolds as "Betty Lou." Trent, a former transport pilot, knows flying, and adds authenticity to his role by actually flying in the picture. Stone makes "Skeeter" an excellent contrast to Trent's seriousness. He is a happy-go-lucky, devil-may-care sort of a fellow. Marjorie Reynolds is excellent as Betty Lou, the girl who loved Tommy from childhood.

George Waggner directed "Mystery Plane" from the screenplay by Paul Echofield and Joseph West.

Paul Malwern was the producer.

GOLFER GETS "A BIRDIE"

Kansas City, Nov. 14 — (AP)— "Watch me get a birdie" said Bill Creavy, golf pro. He swung, the ball sailed straight towards a flock of pigeons 145 yards down the fairway. "Pigeon for dinner, boys," exclaimed Creavy as one of the birds toppled over.

GAS PAINS KEPT HIM IN DISTRESS

Mr. Jos. W. Smith Had Sour, Upset Stomach — Sleepless Nights — Bowel Constipation—But Now Mosby's Tonic Has Relieved Him And He Says: "I Want to Endorse This Splendid Medicine to Others."

"I never would have believed there WAS such a medicine!" People over this entire section are saying that about Mosby's Tonic. This New, Scientific Mixture of MR. JOS. W. SMITH.

Roots and Herbs and Other Splendid Medicinal Agents, is now being introduced to the public daily in this city at Lattimer's Drug Store, Your Tamblyn Dealer, 228 Front Street. Just a few days ago, Mr. Jos. W. Smith, of 1008 Albert Road, Windsor, Ont., made the following Sincere Statement. Mr. Smith is an Electric Welder at the Ford Motor Plant. His Grateful Testimonial about Mosby's Tonic reads as follows:

Gas Pains Kept Him Awake Nights

"I had certainly become a real sufferer from gas and bloating distress," said Mr. Smith. "After my meals I always got so full of gas that I felt a choked-up feeling all the way from the pit of my stomach to my throat. And, oh! what pains from this gas. They felt like a knife stabbing me. My food would turn sour in my stomach, and all of this suffering kept me awake at nights. I got to a place where I was AFRAID TO EAT. My bowels were badly constipated.

"I tried so many things without relief that I thought I was never going to find a medicine to help me, and then finally I heard about Mosby's Tonic and started taking it. And I am here to say that it was what I needed. It cleared that gas and bloating from my stomach and now I enjoy my meals without suffering afterward. I can go to bed and get a good night's rest, and feel fine in the mornings. It also regulated my bowels. So I gladly give you my statement and endorse this medicine, for I think others who suffer like I did should hear of it."

BOY CUTS CLASS, SAVES HOME

Colorado Springs, Nov. 14—(AP) —Merle McCauley cut a class at Colorado College and went home. He arrived just in time to save the house from possible destruction from a blazing fireplace screen.

Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Tripp, Picton, Celebrate Golden Anniversary

Picton, Nov. 14 (Special)—Mr. and Mrs. Stanley W. Tripp marked their Golden Wedding at their farm home south of Picton on Monday. A family dinner at one o'clock marked the event and the esteemed couple were the recipients of hearty congratulations.

During the afternoon a happy social time was spent, Mr. and Mrs. Tripp's granddaughters, Marie and Ruth giving vocal duets with guitar accompaniment and Miss E. Reynolds, instrumental music.

They were married at Belleville in 1889, while Mr. Tripp will mark his 78th birthday on Nov. 23 and Mrs. Tripp will be 71 on Dec. 27. Both are well and active. She was formerly Rosa Bell Vincent and her home was across the road from that of Mr. Tripp. They have one son, Arthur Tripp. A daughter Otta Irene died when nineteen.

Mr. Tripp has been prominent in the life of Hallowell township in many spheres. He served so often in Hallowell council that he could not recall just how many years' service he had given. He was in county council during the Great War years, serving as deputy reeve and reeve. In 1933-34-35 he was also a member of county council, served on the road committee when drastic economies were made. He also served on Hallowell council as a councillor.

Mr. Tripp is prominent in the canning industry. He lived on his father's farm until starting out for himself in 1886 on a small scale. It was farming at this time that he first became acquainted with the canning industry, for at that time Wellington Boulter moved his canning business from Demorestville to Picton and Mr. Tripp grew tomatoes for him.

At the end of the century, Mr. Tripp travelled through the eastern part of the province of Ontario from Toronto to the Quebec provincial boundary for Sawyer Massey Co., Ltd., of Hamilton. He was with this company for about twenty years.

His first connection with the canning industry was with the R. J. Purtelle plant in 1928 when he sold something like 15,000 cases of tomatoes. Shortly afterwards he purchased a half interest in Quinte Canning Co. in Picton with Mr. Hepburn, Mr. Tripp being manager. Later he purchased the plant and still later was joined by W. H. Benson as a partner.

In 1938 the plant was rented for canning of Jan-ru tomatoes, but this year he operated the factory, enjoying a successful season. In 1937, between 28 and 30 thousand cases of tomatoes were canned at this plant, conveniently located on the water's edge at Picton harbor and close by the dock.

In 1922-23 Mr. Tripp had a car agency in Picton. In 1914 when the Gore Telephone Co. was organized he became president and has since held that office.

Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Thompson of Bethel, (cousins) who were celebrating the 38th anniversary of their wedding the same day. Other guests were Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Vincent and Marie of Rochester, Mr. and Mrs. Ross Robinson, Fish Lake, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Vincent, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Vincent, Mr. Finley Vincent, Mrs. Viola Reynolds, Miss Etha Reynolds, Mr. and Mrs. D. Reynolds, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Tripp and Clifford and Mrs. Sid Tripp, Point Petre, Mr. and Mrs. Hilton Wood and Bobby, Cherry Valley, Mrs. Annie Kellar, Picton, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Thompson and Mae of Bethel, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Tripp, Marie, Ruth, Joan, Orman and Nancy of Crofton, Mr. B. Babcock, Belleville.

THE RUNAWAY

INSTALLMEAT 17

"And I did get a job right away; I'd had some experience," Becky told Mrs. Devvins. "I can always get along. Last winter wasn't so bad. But then I began to get so tired—summer tired me horribly, and the woman I was boarding with didn't want the responsibility for Gibbs; he got too active. So I came here and things"—her voice thickened—"things haven't gone so well," she added in a low tone. "Or at least," Becky went on with a desperate flicker of her old gallantry, "things were all right until I got this last cold, and then he got it. Do you think we ought to have a doctor, Mrs. Devvins?"

"Well, it's two dollars. And all he could say is to keep him quiet. That's all he said about our Johnny. I had him once on the Monday and then the day before he died."

Becky felt a chill run down her backbone like the tip of an icy finger.

"Ain't the store open tonight?" the other woman asked after a silence.

"They want me back tonight," Becky said. "But I can't leave him! My God, I don't know what to do!"

"He'd be well took care of in the hospital," said the visitor.

"I haven't the money!" Becky whispered, no eyes except for Gibbs.

"They'd take him free at the Lincoln."

"In a ward," Becky said, and shuddered. "No, I couldn't do that.

Mae Devvins stood for a minute, watching. She had three children of her own belowstairs: Pete, Loretta, a baby Gibb's age called Buddy. Gibbs and Buddy had played for many hours together in her odorous kitchen. Becky paid her three dollars a week for the six-day accommodation, and knew ttha Gibbs would have the same affectionateif insanitary and slipshod care that the small Devvinses had. But now for three nightmare days Gibbs had been alone upstairs, tended only when Mae could steal a few minutes to run up to him, give him a drink, straighten his bedcovers.

"They wouldn't let me see him in the hospital!" Becky said.

"Haven't you any religion at all, don't you ever pray?" the other woman presently asked unexpectedly.

"No, never. Prayer," Becky said, now looking over her shoulder as she opened a can of soup at the sink, "didn't save your oldest little boy."

"No." Mae was perhaps nonplussed for moment. But presently she said bravely. "But I've sometimes thought God's hand was in that, too, that Johnny should go before he ever knew what sin or sorrow was. My brother Johnny lived to be a terrible heartscald to my mother and all of us. If he hadn't died of the pneumonia Johnny might have gone to Sing Sing. Well, they won't ever get my little Johnny there!"

"I wouldn't pray now if I'd been praying all my life," Becky said, "I wouldn't want them —whoever's up there—to decide that my innocent beautiful baby would be better off—safer—somewhere else! She once more went to lay her hand on Gibb's forehead. "He's not sleeping, really," she whispered; "he's just heavy with the fever.

"Just the same, if you went down on your knees and said the 'Our Father,'" Mae Devvins persisted mildly, "you'd get up from your knees feeling better, whatever happened. And if you said it every hour or every ten minutes from now until ten o'clock, you'd sleep and maybe he would too. And maybe he'd be better in the morning. It isn't the things that happen to us, it's the things we think are going to happen to us that drive us almost crazy," she finished simply.

Becky, pouring milk from a bottle into a small saucepan, looked at her sharply, struck by the simple philosophy.

"Anything that could keep me from—from tearing my heart out about him tonight," she said, "anything that could keep him with me would seem to me a miracle tonight! I know he's going to get well—it's only a baby cold, and he's strong—he's always been strong! But I don't know the Lord's Prayer, not all the way through — I don't think I do—and I don't believe in miracles."

"There's miracles just the same," Mae Devvins persisted without heat. "If you was to say maybe one prayer you'd change your ideas, and you'd let me run over to the drug store and telephone Lincoln Hospital. It's pneumonia, that's what he's got."

"Charity." Becky whispered. "I don't mind for me, I don't mind anything for me. But it doesn't seem fair to him. What's he ever done that he should be a charity patient?"

"Well...." Mrs. Devvins said, departing Becky made a quick step to arrest her with an outstretched hand. "I do thank you!" she said. "No money would ever pay you for what you're doing. If I go back to the store in a few minutes will you run up and see him now and then?"

"Oh, sure. I'll lay down on your bed in there, when I've cleaned up after supper, Mae said.

"And will you—seriously, I mean this—will you pray for him?" Becky asked, a shamed little flush rising to her tired, colorless face "I don't know how."

"You don't have to know how; it's just ask and receive," Mae told her going on her way.

Becky drank her bowl of hot creamy soup, ate two slices of buttered toast, found a chocolate bar. Then she tried to tempt Gibbs with the iced orange juice again, sponged the hot little face. And then quite suddenly on her knees beside the couch. She groped tearfully for the first real prayer of her life.

"Our Father who art in heaven ....forgive us our trespasses....If you really are anywhere, help me to find out—oh, God, help me to find You! Forever and ever amen. Our Father who art in heaven...." She knelt for a long time, incoherently repeating the jumbled words and phrases.

On her feet again, she reached for her coat, ran downstairs and into the ice-cluttered, feebly lighted street. The drugstore was warm and pleasantly scented. Becky turned the pages of a telephone book. Instantly she was being answered by a pleasant female voice.

"We'll send right away. We'll send the ambulance, but if the doctor thinks it is a home case they'll leave him there. In about twenty minutes I should think. There'll be no charge."

Running back to Gibb's bedside, Becky felt a strange lightening at her heart. While she waited she knelt down again by the bed, prayed again.

"Oh, God, please make what I am doing now the right thing. Oh, God, help me to find You and give me back my little boy. Oh, Gibbsy—Gibbsy—do you know me, my darling? This is mummy. Mummy's taking care of you. Oh, God, make him well and get us out of here ....get us home to mother ...."

The thrilling clang of the ambulance and the intrusion of a white-clad intern and two stretcher-bearers so enthralled the entire tenement that Becky and Gibbs found themselves with an escort when they went down to the street. It was only hopelessly that she asked if she might ride with the child.

"Jump in," the intern said after a glance at the tawny-headed woman with the gold eyes burned deep into a white face. Becky went along, saw Gibbs carried away from her in a group of strangely interested white-clad folk of both sexes, sat in a brightly lighted, drug-scented receiving room talking to a handsome woman on whose desk a metal triangle announced, "Margaret Cole, R.N., On Duty."

Margaret Cole took data: Father Gavin Flood 36, Mother Rebecca Gibson 24, separated, using her maiden name. Spencer Gibson Flood, born in Sal'etts, Calif., in February almost three years ago. Dates. Weights. Ages.

"Would you find out if he's — pretty sick? If they think...."

"I'll have Doctor Dinsmore come down," Miss Cole telephoned. "She's worried," Becky heard her say.

Dr. Dinsmore did not come down. But a nurse did, told Becky to telephone in about an hour and she would have a full report.

It was a quarter to eight. Becky should have been at Rheingolder's at seven. But there was a shift that went off for dinner at seven and came back at eight; by walking fast she could get there and slip in with that group. If she were found out she would be found out, that was all, and probably discharged. Or, since Christmas was close, she might be only fined; girls at Rheingolder's were fined for absence without leave, seventy-five cents an hour or for any fraction of an hour, although they were paid only three times that for the nine-hour day. Some of the smartest girls, however, Becky among them, almost doubled their salaries by selling "plugs" and handling difficult customers by breaking in at the hopeless moment on the sales of other girls with suggestions, flattery, good salesmanship. When she did this the second girl got two per cent of the sale and the original saleswoman nothing. But no supersaleswoman could break in on a sale unless sent to do so by the floorwalker, so the girls felt no personal resentment of the system, against the "takers", as they were called, and saved their biting criticism for the system.

Tonight Becky reached the bedlam that was the immense department store a few minutes before eight, and, because Miss Tinney's eyes were upon her, boldly advancing to the time clock and punching against number 544 the eight o'clock slip that should have fallen at seven o'clock. They might discover it and they might not.

She slipped into her own department; little girl's dresses. It was buzzing with women pulling the cheap little frocks in every direction. Becky lost her sales book, discovered it, lost it again. Her pencil broke. She prayed for Gibbs, prayed that she would not lose her job, found herself absorbed in this new secret business of prayer. Her thoughts came back with a jerk to Gibbs again, but she had the moment's lightening of spirit.

"Pray without ceasing." Where had she heard that? You could hardly pray without ceasing. Or could you? "Oh, God, help me to find you."

At half-past ten, aching in every limb, Becky went downstairs again and telephoned the hospital. She waited, waited. The report came. The little Gibson boy was asleep he seemed more comfortable. He hadn't cried at all; he'd been just a little angel.

"Oh, God bless them, he's warm and safe and at least they're watching him!" Becky said, tears running down her face as she walked bareheaded under the cold stars on her way home. It was a long way, through dirty streets with snow piled high against the curbs.

"God bless them!" That was a prayer too. Her heart was strangely light and comforted. When she got to the tenement she went into Mae Devvins rooms and reported. Mae was touchingly, generously pleased that Gibbs had been taken to the hospital. She asked Becky what had decided her so suddenly to change her mind.

"I don't know," Becky answered, ashamed to make the flat statement. "I guess I found God."

Had she found God? She did not know. She only knew that when despair and doubt and fear touched her she could banish them by plunging blindly into prayer—any sort of prayer. And strangely, strangely, the eternal magic worked, and she was comforted, comforted even when Gibbs was still very ill.

"YOUR HUSBAND HAS PNEUMONIA"

By McKEOWN'S DRUG STORE

These are terrifying words when pronounced by your family doctor. For pneumonia is no light matter—it takes a fatal toll every year. The slightest infection of cold should be treated instantly as a serious threat against health, against life itself.

Skilled medical care has saved many a life, will continue to save lives where people are wise enough to call the doctor in time. Many a physician has shaken his head over a patient whom he could have saved, if called earlier.

Certain forms of pneumonia respond to serums, other phases require different remedies . . . in either event trust prescriptions only to a pharmacist in whom the public has confidence.

'QUIET NIGHT' ON WEST FRONT

Paris, Nov. 14—(AP)—News of activity on the western front was summed up by the War Ministry today in a two-word communique "quiet night."

Paris, meanwhile, remained quiet following air raid alarms yesterday on the approach of German scouting planes, which were driven off by anti-aircraft fire. Three persons, one of whom was a three-year-old boy, were injured by falling shell fragments.

Premier Daladier, accompanied by Air Minister Guy Lachambre and General Joseph Vuillemin, chief of staff of the air forces, was reported to have made a tour of air bases during which decorations were awarded to a number of fliers.

The squadron which last Thursday shot down nine German planes, though the French machines were outnumbered 27 to 9, was among the units visited.

French Planes Over Lorraine.

The Reich air arm yesterday sent other reconnaissance expeditions over the French lines in Lorraine. They were immediately framed in white shell bursts from anti-aircraft batteries and beat a hurried retreat over Belgian soil. In view of the extremely foggy day, it was not believed they succeeded in making any important observations.

The German air activity reflected anxiousness to examine movements on railways radiating from Paris.

Minor clashes between patrols occurred during the night near the Sarre and Blies Rivers.

Quite Accommodating

Columbus, O., Nov. 14—(AP) — Dusky Georgie Pace, new bantamweight boxing king, aims to please.

Last night he knocked out Bobby Docherty, of Toronto, in one minute and 34 seconds.

But Colonel Alfred Ballin, chairman of the City Boxing Commission, suggested to Tom Stanley, Pace's manager, that the fight be resumed to give the customers "a run for their money."

"It ended too quickly," he added.

"Certainly," said Stanley, a crowd pleaser, too.

Docherty was willing and the fight renewed where it had left off in the first round. The Canadian weathered that period, but Pace nailed him flush on the chin after 344 seconds of the second round.

Docherty took the count again and everyone decided that he had had enough and they had had enough.

Pace, a Clevelander, weighed 121 and Docherty 124.

Point Anne

Point Anne — An impressive service was held at the cenotaph in Cannifton on Saturday, Nov. 11. The service opened with the hymn "O God, Our Help in Ages Past." Two minutes silence was then held in memory of the glorious dead and the Last Post was sounded by Lyle Armstrong on his trumpet. After a brief pause he then sounded the Reveille.

Rev. A. Armstrong read the roll call of those who served in the Great War and a wreath was placed on behalf of the Township of Thurlow on the cenotaph by Mrs. Horne. Prayers were read by Rev. C. P. Heaven, rector of Trinity Church, Shannonville, followed by the Scripture read by Rev. Armstrong of the United Church, Cannifton. A brief but inspiring address was then given by Rev. C. P. Heaven, a hymn, "O Valiant Hearts" was then sung followed by the National Anthem. A fine choir in black and white robes was in evidence, composed of members of the choirs of United Church, Cannifton, Herchimer Mission and St. John's Church, Point Anne. At the close of the service the benediction was pronounced by Rev. A. Armstrong.

'WE ALL HAVE A PART TO PLAY'

Her Majesty the Queen who made so powerful an appeal to Canadians and Americans last spring on the tour of the North American continent by Their Majesties and who was heard several times in broadcasts during the Canadian tour, went on the air on Saturday to "do her bit" for the Empire in thanking the women of the Empire.

The Queen contrasted the peace she found in Canada with the "sadly different" circumstances of the present days of war.

The intense sympathy which Her Majesty has demonstrated in war work showed in her address in which she depicted the sacrifices the women have to undergo such as separation from their children as the King and Queen have been separated from the British Princesses. There are great duties which are being cheerfully done at the home front, the opening of the door to strangers who are evacues from cities, for it is particularly for the home that the Britisher is fighting. True he has an island home for the homeland of his race but his interest is in his home and the homes of other Britishers everywhere.

Her Majesty looked forward to a day of a better order in which peace and good will shall abide.

The Queen's voice cheers the Empire of women and men as the King's service helps the people to maintain their spirit. These two sovereigns who give religion a very large part in their lives and are models for the nation and the world in that regard, know the importance of such values as the home and the church.

"We all have a part to play," she said and the British women show they realize and mean the very spirit of the Queen's words. They are playing their part as they have always done in history.

The women appreciate the kindly sympathetic voice and words of Her Majesty. They know that fortitude is the mark of every woman whether she be queen or noble or in the ranks of the people.

THESE ARE NO MINCING WORDS

Right Honorable Winston Churchill indulged in a fine command of English on Sunday evening in his broadcast to the Empire and the Allied world. He used that powerful English which he as a war correspondent of years ago knew how to use to fine effect and which he has used in public addresses. He called the Nazis the old familiar name of "Huns" so generally used in the Great War period. To him Hitler and von Ribbentrop are "contortionists".

One of his finest shafts at the German Government was levelled at Nazi No. 2 General Goering, who had said he spared massed air attacks on Britain because of his humanity. Here were the cutting words. "Their humanity forbids them to apply severities to the strong. That may be true but when we remember the bestial atrocities they have committed in Poland we do not feel that we ask for any favors to be shown us."

Churchill spoke of the envious eyes of the Nazis. "So now these boastful and bullying Nazis are looking with hungry eyes for some small countries in the West which they can trample down and loot as they have trampled down and looted Austria, Czecho-Slovakia and Poland. Now they turn their fierce but rather prudent glare upon the ancient, civilized and unoffending Dutch and Belgian nations. They have not chosen to molest the British fleet which has awaited their attack in the Firth of Forth during the last week.

"They recoil from the steel front of the French Army along the Maginot Line, but their docile conscripts are being crowded in vast numbers upon the frontiers of Holland and Belgium.

"To both of these states the Nazis have given most recent and solemn guarantees. No wonder anxiety is great. No one believes one word Hitler and the Nazi party say, and therefore we must regard the situation as grave.

"I will not attempt to prophesy whether the frenzy of the cornered maniac will drive Hitler into the worst of all his crimes, but this I will say without doubt, that the fate of Holland and Belgium, like that of Poland, Czecho-Slovakia and Austria, will be decided by the victory of the British Empire and the French Republic.

"The whole world is against Hitler and Hitlerism. Men of every race and clime feel that this monstrous apparition stands between them and the forward move which is their due and for which they strive.

"Even in Germany itself there are millions who stand aloof from the seething mass of criminality and corruption constituted by the Nazi party machine. Let them take courage amid the perplexities and perils, for it may well be that the final extinction of baleful domination will pave the way to a broader solidarity of all men in all lands than we could ever have planned if we had not marched together through fire."

Good old Winston Churchill, the dynamic personality of four decades, is still himself with that perception of events, and the great gift of calling things by their true names, which has always been his.

INTEREST WANES

The explosion of a bomb in the Munich beer cellar which Adolf Hitler had left a few minutes before, has largely dropped out of the interest of the world outside Germany. Tragic as it was for the seven who lost their lives and for the wounded, the occurrence has attracted less interest than might be expected. The Nazis of course did not and will not allow it to pass out of sight and Hitler himself attended the funeral of the victims. To the Germans Rudolf Hess spoke on Saturday and was cautious enough not to define who the plotters were, his reference being vague to suit Nazi plans. But the Nazi effort to place the plot, while it may tell hard upon many within Germany, is a typical Teutonic hunt.

There was something so strange about this plot, coming at the time when it did, that the world requires to be shown something definite and proven before it will be aroused. A body of opinion sees the plotting as within Germany, even the Nazis and the Gestapo being mentioned. There is the suggestion of the activity of a Hitler opposition.

How the occurrence is being used to work on the people of Germany is not known. There was the breaking of a window Friday in which was a large photograph of the German Chancellor. This might indicate enmity to Hitler and the Nazis' regime.

The Gestapo are looking for a mysterious laborer, who, according to Nazi discoveries, had been seen about the beer cellar building for some months and everyone who saw him has been urged to communicate with the police.

WHAT IT MEANS NOW

Hitler accused the British and French of encirclement away back in the spring of this year when the anti-aggression pacts were made with Poland. Yet there was no encirclement in the meaning it bears today with the sea, land and air blocked to him, and his co-operator Russia growing fat on his efforts, making rich by acquisition in Poland, and in increase of influence in the Baltic and aspiring in the Balkans. In those days of last spring Hitler had an ally. Now Germany stands alone, except for Russia, who is really a problem to Germany right now. In those days Hitler could trade with the world, now he is shut in on all sides and can hope only for a little contraband to seep through the strong British blockade or for some material aid to come from his neighbors, who want to be paid for it. While there is trade a nation can be prosperous but when trade is cut off, there is decline and collapse.

PARACHUTING

Possibility of a Nazi parachute invasion of Britain or France has been suggested. If it were possible to land a few fliers in this way in parts of the country far from cities, how would these fliers be effective? Britain is so well under supervision that such enemies once in the country could not get out and they would be detected. How they could move about and do damage is difficult to see.

It has not been proven that German planes could fly over Britain or France and land men by parachute. The Nazi record has not been very effective so far on the coasts of England and Scotland for their planes have been detected quickly.

Some years ago a claim was published that Russia had so many planes and parachute jumpers that it was quite possible to land quite large bodies of men behind an enemy's line. It is believed Germany did land a few in Poland in this same way but there the condition was different from what it is in Britain or France.

In peace time it is easy enough to get into Britain, but in wartime she is that tight little island which is invulnerable, which shall never be under the proud foot of a conqueror, or of a German unit of parachute jumpers.

Good name, in man or woman, is the immediate jewel of their souls.—Who steals my purse steals trash; but he that filches from me my good name, robs me of that which not enriches him, and makes him poor, indeed.—Shakespeare.

Some men do as much begrudge others a good name, as they want one themselves; and perhaps that is the reason of it.—Penn.

Unexpected Riches

William J. Riley, an usher in the Roxy Theatre in New York, became a sufferer from severe pains in the side when he learned that a woman had died leaving him a fortune of half a million dollars. He consulted a specialist who told him that pains like that were sometimes felt by persons experiencing great sorrow or great joy.

Riley evidently was a victim of the joy sensation, for now, more than a year after he received the legacy, he tells an interesting story of how a person previously without means, enjoys life when in possession of money adequate to satisfy all his desires.

When Riley was an usher in the theatre, he took a special interest in a frail old lady who used to come to the theatre every day. Riley used to arrange for her to get in without standing too long in line. After the show she would discuss the picture. He thought she was poor and he did not think that he was any more courteous than any other usher. When the aged widow died in September 1938, it was revealed that she was Mrs. Edna Morss Allin Elliott, known as the "champion movie fan of New York," and that she had bequeathed $500,000 to Riley, "for his kindly and courteous acts" and for "making the recent years of my life more pleasant." She also left $53,000 to Rosalie Spatcher, a music hall dancer of Radio City.

Riley, forty years of age, has had a year of the life of a rich man. He is enjoying it. He has bought $125 suits, $36 shoes and $9 neckties. He has made four trips to the West Indies. He flew to South Bend, Ind., to see the football match between Notre Dame and Georgia Tech. No more seats behind the goal posts for him. Instead, he bought tickets for some pals and they sat on the 50-yard line.

Riley gets hundreds of begging letters and communications from energetic promoters who have schemes to multiply his wealth on a small investment. The heir, however, is displaying some native caution. He hasn't fallen, so far, for any of the get-rich-quick gags He has set up a $200,000 trust for himself, which is intended to be an enduring prop, if he should some day find that the rest of his weath had evaporated. That is a wise measure. Usually, those of limited means, who come into wealth had evaporated. That is a hardest task they ever tackled is to spend judiciously. It is almost always the case that they are the victims of spongers, of conscienceless promoters and of their own faulty conception of pleasure. It is to be hoped that Riley, who was kind and courteous to another human being of whom he never expected anything, will live long and pleasantly in the enjoyment of the comfort and security which a sanely administered fortune can command. — Woodstock Sentinel Review.

Game Multiplies in Wilds of Finland

An unexpected increase of wild life has taken place during the past year in Finnish Lapland and the eastern provinces of Finland. This development is taken for proof that things are going on across the border in Russia. Human activity there it is believed, is making existence disagreeable for animals and they are seeking happier hunting grounds to the west.

Hunters in Finland are baging bears in unusual numbers. During the past skiing season they brought down over eighty. All the furs have not yet been reported for labelling, so the figure must be a good deal higher. In ordinary seasons about fifty bears killed is the aevrage.

Rural Finns report that foxes are being seen more often nowadays than for many years past. These pests have, fortunately, given little trouble to reindeer herds in the North. On the other hand, foxes are blamed for a current scarcity of game birds—although experts think that the abundance of hares seems to relieve them of the guilt and place it on unaccountable natural forces.

Lynx are being shot down in surprisingly large numbers these days. In the district of Salla alone, at least twelve have been bagged so far this season.

Wolves continue to be heard howling nights up North and are every once in a while reported to have given farmers trouble, despite the bombing practise army aviators have indulged in at their expense.

Smaller game has also appreciably increased recently in Finnish woods.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Diet in Treatment of Buzzing Ears, Nausea and Vomiting

Most of cases of dizziness are due to some disturbance of the ear or the liver.

What is known as Meniere's disease or syndrome, has sudden attacks of dizziness as its outstanding symptom together with nausea and vomiting, "deafness and tinnitus (singing in the ear) may occur just before or just after the attack of dizziness, nausea and vomiting. The attacks are so suddenly severe that patients are 'struck down' and walking without aid is usually impossible". It is this "suddenness" and being struck down and unable to walk without help that is the real difference between Meniere's disease and the ordinary feeling of lightheadedness and dizziness.

The treatment of Meniere's disease in the Department of Internal Medicine, Lahey Clinic, Boston, reported in Medical Clinics of North America may be either medical or surgical.

"The medical management giving most promise consists of use of a diet low in sodium—apples, asparagus, cabbage, Brussels sprouts, lettuce, grapes, lemons, oranges, sugar, jelly, honey; unsalted butter and bread, the avoidance of table salt and the administration of ammonium chloride."

The foods that contain a large amount of sodium and therefore should be avoided are: ordinary bread, salted butter, crackers, eggs, meat, milk, spinach, carrots, beets, oatmeal, and all corned, pickled, smoked or salted foods.

If the above treatment does not give relief, the patient is referred to the surgeon who cuts nerve fibres supplying certain parts of the ear.

Eighteen patients were placed on the medical treatment above outlined (8 men and 11 women). The symptoms had been present from one month to twelve years. The attacks occurred from as few as one in six months and as often as three or four times in one week, and lasted just a few minutes in some cases and for as long as three or four days in others, the usual length of time being a few hours.

Thirteen of the patients had symptoms in both ears—buzzing, roaring and deafness."

Despite the fact that these were outpatients and could not be under complete control, 12 of the 18 patients obtained complete relief from the acute attacks, although 2 still had annoying ear noises.

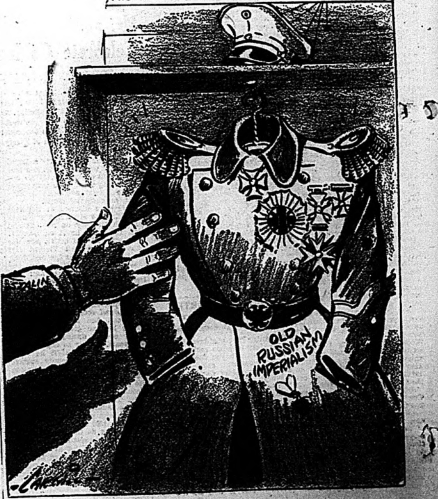
Eating less of the foods rich in sodium (salt) helps these cases of Meniere's disease, as it appear to do also in sinus disturbances.

ATTEND ARMISTICE SERVICE IN OTTAWA

Thousands of persons assembled on Parliament Hill in Ottawa on Armistice Day to honor the men who fell in the great war and pray for the men who will soon take up the torch once again. Premier Mackenzie King, Lord and Lady Tweedsmuir are shown here during the two minutes' silence.

Issuing an appeal to the women of the Empire to "keep the home front stable and strong," Queen Elizabeth is shown seated before the microphone in Buckingham Palace as she made a Remembrance Day broadcast.

HIS WINTER OVERCOAT



Remembrance Day Ceremonies Well Attended At Tweed

Tweed — The United Church was well filled on Sunday morning by a large throng of worshippers gathered in part, to participate in Remembrance Day ceremonies as a tribute to the soldiers who fought and died in the Great War. Rev. H. L. Morrison, B. A., was in charge of the services.

Following a short service of remembrance in Memorial Park at the Cenotaph the soldiers, led by Tweed Band paraded to the United Church for divine service.

In his address "Was 1914 in Vain?", the speaker said that none was more entitled to ask this question than those who fought in the last Great War. The war in which they were told it was a fight for democracy, having for its purpose the ending once and for all the futility of slaughter, and to uphold everything that was held high in the world.

"It seems now that everything said then was just reversed, that government of the people, by the people and for the people is to perish from the face of the earth and that all that seemed worth-while will be destroyed and lost. In such a condition one could be forgiven if one said that the worst peace is better than the best war.

"It is possible to be too pessimistic. How often it has been said that war is utterly futile, that it never settled anything." The speaker then cited instances of wars that have settled vexing problems. In 1759 when Canada was taken by the British, there was begun in North America a state where the highest and best of British ideals and traditions have since been predominant. In 1812 when the United States invaded Canada and was defeated it was proved that two different democracies, the one monarchic, and the other republican, can live in harmony side by side.

So with the Great War. It is true it did not settle everything, but there were many great and permanent gains as history will show. It created, in the first place, a universal recoil from war. All peoples of the world in all countries deeply recoil from war, not only in democratic countries but in totalitarian countries as well. This latter fact is evident by the reception recorded Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain by the German people on the occasion of his visit to Munich in 1938. Men have lost their allusions of the beauty, glory and wonders of war and realize its utter folly.

All great and mighty revolutions move slowly, and there must be no discouragement if long wished for changes seem painfully slow in coming. The great glacier of a mountain valley moves slowly, a foot a year, while the clouds and swallows move swiftly over it; but it has power to transform the face of the earth. So the glacier of thought in the minds of the mass of the common people will some day bring about a new world.

The war began a new international order. It is true the League of Nations is criticized for its failures. Most great things are accomplished only after many defeats. Bell and Edison performed a thousand experiments which failed. They were not discouraged. Edison said that he had learned a thousand ways in which a certain thing would not work.

The League of Nations has not failed. If men will only not be discouraged they will learn by these failures how the thing will not work and will consider other ways for bringing about a new order where nations will live in harmony.

We still have liberty, and freedom as we had then before the Great War. If we have not made progress, at least we have not lost ground. This is a notable achievement, when we realise that the German Kaiser and Chancellor Hitler swore to wipe them out as no more having a place among men. In this new struggle we begin as freemen the fight with our political institutions, freedom of the courts, of the press, and of speech as our glorious possessions. And we fight to bring about the day when these things will be the cherished possessions of all peoples."

The choir sang "Let Not Your Heart Be Troubled". Miss Enid Connor sang the solo in the anthem.

Tweed citizens joined with the Army and Navy Veterans in the observance of Remembrance Day on Sunday morning. Led by Tweed Band and under the command of Sgt. Major G. P. Bowby, the veterans paraded to the Cenotaph at Memorial Park where they conducted a service in memory of fallen comrades. As the service proceeded the sun's rays shone forth from out a sombre sky is if an augury of brighter days to come. Comrade Fred Mitchell raised the flag to the mast head as the notes of the Last Post, played by Bandsman Frank Tummon, were sounded. After two minutes silence in memory of the gallant dead, the ringing notes of Reveille rang out loudly and clearly.

Wreaths were placed on the Cenotaph by Comrades T. N. Beatty and Arthur Beach for the Province of Ontario and Tweed Branch of the Army and Navy Veterans as floral tributes to the memory of beloved comrades. A wreath was also placed by the Rath family in loving remembrance of Lieut. Harry Rath, D.P.C., missing.

Rev. H. L. Morrison, pastor of Tweed United Church, delivered a short address.

"We are gathered here today," said Mr. Morrison, "in a simple act of remembrance which is being observed round the world at this time. No words I could utter would do justice to the bravery, courage and endurance of those whose memory we recall today.

"You, who are veterans of the Great War, recall to mind the comrades beside whom you fought in those distant days. These memories come back to you with a poignancy of grief as you think of these companions "who poured out the sweet red wine of youth." You have given us a victory the fruits of which we still enjoy.

"We would not forget today those who carried the wounds of battle through the years. Through long years they have with wonderful courage borne their weaknesses and disappointments. They have shown no signs of discouragement. To them we pay our tribute of respect and gratitude.

"Now another conflict has arisen. We can but hope for those new troops engaged in this struggle a double portion of the spirit of those who fell, to enable them to carry on the traditions of fallen heroes."

Comrade M. G. Dales read the names of Tweed soldiers who had fallen in the Great War, and those who had died since that time. Following "Abide with Me" by the Band, the veterans paraded from the Park.

Miss Audrey Prust, Reg. N., of Orillia Hospital spent the week-end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. J. Prust.

Miss Enid Connor who has been attending the Robinson Business College in Waterford, has returned to her home in Tweed after completing her course.

Mr. John L. Newton who has been seriously ill for several months at his home in Hungerford Township is somewhat improved in health, his friends will be pleased to hear.

Mrs. J. H. Foster of Chapman's Corners was taken to Kingston General Hospital where she will undergo an operation.

Sgt. and Mrs. G. P. Bowlby and two children of Belleville spent the week end with the former's parents, Dr. and Mrs. P. T. Bowlby.

Miss Gladys Gordon, B. A., and Miss Peggy Moffat, of Varsity, Toronto, spent the week end with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Gordon.

Mr. Wm. Burgoyne, bandmaster, of Tweed Band, has found it necessary to resign from his position. This step was due to the fact that he is in training with the Argyll (Tank) Battalion of Belleville. His resignation was accepted with regret.

Mrs. W. H. Hicks has disposed of her farm to Mr. W. L. Ketcheson, local drover.

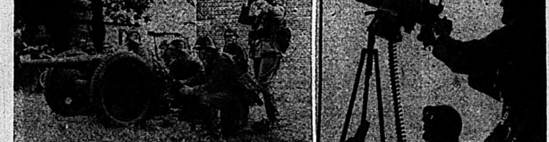
HOLLAND FULLY MOBILIZED AND DETERMINED TO MAINTAIN ITS NEUTRALITY



In a speech broadcast to the nation and its colonies, Premier Dirk J. De Geer, premier of Holland, declared that Holland's mobilization stands as a guarantee to all belligerents that her neutrality in the present conflict will be maintained. Referring to current rumors that Germany was threatening The Netherlands, the premier declared "The government has not the slightest reliable information at hand which could shake its belief in assurances received from both warring powers." Despite the assurances of Premier De Geer, the small, but well-equipped Dutch army is standing grimly ready to fight if the reported massing of German troops on the Dutch border leads to the invasion of the tiny country. A regiment is shown UPPER LEFT, on the march for an unknown destination recently. General Baron von Voorst Tot Voorst, commander-in-chief, is shown, UPPER RIGHT(LEFT, with an aide, as he toured part of Holland's flooded defence sector after the dykes had been opened in several places to make use of Holland's natural barrier to invasion. A gun crew of the Dutch army is shown in action, LOWER LEFT, while the machine-gun crew, LOWER RIGHT is typical of the men who man the borders of peaceful Holland.

Children's Book Week

In thousands of cities and towns throughout Canada and the United States the week of November 12-18 will be observed again as Children's Book Week. Begun in 1919 with the slogan "More books in the home" it has been observed annually. In troubled times such as these it is essential to keep alive children's honest sympathies for people of other lands and so the slogan "Books around the world" has been chosen for the twenty-first anniversary of Book Week.

Just as Canadian children have fairy tales from England, Germany, France and Denmark, children in Europe get many of their adventure stories from America and England. There is a splendid sense of interchange in the field of children's literature more than in any other field, with the exception of art and science. "Pinocchio", the story of an Italian puppet is read in North and South America, France, Spain and other European countries "Heidi" beloved of countless Canadian children gives many a real feeling for Switzerland.

Picture books in every land retain something of the local atmosphere and flavour. Stories for the teens tend everywhere to be truer to life than books for younger children, showing everyday struggles with first professional difficulties.

The display in the Boys' and Girls' Room at the Public Library this week tends to attract young readers to fine books from and about other lands. Parents, teachers and all who are interested in the fascinating field of children's literature are invited to visit the room this week.

Although there is endless pleasure in assembling an international collection, it must necessarily be limited due to lack of display space and so only a few of the outstanding books and countries are represented.

China is represented by two prize-winning books, "Mei Li" by Thomas Handforth, awarded the Caldecott Medals for the most distinguished picture book of 1938 and by "Young Fu of the Upper Yangtze" by Elizabeth Lewis, awarded the Newbery medal for the outstanding contribution to children's literature for the same year.

Norway is depicted by the artists Ingri and Edgar d'Aulaire in "Ola" the story of a boy who skiis his way to adventure and by Frederic Kummer in a stirring story of the Vikings "Leif Erikson the lucky". The loved classic of Swedish folk life, "The wonderful adventures of Nils" by Selma Lagerlof is also included.

France is represented by the artist, Jean de Brunhoff's playful elephant "Babar" and by that delightful introduction to the French scene in "The Land of Joan of Arc" by Lilian Bragdon

England, Ireland and Scotland are typified in "Mary Poppins" "Patsy and the Leprechauns" and "Wee Gillis".

Readers are attracted to Australia by Jock, a sheep dog in Charles Finger's "A dog at his heel" and by "Kokwa, a little Koala bear".

The United States is represented by another winner, "Thimble summer" by Elizabeth Enright, winner of the Newbery prize for 1939, and Canada is depicted in "Susannah of the Mounties" by Muriel Denison and "French Canada" by Hazel Boswell.

We cannot tell what a book will do for a child, even if his reading may not add greatly to his knowledge of facts, if it increases his interest, understanding and sympathy with boys and girls of other lands it will have opened for him wider horizons.—K. G.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Infant's Constipation Charged to Lack of Proper Care

One of the most common complaints of childhood is constipation. A great many superstitions and beliefs have grown around this ailment, and mothers are always writing to ask advice on how to cure it.

I would say that the great majority of children who are constipated arrive at that condition because their parents did not take sufficient care to see that they formed the correct habit of moving the bowels.

A normal baby should be taught from the age of one month, if not earlier, to move his bowels at certain periods in the day. In order to begin the habit, the mother should see that the child is held over a small chamber, two or three times a day. It is advisable that the times chosen are immediately after feeding times because at these times there is a natural tendency on the part of the body to move the bowels. The child should be held over the chamber for a period of about five minutes. Of course you can't expect a baby of a few months to take the hint every time, but it is surprising how quickly the normal child will learn what is expected of him and respond. You see, the grown man is nothing but a bundle of habits, good or bad. So the sooner you begin teaching a baby good habits, the more beneficial it will be.

Children who are fed on the breast are not as liable to constipation as are the children raised on the bottle. That is because the sugar in breast milk is more suitable to the child than anything we can devise. We find it pretty hard to offer a substitute.

Those children who are fed on the bottle often suffer from constipation because there isn't enough sugar in their food or because the sugar isn't the right type. There are several types of sugars used in making up the formula for bottle feeding and each type differs from the others in its power to make the bowels move.

Maltose is used but seldom, for instance, because it is the most laxative of the group. Only when a baby is continually constipated is maltose used. Corn syrup comes next and this is the best type of sugar for the average child. Dextri-maltose is rather constipating and is used properly only when a child has loose, watery stools.

By varying the type as well as the amounts of sugar, we can thus hope to achieve some change in the manner in which the bowels behave. In fact these are nearly always tried before you resort to the use of laxatives.

Unfortunately there are some babies who are consistently constipated even though we ring all the changes in the sugars. Then we must devise some other means of getting the bowels to do their work of elimination.

Laxatives may be used, but one must be very, very careful what type it is otherwise you may do a great deal of harm to your baby's delicate intestinal tract.

I always tell people that the Dionne Quintuplets have never had either of the more common laxatives —Epsom Salts or castor oil. This is not exactly true. A few years ago we had a nurse who was a bit old-fashioned in her methods. She decided the children needed a physic so she gave the castor oil. Next day I noticed that the children were upset and I inquired what they had been given. As soon as I was told, I gave orders that this was never to occur again except upon my or some other physician's advice.

What Form of Name on Your Christmas Cards?

"When should one use the title (Mrs., Mr., Miss) with one's name on Christmas cards?"

Before you order your Christmas cards, you should be clear about the correct answer to this important question. Let's figure out this answer together.

In general, Christmas cards are of two kinds: formal and informal.

A formal Christmas card, like a formal invitation or announcement is usually engraved, although it may be written; and the message is expressed in the third person. To be consistent with this formality, the formal name is used, that is, the name prefixed with the title, and as an invitation or announcement, the name is put above the message.

Here is an example of a correctly-worded formal Christmas card:

Mr. and Mrs. John Churchill wish you a Merry Christmas
and a Happy New Year

An informal Christmas card is one on which the message is engraved or printed or written above the name. The name added to this message becomes a signature, and a signature should not include the title before the name.

Take, for example, this often-seen form

Wishing you a Merry Christmas
and a Happy New Year
Mary and John Churchill

This form is similar to the complimentary close and signature of a letter, and as it is incorrect in the signature of a letter to include the title, so it is incorrect to use the title when we use this form of wording on a card. Really the meaning is, "We are Mary and John Churchill, wishing you a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year".

Take another often-seen form of greeting on a card: "With best wishes for a Merry Christmas". This too is an informally-worded message, and therefore would not take the title before the name. The name is a signature after the message, and a signature is one's informal name.

"Best wishes for a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year" should correctly be followed by "from Mary and John Churchill".

Even the simplest of all Christmas greetings, "Merry Christmas and Happy New Year", should not be followed by Mr. and Mrs. John Churchill . . . . but by Mary and John Churchill.

Most of the Christmas cards that most of us buy are definitely and obviously of the informal type. Therefore good taste suggests that, instead of adding a formal name to an informal message, we carry out the informality and add a signature, which is our name without the title. This signature may be engraved, below the message, or printed or written by hand.

When the cards are sent by husband and wife, and the names are engraved or printed, the wife's name comes first: Mary and John Churchill. And although it may well be maintained that it is more courteous for the one signing the cards to sign his or her own name last, it is the custom for the woman's name to be signed first.

In the past few years a charming form of signature has become very popular, the use of the "The Robinsons", meaning the whole family. The use of this delightful form is a happy solution to avoid using the form "and family", never in good taste on a card or envelope.

Today the tendency is to make our Christmas cards more informal, more personal. Instead of taking the trouble and expense of ordering formally-worded cards, we wisely and appropriately spend our effort on choosing cards in good taste, as beautiful as we can afford, and then sign our Christian names at the bottom of the message. Or below the "Merry Christmas" or whatever other message is already on the card, we write another message, friendly, gracious, heart-warming. And this is what Christmas cards should be . . . friendly, gracious, heart-warming messages from friend to friend.

Beauty on the Side

MARY BETH HUGHES . . . . .has an attractive profile.

By HELEN FOLLETT

Profiles, nearly all of them, will pass in a crowd; but few girls seem to approve of their own. A large nose is a special worry. It's no beauty bargain, naturally, but still not enough of a trial to cause grief and loud lamentations.

The afflicted ones should chuck the rouge pad out of the window. By coloring the cheeks the nose appears even larger and the attention of the beholder is claimed by the central portion of the feminine phiz. The thing to do is to accentuate the eyes by careful grooming touching the lashes with mascara, keeping the eyebrows in form, passing a light film of rouge over the eyelids.

If the mouth is smaller than normal, it is a good idea to extend the lines of the lips with the crimson pigment; then there is greater harmony of features. A powder slightly darker than the skin should be used. The lipstick should not be vivid.

The shape and size of the nose should determine the style of the coiffure to a certain extent. Slicking locks straight back, front and sides, makes the nose prominent. A soft, narrow bank and hair extended slightly at the sides will form a flattering frame, improve the profile.

Hats with tall crowns or high, sweeping feathers are out of order. New draped turbans with flat ornamentations are a help toward good appearance when the nose has developed beyond normal proportions.

Shoe clerks tell your beauty reporter that many elderly and middle-aged women still believe that a lady's foot should be small and dainty, so insist upon snugly-fitting shoes, while the members of the young fry are going to the other extreme, wearing shoes that are larger than they need.

The right idea is to have a comfortable fit with a casing that follows the contour of the human trotters. If there is too much space, the foot spreads, becomes shapeless. The wise woman will heed the suggestions of the salesman who is usually qualified to give authoritative advice.

Advice to the Lovelorn

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Choose Friends Carefully When in a New Environment

This may sound to you like the last word of warning from Great-aunt Jane, as you jam your final belongings into a suitcase and prepare to rush for the train to seek your fortune in Big City.

But some things are as true today as they were when Great-aunt Jane acquired her worldly wisdom. And among them is the axiom to make haste slowly when you're making friends in a new environment.

Doubtless it's one the same principle pursued by a collector of valuable objects that really worth-while possessions are difficult to collect and hardly ever cheap.

Let's suppose you've acquired a promising job in Big City. You have not any letters of introduction and you never believed such loneliness could exist. The come-easy, go-easy bunch you've run across somewhere are willing to receive you with open arms. True, they do seem a bit common and unlike the people you know back home. But you know how to take care of yourself, forgetting if you're seen round with them you're likely to be tagged with their hallmark.

So many letters have come to this column from girls who picked up acquaintances too easily, and then found these undesirables hanging on to them like leeches, when they could have made more interesting and helpful contacts.

Betty's tragi-comedy in case No. 1. She had some pretty splendiferous second cousins in the big town, where she had just secured a job. Her mother wrote them of Betty's coming, and Betty expected to be invited the next day or the day after at least. But the snooty relatives were away and didn't learn of the country cousin's arrival for some time. Meantime, Betty had identified herself with a gay bunch.

When finally she was bidden to dinner she had attended a cocktail affair in the afternoon and been the life of the party.

The cousins were no prudes, but they had their limits and the small town girl was outside the safety zone at the dinner party. She was not invited again. And before the year was over, Betty had dropped most of her too gay friends.

She writes me that pretending to be something she was not was her Waterloo. It wasn't natural for her to be sporty and pretend to be a high flyer in the interests of popularity. She would like mightily to know the cousins who know everyone and have a delightful home, but they never seem to have forgotten how the girl arrived after the cocktail party.

The case of Tessie is a real sorrow for her. Tessie was another small-town girl who went high, wide and handsome in the interests of popularity. The talk of her "steady" about companionship, the future, and how well they were suited, she understood to be the equivalent of a proposal. But when his interest lessened and she took him to task, he calmly announced his engagement to another girl, and said:

"I thought you were having a little fun the same as I was. I'm terribly sorry if you misunderstood That was a sporty bunch we played with. I didn't think any of them were the marrying kind."

The Stars Say

For Wednesday, November 15
By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

A FAIRLY active and progressive day is presaged by the prevailing astral influences, although social, intellectual or sentimental affiliations may claim paramount attention. Application and industry may attract recognition and support in authority. Make changes and launch new projects with precaution. In romantic or sentimental activities there may be opposition or lack of support from elders.

Those whose birthday it is may expect a fairly progressive and interesting year, with social, romantic or cultural engagements claiming the attention. In this there may be disapproval of elders, but in business and other matters the support and encouragement of superiors, employers or those in authority are assured. Be prudent in making changes or undertaking journeys.

A child born on this day may be versatile, clever, original and ingenious with many cultural, artistic and social talents. It should enjoy a successful and happy life.

Fashion Flashes

IT'S A QUESTION of the narrow skirt or the wide one for evenings, so that some frocks use both. For instance a sheath of pink satin has a stiffened overskirt of tulle and crin embroidered in clusters of pink sequins. The molded bodice is in the tulle.

Rest comfortably after slipping into a negligee or lounging suit. A pretty outfit is in midnight blue satin fashioned into a slim bodice and wide, harem-type pajamas. The waist is marked by a wide, curved belt of red suede studded with silver and jewel tone stones.

It is easy for women who take larger sizes to choose smart clothes this year. A coat on slenderizing line is of taupe woollen with brown Persian lamb accent. The fur forms the collar and continues as a front panel, narrowing toward the waist.

The clubwoman will like an important-occasion hat of black felt, the curved brim rolled up on each side. From the back to the shoulder is a dramatic sweep of greenish black iridescent coq feathers.

Among the new fur-trimmed cloth coats is Paquin, black wool velours. The skirt is so full that it falls in godets despite alternate bands of silver fox. Huge shoulder epaulettes and cuffs are of thick bands of the fur.

Useful with many a frock is a belt of stretchable gift or silver metal links studded with various stones in gem colors.

GLITTER GOWN

By Alice Alden

For a price almost every woman is content to pay for a flattering gown, this model is unusually good. The fabrics, a caressing jersey bodice, and a gilt-embroidered sheer skirt, are pleasing together and permits no jewelry or lots of it. Unlike an all-jersey dress, this one does not cling to the hips and therefore, is a better choice for the figure which isn't perfect. The suggestion of sleeves is a help, too, if arms and shoulders aren't what they might be. It is an American interpretation of a Paris model.

Fish Here for Meals

By ALICE LYNN BARRY

CRABMEAT and salmon are foundations for some swell dishes, nice enough to serve the most epicurean palate.

Salmon Mousse is such a dish. It is made with one one-pound can of salmon, one-third cup cold water, two tablespoons gelatin, one cup mayonnaise, one-half chopped cucumber, teaspoon onion juice, two tablespoons chopped stuffed olives, two tablespoons lemon juice, teaspoon prepared horseradish, one-fourth teaspoon salt, dash of paprika and one cup whipping cream. Drain salmon. Soak gelatin in cold water for five minutes and then dissolve over hot water. Cool and add to mayonnaise. Remove skin from fish and flake. Combine flaked fish, cucumber, onion juice, olives, horseradish, lemon juice, salt, paprika and mayonnaise. Chill until mixture begins to thicken and pour into a fish mold which has been wiped with glycerine. Chill until firm and unmold on platter.

Crabmeat Metropolitan

Crabmeat Metropolitan is made with a can of crabmeat, three hard-boiled eggs, two alligator pears, four tablespoons mayonnaise, one head of lettuce. Cut crabmeat into small pieces and chop one egg and cut alligator pears in halves. Scoop flesh from the pears and mix with crabmeat and chopped egg; season with French dressing. Place the mixed crabmeat into the pears' half shells and cover with mayonnaise. Slice two remaining hard-boiled eggs and use as a garnish.

Canned tongue forms the basis for a good dish. Ingredients are one No. 1-2 flat can cooked tongue, one tablespoon butter, one teaspoon each minced onions and chopped capers, tablespoon vinegar, one-fourth teaspoon sugar, one-half tablespoon flour, one-half cup hot water, one-fourth teaspoon salt, one-eighth teaspoon pepper and tablespoon chili sauce. Remove tongue from can, cut in thin slices, and reserve its liquor. Melt butter in sauce pan; add onions, capers, vinegar and sugar, and let simmer for five minutes. Add water and cook until mixture thickens, stirring constantly; add chili sauce, salt, pepper and reserved liquor. Serve very hot over thinly sliced tongue. If desired tongue may be heated while sauce is being made. Serves three or four.

Top off your dinner with a handsome dessert and win applause from the family. Plum Souffle is made with one No. 2 1-2 can fresh plums, one and one-half tablespoons lemon juice, three eggs and one-half cup sugar. Drain plums; mash through sieve; add lemon juice. Separate eggs; beat whites until stiff; beat in sugar gradually, then fold in plum mixture until well mixed. Pour into medium-sized buttered baking dish or individual custard cups. Set in pan of hot water and bake in 375 degrees F. oven for 35 minutes until firm. Serve warm, garnished with cherry or whipped cream.

JAILED FOR LANGUAGE USED

Cornwall, Ont., Nov. 13—(CP)—Found guilty in court here this morning on a charge of using insulting language toward a relief official, Dominique Murphy, Cornwall Township, was sentenced to serve three hours in jail.

It was believed to be the shortest jail term ever imposed in a local court. Murphy was found guilty of using profane language toward Maxime Belanger, Cornwall Township relief investigator during the course of a recent investigation.

STIRLING W. I. HOLDS MEETING

Interesting papers given, regular routine of business given, matters discussed.

The November meeting of the local W. I. was held on the usual date in the Community Hall with a fair attendance. Mrs. T. Cranston presided and opened the meeting with the singing of the Ode and the Lord's prayer in unison. Mrs. P. Bronson, the secretary called the Roll answering with some home remedies. Mrs. Woodbeck, treasurer gave receipts of the banquet and Hallowe'en party which was a decided success. Letters of thanks were read by Mrs. Wescott and bills ordered paid on motion. Mrs. L. Dohnan and Mrs. G. Luery were appointed for the visiting committee for the month of November. The district president, Mrs. Ketcheson was invited for the next meeting. Mrs. Gordanier, convener of the program committee being absent Mrs. J. J. Wilson presided. Some community singing was led by Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. Wescott at the piano and was very much enjoyed by all. Some of the old favorites were sung. Aunt Dina's Quilting Party and Annie Laurie were sung. Mrs. G. Leury gave a very helpful paper on "Milk and its Uses." Mrs. N. Wescott gave a reading "One Pair of Pants". Mrs. J. J. Wilson then gave a solo "I Must have the Saviour with Me". Miss Gena Spry gave an excellent paper on "Health and its best Tonics", touching on the various ways of keeping up to the old proverbs of caring for the body to keep health good. Mrs. W. West gave a paper on the report of Belleville Area Convention of which she and Mrs. T. Cranston were delegates. She chiefly dealt with the address given by Dr. Stobie on "Cancer Prevention." This brought to a close a very beneficial meeting on the promotion of good health. The singing of the National Anthem closed the meeting.

Lunch was served in the usual social way.

BRIDGE STREET Y. P. U.

The weekly meeting of the Bridge Street Young People's Union was held Monday evening in the ladies' parlours with a splendid attendance.

The meeting opened with a lively sing-song led by the President, Perry Everett after which the meeting was in charge of the Fellowship group. The call to worship was read by Jean McCabe. After singing a hymn, "Unto the Hills Around," the Scripture lesson, 2nd Timothy 1: 6-14, was read by Wilma Clark. Jean Spring offered prayer and gave a very helpful religious reading. The theme for meditation was crusading for Christ and was taken by the group leader, Myrtle Reid.

A part of the meeting was then given over to the receiving of membership cards and having them signed.

After the closing hymn, "O Master Let Me Walk with Thee," all repeated the Mizpah benediction.

DUMBELLS RETURN TO ENTERTAIN BOYS IN KHAKI

"Beer Barrel Polka" Gets First Place in Affections of Soldiers

RE DNEWMAN POPULAR

Ottawa, Nov. 14—(CP)—A slow, sentimental ballad and a rollicking bit of swing from Manhattan's tin-pan alley are catching on with the Canadian troops as the favorite songs of the new war.

The tunes of the first Great War—the British Tommy's "Tipperary," and the French Poilu's "Madelon," are not forgotten but the young men of the new Canadian army concentrated here, say the songs they like best are the currently popular "South of the Border," and the boisterous "Beer Barrel Polka." And they showed it at the Canadian Legion here when the Dumbells returned to entertain the boys in khaki once again.

The Royal Canadian Mounted Police Band struck up a standard band selection and then the cry went up: "We want the Beer Barrel." When the band beat it out the young lads who are heading for France really rolled out the barrel and got the blues on the run.

But a young lad from the Royal Canadian Artillery received the biggest hand of the night when he sang the song about the sweetheart he left behind in Mexico.

Accompanied by a lone piano, he touched the melody about south of the border, down Mexico way and when he finished the Coliseum at Lansdowne Park Military Camp echoed to the applause. When the show broke up even the Cameron Highlanders whistled it softly.

The show was the first of a series which the Canadian Legion will sponsor for the troops in Canada and abroad [illegible] brought back the Dumbells, [illegible] their war-time skits and [illegible], to entertain 3,000 veterans and members of the Canadian Active Service Force.

Rounded up for the one night stand, the Dumbells recaptured the spirit of the type that carried them to fame in the first Great War. Red Newman donned his tattered tunic and sauntered about the stage singing his "It's a Lovely War;" "Marjorie," impersonated by Ross Hamilton sang "her" songs and flirted with the boys in the first row.

43 PERSONS KILLED GERMAN TRAINS COLLIDE

Oppeln, Germany, Nov. 13 (AP)—Forty-three persons were known today to have been killed and 60 injured in a collision between two passenger trains last night between Langlieben and Rosengrund.

The trains were crowded with Sunday traffic. The accident was believed to have been caused by the negligence of a switchman who ran the two trains onto the same track.

HEPBURN REJECTS HONOR OFFERED HIM OF NAME OF STATION

London, Ont., Nov. 13—(CP)—Premier Hepburn has rejected the honor the London railway commission would have conferred upon him by naming the new station at the Royal Air Force training school near St. Thomas, "Hepburn." According to word received by the commission the Premier prefers that his name not be used for what the railway now terms "stop 18".

NO DATE SET FOR INQUEST

Elmvale Will be Scene of Inquest When Same is Held

Toronto, Nov. 14—(CP) No date has been set by Attorney-General Conant for the inquest into the deaths of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Bell, drowned at Wasaga Beach some time ago. Mrs. Bell was Miss Gertrude Small, sister of A. J. Small, missing theatrical magnate.

According to officials, the inquest will be held at Elmvale, after completion of investigations being conducted on behalf of Miss Florence Small, sister of deceased. This is not likely to be for two weeks, Patrick Sullivan, adviser to the Small sisters, said today.

Private investigators have been at work on the case, according to Mr. Sullivan. These investigations have been conducted in the Midland and Wasaga Beach districts with a view to establishing some definite trace of the life of Miss Gertrude Small during the time she lived in Midland.

Inspector E. D. L. Hammond, C. I. D., Provincial Police, is still pursuing investigations and has intimated the inquiries are not conclusive that the double fatality was one of drowning by accident.

SCOUTING TROOPS REPORTED ACTIVE

German High Command States Assaults on Strategic Spots Repulsed

Berlin, Nov. 13—(AP)—Authorized sources said today the British and French replies to the Belgian-Netherlands offer to mediate in the war were, in the German view, in line with recent public utterances in London and Paris and had caused no surprise here. The German News Agency said political circles "declare these notes differ neither in spirit nor content from the tone previously used by the British Government in the hope of provoking the German people."

The same circles, the agency said, further claim that "destruction of Germany is Britain's war aim" and that the mediation offer "has been sabotaged deliberately."

On the war front, an increase in activity was noted as the German high command claimed "strong enemy scouting troops" had been repulsed in fresh assaults on strategic hill tops southwest of Pirmasens and that 25 of the attackers had been captured.

A communique said:

"Renewed attempts by strong enemy scouting troops to gain a foothold on heights on both sides of Liederschiedt, 11 kilometres (6.8 miles) southwest of Pirmasens were unsuccessful. One officer and twenty-four men were taken prisoner.

"There was somewhat more intensified artillery fire than previous days outside of Saarbrucken.

Mr. and Mrs. Dave Fox of Crofton and Mrs. Douglas Moxam and Lillian, Rossmore, attended the funeral of the late Mrs. Edmund Sandford on Wednesday.

Late MRS. EDMUND SANDFORD

A pioneer resident of this township passed away after a lingering illness of four months on Monday in the person of Mrs. Edmund Sandford.

The late Mrs. Sandford (nee Lavina Ann Thomas), was born in Madoc township eighty-one years ago and was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert Thomas. She was united in marriage to Mr. Edmund Sandford fifty-six years ago.

She has been a life-long member of Fox's Methodist Church, later of Fox's United Church and possessed many traits of character that endeared her to everyone in her home and out of it. Going to beds of sickness when needed. Many can testify to her never tiring skill at beds of pain and distress. Their home was opened to five children to whom she was a loving foster mother. Two remained with them till maturity. A grandchild, Gordon Brownson was being cared for by her when she took sick.

The funeral service was held from her late residence on Wednesday to the United Church where the service was conducted by her pastor Rev. Geo. Crabbe, assisted by Rev. A. Redding of Bannockburn and was largely attended by friends of the deceased. Rev. Crabbe spoke from Psalm 90 and taking as his text "Teach us to number our days."

Surviving to mourn the loss of a loving wife and mother are her sorrowing husband, a daughter, (Lena) Mrs. Arthur Franks and a son Stanley. A daughter Eliza, Mrs. Allan Brownson predeceased her last March. She is also survived by two brothers, Robert of Picton and Sylvester of Wellington, three sisters, (Martha) Mrs. John Robinson of Dryden, Ont., Sarah, Mrs. Tom Ayrhart, of Consecon, Fanny, Mrs. John Conley of Wellington. Nine grandchildren also mourn the loss of a loving grandmother. The bearers were: Messrs. Wren, Oscar and Murney Parks, Ellwood Cronk, Kenneth Conley and John Thomas, nephews of the deceased.

The floral tributes bore mute testimony to the esteem in which she was held. Interment was made in the family plot in the Eldorado Cemetery.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Brooks Honored

Over one hundred Carmel friends gathered at the spacious home of Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Brooks on Thursday evening and tendered Pte. Harry Brooks and his bride a surprise party. His pastor Rev. W. J. Scott was master of ceremonies and a solo was given by Mr. Charles Smith, a reading by Mrs. H. Hubble and music by Mr. Ross Scott.

Miss Nina Carlisle read an address to the newlyweds and Mr. Bert Hagerman presented them with a cabinet of silver.

Dear Harry and Eileen,

The poet has said "In the spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love". So by the same reasoning and token by autumn these "light thoughts" of the spring time have had their time to take on substantiality, and to become not the passing fancy, but the love by which homes are made.

Your friends have gathered together on this occasion to felicitate you both on the achievement of this in your experience. We are happy in your happiness and we would convey to you very best wishes for your continued prosperity in all that makes life worthwhile.

Your presence in the community and your participation in all the life of the community both socially and within the Christian church has made its contribution to the happiness and welfare of us all. We could all desire that you might found your home right here where lifetime friendships surround you. But the compelling claims of duty with our country at war to which Harry has answered "Yes" require of you both a sacrifice in this connection which we know is readily made but which we trust and pray will be of a limited character.

May God bless you both and in His good time grant you the desire of your hearts according to His will. Will you please accept this gift as a symbol of our love for you now and a pledge of our continued interest in you in the days to come. Signed on behalf of your many friends in the Carmel community, Gladys Pyear, Bert Hagerman, Marion Carlisle, Gerald Pyear

Both Harry and Eileen graciously replied thanking their friends for the lovely gift. The Carmel friends then read a personal address to Harry as follows:—

Dear Harry,

We have gathered here tonight not only to wish you a happy married life but to pay tribute to you as one of our best boys who has answered the call to his country.

We hope you have the best of luck and we wish you God's blessing and a safe return. We ask you to accept this gift and as you wear it may it remind you of your friends at Carmel. Signed on behalf of the community and the young people.

Miss Gladys Pyear presented Harry with a wrist watch to which he suitably replied.

Mr. Bert Hagerman then read the following address to Harry on behalf of Glen Ross Hockey team,

Dear,—

We could not let this occasion pass without expressing in some small way our appreciation of your companionship in the line of sport. Many of us have been playing games with you since childhood and always found you taking your share in the pleasant pastimes and the rough going. You were with us to the finish and stood the test in defeat or victory. May you follow in the rule set by Henry Van Dyke when he said:

"Four things a man must learn to do
If he would make his record true
To think without confusion clearly
To love his fellow men sincerely
To act from honest motives pure-
ly
To trust in God and Heaven securely".

We congratulate you at this time and wish you all the happiness and prosperity attainable in your new life.

We ask you to accept this gift and as you use it may it remind you of your pleasant association with your fellow teammates.

Signed on behalf of the hockey team, Bert Hagerman, Gerald Pyear, Jack Armstrong, and Harry Brown.

Russell Pyear presented Harry with a pen and pencil set which he will always cherish as a memento of the happy days of sport.

All enjoyed a social time together and an appetizing lunch brought a happy evening to a close.

Mr. and Mrs. George Watson and family spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Sharp.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Todd visited Mr. and Mrs. Frank Spencer last Sunday.

Mr. Roy Booth, Marmora, spent the week end with Mr. Roy Sharp.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Barrager, Mr. and Mrs. Myron Bray, Rochester, N. Y., spent the week end with Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Brooks and attended the Brooks-Phillips nuptials.

Miss Dorina McGee, young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Reg. McGee, Wellmans, had the misfortune to dislocate her knee cap on Monday while playing at school. Dorina will have to rest the injured member for six weeks. A couple of years ago she hurt her knee in the same place. Her little friends hope she speedily recovers.

FOXBORO

Foxboro — Potted plants and cut flowers in profusion banked the altar of the Presbyterian Church on Sunday when a large assembly gatherpd for anniversary services. Two special addresses were well given by the guest speaker, Rev. Mr. Walker, of Stirling, at eleven and seven-thirty. Special music was furnished by the large choir which deserves much credit for its fine work. Music included an anthem and a solo by Mr. Evans, and in the evening a solo, an anthem and a duet by Mrs. Walker and Mrs. Eggleton of Stirling which was greatly enjoyed.

On Tuesday a Bazaar was given by the ladies of St. Andrew's church who are to be congratulated on the splendid efforts. The interior of the Sunday School room looked very attractive with its artistic decorations. Miss Spencer and Mrs. Townsend had charge of the fancy booth, Mrs. English, the candy booth, Mrs. Lake and Mrs. Hamilton the home cooking, Miss English the 5 and 10c table; Mrs. Ketcheson, Nellie Bell, Mrs. Finkle had charge of the tea table. In the evening a drama was put on by the young people which everybody seemed to enjoy. A nice sum was taken in.

WAR RELIEF

National Red Cross War Drive

For $3,000,000

HOW is this money to be spent? The charter of the Canadian Red Cross Society sets out the objects of this great cause as follows:

"In times of peace or war to carry on and assist in work for the improvement of health, the prevention of disease and the mitigation of suffering throughout the world."

Last year the sum of $1,000,000.00 was collected to finance the peace-time work of the Society. Today, because of the greater needs of war, three times that amount must be raised. Peacetime activities cannot be neglected and the programme of war relief must be initiated at once.

Consideration of the many aspects of Red Cross work in 1914-1918 gives some indication of the programme that will have to be undertaken in the present war.

HOSPITALS AND NURSES

Hospitals must be built and equipped in England and France to care for the Canadian sick and wounded. During the last war the Canadian Red Cross built and equipped (wholly or in part) hospitals at Taplow, Bushey Park, Ramsgate, Bexhill and Buxton in England; built and equipped one of the largest military hospitals in France; and established a depot in Boulogne for Canadian hospitals.

AMBULANCES

From 1914 to 1918 the Canadian Red Cross provided scores of ambulances to convey the sick and wounded in France and England.

MOTOR LORRIES

The Canadian Red Cross in France maintained a service of motor lorries to ensure the conveyance of Red Cross supplies with the greatest possible dispatch wherever needed.

SURGICAL SUPPLIES AND MEDICINES

X-Ray equipment, surgical apparatus, supplies and dressings must be purchased almost immediately. During the last war, 147,270 cases of supplies were sent to hospital units in England, in addition to supplies for hospitals in France. £2500 was contributed to equip a ward in the St. John Ambulance Brigade Hospital at Etaples in France.

FOOD AND COMFORTS

Again the Red Cross wishes to be able to send socks, cigarettes and other comforts to the front. During the last war, 341,325 cases of supplies were sent overseas. The Society sent sixty pounds of food per month to every Canadian prisoner of war, in addition to tobacco, medical supplies, clothing and books.

INFORMATION BUREAU

The Information Bureau set up at the London office rendered personal services to thousands of soldiers. Hospital visitors supplied Canadian patients with extra comforts and entertainments and reported their progress to relatives at home, and their needs to the Society. The Enquiry Department constantly searched for news of "missing" men to relieve the suspense of distant relatives.

A corps of voluntary workers will make a canvass of as many donors as possible during this drive. If one of these workers fails to get in touch with you, send in your contribution to your local Red Cross Branch. Give big-heartedly.

Belleville "Redmen" Hold Initial Hockey Practice With 13 Signed by Skipper Thomas

Local Pucksters Work-Out at Kingston Rink; All Last Year's Team on Hand

NEW FACES SEEN

Eddie Thomas' 1939-40 edition of the Belleville Redmen are far from a superstitious band of rubber-chasers, fact being clearly proven when Belleville senior hockey squad took to the ice at the Jock Harty Arena for the season's initial hockey practice after signing 13 players last night. Last year's team was complete with the exception of goalie Ab Hinton, who shared the net-minding business of the Redmen with Ken Watt, the regular goalkeeper. One new and complete forward line, including Herb Windsor and Les Yates, formerly with Prescott of the St. Lawrence League, was seen in action at Kingston and these boys showed great promise, Windsor being a fine centre-ice playmaker and Yates a speedy forward.

Although Skipper Thomas gave dressing room orders that only a light workout and skating were to be indulged in during this initial practice, the urge to test the blades and "turn it on" was too great for the younger players with the result a full 60 minutes of hard practice resulted without signs of weariness. The practice was called hastily to prepare the Redmen for the opening game of the Van Horne Memorial cup series between the Royal Canadian Artillery and the Belleville Redmen at Kingston tomorrow night.

Three Forward Lines

Three complete forward lines were given a strenuous workout by Skipper Ed Thomas, all three seeming to carry additional scoring punch, to say nothing of years of experience behind each trio. Guarding the twine was Ken Watt, veteran kicker-outer of pucks for Belleville and net-minder for the 1937 Belleville Intermediate O.H.A. champions, who seemingly has lost none of his accurateness between the gas pipes. In front of Watt was Harry McCreary and "Speedy" St. Louis, the sturdy pair who carried much of the Redmen's rear-guard work last season. McCreary has added a few pounds since the hockey curtain rang down last spring and reported in splendid condition to tip the beam at 183 pounds. St. Louis, who enjoyed his best year since joining the Redmen in 1937 last season, was seen skating just as fast as previous seasons while his years of experience will add further punch to the Redmen.

Jackson on Hand

The veteran Belleville front line of Clayt and Will Jackson, the hard-working Deseronto kids included Basil Robinson as the third member of the trio. Robinson fits in well with the methodical and clean style of hockey as played by the Jacksons and will no doubt assist to elevate the scoring punch of this line. Incidentally the Jackson brothers led the Redmen in scoring last season. A second line composed of Cy Barriage, Bill Storms and Prevost, the latter a product of Tweed hockey circles, who will line-up with the "Red Shirts", but it remained to have the new-comers of Herb Windsor, centre, flanked by Les Yates and Mark Storms, who is still eligible to play junior hockey in Belleville, send the Kingston railbirds home satisfied that the Redmen would be hard to beat once they attained condition. "Stewie" McElrath signed with the Redmen, but was unable to make the trip last night. Unless Skipper Thomas can unearth another rugged defenceman to team with McCreary and St. Louis he may have to drop McElrath back into a defence position and perhaps shake-up his forwards into two strong lines.

Reserves Strengthened

Other hockey players who have taken up residence in Belleville since the closing of last season are reported to be available, but last night's practice was called so abruptly that it was impossible to contact all the available material reported to be in the district, Manager Thomas stated this morning after intimating he was more than pleased with the showing of his Redmen last night. "It appears we have some strong reserve strength this year, something that has mitigated our efforts in years past. The hockey team that boasts of a strong reserve strength is the team to beat for the flag and I'm thoroughly convinced the Redmen will be much stronger this year than last," admitted Manager Thomas after stating he was quite pleased with the work of Windsor and Yates, who played for Prescott in years past.

Toronto Maple Leafs

Syl Apps

Just about the smoothest, swerviest, dipsy-doodliest player in the major puck circuit at the moment is Sylvanus Apps of Toronto Maple Leafs. He centres a line with Bob Davidson on left wing and Gordon Grillon on right, and when he isn't plunking home goals himself he's feeding his linemates passes. Once a track star of note (he represented Canada in the pole vault at the Berlin Olympics in 1936), Silvery Sylvanus is only in his fourth year of chasing major league pucks, and already he has accomplished many enviable feats. In his first year he won the Calder award for the best rookie of the year, and in both that season and the one following finished second in the league-scoring race. The Canadian Press poll, taken at the end of last season found him voted centre on the annual all-star team. Born in Paris, Ont., 23 years ago. Played amateur hockey with McMaster University and Hamilton Tigers. In a quiet way performed something unusual when he got himself nominated as Conservative candidate for the Federal Government seat in Brant, Ont. There's been no election for him to test his oratorical stick-handling ability to the full yet.

Barrow is Satisfied With Present Yankees

New York, Nov. 14—(AP) — Although he'd like to pick up a player or two just in case his Yankees might be a trifle weak here and there, President Ed Barrow of the world champions is pretty well satisfied to let baseball go along as it is.

Returning from a vacation on Tom Yawkey's South Carolina plantation, Barrow said he isn't interested in getting Hank Greenberg from Detroit, night baseball for the Yanks or other "fads" or in breaking up the Yankees.

"There's only one player in the American League in which we are interested, and I'm not so sure we'll even try to get him," Barrow remarked. "The way I see it, the Yankees can win another pennant without making a single change. After that we may have to bolster a bit here and there."

Toledo Wrestler Protests Previous Decision of Disqualification

Contending he was a victim of ring collusion, Rudy Epps the lithe Toledo heavyweight wrestler, personally challenged Dave Khoen, the scientific grappler from Detroit, to a return bout at the Hume Arena and following negotiations articles were today signed for this grudge bout to be featured at the Hume Arena on Friday night as the main bout.

In their last meeting Epps was disqualified for roughness and Khoen declared the winner. Epps protested vigorously at the time and threatened to take his case to the highest realm of wrestling officials and commissions if he was not given a return bout, and the official articles were today signed. Both men are veteran ringmasters and possess a world of knowledge of the art of modern wrestling.

As supporting bouts Young Griffins of Niagara Falls will meet Chuck Walzak, Buffalo, in the opening bout, while in the semi-final scrap Bill Tracey, who recently took up residence in Belleville after wrestling professionally in Texas and the Southwestern States for some years and who won his first bout in a Belleville ring last week will meet Jim Kruher, the able Vancouver wrestler in the semi-final bout.

Montreal Counting on British Empire Games

Montreal, Nov. 14 — (CP)—Despite the war, Montreal still is persevering with plans to hold the British Empire games here in 1942 Leon Trepanier, General Manager of the Montreal Ter-centenary Commission, told members of the Tercentenary Sports Committee at a meeting here last night.

While admitting that the games might not be held due to the war, Mr. Trepanier said that now was the time to prepare for them, just in case they are held. Montreal, he added, had "practically obtained" the games for conjunction with the city's tercentenary celebrations that year.

"The final move is to produce a sufficient financial guarantee at a meeting of the Canadian British Empire Games Association in Hamilton toward the end of the month," he said. "And I am in a position to say that Montreal is able to furnish that guarantee."

Tyndall Returns As Queens Coach

Canadian's Part in War Will be Kept Before People's Knowledge

Kingston, Nov. 14—(CP)—Frank Tyndall will return to Kingston as coach of Queen's University senior football team it was announced by the Queen's Athletic Board of Control today.

Tyndall, former Syracuse University and Toronto Argonaut star at Queen's this season, succeeding Ted Reeve, who went to Montreal lineman, took over coaching duties to coach the Big Four Royals. Members of the Athletic Board expressed themselves as highly pleased with Tyndall's work.

After losing their first two games Tyndall's players won the next three and wound up the season in second place behind University of Western Ontario's Mustangs, who clinched the intercollegiate title Saturday by defeating Queen's in a close struggle.

BOB-TAILED TWIN BILLS TABOO IN MINOR LEAGUES

Baseball Moguls Propose All Doubleheaders be of Nine Inning Nature

Durham, N.C., Nov. 14—(AP) — Bob-tailed doubleheaders would be eliminated under an amendment upon which the minor baseball leagues will vote at their convention in Cincinnati Dec. 4.

A list of proposed amendments was made public by William G. Bramham, President of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues, yesterday.

Under the doubleheader amendment, the first game of all twin bills and all so-called twilight doubleheaders would have to be nine innings.

Another proposed amendment would make it illegal for the home club to call off any game, because of the condition of the field, more than 15 minutes prior to game time, unless the visiting club should consent in writing.

TENNIS STAR BURIED

Montreal, Nov. 14—(CP)—Funeral services were held yesterday for Miss Minnie Hemans Hague, former Canadian women's tennis champion, who died here Thursday.

Miss Hague held the Quebec singles title for eight years between 1899 and 1914, during which time she gained the Canadian championship in a tournament at Niagara-on-the-Lake. A native of England, she came to Canada at an early age and was educated at Toronto.

Eddie Shore Returns to Bruins Line-up Tonight Following 2 Successive Boston Losses

If Boston Wins Over Black Hawks This Trip, Art Ross Is On the Spot

'WE WANT SHORE'

Injury to Crawford Prompts Shore's Return; Gets $200 for Each Appearance With Bruins

By JACK CALDER

Canadian Press Staff Writer

The fascinating case of Eddie Shore's retirement plans versus the notions of the Boston hockey public seems to be coming to a head rapidly. Something of the future of the affair may be indicated tonight when Shore lines up with the Bruins in Boston again, contrary to original plans, against Chicago Black Hawks.

Without Shore, the world champion Bruins have lost their first two games of the National League season. If they win with him, it's going to be hard for Manager Art Ross to let Eddie go back to his job of supervising the Springfield team in the International-American League.

When Shore bought the Springfield club this year, he reached an agreement whereby he would play no road games for Boston during the schedule and no home games before Dec. 15. He was to get $200 for each appearance with the Bruins.

Well, Shore will be in the line-up tonight when the world champions seek their first victory of the season.

Returns Voluntarily

He has come back—voluntarily, Ross says—because of an injury to defenceman Jack Crawford. Whether he can go away so voluntarily is another matter.

Shore was a holdout at the start of last season and when he failed to appear for the first home contest the fans shouted "we want Shore" until even the band in Boston Garden was drowned out. Shore soon came back. And on the April night the Bruins won the Stanley Cup, the customers cried "we want Shore" until old Eddie came from the dressing room to take bow after bow.

If Ross can find a way to make the people stop yelling "we want Shore," his problem will be solved.

Perhaps Crawford's elbow injury will keep him out until Dec. 15, when Shore would be back for home games anyway. But if the club goes into a dive on the road, the folks in the hub won't be silent in their belief that Ross ought to induce Eddie to get back in for all the games.

TURK BRODA

DIZ DESILETS

This pal of National league players may be on the griddle or in the hero's chair when the winter gets well under way, but for the moment teir looked upon with favor. Turk Broda, who guards the goal for Toronto Maple Leafs, has had just one goal scored on him in the three games the Leafs have played, turning in two shutout efforts over the Bruins and Rangers, and letting the only goal in during a 1-1 tie with the latter team. Desilets has been prominent in Chicago Black Hawk's games and featured their second win of the season, a 2-1 decision over Americans, by scoring both his team's goals.

QUEBEC TEAM THREATENS TO BOLT LEAGUE

Concordia Club Protests Status of Player Now With Verdun Maple Leafs

PLAYER BILL TRACEY

Q.A.H.A. Grant Tracey Transfer and Trouble is Brewing

Montreal, Nov. 14 (CP) — Faced with the prospect of one of its teams withdrawing from the league, the Quebec Senior Hockey League decided last night to ask the Quebec Amateur Hockey Association to reconsider granting Hugh Tracey his release from Montreal Concordias.

Tracey, who played for Concordias last season, was granted his release by the Q.A.H.A. last week, despite the protest of his former team, and signed with Verdun Maple Leafs of the same league.

Leafs and the Civics met in a league game Sunday and Concordia refused to dress more than six players until Verdun agreed to weep Tracey off the lineup for the game. Without Tracey, Leafs were beaten 5-4.

At last night's emergency Q.S.H.L. meeting Azarie Choquette, Concordia president, and Coach Sylvio Mantha declared the club would withdraw from the league if Verdun uses Tracey. After considerable discussion a motion was adopted that Tracey go back to the Civics.

Motion Is Placed.

The motion will be placed before the Q.A.H.A.

Dave Campbell, Verdun coach, said his club would abide by the ruling of the Q.A.H.A. Concordia officials said, however, they would not alter their stand if the Q.A.H.A. decides Tracey must play with Verdun.

A further complication is the fact that Tracey already has played one game for the Leafs, against Cornwall, and under Canadian Amateur Hockey Association regulations a player cannot play with two teams the same season.

A similar situation arose two years ago when Moe Croghan played one game with Montreal Royals, then was ruled the property of Quebec Aces. Rather than stay out of hockey Croghan turned professional.

SEAGULLS WIN

Midland, Ont., Nov. 14—(CP) — Atlantic City Seagulls of the Eastern United States Amateur Hockey League ended their training campaign here last night with an 11-2 victory over Collingwood's Ontario Hockey Association Intermediate "A" champions. Sammy Fasano led the winners with two goals and an assist, the scoring being spread all through the lineup.

FROM MITT TO MET.

Giving himself a vocal workout at the piano is Eyvind Laholm, preparing for the Metropolitan Opera opening in New York. The only reason he's on the sport page is because of a rather unique evolution that has seen him move from being heavyweight boxing champion of the U.S. navy to that of the new native American tenor with the Met. Known as Ed Johnson before adopting his operatic tag, he also had experience as a gold mucker and wanderer before turning to the finer arts.

MEET FRIDAY IN CHAMPIONSHIP LIGHT-HEAVYWEIGHT BOUT

"Adopting the usual "friends now but wait till we're in the ring" pose following the signing of the papers for their fight on Friday night, are billy Conn, LEFT, who holds the North American continent's share of the world's light heavyweight championship, and Gus Lesnevich, RIGHT, the challenger for his crown. Conn, the popular Pittsburgh Irishman, who is frequently referred to as a possible opponent for Joe Louis at some hazy day in the future, won the title and strengthened his claims in two winning bouts with Mello Bettina. A fancy boxer without much of a punch, he is favored over Lesnevich, who calls Cliffside, New Jersey, home.

The registration cards for the Belleville Juvenile Hockey Association have been printed and are now available at "Red" Townsend's sports store on Campbell Street. Teen aged boys, who will not be 17 years of age until after Jan. 1st next are eligible and should procure their cards and instructions from Secretary Townsend as soon as possible. Plans are being carried out to open the newly organized Belleville Juvenile Hockey loop immediately upon the opening of the Hume Arena and therefore it is imperative that all names should be registered with the secretary as soon as possible. The registration card is a lengthy document and should be filled out in ink with answers given to every question on the paper. Preferably the cards are for boys ranging from 15 to 17 years of age, although younger lads who show hockey promise will be considered.

A better choice for officials of a juvenile group could hardly be obtained, than those heading the Belleville Juvenile Hockey Association. For instance President Frank Cunningham has been in charge of boys' athletics and training at the O.S.D. for a number of years and knows the fundamentals of handling and supervising teen aged boys. Secretary "Red" Townsend acted in the same capacity in Ottawa and at present is physical director at the Y.M.C.A. Vice-President Bill Dennis has always taken a keen interest in boys' sports up around the east end of the city where he organized a boys' sports club for the kids some months ago. Executive member Billie Hughes worked along the same lines in Winnipeg, so the youth of Belleville who will play in the City Juvenile Hockey League are assured of the proper management and supervision, or at least their parents can rest assured of such supervision.

Do you remember when Two-Ton Tony Galento moved a step toward his championship match with Joe Louis when he flattened Harry Thomas in three rounds at Philadelphia one year ago today. This was the fight that Thomas recently claimed he "threw" to Galento. The charge stirred the boxing world.

Paul Thompson, manager of Chicago Black Hawks, plans strictly offensive hockey for his team in this National league campaign. The Thompson theory is that if you attack continually, it takes the running away from the opposing team. He will throw waves of forwards at the opposition.

Thirteen strong on the 13th of the month the Belleville Redmen took to the ice for their initial hockey practice of the season at the Jock Harty arena last night, so apparently Eddie Thomas' puck-chasers are not superstitious in any measure, or on the contrary maybe the Redmen feel there is luck in odd numbers and capitalized on the number 13 as a good luck omen. All of last year's squad is again available, except Ab Hinton, who is at present in the Air Force. Ken Watt, in the nets, "Speedy" St. Louis and Harry McCreary will tend to the defence labors, while still "Stewie" McElrath is being sought to round out the Redmen's defence. The Jackson brothers will be back along with Basil Robinson, who finished the season nobly for the Redmen last year. Mark and Bill Storms were out, giving the Thomas-led clan two sets of brothers. Prevost and Cy Barriage returned to the fold, while the feature of the practice was the appearance of Herb Windsor and Les Yates, formerly with the Prescott seniors. Windsor is a playmaking centre, while Yates was a teammate for the past two seasons. Last night's workout was of the light skating variety, but it gave Skipper Thomas assurance that the Redmen are stronger in every department.

It should be a straight case of revenge when Ruddy Epps and Dave Khoen meet in the main bout of Friday night's wrestling show at the Hume Arena. Epps has been bewailing the fact he was given "the business" by Referee Cliff Faux when he was disqualified and the Toledo grappler threatened everything from a lawsuit to mayhem if he wasn't given a return bout with Khoen. Epps was disqualified after 55 minutes of strong wrestling when he and Khoen met a fortnight ago, when the Toledo grappler roughed Khoen to such an extent he was disqualified. "I've been subject to much worse attacks than I handed Khoen, but my opponent was never given the gate. What's the matter here—is it because I'm a Yankee they're discriminating against me?" asked Epps before he was finally assured of a return bout here Friday night. "Thanks, that's all I want—just a chance to vindicate myself in Belleville." Epps is reported to have stated over the long distance telephone last night. Two fine supporting bouts are also carded.

Floundering badly in their first two major puck loop starts, the "Shoreless" world champion Boston Bruins have proven anything but impressive during the current hockey season. However, one can look for a Boston victory over the Black Hawks tonight, because the dynamic Eddie Shore will be leading the "Bruising Bruins" going both ways once again. According to Shore's present contract he was not compelled to play for Boston until after Dec. 15th, but reinforcements were needed in the ranks of the Rossmen owing to injuries sustained by Jack Crawford. Shore readily agreed to wave his conditional contract and will tonight commence his 14th consecutive season with the Boston Bruins.

It might be hard to realize, but the Ontario Hockey Association is the oldest organized hockey body today in existence, and on Nov. 25th will recognize its 50th birthday. Prexy Jim Douglas, of Brantford, and his subordinates including "Sandy" Burrows of this city, should celebrate the Association's 'golden anniversary' of attaining a half a century of success. They do say the first 50 years are the hardest, or are they?

Paul Waner, perennial outfielder with the Pittsburg Pirates, signed his 15th consecutive contract with the Buccaneers yesterday. The terms were not made public, but "Big Poison" of the Waner brothers' baseball act never was in the habit of signing pre-season contracts, unless they were mightily satisfactory and much to his liking.

Tientsin Blockade Remains Unaffected

Tientsin, Nov. 14 (AP)—The Japanese blockade of the British and French concessions here, imposed last June, will remain unaffected by the recent decision of Great Britain and France to withdraw most of their troops from North China, a Japanese army spokesman said today.

The blockade will continue "until the Japanese requirements are fulfilled," the spokesman said. He declined to explain what the "requirements" were, but added that the Japanese military in north China was "not now interested in the possible resumption of British-Japanese discussions in Tokyo" which failed to settle the Tientsin dispute.

TWO MEN INJURED, TRUCK CRASHES INTO ENGINE TENDER

Kinburn, Ont., Nov. 14—(CP) — Two Ottawa men were injured, one of them seriously, and the locomotive of the Canadian National Railways' Pembroke-Ottawa passenger train disabled yesterday when a truck crashed into the tender of the train at a level crossing near this town 25 miles west of Ottawa.

Michael Dubrofsky, 62, was taken to an Ottawa hospital with a severe head gash and Moses Greenberg, 26, received slight cuts.

CUBA CANDIDATE IS FOUND SHOT

Havan, Nov. 14—(AP)—Eduardo Chibas, National Revolutionary part, candidate for the constituent assembly in Wednesday's election, was found shot through the stomach in his automobile on Havana's outskirts today. Chibas, a supporter of Cuba's strong man, Colonel Fulgencia Batista was the first victim of violence in the campaign.

CANADA AT WAR TO GUARD LIBERTY SAYS MANION

'All That Canada and Democracies Prize Threatened by Hitler's Ambition'

CANADA'S POSITION

Ottawa, Nov. 14—(CP)—Canada is at war to protect human liberties and to assist in preventing Nazi domination overwhelming civilization, Conservative Leader Manion said here.

In a speech last night on "Why We Are At War", carried over the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation national network, he said that all that Canada and the other democracies prize in civil and religious freedom is threatened by the ambition of Hitler to dominate the world.

"Unless the democratic nations of the world succeed at the present time in stopping the advance of international gangsterism, the danger is that our whole civilization will be overwhelmed, engulfing at the same time the religious beliefs of us all," Dr. Manion declared.

"The reason Britain and France declared war on Germany was because they realized, after repeated and sincere attempts to avoid war, that Hitler had become obsessed with a determination not only to dominate Europe but to dominate the world."

Canada has been in the fight since the beginning primarily because she is part of the British Empire, he continued. Neutrality for this Dominion now was impossible for unless Canada declared her independence, an enemy of Britain would consider Canada at war and, if victorious, would take possession of this country.

"We must not forget that Canada would be the richest prize on the face of the globe for any congested country to win. Imagine the joy of Hitler could he possess such a country as ours to which to send his excess population."

The Conservative leader cautioned against assuming that the Atlantic Ocean made Canada invulnerable to attack. If Britain and France were defeated, Canada would be quite vulnerable, he said.

YOUNG FUGITIVES CAUGHT IN WOODS

Wisconsin May Ask Murder Warrant as Chief Payne Died of Heart Attack

St. Ignace, Mich., Nov. 14—(AP) Two youthful fugitives who braved the dangers of the woods in a futile attempt to avoid recapture today awaited a hearing and transfer to Wisconsin Rapids, Wis., on charges of automobile theft.

State troopers and sheriff's officers tracked down the boys Sunday and ended a 300-mile chase which left the police officer dead of a heart attack.

The youths were Robert Noel, 17, of Dearborn, Mich., and Nelson Pasha, of Mosinee, Wis., who said he was 14 years old. The pair escaped Friday night from Wisconsin officers taking them from Plymouth, Ind, to Wisconsin Rapids and fled in the officers' automobile across Michigan's upper peninsula.

Police Chief Roland Payne of Wisconsin Rapids suffered a fatal heart seizure while grappling with the boys. Deputy Sheriff Cliff Bluett, his companion, said the boys fired a shot which ripped his coat, disarmed him and handcuffed him to his dead companion beside the road.

Wisconsin authorities said they would ask a murder warrant based on the death of Chief Payne.

Keep Home Front 'Stable and Strong' Advises the Queen

London, Nov. 13—(CP)—On Saturday night, the Queen called uopn the women of the Empire to keep the home front "stable and strong", in a radio speech to the Empire.

"Be assured that in carrying, on your home duties and in meeting all these worries cheerfully you are giving real service to your country," she said. "You are taking your part in keeping the home front, which will have dangers of its own, stable and strong."

She referred to the "seven happy weeks" during which she and the King toured Canada and the United States, contrasting that time with the "circumstances sadly different" in which she spoke.

"We have all a part to play and I know you will not fail in yours," she said, "remembering always that the greater your courage and devotion the sooner shall we see again in our midst the happy ordered life for which we long."

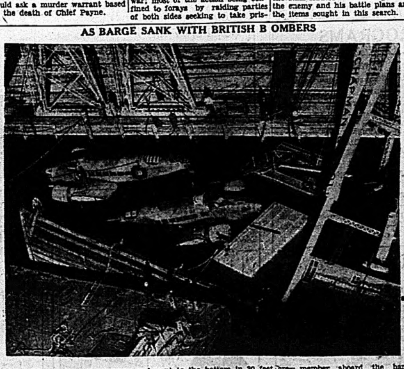
FASCIST FIESTA GROUP

When Italy celebrated the 16th anniversary of the Fascist march on Rome Nov. 4, Crown Prince Umberto, who was recently appointed to command an army, posed thusly at the tomb of Italy's unknown soldier with Premier Mussolini, with whom he is reported far from friendly. In rear are General Attilio Teruzzi, new minister of Italian Africa, and Count Ciano RIGHT, foreign minister and son-in-law of Il Duce.

Raiding Parties "Make Contact" With the Enemy

Germany's censor did not give the locale of this scene that illustrates one manner of "making contact" with the enemy. There has been little real fighting on the new western front in this new European war; most of the action being confined to forays by raiding parties of both sides seeking to take prisoners. What happens after prisoners are taken is seen here. Several French soldiers, AT LEFT, have been captured and the German officer, RIGHT FOREGROUND, is gathering their personal effects. Maps and papers which might tell the Nazi leaders something about the enemy and his battle plans are the items sought in this search.

AS BARGE SANK WITH BRITISH B OMBERS



A possible victim of saboteurs, this barge, carrying two bombing planes consigned to the British air ministry, is shown off Stapleton, Staten Island. The barge mysteriously sprang a leak before dawn and went to the bottom in 30 feet of water before the planes could be removed. Only the wings, which had been detached from the planes, remained afloat. John Hansen, only crew member aboard the barge, made his escape just before the craft made its plunge. Authorities are investigating the possibility that sabotage was responsible.

New Outlook

By R. H. WILKINSON

"I'll tell you a story," said Joshua Brown, "about a rich man named Derrell Graham. Graham was your typical self-made man. He started at the bottom with nothing, worked hard and got the breaks. By the time he was 60 he had amassed a fortune, and retired from business.

"It had been his life-long dream to retire at 60 to enjoy his income without working, to live peacefully and comfortably and happily.

"But such was not to be his destiny.

"Why? Well, because the old boy had a flock of poor relations and friends who were after his money. Day and night he was bothered and pestered by telephone calls, correspondence and personal visits or less fortunate members of his family who wanted financial aid.

"Graham became bitter and hard and cynical. Eventually he decided to go away, to migrate a country where he wasn't known, to be taken at his face value, to hope for peace and contentment.

"And in Hillsdale he found the end of his rainbow, so to speak. Hillsdale was located in the back country, 250 miles north of the city where Graham had his home, and no one knew of his going there. He bought a small house outside the village, equipped it modernly, and settled down to enjoy himself; giving out that he was a writer, though a poor one. Within a week half the town's population had called to pay their respects, and the manner of equality with which they treated and accepted him was something to warm the cockles of his old heart.

"Among these with whom he became friendly were the Lafe Austins, who lived down the road a piece. Lafe operated a small farm, and when he wasn't farming he was fishing. It seemed to Graham that Lafe got more out of life than any man he had ever known. Frequently of evenings Lafe would drop over to his neighbor's and sit with the old man on his porch in the gathering dusk and talk of things that were far removed from the hurly-burly of existence to which Graham was accustomed.

"Once the old man said meditatively: 'You seem to be happy with your little farm here, Lafe. Haven't you often thought you'd be a great deal more happy and contented if you had all the money you wanted?'

"Lafe shook his head. Nope," he said, 'I reckon not. Money ain't everything, Derrie. It don't bring a feller happiness. Why, I hear tell about these rich guys a-worryin' and a-schemin' and a-frettin' all the time about this, that and the other thing an' it seems to me like they was plumb foolish. Nope, it's the simple things as counts in a man's life.'

"Graham was pleased with this answer. It further stimulated the vague thought that had begun to take root in his mind. That thought concerned the making of his will. Who, he asked himself, would be better qualified to inherit his vast fortune than this self-same Lafe Austin? Who would do more good with the money? Certainly not one of the selfish relatives who wanted it all for themselves and whose only god was riches.

"Thus thinking, the old man practically reached a decision in the matter in favor of Lafe. Yet before calling in his lawyer to arrange the papers, he decided to first eliminate a faint doubt that persisted in his thoughts. He would test Lafe and assure himself that his analysis of the farmer had been correct.

"The problem of bestowing a moderate fortune on Mr. Austin without arousing that worthy's suspicion was easily settled. Mr. Austin was a fisherman and Mr. Graham was, ostensibly, a writer. Why, Mr. Graham wanted to know, didn't Mr. Austin set down on paper some of his experiences as a fisherman and submit them to a certain sportsman's magazine in connection with a prize contest they were running?

"Mr. Austin thought the matter over and chuckled. The idea pleased him. He set down his experiences submitted them, and because Mr. Graham owned the 'certain sportsman's magazine' he was awarded a prize of $5,000.

"The day after the check arrived, Graham went away. He wanted to give Lafe full rein. He wanted him to use absolutely his own judgment in the expenditure of that money.

"Three weeks later Graham returned to Hillsdale. En route to his home he dropped in at the Austins' to pay his respects. With something of a shock he noticed that the farm had changed. The yard had been fixed up, the house painted and a second-hand automobile stood in the dooryard. Lafe and his wife had changed too. They greeted him with profuse cordiality. There was a sparkle in their eyes that hadn't been present before. They both wore new garments, and the interior of their house boasted new furniture, a picture or two, a new rug.

"Mr. Graham shook his head sadly. He had been mistaken. Lafe Austin had lied. He was like the others. Money had made him happier than heretofore. The old man was bitter and annoyed. Without preamble he told Lafe of his disappointment, of the test to which he'd put the farmer. Lafe was incredible.

" 'You mean you're D. D. Graham, the millionaire?"

" 'Yes, Lafe,' said Graham sadly, 'I am.'

" 'An' you were going to will me all that money?'

" 'I was,' said Graham, with emphasis on the 'was', 'but now I find you are unworthy. Oh, don't tell me you're sorry,' he went on, as Lafe started to speak. 'The damage is done. You needn't pay back the $5,000. It wouldn't do a bit of good and I have plenty more.'

" 'You're damn tootin' you have!' said Lafe. 'And I ain't got no intention of payin' it back. If you weren't such a ramd'd hog you'd a-made that $10,000 instead of only five.'

"Mr. Graham gasped. 'Look here, Lafe, you told me that money didn't make a man happy.'

" 'Purely conjecture,' said Lafe. 'How could I know whether or not it would make a man happy when I ain't never had no money? I ain't never had nothing, an' I was bitter about it. With me, like everyone else, it was a matter of sour grapes. But by jungles I've discovered that money helps a lot.'

"Mr. Graham opened his mouth to speak, but Lafe rushed on. 'You listen to me,' Mr. Graham. 'Was you happy when you didn't have money? Like the devil you was! You was all the time trying to get more, esquabbling and fightin' and bein' selfish, schemin' to take money from someone who had more'n you, just like those poor relatives o' yours are doin' now. But now that you've got your pile an' are old and want to retire you expect other folks to act like you didn't, to be like you weren't, simply because it would make you peaceful and contented and happy. It ain't fair, Mr. Graham. It ain't a bit fair, this condemning by you of others....' "

Joshua Brown paused in the telling of his tale and chuckled. "Maybe," he said, "you've guessed the end. Maybe you think Old Man Graham left his money to Lafe, after all. Well, you're wrong. Because when Graham died he didn't have a cent to his name. You see, Lafe had given him a new outlook on life all night. Too much of a new one for his own good. For Graham decided he'd been all wrong and pretty selfish, and before he died he gave his entire fortune away to his poor relatives—and made them happy."

CHAS. J. STODGELL DIES

Windsor, Ont., Nov. 13 (CP)—Charles James Stodgell, 79, one of the original stockholders of the Ford Motor Company of Canada, died here yesterday after a brief illness. He was Mayor of Walkerville in 1921 before that town became part of the present Windsor.

He was a former member of the Board of Education, City Council, and Library Board. Born in England, he came to Walkerville in 1884. His wife died this year. He is survived by a son and two daughters. Funeral services will be held tomorrow.

Little Benny's Note Book

After supper ma said to pop, Dont make yourself too comfortable, Willyum, we're due at the Hewses for a little bridge this evening, you know.

Yes, I know, pop said. O well, I guess I can take it, I've done harder things than play bridge feeling worse than I do now, he said, and ma said, Why how do you mean, how do you feel, aren't you well? You're not starting one of those grippy colds I hope, she said.

O, forget it, it just slipped out, I mean there was really nothing to slip out, who started this? pop said, and ma said, Now Willyum never mind trying to pull the wool over my eyes with a straight face, I know you too well.

As a matter of fact perhaps a little bridge is just what I need to occupy my mind, pop said. They say if you dont think of a thing it doesn't really exist, he said, and ma said, Now you've admitted the cat out of the bag. How can you refrain from thinking of something if there's nothing to refrain from thinking of? she said.

Now I said I'd go and I'll go, we cant disappoint people or every little ill wind that blows, pop said, and ma said, You're going to take some aspirin and you're going to stay right here, I'm not going to have you saying it was my fault if you dont ward it off, I'm going to call up Maud Hews this minute and tell her we wont be over.

Wich she did, and when she came back pop was leening back in his private chair starting a cigar, and ma said, Willyum Potts, you never smoke when you feel a cold coming on, that's an invariable unfailing sign.

Well for Peet sake who said anything about a cold, I've been insisting I'm all right, haven't I? pop said, and ma said, Well I've telephoned now, you double died deceiver, but that's no excuse for you not to take me to the movies.

Wich he did.

NEW YORK STOCKS

New York, Nov. 14 (AP)—Moderate leanings toward a recovery trend were exhibited by selected stocks in today's market.

The list got off to a slow start, with prices spotty. Buying in steels and motors then turned the tide and improvement soon was being registered in other departments. Near the fourth tour, top gains running to a point or so were reduced.

European securities centres held to a fairly even course. Bonds and commodities were a trifle uneven.

Among favored stocks were U.S. Steel, Youngstown Sheet, Chrysler, Douglas Aircraft, Eastern Airlines, American Airlines, International Harvester, U.S. Rubber, Anaconda, American Can, Santa Fe, Chesapeake and Ohio and Montgomery Ward.

Among mixed Canadian shares C.P.R., Dome and Hiram Walker inched forward while Distillers and Lake Shore retreated fractionally. Mild demand appeared for Dominion 4s in the Bond market.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Nov. 14 (CP)—The western oil stocks were sold for sizeable losses through the early session on Toronto Exchange tday and some of the recessions were widened around noon when the announcement was made that Royalite's dividend disbursement on Dec. 1 would be only the regular 50 cents for the half-year with the bonus of 25 cents cut off. Royalite paid 50 cents plus 25 cents in June. Base Metal shares also weakened narrowly while the golds and the industrials posted minor index gains.

Home Oil, Calgary - Edmonton, Anglo-Canadian and Okalta weakened 5 to 10 cents.

Heavy selling of Imperial Oil and International Petroleum at losses of two points or more, featured the early trade. The losses reflected the declines in the dividend disbursements, ordered by the directors at their meeting today.

Price adjustments were narrow in the golds and the base metals.

ENGLISH GIRLS RETURN SAFELY

Toronto, Nov. 14—(CP)— Word has been received in Toronto of the safe arrival in England of 53 English schoolgirls who were visiting Canada when war broke out. The girls made a secret sailing from Canada with Major Fred Ney, their tour director.

In a letter received in Toronto from one of the girls, Ray Laws of Edgware, it was noted that the voyage was uneventful except that the ship had to turn back once off the coast of Newfoundland when an unidentified ship was sighted.

During the voyage passengers volunteered to help with submarine and aircraft watches.

Famous Thoroughbred Pompoon is Dead

Hyde, Md., Nov. 14 (AP)—Pompoon, five-year-old thoroughbred race horse owned by J. H. Loucheim died today at the Three Cousin's Stock Farm in Long Green Valley. Pompoon broke down in New York last summer and it was understood he had been booked for stud next year.

The son of Pompey-Oonagh was the two-year-old champion in 1936, but in his three-year-old campaign he played second fiddle to Samuel Riddle's War Admiral, who beat him in the Kentucky Derby and the Preakness.

LIVESTOCK

Toronto, Nov. 14—(CP)—A dull tone prevailed at opening of the Toronto Livestock, Market today. The calf division was steady while no hog price was set and no early sales recorded on sheep and lambs. Cattle holdover from Monday was 1,600 head.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Livestock Branch were: Cattle, 780, calves, 200, hogs, 360, sheep and lambs 340.

A few good weighty steers sold at $7.50 and common to medium butcher steers and heifers traded at $5.50-$7. A few good cows brought $4.50-$5.

Choice veal calves opened at $10 with common selling downward to $6.

Previous close on off-truck hogs was $8.65-$8.75.

Montreal, Nov. 14—(CP)—All classes of livestock held steady on Montreal livestock markets today it was reported by the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

Receipts: Cattle, 446; sheep and lambs, 261; hogs, 1,123; calves, 441.

Cattle offerings were mostly common to just plain quality cows. Common to medium heifers brought $3.50-$5.50, medium cows $4.25-$4.75 and common butchers from $3.50-$4. Canners and cutters ranged from $2.80-$3.25 with common bulls between $3.50-$4. Fleshy bulls brought around $4.50.

There were no tops in veals but medium good to good brought $10 with mediums around $9.50 and common lights down to $7. Drinkers were offered from $5-$7 while grassers ranged from $4 for commons to $4.75 for choice ones.

Good ewes and wethers fetched mostly $9.75 with an odd small lot up to $10. Heavy lambs were cut $1 per hundred weight, culls and bucks being cut $2. Sheep sold from $3-$4.50.

Bacon hogs fed and watered brought $9 with $9.25 off trucks, while selects drew $1 premium with regular cuts on off grades. Sows ranged from $6.25-$6.75 while hogs sold on rail grade, made $12 hot weight.

Hog Quotations

Toronto, Nov. 14 (CP)—Bacon-hog markets were steady to higher today, Brantford and Peterborough prices showed a 10-cent gain and other markets held yesterday's quotations.

Liveweights — Brantford $8.35, Chatham $8.35.

Dressedweights — Barrie $11.50, Brantford $11.35, Chatham $11.45, Hamilton $11.50 plus transportation, Hull $11.30, London $11 plus transportation, Peterboro $11.15 plus transportation, Stratford $11 plus transportation.

Eggs at Toronto Show Mixed Trend

Toronto Nov. 14—On the Toronto open produce market Monday, eggs showed a mixed trend. Butter closed steady.

The egg market displayed a nervous undertone, with buyers cautious in making commitments for the two top grades. Grade A-pullets and lower grades were in good demand. Prices for graded eggs declined on A-large and A-medium and improved on the lower grades. In the retail division, grade A-medium eased 1 cent per dozen.

After a morning quiet spell, trading perked up on the butter market and offerings of Ontario No. 1 creamery solids wer absorbed at 28 1-4c. Supplies were available at 28 1-2c per pound, but no sales were recorded at this figure.

MORE THAN 70

After the destroyer hit the enemy mine, tugs hurried to the scene and one took the destroyer in tow, but the vessel soon sank, stern first.

Most of the survivors were covered with oil.

More than 70 of the destroyer's crew were known to have been picked up and landed by tugs and drifters which hurried to the scene after the explosion.

Nearly 200 Destroyers in Navy.

(British destroyers normally have complements ranging from 98 to more than 200 officers and men. The navy has nearly 200 destroyers, which average 1,000 tons in displacement. In the last war the average loss of destroyers was slightly more than one a month.)

Before the Admiralty made its announcement, it was learned more than a score of survivors of a sea disaster were recovering in a marine hospital after being landed at an English port yesterday.

Trawler Survivors Saved From Raft.

The 275-ton Cresswell was reported sunk off the coast of Northern Scotland by a submarine in a wireless message received from the trawler Phyllisia.

The U-boat which shelled the Cresswell picked up ten survivors from a raft and kept them aboard seven hours before putting them aboard the Phyllisia. The U-boat commander told the men: "Tell Churchill German U-boat men are not the heartless murderers you are led to believe."

Survivors in Hospital

Before the Admiralty announcement it was learned more than a score of survivors from a sea tragedy had landed at an English port yesterday and were recovering in a marine hospital. This indicated the destroyer was sunk yesterday or the night before.

The fatality announced by the Admiralty was W. G. Brown, boatswain.

The injured included three officers and 12 men. The officers were listed as midshipman C. L. Boyne, acting sub-lieut. D. L. Davonport, and warrant engineer G. P. D. Dunn.

Trawler sunk by U-boat

Simultaneous with today's announcement it was reported that the 275-ton British trawler Cresswell had been sunk by a German submarine and that six of the crew of 12 were missing. The trawler Phyllisia sent news of the sinking and said she had picked up six survivors.

The Admiralty last night announced the sinking of two German freighters by British warships after the vessels had been scuttled by their crew.

The announcement came soon after a statement that four Nazi planes were driven off the Shetland Islands without having inflicted serious damage. Bombs dropped by the Germans either fell in the sea or blasted holes in the ground without destroying any property.

German Freighters Scuttled, Sunk.

"The German steamships Mecklenburg, 8,000 tons, and Parana, 6,000 tons, have been intercepted by British warships," said an Admiralty communique. "The crews abandoned their ships, leaving them in a sinking condition.

"After the crews had been picked up by our warships the ships were finally sunk by gunfire to avoid any chance of their being a danger to navigation."

The positions of the German ships were not disclosed but Reuters News Agency in a dispatch from Reykjavik, Iceland, had said the Parana sent out an appeal for aid, saying she was under attack by a British destroyer.

There were two raids on the Shetlands, the Admiralty said. Apparently German bombers were seeking to attack naval property on the islands, which lie to the north of Scotland.

Three British patrol planes chased a lone German machine off the east coast of Britain during yesterday but it escaped in clouds after the British machines raked it with machine-gun bullets from close range.

35 German Planes Lost.

It was estimated at least 35 German planes had been destroyed by the Royal Air Force, ground fire or the guns of the navy since the war started. The total is probably closer to 50 if account is taken of German losses to British arms on the Western Front.

The German Air Force has attempted many reconnaissance flights along the British coastline but apart from the Firth of Forth raid and one or two single flights over Scotland, they have never been far inland. Although British planes have mapped hundreds of square miles of German territory from the air, particularly the industrial area of the Ruhr, no German plane has been over the industrial sections of Britain.

R.A.F. Plane Attacks U-boat.

A Royal Air Force plane attacked a submarine Sunday, it was disclosed, and the pilot believed he made a direct hit with one of his salvo of bombs.

There were two losses of British ships during the day. The 1,346-ton merchant vessel Ponzano sank off the southeast coast after an explosion, without loss of life.

The 7,745-ton steamship Sirdhana went down near Singapore, sinking within fifteen minutes after striking a mine. Eleven persons, Chinese or other Asiatics, were reported drowned and nine others missing. An investigation was being held.

CHURCHILL AND BALDWIN RECEIVED BY KING GEORGE

London, Nov. 14—(CP)— The King received Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, at Buckingham Palace today. Earlier he received Earl Baldwin.

VAST AIR SCHEME

Field Staff Increase

The conference also has decided that other fields will be constructed and it was announced that reconnaissance and surveying parties have been at work mapping out points at which additional fields will be established. Construction of the majority of the new airports probably will start in the spring but work on some will get under way this fall and carry on during the winter.

The need for speed has led to an increase in the field staff and the Dominion Government has accepted the offer of the Ontario Government to place at its disposal a number of aircraft and experienced pilots for work in the emergency. Ontario Government surveyors are also assisting in laying the ground work for the scheme.

The Empire Air Training Conference delegates meet daily in technical discussions of the problems and the last delegate arrived here last night from England. He is Air Chief Marshal Sir Robert Brooke-Popham, a member of the British Air Mission headed by Lord Riverdale. He told newspapermen that he considered the scheme one of the biggest developments since the start of the war. "The training scheme is something the Empire can develop and which Hitler cannot match for he has no empire to call upon," he said.

Praises Air Scheme

Ottawa, Nov. 14—(CP) — With high praise for the Empire air training scheme, Air Chief Marshal Sir Robert Brooke-Popham arrived here Monday from England to complete the membership of the British air mission.

He was met at the station by Lord Riverdale, head of the mission, Royal Air Force advisors and members of the Australian and New Zealand missions here to collaborate with the Canadian Government in the project.

"The training scheme is something the Empire can develop and which Hitler cannot match for he has no empire to call upon," Sir Robert said. "I consider it one of the biggest developments since the start of the conflict."

Important Step in Victory

The Empire air training scheme "is one of the most important steps taken to ensure ultimate victory" in the war, Air Chief Marshal Sir Robert Brooke-Popham said at Montreal after arriving from England yesterday.

"I don't expect the air force to win the war by itself," he said. "We'll gain victory by a combination of several forces, military, naval, aeronautical and by our economic superiority and the spirit of our peple, but the air force can furnish the drive, and that is important."

MILK-DRINKING

Every Gun Tested

Every gun is tested thoroughly at proof butts, in which ears take plenty of punishment from the constant din. On one special butt one gun always is "given the works" and blazed away until it breaks down. This is to test it for wear and tear.

The plant makes butts from walnut for the guns and also manufactures Vickers guns and service pistols, and repairs rifles. Some machines in the wood-working section are veterans. One has been there for 85 years doing its bit to help Britain fight her wars.

Many workers are veterans and the factory now is feeling the benefit of having had highly skilled craftsmen for generations. This correspondent met one man who had been there since 1914. His father, a veteran of 50 years of gunmaking, was in another section of the plant. Nearby was a man who had been 40 years in the trade.

BANCROFT CHURCH

the exception of the church altar, which ultimately fell prey to the increasing flames, that finally enveloped the interior of the building.

Stained glass windows suffered from the severe heat, but the village fire department finally had the blaze under control but not before the entire building was gutted. Rev. Fr. Kennedy was enroute to Pembroke when the fire was discovered. He returned to Bancroft as the fire was brought under control.

The entire basement of the church was filled with water as the village fire department poured two steady streams in an effort to control the fire in the basement, the water rising to a height of twelve inches on the floor of the church property. The church interior, stained glass windows and floors of the church are a total loss, it was stated at noon.

The church had been completely renovated and repainted recently.

ENSIGN RETURNED

Toronto, Nov. 14—(CP)—A tattered Canadian ensign that flew over the Canadian Red Cross distributing centre in Paris during the first Great War, has been returned to the Red Cross to aid in the organization's present drive for funds.

Miss Ethel Foster of Toronto who was the last volunteer Red Cross worker to leave Paris for home in 1919 has had the flag in her possession for 20 years.

"It took 18 pails of water to clean it of smoke and dust of those war years back in Paris," Miss Foster said today. "I hope it will help the Red Cross in its work."

OBITUARY

LATE MRS. PETER McKEE, (Frankford).

Frankford, (Special)—The funeral of the late Catherine Adelaide Bull, beloved wife of Peter McKee, was held in Frankford United Church on Friday afternoon at two-thirty. Rev. Lane had charge of the service. During the service the choir sang "When Life's Work is Done" and Miss E. Maybee sang "City Four Square."

The bearers were Messrs. Ed. Pyear, Fred Anderson, Milton Haggerman, of Carmel, Geo. Spencer, Gerald Johnson and James B. Ford.

The late Mrs. McKee leaves to mourn her loss her husband and granddaughter Kathleyn M. Hibbert, at home; four sisters, (Sarah), Mrs. James Corsan, of Toronto; (Duhia), Mrs Warde Nuly, of Lemburg, Sask.; (Lydie), Mrs. John Campbell, Trenton and (Anna), Mrs Frank Pair, Niagara Falls and two brothers, Mr. Geo. Bull of Oshawa and Mr. Charles Bull of Trenton.

The floral tributes were numerous and beautiful.

Clarence MacLean Hendricks (Frankford)

Frankford, Ont (Special)— One of this districts oldest and most highly respected residents passed away here on Sunday, when Clarence MacLean Hendricks, prominent Mason died at the residence of his daughter Mrs. Clara Adams, following a lengthy illness.

Born in Stockdale eighty two years ago, the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Hendricks, the deceased had resided in this vicinity for a number of years. A member of the Frankford United Church he served in former years on the board of management of that institution. He was a highly esteemed member of Franck Lodge A. F. & A. M., Frankford, No. 127, of which he served as chaplain for a number of years.

He was a staunch Conservative. The funeral will be held under Masonic auspices.

Surviving are three sons, Elwood Perry, Sidney, B.C.; Jerome, Toronto and Leonard M., Frankford; one daughter, Clara, and one nephew, Dr. Arthur Hendricks, Toronto.

FIRE DAMAGES LEASIDE CHURCH

Blaze in Roof at Rear of Church Destroys Sanctuary and Damages Sacred Objects

Leaside, Ont., Nov. 14—(CP) — Officials of the Ontario Fire Marshal's Department are probing a mysterious fire at the Roman Catholic Church in this Toronto suburb early today. The church was built nine months ago at a cost of $22,000.

A blaze in the roof at the rear of the church, destroyed the sanctuary and did considerable damage to church candlesticks and other sacred objects in the room.

The blaze discovered by a woman resident living near the church, also destroyed a section of the church school rooms, and as a result more than 80 pupils were given a holiday from school today.

Father F. M. Caulfield, Priest of the parish, estimated the damage to the sacred articles at about $50. He declined to estimate the damage to the church but said that with the help of a few carpenters he could hold service by Sunday.

Chief Constable Sandy Bruce said he was of the opinion a large man had entered the church. He pointed to a pool of red ink near a teacher's desk in one of the classrooms, in which was left the print of a large shoe. Chief Bruce also expressed an opinion that the fire might have started in two places since a confessional booth next to the sanctuary was also burned.

Investigators, while unable to determine the cause of the blaze, were inclined to believe a lighted candle might have started the fire.

A teacher's desk in one of the classrooms had been ransacked and several articles thrown about the room, while in the church kitchen eggs and butter were found strewn across the floor and cooking utensils thrown about in disorder.

Loading of Snow Cruiser a Problem

Boston, Nov. 14—(AP)—With the aid of the tide, workmen sought to coax a 27-ton juggernaut—the giant snowmobile, Penguin 1—aboard the motorship North Star today, in order to permit the United States Antarctic expedition to move out for the south.

Rear-Admiral Richard E. Byrd, the expedition's commander, and Dr. Thomas Poulter, designer of the snow cruiser, decided to try to manoeuvre the Penguin aboard the North Star under its own power, waiting until the tide left the vessel's deck level with the dock.

Ten feet of the cruiser's rear end was sliced off with acetylene torches so that the ponderous machine could be stowed on deck and fastened securely. The severed part will be re-welded in the Antarctic.

The Penguin, piloted by Dr. Poulter, reached Boston yesterday after a troublous, 1,020-mile trip along the highways from Chicago.

AUSTRALIAN

The changes in the Australian cabinet were announced by Prime Minister Robert Menzies on Nov. 11.

Proof of Unity of Empire

Mr. Fairbairn said the swearing in ceremony here was a striking proof of the unity of the commonwealth of nations under one crown, when the Minister of one Dominion could take the oath of office in a sister Dominion half way around the world.

When he arrived here as head of the Australian air mission two weeks ago, Mr. Fairbairn was, and had been for some years, Minister for Civil Aviation, assistant Defence Minister and Vice-President of the Executive Council.

Under the new cabinet arrangement Mr. Fairbairn becomes Minister of the Air Branch of the defence forces. Prime Minister Menzies, as Minister of Coordination, will supervise the activities of the war, air and navy departments each with a separate ministry.

Until Mr. Fairbairn returns to Australia Mr. Menzies will administer the Air Department.

NAZIS ISSUE LIST OF BRITISH ARMED MERCHANT SHIPS

Call Them 'Pirates' and Imply These Vessels Will be Sunk Without Warning

LARGE SHIPS NAMED

Berlin, Nov. 14 (AP)—Intimations of a sterner campaign at sea, involving possible submarine attacks without warning, were read today in Berlin newspapers which listed 29 British and five French merchant ships as armed for combat.

Authorities were silent, but prominent display of the lists in all papers led informed quarters to the belief that travellers and shippers were being warned not to use these vessels.

German comment was that since the ships were armed against submarines, a U-boat commander would be foolhardy to expose himself—implying that assault without warning would apply to the merchantmen.

The National Zeitung of Essen, closely connected with Field Marshal Hermann Goering, said armed merchant ships must be regarded as pirates.

"It is a matter of indifference whether it is a 100-ton ship with a crew of 10, or a vessel of 80,000 tons," said the National Zeitung.

"If passengers, including women and children, use these English pirate ships, and something happens to them, they should complain to the travel agency of Churchill and company."

The 81,235-ton Queen Mary, one of the ships listed as armed, has remained in New York harbor since the start of the war.

Other ships mentioned included the Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Russia as well as the Mauretania, Aquitania, Georgic and De Grasse.

Germany was expected to reply within a few days to the mediation offer of Belgium and the Netherlands, but authorized sources reported: "There is not much doubt about what the reply will be now that Britain and France, through their answers, have shown determination to continue the war."

SINK-ON-SIGHT

many 15, France 7 and neutral countries 34.

Berlin, Nov. 14—(AP)—A German high command communique today claimed German bombing planes shot down two flying boats and scored a "probable hit on an English cruiser" in a raid on the Shetland Islands yesterday.

(British spokesmen said the Shetland Islands suffered no damage except a few shattered windows.)

At the same time authorized sources indicated a sink-on-sight Nazi sea campaign was in the making, involving submarine attacks without warning. Berlin newspapers published a list of 29 British and five French merchant ships as armed for combat.

German Report of Raid

After reporting quiet on the Western Front, the high command communique asserted:

"Despite unfavorable weather, a German flying squadron undertook an attack on the Shetland Islands. In the encounter two flying boats were destroyed. A probable hit on an English cruiser could not with certainty be observed. All of our own planes returned unharmed."

German sources, in commenting on the published list of armed Allied merchant vessels, said each submarine commander would be guided by circumstances whether or not to sink a ship on the list without warning. The naming of the merchant craft, they said, merely constituted a public notice that Germany regards these vessels as warships or at least as potential snipers.

NEW POLICY TO INFORM PUBLIC

Canada's Part in War Will be Kept Before People's Attention

Ottawa, Nov. 14—(CP)—The government is considering adopting a new policy to provide better facilities for informing the public about Canada's part in the war.

After receiving numerous suggestions that Canadians be given more details about the war effort, the sub-committee of the Cabinet on Public Information this week will decide the course of action likely to be adopted by the administration.

Two alternatives appear possible: 1. To have one man or a group of men supervise all government war publicity; 2. To Develop the publicity machinery now existing, which consists of each department operating through its own channels by the medium of publicity or press liaison men.

It is probable that Postmaster-General Power will take over the chairmanship of the cabinet sub-committee on public information from Labor Minister McLarty, who has held it since the cabinet shuffle six weeks ago along with his new portfolio.

Government officials consider Mr. Power would be in a better position to deal with the situation than Mr. McLarty now that he holds the Postmaster General post, previously held by the Windsor, Ont., Minister.

Before he relinquishes the job, however, Mr. McLarty will confer with other committee members and work out proposals which will smooth the way for his colleague when he takes over the position and virtually becomes Minister of Public Information.

The sub-committee's aim in this week's discussions, it is understood, will be primarily to formulate some policy to avoid uncertainty as to which departments should give out information and to prevent undue restrictions being placed on publicity relating to the war.

PRINCESS ALWAYS AFTER MONEY SAYS ROTHERMERE

Press Magnate Testifies in Action for Alleged Breach of Contract

LARGE SUMS GIVEN

London, Nov. 14—(CP)—Viscount Rothermere testified he had paid Princess Stefanie Hohenlohe-Waldenberg around £50,000 ($222,800) from 1932 to 1938 and "thought she was treating me with an utter lack of chivalry" when she sent them.

Lord Rothermere, defending himself in an action by the princess for alleged breach of contract, said he had paid her "considerably more" than £51,000 before his retirement as a newspaper publisher in 1938 when he was 70 and "did not contemplate any more political missions" such as he had employed the Princess on.

Lord Rothermere said he offered to contribute to funds for restoration of the Hapsburgs because him gifts and also the bills for "Hungary was so poor that she could not re-establish a monarchy without a proper income" and added "It was a great pity it didn't come off"

Lord Rothermere said his campaign for friendship with Nazi Germany "was before Hitler ran amok" and retorted "I am not a sovereign state yet" when asked if the Princess had acted as his "ambassador."

Asked if his son Esmond "had a reception as enthusiastic as that accorded Bonnie Prince Charlie in the highlands when he made his triumphal entry into Hungary," Lord Rothermere replied "much bigger."

"There were probably more Hungarians than highlanders," rejoined the Princess' counsel.

Lord Rothermere denounced as "preposterous" the suggestion that he had agreed to keep the Princess "for the rest of her life" and added "There was no opportunity of 'giving' her money because she was always asking for it."

"The Princess," Lord Rothermere continued, "would become dumb if she didn't talk about money. She was always pestering and badgering me so I sent her away to Budapest and Berlin."

"But it surely was a little tough on Hitler?" asked the Princess' counsel.

"Oh, I'm not sorry," Lord Rothermere replied.

"Hitler richly deserved it. In 1935 I thought Hitler really wanted peace above everything. I was wrong and so was half the population."

He agreed that when the Princess went to Berlin on his behalf, he "expected her to live like a queen" but denied he ever told her "I never let a woman down."

"I never let a woman down." he said.

BOMBS DID NO DAMAGE

London, Nov. 13—(CP)—The Admiralty announced tonight that German aircraft made two attacks on the Shetland Islands today but "were driven off by anti-aircraft gunfire."

"The bombs dropped did no damage," the communique said. Reports from the Shetlands said some bombs falling on land shattered farm house windows.

RUSSIANS HOPE TO BREAK FINNS BY WAR THREAT

Expense of Counter-Mobilization May Cause Finland to Come to Terms

DELEGATION RETURNS

Moscow, Nov. 14—(AP) — Soviet Russia, hoping the economic strain of counter-mobilization may bring Finland to terms, probably will continue massing troops along the Finnish border, diplomatic observers said today.

(Finland has been preparing for five weeks against a showdown with Russia, and approximately 300,000 of the 3,067,000 population has been mobilized for defence).

Belief was held here that the Finnish Diplomatic Mission, which departed for Helsingfors last night after resisting Soviet demands for certain territorial concessions would not return.

The Finns, silent and serious as they boarded a train, indicated that resumption of the negotiations was up to their government. The delegation is due in Helsingfors tomorrow.

Only one minor Soviet official, an assistant chief of protocol in the Commissariat of Foreign Affairs, accompanied the Finnish mission to the station. The Ministers of Norway, Sweden and Denmark were present to say goodbye.

The delegation, which twice before during the month-long negotiations returned to Helsingfors, had had only indirect contact with the Kremlin for the past five days.

Demands of Soviets

Russia's principal demands on Finland, as disclosed by Premier Vyacheslaff Molotoff, have been for a naval base on the northern coast of the Gulf of Finland, concessions on Finland's Arctic coast, and a strip of Finnish territory north of Leningrad. In return, Russia offered Finland a piece of lake-studded Soviet Karelia.

Shortly after the Finnish delegation's departure, a Russian broadcast criticized Finland for failure to advise the Soviet in advance of meteorological conditions blamed for floods rising in northern Russia.

The broadcast said the Neva River, which flows through Leningrad, was flooding "because of winds from Finland," and declared the Finns had failed to inform Russia of the situation as required by international convention.

Gayda Fails to See Any 'Historic Association' Between Britain, Italy

Rome, Nov. 14—(AP) — Virginio Gayda, Italy's leading editorial writer, says it ill behooves Great Britain to speak of the "historic association" of Britain, France and Italy in the Mediterranean while Britain controls the sea's two gateways—Gibraltar and the Suez canal.

"All that exists and is happening in the Mediterranean today tends to place Italy in the position of a minority and a menace," he wrote in today's Il Giornale D'Italia.

"It is not with these facts that one can speak of historic association. Such associations on the contrary suppose a parity of positions and rights. It would therefore be fitting for the democratic allies.... not to occupy themselves for the moment with Mediterranean problems, Italian positions and interests."

This statement is apparently in reply to a radio address at London by the First Lord of the Admiralty last Sunday, when he said to the "Italy, which we feared had become separated from its historic association with England and France in the Mediterranean— an association which will become still more fruitful—has adopted the wise policy of peace."

Russian Troops Enter Lithuania Under Treaty

Kaunas, Lithuania, Nov. 14—(AP) —Russian troops, vanguard of a force of 20,000, moved into Lithuania today in accordance with the Russian-Lithuanian treaty signed Oct. 10.

The treaty gave Russia the right to establish army garrisons in the Balt' country.

A regiment of artillery arrived at Alytus in southern Lithuania and motorized troops waited at Gaizunai near Kaunas. Soviet cavalry forces were moving into Prieny, 25 miles to the south. The strongest garrison will be quartered at Nowovileaka, near Wilno (Vilna).

Lithuania's own army consists of only 22,500.

CHARGE RUMORS SPREAD BY GESTAPO

Stockholm, Nov. 14—(CP—Havas) —The Swedish newspaper Social-Demokraten today said the Gestapo German secret police instigated rumors that Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria was dead in order to discourage south German monarchists fomenting anti-Nazis and anti-Prussian sentiment in favor of south German separatism.

(The German news agency on Oct. 16 denied rumors that Prince Rupprecht had been killed fighting in Poland.)

Full Military Honors Shown Late Gen. Macdonell

Saint John, N.B., Nov. 14 (CP)—Major-General the Hon. A. H. Macdonell, C.M.G., D.S.O., was buried today with full military honors.

A military escort of three units was provided for the Canadian soldier and statesman who died at his home at Rothesay, N.B., on Sunday. Units were the 3rd New Brunswick Coast Brigade, R.C.A., New Brunswick Rangers and Saint John Fusiliers.

The service in the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception was largely attended, and a long cortege followed the gun carriage bearing the body to the cemetery at Rothesay.

Major-General Macdonell was Honorary Colonel of the Royal Canadian Regiment.

Masons Called To Fight Communism And Save World

London, Ont., Nov. 14—(CP) — Rev. W. D. Stenlake, of Aylmer United Church, called upon the Masonic Order in Canada last night to battle Communism "so that the catastrophe which threatens to engulf civilization may be averted."

He wa- guest speaker at the 60th anniversary banquet of Union Lodge A. F. & A. M. Representatives from many lodges in Western Ontario attended.

Communism has made so much progress in Canada, said Mr. Stenlake that atheism is being taught openly to children in Sunday Schools in some of the larger Canadian cities.

The minister declared "in Toronto children have been taught to clench their fists in the Communist salute, and cry "there is no God'. That is the threat that faces Canada."

Controversy Stirred Over Irish Objections

Washington, Nov. 14 — (AP)— Controversy over shipping restrictions in the United States Neutrality Law was stirred anew today by Irish objections to being included in the war zone and by a proposal to prevent transfer of United States vessels to foreign flags.

At the same time, another Maritime problem—the case of the City of Flint—appeared nearer solution when the German Government ordered its warships not to interfere with the United States freighter on her way home.

FUGITIVES YIELD WITHOUT RESISTANCE

Malvern Ark., Nov. 14 (AP)— Three bedraggled fugitives, hunted five days for the $3,000 robbery of the Merchants and Planters Bank of Sparkman Nov. 9, surrendered without resistance today to a posse of officers.

The men, armed with a shotgun and a pistol, were surrounded in a brick plant on the outskirts of Malvern. Weak from exposure and hunger, they told State police they were "glad to give up."

The men gave their names as Otis Ewing, 34, Berl Trammel, 22, and Preston Vautrot, 41.

Germans Apologize For Reported Sinking of Battleship Ark Royal

London, Nov. 14—(CP)— A sharp turn by the British battleship Ark Royal led German aviators to believe they had sunk the vessel, according to the Marquess of Donegall's "Almost in Confidence" column in the Sunday Dispatch.

According to this account, the Germans saw the vessel heel over in going to the aid of a disabled British submarine and sent a message to headquarters that it had been sunk. Later the Nazi airmen dropped a barrel containing a note apologizing to the Royal Navy for making the mistake.

Here is Lord Donegall's story:

"The incident occurred when units of the Home Fleet went to the help of a damaged British submarine.

"When the Germans last saw the Ark Royal she was heeling over due to turning at high speed. They can therefore be forgiven for reporting that they had sunk her. Goebbels' department duly announced it with glee. However, a day or two later the German air force discovered their mistake and reported the fact to the German authorities. Still the lie keeps coming over the air, night after night.

"The next thing that happened was that a lone German plane approached the Ark Royal's base and while still well out to sea dropped a bulky object. Our people went out in a boat and retrieved it. The object proved to be an empty keg—empty except for a message, which read:

"This is to tell you that we are sorry we gave wrong information about the Ark Royal. We have reported our mistake to the authorities. So blame Goebbels and not us."

AIR-TECHNICIANS ARRIVE

Ottawa, Nov. 14 — (CP)—The staff of Air Chief Marshal Sir Robert Brook-Popham of the British Air Mission to Canada, was complemented today by the arrival of two administrative men and a technician. They are B. L. Parsons, W. J. Rodwell and P. R. Mersey, all of London.

AUSTRALIA LOOKS TO ITS GUNS

Although far, far removed from the theatre of war, Australia is rushing her preparations to come to the aid of the mother country. Here you see a battery of Australian field artillery in action at a training camp, where artillerymen are being trained for possible service in France.

A Thousand Canadians Fighting With Royal Air Force in France

(By EDWIN JOHNSON, Canadian Press Staff Writer).

With the Royal Air Force Somewhere in France, Nov. 14—(CP-Cable)—Anthony Eden, conducting ministers from the Dominions through positions held by the British forces in France, was interested today to learn that 1,000 Canadians already are fighting with the Royal Air Force.

These fliers, almost all of whom paid their own expenses to England to join the force, are helping keep the French skies virtually clear of enemy aircraft.

The Dominions Secretary took the Empire's representatives so suddenly and so secretly to the Royal Air Force headquarters today that the commander-in-chief was absent on a special job and they were entertained by the second-in-command.

Hon. T. A. Crerar, Canadian Minister of Mines and Resources, and the other Empire statesmen in the party spent half an hour in the cellar of an ancient chateau which constitutes the control room of the R.A.F. They saw how air-raid alarms are relayed from various stations to set anti-aircraft guns pounding and send planes skyward to repel enemy reconnaissance or bombing raids.

Mr. Eden asked especially to meet a 21-year-old New Zealander who shot down a German Dornier reconnaissance plane last week, but the young hero was absent on leave, seeing the gay spots of Paris.

All the time the Dominion's representatives were here, listening and observation posts kept a sharp lookout and all anti-aircraft guns were manned, including machine guns on roof-tops—just in case.

Norwegians Charge Ship Torpedoed Without Warning

London, Nov. 14 (CP)—Adrift 30 hours in a lifeboat before they were picked up by a trawler, 23 crew members of a Norwegian tanker who were put ashore today at a northern British port charged their ship had been torpedoed without warning.

Seventeen of their mates were still somewhere at sea in a second lifeboat, which the trawler hunted in vain before making port.

BOMBS DROPPED QUARTER MILE FROM SCHOOLHOUSE FILLED WITH CHILDREN

London, Nov. 14 — (CP)—Four German airplanes which raided the Shetland Islands yesterday dropped 500-pound bombs a quarter mile from a schoolhouse filled with children, the Information Ministry revealed today.

A total of at least twelve of the big missiles were dropped at various points; one seven-pound shrapnel fragment struck a small house.

Four of the bombs fell into the sea and exploded harmlessly. Four others fell close together on the shore, and another four about half a mile inland at the summit of a small hill.

According to one eye-witness the missiles dropped into the water were torpedoes such as are carried by some types of planes for attacks against vessels at sea.

NEEDY FAMILIES DINE ON VENISON TODAY

Niagara Falls, Ont., Nov. 14 — (CP)—Misfortune for a deer turned into good luck for needy families here today, when Game Warden Roy Muma distributed the meat of a 150-pound doe among various families. The deer was killed last night when it dashed into the front of a motorcar driven by G. C. Chataway of Fort Erie, who escaped unhurt. Damage to his car however was estimated at $150.

Pet Pony Unfastens Gate and Leads Five Other Horses to Safety

Tucson, Ariz., Nov. 14 (AP) — "Dick" is a hero among horses, as well as men.

Fire broke out in Deputy Sheriff Al Franco's stables. "Dick", a pet pony, calmly unfastened the gate with his nose, as he had been taught and led five other horses to safety.

WAR BRIEFS

Tokyo, Nov. 14 (AP)—The belief was prevalent in official Japanese circles that in reducing garrisons in North China, Great Britain and France previously had obtained a United States pledge to protect the allies' Chinese interests with American forces. Japanese newspapers welcomed the British action as a step toward "recognition of realities in China", but criticized placing any "watchdog" responsibility on the United States.

London, Nov. 14 (CP) — The Ministry of Information today issued the following item, cautioning editors it was not an official communique:

"Run, rabbit, run!"

"As already stated, there were no casualties during the air raid on the Shetlands yesterday. However, the corpse of one rabbit was subsequently discovered in a bomb crater."

REYNAUD CONFERS WITH BRITONS

London, Nov. 14—(CP)—Finance Minister Paul Reynaud, of France, here for conferences with British officials on common wartime financial and economic problems, talked today with the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir John Simon and other cabinet members.

'CLEARING HOUSE' IS ESTABLISHED FOR SKILLED MEN

Toronto, Nov. 14—(CP)—Under the command of Wing-Commander R. Collis a "clearing house" has been established at the Canadian National Exhibition Grounds here for the thousands of trained men needed in the scheme for training of empire air pilots in Canada. The men engaged in the "manning pool" are being trained in all the skilled branches of aeronautics, and mechanics that are required to keep fighting planes serviceable.

It was stated that it requires about 10 skilled men on the ground to keep each airplane in fighting trim in the air. That is the job of the men who are coming from all parts of Canada for training at the local station. Youthful would-be mechanics and aeronautics experts from all parts of the Dominion are being sent here for training.

Hundreds of men are already at the "manning pool" and it is expected that soon there will be a regular turnover of hundreds of skilled "airmen," although they do not actually fly.

Office of 'Clarion' Raided by Police

Toronto, Nov. 14—(CP)— City and Provincial Police today raided the offices of The Clarion, Toronto weekly newspaper with Leftist leanings. It was reported officers seized several books and records, but no arrests were made.

The raid was carried out on instructions from the Provincial Attorney-General's Department and was made in secrecy, police officials later refusing to discuss the matter.

The Clarion was issued daily until shortly before the outbreak of the war when it became a weekly.

Pan-American Treasury Heads in Conference

Guatemala City, Nov. 14—(CP) —Guatemala's Finance Minister, Jose Gonzalez Campo, welcomed delegates to the first Pan-American conference of Treasury Department representatives today with a plea for action to defend the economy of the western hemisphere against the shock of the war.

Eighteen nations were represented as the conference opened this morning in the National Assembly Building.

Calling upon the delegates to act in a spirit of Pan-American unity, Gonzales Campo declared that "this reunion is inspired by eminently practical motives." He outlined the principal objectives of the conference as follows:

"New and easier means of communication, that we may know each other more intimately and overcome the great distances that separate but do not divide us."

"A flexible, united banking organization for the intensification of credit."

"Gradual disappearance of barriers to the exchange of our products, which has become indispensable."

"Creation of a continental spirit that today, more than ever, is needed because of the conflict in the old world, which is disorganizing a part of our economy and which is closing some of our markets."

Gonzalez Campo said such measures were needed as "immediate general defence measures" as a result of the war.

OFFICIALS TRAVEL MILES TO RENEW BAIL

Stratford, Ont., Nov. 14—(CP)— Police court officials today had to travel seven or eight miles out of the city to renew bail for Stewart McNab, 40, North Hastings resident facing a charge of abduction, because McNab is ill in bed. The bail renewal was made at the man's bedside by Magistrate J. A. Makins who adjourned the case for two weeks on the understanding that if McNab is able to be out before that time he will appear in court.

COMMUNISTS IN 'PEG COUNCIL ARE CRITICIZED

Mayor Queen Says He Would Like to See Them Repudiate Russia

TWO MAKE REPLY

Winnipeg, Nov. 14 (CP)—Communist members of Winnipeg City Council were criticized at last night's council meeting by Alderman C. E. Simonite, speaking on a motion by Alderman M. J. Forkin, Communist, to instruct city department heads to boycott Estevan coal until the strike in that Saskatchewan field is settled.

Mayor John Queen ruled out of order Mr. Simonite's motion: "That this council go on record as being opposed to dealing with any resolution presented by Aldermen who are representatives of the Communist party until they tell us where they stand in regard to the Russian government's invasion of Poland."

The Mayor said the Simonite motion would "contradict democracy" although "I'd be just as happy as you if the Communist Alderman would get up and repudiate Russia and re-state the ideals of democracy they claimed they supported three months ago."

Boycott Motion Defeated

Before his boycott motion was defeated nine to eight, Ald. Forkin voiced a claim that the Canadian Federation of Labor in the Estevan field is a "company union" and that 504 of 626 miners had voted for the United Mine Workers of America as their bargaining agency. The strike is for union recognition.

At this point Ald. Simonite rose waving a booklet which he said was a Communist anti-war pamphlet. Claiming the Forkin motion lacked sincerity, he attacked Communism as having" led us to believe they would lay down their lives to sweep Hitlerism off the face of the earth" and then profited by the Polish invasion.

Says Policies Shaped Here

Aldermen Jacob Penner and Andrew Bilecki, both elected as Communists, replied. Addressing Mayor Queen, Ald. Penner said, "You said you would be glad if we repudiated Russia. The Communist party does not receive instructions from the comintern. We shape our own policies with regard for the realities in Canada. We are affiliated with the Comintern but not controlled by it."

Ald. Bilecki claimed "this attack on our party is a subterfuge to defeat the (Forkin) motion.

Ald Forkin expressed willingness "to fight for my country when I am sure it is right." He said he had joined the armed forces at the age of 16 in 1914 and been wounded. As to the pamphlet, he "did not write it, had not read it, had not seen or distributed it."

Marshal von Blomberg Reported Arrested

London, Nov. 14—(CP)—A Reuters News Agency dispatch from Copenhagen tonight said Field Marshal Werner Von Blomberg, former German War Minister, and a number of high Nazis had been arrested.

Von Blomberg resigned from the German cabinet in February, 1938, when his marriage a month earlier to his secrtary 30 years his junior met with the disapproval of his fellow officers in the army.

Last month reports were current that he and other officers supposedly partial to a Hohenzollern restoration had been arrested and interned in Landberg fortress. These were subsequently officially denied in Berlin.

John Pello Takes Oath of Allegiance

London, Ont., Nov. 14 (CP)— John Pello, 65-year-old Italian, who refused to take an oath of allegiance to the King last week because, "I don't want to fight nobody," was back in the good graces of the relief department today.

A conference between Eric Moorhouse, lawyer, and Welfare Administrator Frank McKay decided that Pello didn't understand the significance of his refusal. Besides, he has since signed the oath, Mr. McKay was informed.

"He's getting old and seems merely to have no desire for fighting of any kind," explained Mr. McKay.

2 NETHERLANDS SOLDIERS INTERNED IN GERMANY

Amsterdam, Nov. 14—(CP-Havas) —Two Netherlands soldiers who accidentally crossed the German frontier near Elbergen, Gelderland province, have been arrested and interned by German frontier guards, it was disclosed today. The two Dutch soldiers, who were riding motorcycles passed over the border without being aware of it when they took a short cut across a field last Saturday.

RICHARD SAIR IS SENT TO TRIAL

Toronto, Nov. 14—(CP)— Richard Sair, publisher of the Toronto weekly "Hush" was committed for trial today on a charge of defamatory libel. Complainant is Michael Bernard, Toronto hotel owner.

Bernard charges that an article published in the Oct. 28 issue of "Hush" contravened section 334 of The Criminal Code.

In committing Sair for trial, Magistrate R. J. Browne said he would deal later with the question of bail.

Sculptress, Facing Eviction, Spurns $1000 Offer to Pay Her Back Taxes

Washington, Nov. 14 — (AP) — Sculptress Adelaide Johnson, faced with eviction from her studio home spurned an offer of $1,000 to pay her taxes today but the movement to help her went forward, nevertheless.

Elderly Mrs. Johnson told newsmen she would not accept an unidentified New York woman's $1,000 offer, made through Representative Sol Bloom of New York, Bloom said later he thought she would change her mind.

"A short time ago, $1,000 would have saved this place," Mrs. Johnson said, gesturing about her studio where several pieces of sculpture showed evidence of despairing decision to destroy them after her home was sold at auction for $7,800 under a tax proceeding.

Despite her determined rejection and a declaration that "relief, welfare and need are words that are not in my vocabulary," Bloom sent the New York headquarters of the American Red Cross a message accepting for her the $1,000 certified cheque proffered by "a nameless registered nurse."

The sender of the message, identifying herself only as a woman, said she would be "glad to pay" that sum toward relieving Mrs. Johnson's property from the tax lien which caused it to be sold at auction. Mrs. Johnson disclosed the financial troubles which beset her yesterday when she showed reporters the sculpture she had battered in a moment of desperation.

The benefactress wired Bloom that she could "assume no more" than the $1,000 but that she hoped "a pension may be raised by those women who reverence the freedom they here possess."

Lord Nuffield Donates Another Huge Sum for Soldiers' Benefit

London, Nov. 14— (CP)— Lord Nuffield, automobile manufacturer and philanthropist, has supplemented his £1,500,000 ($6,675,000) gift to buy recreational equipment for men in the military services by another £50,000, it was learned today.

The original gift was in the form of 1,000,000 ordinary shares of Lord Nuffield's firm, Morris Motors Ltd. The interest is to be used for the recreational fund as it is collected.

The latest gift is in cash to enable the military services to begin building up their recreational facilities at once without waiting for the first dividends from the endowment fund. It was offered last Thursday in a letter from Lord Nuffield to War Secretary Leslie Hore-Belisha.

Lord Nuffield stipulated that at least £15,000 be used immediately to buy radio sets for the British expeditionary force.

"The outbreak of the war," he said in his letter, "has intensified a need which the trust was created to serve. Distributions which the Trustees have already made have been drawn from repayable advances made by myself. In order to free the trust from the liability it thus incurred in its early stages and enable it to make further immediate distributions without involving added borrowing, I have decided to increase my gift by donating to the trustees forthwith the additional amount of £50,000."

The War Secretary replied:

"The advances which you have made ahead or due dividend dates have enabled, among other things, wireless sets to be provided for many serving in out stations, relieving the loneliness of those whose vigilance is protecting us at this time.

"Now your kindness is turned toward those in France, and you have wished that part of your new gift should be devoted to wireless sets for the force in France. Thus they will be able to listen to the world outside and keep in close contact with our own country. They will, from the front, hear programs of news and entertainment and be able in their leisure moments to enjoy imagining themselves still before their own firesides."

MOTHER'S APPEAL ANSWERED BY 100 BLOOD DONORS

Philadelphia, Nov. 14—(AP)— Science said "no hope" but a mother prayed today that from a stream of blood offers will come "the one chance in a million that would save my little girl."

Four months ago eight-year-old Kathryn Felt became ill with acute lymphatic leukemia, a disease in which white corpuscles destroy the red. Physicians say no victim of the acute type has lived more than six months.

Mrs. Charles Felt broadcast Sunday night an appeal for blood donors. She had been told that a transfusion of type two blood from a person who had survived the disease might help.

Offers poured in by telephone, telegram and mail until there were nearly 100 today, but science shook its head.

One offer came from Mrs. Joseph Root of Westport, Conn., who said she suffered from acute lymphatic leukemia 12 or 16 years ago.

Her physician, Dr. I. F. Scoffield, confirmed he had treated her for the disease before she went to a hospital. He added.

"Of course I cannot state whether she was cured, but the fact she is alive today is heartening. Hers is the first case I know of in medical history that has not resulted in quick death."

"These people are obviously mistaken," said a spokesman for the Philadelphia County Medical Society. "Some of them most likely have a chronic form of the disease and have shown some temporary improvement.

"In chronic cases (as compared with acute), persons may live a long time and not suffer any severe effects—but we have no record of any case that has been actually cured.

"The belief that the injection of blood from a person recovered from the disease will cure this little girl is futile, as undoubtedly no such case exists."

FOUR PHYSICIANS PROVED WRONG

Los Angeles, Nov. 14 — (AP)— John H. Mills, 70, retired July 1 from a school engineer's job as physically unfit, stood before the school board yesterday to plead for his position back. "I offer you these letters from four physicians," he declared. "I'm as sound and healthy as I ever was." His voice choked and he slumped to the floor. "He's dead," a physician said softly.

SAUCE FOR RESTAURANT OWNER

Council Bluffs, Ia., Nov. 14—(CP) —A restaurant owner here, appalled at the amounts of tomato sauce splashed on hamburgers and hot dogs by his High School student trade, decided to charge a nickel extra for use of the sauce bottle. The students reacted by bringing their own bottles of sauce and peddling it at counter and tables.

DOCTOR GINSBERG FAILS IN MOTION TO CHANGE NAME

London, Ont., Nov. 14—(CP)— In a decision handed down today, County Judge A. A. Ingram refuses Dr. Abraham Gerald Ginsberg, London, permission to change his name to "Avron Gerald Kingsley" for "convenience in the practice of his profession."

It was the first local application under an amended provincial statute which tightens restrictions in regard to name changing. In his examination of two weeks ago, Dr. Ginsberg said that while working as an interne at Victoria Hospital he found friction between himself and a number of patients because he is Jewish. He has applied for an appointment in Toledo, Ohio, he informed and he wished to change his name legally before moving to the United States.

Judge Ingram's decision in the case reads, in part: "No doubt every person has the right to decline to engage a Jewish doctor, and it seems to me that it is neither fair to Dr. Ginsberg nor to his prospective patients to leave them under the impression that in calling Dr. Kingsley, they are calling a physician who is not "Jewish".

"Dr. Ginsberg desires to use the name Kingsley for the purpose of concealing from any patients who might object to treatment by a Jewish doctor the fact that he is Jewish. I believe that this act is intended to prevent even such minor deception."

URGES OTTAWA ACTION ON "WET" CANTEENS

Ottawa, Nov. 14 (CP)—Members of the Ottawa presbytery of the United Church of Canada, in a resolution today called upon the Federal government to abolish "wet" canteens in armouries or placed under the control of the Canadian militia during recruiting or training periods.

In approving the resolution it was moved that a copy be sent to Prime Minister Mackenzie King., Defence Minister Rogers, Provincial Premiers and the Secretary of the General Council of the United Church

SOVIET VERBAL BARRAGE

War of Nerves Expected Though Finn Negotiator Says Finland Can Hold Out Much Longer Than Seven Months

By CHARLES NICHOLS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

High tension charges the narrow, rugged line dividing little Finland from its vast Soviet neighbor following collapse of bargaining over Russian demands for Finnish territory.

Disruption of the long, taut negotiations, caused by Finland's "obstinacy" in refusing to give all that Russia asked, left the relations of the two countries in a state of angry peace today. Russia's controlled press and radio taunted its Baltic neighbors. Finland, silent, sharpened defences.

BROTHER MEMBER OF CREW OF VESSEL PRESUMABLY SUNK

Dauphin, Man., Nov. 15—(CP)—Mrs. Norman McLeod of this town 150 miles northwest of Winnipeg has received a cable from the British Admiralty that her brother, John Paterson, 18, was a crew member of H.M.S. Northern Rover, which last week was listed by the Admiralty as missing and presumably sunk.

Mrs. McLeod said her brother joined the naval reserve at Stornoway, Scotland, last spring.

Canada Spent $57,875,450 On Beer in 1938

Ottawa, Nov. 15—(CP)— Canadians did not spend as much on beer in 1938 as they did the previous year but nevertheless rolled out the barrel at a merry pace, it was shown in figures on the brewing industry released today by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Weather and gas warfare! Weather affects all operations of war and some weapons, but no weapons so much as chemical agents. Named in order, the weather elements most influential are wind, precipitation, temperature, pressure, clouds and humidity. Poisonous gases are used for their physiological effects on the enemy, smokes for screening operations, and incendiary agents for starting fires. It is easily seen that in using any one of these three the weather situation at the time may be immensely important—favorable at the time for one side, and at another time for the other. In general, since wind is the most important factor and is prevailingly west armies to the west have the advantage as far as gas is concerned.

BRITAIN STOCKED WITH FOODSTUFFS DURING WARTIME

No Immediate Necessity for Rationing System, Certainly Not Before January

ECONOMIC UNITY

Blockade Will be Drawn in Even Closer Ring About German Reich

London, Nov. 15—(CP)— Great Britain and France have agreed upon "close and continuous co-operation in the financial and economic spheres," the Treasury announced today as Paul Reynaud, French Finance Minister, conferred with Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer. Reynaud left late by plane for Paris.

The meeting came as Britain, grimly marking off her sea losses in the accounts of war, honored two aviator heroes and tightened her combat position along the home, military and diplomatic fronts.

The order of the British Empire was awarded to flying officers Reginald C. Gravely, who rescued his observer from his flaming plane, and Sergeant Fred Henry Gardiner who, despite an eye wound, guided his damaged plane back to his base and succeeded in extinguishing a fire that broke out after he landed.

Gravely began his air career with the London Busmen's Flying Club paying sixpence a week and obtaining half an hour's flying tuition each fortnight. He quit his job as clerk with the London Transport Board to join the R.A.F. two years ago. He and Gardiner are 25 years of age.

Germany Short Of Essential Foods Socialists Say

London, Nov. 15—(CP)—The Independent Labor Party announced today it had heard again from German Socialists after a six-week interruption. The reports from the Reich described shortages of all essential foods and misery among the working people.

SOVIET AMBASSADOR MEETS JAPANESE

Tokyo, Nov. 15—(CP-Havas) — Constantin Smetanin, the new Soviet Ambassador, held his first meeting today with Foreign Minister Kichisaburo Nomura since arriving last week from Moscow. Further meetings were arranged.

The Japanese foreign office is said to be opposed to any general Russo-Japanese agreement preferring a systematic settlement of outstanding disputes such as the Siberian fisheries, the Sakhalin oil fields, the Manchoukuo frontier, and related issues.

Three Persons Escape Death In Accident at Campbellford

Cars Collide on Brighton Highway Resulting in Injuries to Passengers

NEARLY GO IN CANAL

Campbellford, Ont., Nov. 15—(CP)—Result of head-on crash on Brighton highway south of here last night three persons had a narrow escape from possible serious injury.

Horace F. Norman of Kingston, driver of a southbound car suffered a badly sprained neck, shoulder bruises and cuts about both knees A northbound car operated by Lorne Alyea of Consecon a car salesman for a Trenton firm, and his companion, Cecil Ames of Frankford, were shaken up. Alyea escaped with body bruises while Ames had his face and nose badly gashed when thrown against the windshield.

Dr. C. A. Bright rendered first aid. Both cars were badly damaged. The Alyea car skidded sideways after the crash coming to a rest within a few feet of the waters of the Trent canal.

BLUNT, REALISTIC SOLUTIONS HOPE OF UNITED STATES

American Republics Face Economic Problems Arising Out of War

TO ASSURE STABILITY

Inter - American Advisory Committee Will Consider Number of Problems

Washington, Nov. 15— (AP)— The United States sought today "blunt and realistic" solutions by the American republics of the economic problems arising from the war.

The Inter-American Financial and Economic Advisory committee, appointed at the Panama Conference in September, called it first meeting at the Pan-American Union. Sumner Welles, Acting Secretary of State, is the United States representative.

Meanwhile, at Guatemala City, delegates from 18 countries are attending the first Pan American Conference of Treasury representatives. There, too, problems presented by the war in Europe were under discussion.

Opportunity is Unique

Welles said the Advisory Committee, composed of technical representatives from each of the 21 republics, "has a unique opportunity to undertake a task of the highest significance.

FIVE OF MISSING SEAMEN ARE SAFE

Casualty List of Destroyer is Now 1 Dead 1 Missing and 16 Wounded

London, Nov. 15—(CP Cable) — Five of six seamen missing after the sinking of a British destroyer were reported safe today. The destroyer, whose name was not announced, sank after hitting a German mine.

Those now reported safe included leading stoker E. Nicholls. One of the five was seriously injured. The casualty list now reads: One dead, one missing, 16 wounded.

The man still missing is able seaman F. G. Hall.

LINER MANHATTAN TO BE TIED UP

New York, Nov 15.—(APP)—The United States Lines Liner Manhattan arrived today from Southampton and Le Verdon, two days late because of head seas encountered all the way across. The 25,000-ton vessel, which cost $10,000,000, will be tied up at her pier under terms of the Neutrality Legislation which bars United States ships from combat zones.

W. H. Wright Donates $50,000 to Red Cross

Toronto, Nov. 15—(CP)—William E. Wright, Vice-President of two major mines in the Kirkland Lake area, has contributed $50,000 to the Canadian Red Cross, it was announced here today.

Mr. Wright served with the British army in the South African campaign and with the Canadian forces in the first Great War.

DOG EATS TOO MUCH TO STAY IN EUROPE

Hobojen, N.J., Nov. 15—(AP) — Rolf, a victim of his appetite, arrived on the steamship Pennland today, a canine refugee from the war zone.

The big German shepherd dog was claimed by his master, Dr. Lodewyk Lek, who is visiting here. Dr. Lek said servants in his Brussels home shipped the dog because it ate a half-pound of meat a day and they feared it would be killed by the authorities.

Canvass of the City for Red Cross Campaign Starts Today; Funds Needed for War Work

Forces of the local Red Cross Society swung into action today in the drive for funds for the National Campaign that is already well under way in other parts of the Dominion.

With the objective of $8,000 which will be Belleville's contribution to the national aim of three millions of dollars, to be collected within the next ten days, women workers, representatives of various organizations of the city, inaugurated their efforts in the residential parts of the city shortly after nine o'clock.

Men canvassers, who meet in the Y.M.C.A. for final campaign instructions tonight, will launch their efforts tomorrow in the business and industrial sections of the city.

Canvasses will be made from house to house, and an urgent appeal to assist to the utmost in this humanitarian work has been put forth by Campaign Chairman Howard Clarke and other officials of the local branch of the society.

Local Branch Always Active

One of the few branches of the society that maintained its activities during the period between the first Great War and the present one, the Belleville Red Cross Branch holds an enviable record in service. For nearly a quarter century it devoted its efforts to assisting the out-post Red Cross hospitals in various parts of this district, and its fine work has been complimented on several occasions.

This in turn has been largely due to the generosity of the residents of this city and district, and the various committees feel sure that once again, the purses of Belleville will be opened in support of a cause that directly affects everyone in the nation.

Courteous collectors will call on residents and everyone is urged to "dig down" in answer to the call of the Red Cross.

16 AIRDROMES PHOTOGRAPHED BY R. A. F. PILOTS

Harbors, Towns, Military Objectives of Enemy Photographed from Low Altitudes

800-MILE FLIGHTS

London, Nov. 15 (CP)—Reconnaissance flights over Germany involving acts of gallantry and resulting in the taking of numerous photographs of military objectives were described today.

Men on such flights in the past several weeks have returned with photographs of sixteen enemy airdromes and of the well-defended ports of Emden and Hamburg, it was said. Many towns, harbors and military objectives were photographed from low altitudes.

Enemy territory on several occasions has been penetrated to a depth of more than 200 miles. Active opposition of German fighters and anti-aircraft fire was widespread. Nevertheless, British aircraft succeeded in reaching objectives and securing photographs and the information required.

More than 100 photographs showing enemy military objectives in considerable detail were brought back in a single flight. During another reconnaissance flight in which an enemy airdrome was the objective a British aircraft flew so low that it actually passed under two German bombers which were approaching the field. At other times it flew so high that the crew had to rely on oxygen to breathe.

ALLIES BLAMED BY SOVIET PAPERS OVER FINLAND

British and French Charged With Anti-Soviet Tone of Scandinavian Opinion

DRASTIC STEP UNLIKELY

Moscow, Nov. 15—(CP-Havas) — Allied intervention was blamed by Soviet government newspapers yesterday for Finnish stubbornness in the face of Russian proposals for territorial exchanges and granting of bases on Finnish soil.

Krasnaya Zvezda, the commissariat of defence journal, charged British and French pressure was responsible for the Anti-Soviet tone of Scandinavian opinion, and said Great Britain "answered Holland's initiative for peace by ordering all British subjects not having vital business in that country to leave immediately."

The Allies are responsible for rumors of an impending German drive through the lowlands to frighten neutral countries into taking up arms against the Reich, Krasnaya Zvezda claimed.

Not only did Great Britain and France encourage Finnish resistance in the negotiations with the Kremlin that were broken off when the Finnish delegates left Moscow for Helsingfors Monday night but they are applying the same tactics in the Balkans by pushing formation of an anti-Soviet bloc there, the newspaper further claimed.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

If and when intensive military action opens on the western front the opposing commands will probably know more about their enemies than was known by their predecessors at any stage in the first Great War. Credit for this must go to their airmen who for weeks have been systematically carrying out reconnaissance flights.

Within the last few days German airmen have been directing more attention to France and their reconnaissance flights cover a large area. They have flown over Paris and concentrated on parts of northern France where they apparently believe the British expeditionary force is encamped.

Since the start of the war the Allies have apparently devoted more attention to aerial reconnaissance than the Germans. Bombing raids both on the British Isles and on shipping have been Germany's chief air effort in the west.

It is safe to assume the whole of the Siegfried Line as well as the main industrial areas and lines of communication in western Germany have been photographed from the air by the British and French.

The information about the enemy and his territory thus obtained is useful first as a means of deducing his intentions about future operations and secondly in bombing raids. The start of an offensive by either side would be the signal for the release of a hail of bombs from the air. Aircraft would immediately swing into action against the attacking side in an attempt to shatter lines of communication and destroy supplies back of the front line.

Also, should the German air force attack British cities the question of retaliation would arise. Should retaliation be necessary the Allied air forces now know the spots at which bombs would do the maximum damage to Germany's war machine with the minimum danger to civilians.

MOTHER BUYING GROCERIES WHEN FIRE BREAKS OUT

House is Raging Inferno by Time She Can Reach Home

FATHER IS SOLDIER

Mother Tries to Force Way Into Building But is Restrained

Cataraqui, Ont., Nov. 15 (CP)—A soldier enlisted for overseas service, returned today to view the charred remains of his four children—victims of the worst tragedy in the history of this eastern Ontario village.

The soldier — William Taylor of the Royal Canadian Engineers — drove from Ottawa where he was stationed, on advice last night of the fire which burned his home and children while his wife was at a store in the village, five miles west of Kingston.

Mrs. Taylor, in a state of collapse, was unable to explain the cause of the blaze which made such rapid headway. Late last night, about five hours after the outbreak, remains of the children, Beatrice, 6, Herbert, 4; Bruce, 2, and Maynard, 16 months, were removed from the ruins.

Mother Tries to Enter to Rescue.

The frantic mother, on returning from the store, tried to enter the burning building and had to be restrained by force. Neighbors, unable to attempt rescues, formed a bucket brigade in a fruitless effort to check the flames which swept through the two-storey stone building.

Mrs. F. E. Murphy of Cataraqui, sister of Mrs. Taylor, cared for the sorrowing mother last night. Mrs. Taylor told her the front door of the house was always locked but the back door was open and the children could have escaped if they had not been trapped by the flames.

Coroner Dr. C. W. Bennett visited the scene and announced there would be no need of an inquest.

Those who arrived early at the scene of the fire saw no sign of the children. They believe that the youngsters were either upstairs when the blaze broke out or became frightened and went upstairs to try to escape.

An hour and a half after the fire was first noticed, the roof caved in and carried with it large timbers which supported the floors. Some household belongings close to windows were saved, but all personal belongings of Mr. and Mrs. Taylor, including the family album, were destroyed.

LOSES BET, EATS STRAW HAT

Santa Maria, Calif., Nov. 15 — (AP)—Journalism Instructor Harold Burum offered to eat his hat if his students ever got the high school paper out on time. The students did it and called on Burum to down the straw topper. They forgot that he was a chemistry teacher, too. He concocted a brew that reduced the straw to sandwich-spread consistency, spread it on crackers and ate it.

MOSCOW 'RED STAR' SAYS ALLIES SEEK BALKAN BLOC

Scheme Would be Blow at Germany and Obstruction to Communist Growth

ITALY'S POSITION

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

New York, Nov. 15 (AP) — The Soviet newspaper 'Red Star' charges the allies are seeking to create a Balkan bloc under their domination and also to gain control of the Dardanelles.

Achievement of such a scheme would be a blow at Germany and an obstruction to Communist politico-economic expansion. But many disagree with the newspaper in interpreting the Balkan situation.

Hungary and the Balkan states are in process of being welded into a neutral bloc which presumably would be of a defensive nature. The moving spirit in this far-reaching enterprise, however, is Premier Mussolini of Italy who has his own interests in that region. Somewhere in this picture the allies fit.

It is probable the Fascist leader has the blessings of Britain and France. The friendly gestures made by the allies toward Rome lead some to suspect they are giving Mussolini more than moral support in his centure.

Relations between Italy and the allies aren't so touchy as they were not long ago. Britain's First Lord of the Admiralty Winston Churchill made what seemed like a significant statement in his speech Sunday. He said that "Italy which we feared had become separated from its historic association with England and France in the Mediterranean—an association which will become still more fruitful—has adopted the wise policy of peace."

He was criticized by Virginio Gayda, Italian editorial writer who speaks with authority. Gayda said it didn't become Britain to speak of the historic association of the three countries in the Mediterranean while the British control the sea's two gateways—Gibraltar and the Suez Canal. However, one suspects that in a back-handed manner he was telling England that Italy insists on greater rights.

That Il Duce doesn't intend to let Italy get caught between the allied and the German millstones in the war seems apparent. He definitely is out to improve his country's position while the going is good, and his drive to create the Balkan bloc is part of his program.

German Command Opposes Offensive, Watches Russia

Reports from German Sources Say Military Chiefs Have Prevented General Attack in Air on Britain

SYMPATHY FOR FINNS

Resistance to Nazi Self-Effacement Before Soviet is Now Being Openly Expressed—Hitler's Political Entourage Reported Strong for Immediate Reaction Writer).

Amsterdam, Nov. 15 — (CP-Havas) — Opposition of his general staff has so far prevented Adolf Hitler ordering an offensive either on the western front or in the air against Great Britain, according to reports today from German sources.

These sources said Hitler's political entourage was strong for immediate action as a reply to the "attempted assassination" of Hitler at Munich. On the other hand, the German military chiefs have firmly held no western offensive can be attempted so long as uncertainty continues over Russian intentions.

Guarded Sympathy for Finns

It has been noted certain sections of the German Press have expressed guarded sympathy for the Finns. Nazi diplomacy has given way to the Soviets in the northeast and the southeast, even going so far as to condemn a proposed neutral Balkan bloc which Germany formerly approved in order to please Italy. But resistance in the general staff to this Nazi self-effacement is now openly being expressed, the reports said.

Justice Tucker Returns Judgment for Lord Rothermere With Costs

London, Nov. 15. — (CP)—Princess Stafanie Hohenlohe Waldenberg, former political representative of Viscount Rothermere in Europe, lost a breach of contract suit today against the British publisher who testified he paid her £51,000 ($225,000) for less than six years' services.

The court termed a portion of her testimony "nebulous and unreliable". She contended Lord Rothermere had agreed to pay her £5,000 a year for life.

ITALY LAUNCHES NEW BATTLESHIP

Impero is Third Vessel in Program to Give Italy Eight Capital Ships

Genoa, Nov 15—(AP)— Italy today launched the 35,000-ton battleship Impero, third vessel constructed in a program to give the Italian navy a total of eight capital ships. Two sister ships of the Impero — the Littorio and Vittorio Veneta — have been launched and are due for completion next year. A fourth, the Roma, is under construction.

Italy now has only two battleships in service, the Conte di Cavour and Giulio Cesare, modernized in 1937. Two others, the Caio D'ulio and Andrea Doria, are undergoing reconstruction and are scheduled to go back into service next summer.

BRITISH TO SHIP COAL TO CANADA

Producers Will Have Cargoes Moving Westward in as Great Volume as They Can Find Ships

Ottawa, Nov. 15—(CP)— British coal producers, anxious to maintain their Canadian market outlet, will continue to move Welsh and Scotch anthracite across the Atlantic in as great volume as they can find ships, the Dominion government fuel authorities declare.

British coal provides an excellent cargo for ships sent to this side of the ocean to carry war supplies back to Britain, it is pointed out. The British coal has become familiar to Canadian householders, and the fine buckwheat variety is in wide use with blowers in industrial plants because of the cheapness of electric power for blowers in Eastern Canada.

Price increases have been small so far, and little trouble in that direction is anticipated so long as the Allied naval forces can control the seas and keep war risk insurance at a low premium. The increase in war risk insurance was sharp at first, from about six shillings and threepence a ton in August to about 15 shillings a ton at present.

The great difficulty at present is to find ships to carry the coal to Canada, but as ships become more accessible and the convoy system more efficient, greater supplies of British coal are expected.

Britain has stepped up her coal production to meet wartime needs, and in addition the British Isles now supply much of the coal that France previously imported from Germany and Poland.

According to the September War Measures Act of 1939, all enemy aliens must register at the nearest detchment of R.C.M.P. and report hereafter each succeeding month.

Anyone Making Over 100 Gallons of Wine Must Get a Permit

With a view to checking the spread of bootlegging in home-made wine, the Ontario Liquor Control Board will immediately adopt a regulation whereby any person manufacturing more than one hundred gallons of wine will be compelled to obtain a permit from the board authorities, it was announced today.

"The new regulation will not, to any extent, affect or inconvenience anyone legitimately making wine for personal consumption," Liquor Commissioner A. St. Clair Gordon said. "On the other hand, it will, by registration system, materially aid the police in suppressing bootlegging. It will also, by diverting to legitimate channels purchases of wine, give to the government a revenue which they have not heretofore received, in that licensed wineries which pay a license and gallonage tax should receive the additional volume of business".

CARTOON IN PRAVDA HINTS FINLAND MAY MEET POLAND'S FATE

Moscow, Nov. 15 (AP)—A suggestion Finland may meet the same fate as Poland was made today in a cartoon appearing in the Communist Party newspaper Pravda.

The cartoon, a commentary of the breakdown of negotiations between Finland and Russia, pictured Polish Premier Wladislaw Sikorski and former Minister Joseph Beck entering a French hotel in tatters with the ruins of Poland behind them.

Sikorski was represented as saying: "Let's wait for Erkko (Finnish Foreign Minister Eljas Erkko); he's following in our footsteps."

CANADIAN PILOT IS WAR PRISONER

Two Canadians With R.A.F. Killed in Training Nov. 11th and Nov. 13

London, Nov. 15—(CP Cable) — The Air Ministry today announced the death of two Canadians with the Royal Air Force and the capture of a third.

Acting Pilot Officer E. E. Crofton of Verdun, Que., and Flight Lieut. W. I. Hammond, Montreal, were killed in training Nov. 11 and Nov. 13, respectively.

Pilot Officer Robert Maxwell of Calgary has been made a prisoner of war.

The Air Ministry said that Flight Lieut. R. C. Lewis, whose death was reported Nov. 11, was not a Canadian. He had been described as from Toronto. The Ministry said the mistake was a result of two officers of the same name and initials serving in the same squadron.

CECILE, EMILIE RECOGNIZED VOICE

Put Marie Straight as to Identity of Speaker on Radio as Her Majesty

Callander, Ont., Nov. 15—(CP)—Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, physician and guardian of the Dionne quintuplets, was chuckling today in his pleasant country doctor way as he told how Cecile and Emilie put Marie straight on the identity of the lady who spoke on the radio.

The quints were taken into the nursery office on Remembrance Day and informed they would hear someone they knew on the radio. It was the Queen's address from London.

Cecile showed the greatest interest in the speech. She squatted on the floor throughout, with her nose pressed against the cloth of the radio's panelled front.

At the end, Marie was hazy about just who the Queen was. It was Cecile who took Marie by the hand and recalled the meeting with Their Majesties in Toronto during the royal visit last May. "You know, the fine lady we went to Toronto to see? Well, that was the Queen."

Emilie decided the point needed further elaboration.

"The Queen," she said, "is the lady who cooks porridge for the King and puts milk and sugar on it for him."

At the end of the speech the five little sisters walked up to the radio and said in French: "Thank you, Your Majesty, and say goodbye to the King for us."

Rawdon

Rawdon—Mount Pleasant Rawdon Woman's Missionary Society convened at the church on Wednesday for their November meeting with an attendance of seventeen. The service opened with quiet music rendered by Mrs. John Holmes. The President, Mrs. Percy MacMullen gave one of Pearl Longley's poems on India and the roll call was answered with the keyword "Mercy". A prayer was offered for Canada. Mrs. Cyrus Summers led in the responsive reading of Psalm nineteen. Rev. J. E. Beckel gave a splendid report of the recent "World Service Conference" held in Belleville which emphasized how important it is for each individual to contribute to the cause of missions no matter how small the gift, it is all used to help along this worthwhile cause. Our missionaries are giving devoted love and service to bring the gospel to those in darkness but more recruits are sadly needed. The Treasurer reported $45.55 for October with over one hundred and fifty dollars to date.

In the business period plans were made for a quilting at the home of Mrs. Raymond McConnell and the bale for the Coe Hill district will be packed early in December.

Mrs. John Holmes outlined a chapter of the study book dealing with "The Untouchables." In this book Bishop Pickett gives a stirring account of the mass movements among the depressed classes. The writer also tells of the Bhils of Central India and how these people are coming into the Christian church.

The offering, amounting to over six dollars, was dedicated. Rev. J. E. Beckel presided for the election which was as follows:

President, Mrs. Percy MacMullen; Honorary President, Mrs. Allan Bailey; 1st Vice, Mrs. John Holmes; 2nd Vice, Mrs. Ed. McKeown; Recording Secretary, Mrs. George Weaver; Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. Frank Jeffs; Treasurer, Mrs. Kenneth Weaver; Secretary of Christian Stewardship and Finance, Mrs. Arthur Phillips; Leader Mission Band, Mrs. Morris Rose; Assistant, Mrs. Cyrus Summers; Associate Helpers Secretary, Mrs. Roy Thrasher; Assistants, Miss Annie Richards, Mrs. Blake Sharp; Supply Secretary, Mrs. Gordon Linn; Assistants, Mrs. Don Campbell and Mrs. Frank Jeffs; Community Friendship, (strangers), Mrs. Ed. OBITUARY

LATE COL. R. J. E. GRAHAM

The funeral of Lt. Col. R. J. E. Graham took place Tuesday afternoon from the family residence, Bayshore, Trent Road; being private only the immediate relatives and close friends were present. The service in the home and at the graveside in the family plot in Belleville Cemetery was conducted by the Rev. Dr. James Semple, pastor of Bridge Street United Church.

The bearers were Mr. George Graham, Mr. Bruce Graham, Mr. Jamieson Bone, Mr. W. E. Leonard, Toronto; Mr. Frank Lace, Toronto, and Mr. E. S. Beyers, Gananoque.

LATE C. HENDRICKS

Frankford, (Special)—The funeral of the late Clarence MacLean Hendrick took place from the United Church, Frankford, under the direction of the Masonic Order, Tuesday afternoon.

The committal service was conducted by the Rev. J. P. Lane of Frankford. During the service Miss Ethel Maybee sang "Home Sweet Home".

The Masonic rites were in charge of George Pollard Sr., P.M.

Pall-bearers were J. Dafoe, G. Johnson, B. Bush, B. Lott, S Nicolson, and G. Sine. Interment in Frankford Cemetery.

The floral tributes were many, showing the high esteem in which the deceased was held.

School Library Assoc. Formed by Teachers Of Thurlow Township

Rural teachers of Thurlow Township met at the Corby Public Library on Saturday to organize the Thurlow Township School Library Association, the aim of which is the purchase of a circulating collection of books for the use of rural school children.

The plan had been placed before the rural teachers at the recent convention by Miss Kathryn Gallagher, children's librarian, and Miss Ethel Adams, chief librarian, of Corby Public Library. The new course of studies has made the problem of supply of books a difficult one. It is almost impossible for any one school to buy a complete collection of material needs during the school term. By a co-operative plan already working out with marked success in other parts of the province, notably Sarnia and Orillia Townships, much of this difficulty is removed. By contributing equal amounts of money to a common fund a large number of books may be bought and discounts allowed by publishers are much higher. Half of the school's annual contribution to books is always returned to each contributor by the Department of Education.

The books are purchased, sorted into boxes according to the number of schools participating with a graded collection so that each child in the school will find something to interest him. The boxes are exchanged once a month, ten boxes being thus available in the school term. The Corby Public Library will store the boxes during the summer months and will act as a depot for monthly exchange. Records of the number of books and of their circulation will also be kept there.

At a meeting on Saturday, Mr. Walkom of the Point Anne School was appointed Secretary-Treasurer, with Misses Thompson, Barnum, Blue and Burke and Misses Gallagher and Adams of the Corby Public Library forming the book committee which meets on Saturday to select the books.

This plan is seen by many as the chief instrument for making the new curriculum feasible in rural communities. In it also lies an opportunity to provide the country children with cultural advantages long possessed by those in town. As one teacher said: "It seems the only way to keep a fresh supply of good books in front of the children."

ANYTHING TO PLEASE

Brantford, Ont., Nov. 15—(CP)—The court was most kind today to Stewart S. Coffey, 24, a transient who threw a stone through a shoe shop window because he wanted to go to jail to receive treatment for a skin ailment.

"How long would you like?" asked Magistrate S. A. Jones.

"Two months," Coffey replied.

The sentence was two months.

HON. DR. MANION ON WAY TO WEST

Ottawa, Nov. 15—(CP)—Conservative Leader Manion left last night on a trip through Western Canada which will take him as far as Vancouver. He will stop briefly at several cities but has no speaking engagements.

MAYOR IS SLAIN, BODYGUARD HIT, AT LONG BEACH, N.Y.

Long Beach, N.Y., Nov. 15—(AP)—Mayor Louis Edwards, 48, of Long Beach was shot and killed and his bodyguard, Patrolman James Walsh, was wounded today while on the steps of the Mayor's home as he was preparing to leave for his office.

Soon afterward, Patrolman Alvin Dooley, 35, presented himself to Long Beach police for questioning.

Dooley was formerly President of the Patrolman's Benevolent Association. Last week he was defeated for re-election by Patrolman Walsh whom the Mayor had favore as a candidate.

Trenton Red Cross Starts Campaign To Raise $4,000

Trenton, Nov. 15 (Special)—The Trenton Red Cross organization which has entered into a drive to raise $4,000 for the National War Relief Fund has opened a depot on King Street near Dundas Street. The first canvass of the town started yesterday.

Women's Missionary Society

The Stockdale United Church entertained the Women's Missionary Society of King Street United Church of Trenton when nine societies of the district met to discuss plans for the future. About 200 ladies in all were present at the get-together.

Trenton Legion at Frankford

On Sunday last eighteen members of the Trenton Branch of the Canadian Legion took part in the annual Remembrance Day service at Frankford. The ceremony was performed in front of the cenotaph and wreaths were placed on the memorial by both the Trenton and Frankford Legionnaires.

Deer Hunting

A number of Trenton deer hunters have already bagged their count and as many more are back in the north after a supply of venison. William House, Jr., and party, Peter Orr, Fred Hendricks and Lee Mallory came back to civilization with four beautiful specimens while Walter Dadswell managed to bring down a beauty from his favourite haunt. The House party did their shooting around Buckshot Lake. Rev. F. A. Smith and Maxie Waldorf were near Buckshot Lake and visited the House lodge on Wednesday. Another local party of deer hunters to head north comprised Ray Perry, Don Fraser, Fraser Fairman and Mr. Train of Belleville. Grant Goodsell and Geoffrey LaFleur are other Trenton huntsmen who have been back deer hunting this season.

O. G. Alyea vs. H. R. Cory

Talk on the street indicates that December will see a hot municipal election here. If rumours are correct Mr. O. G. Alyea will oppose His Worship Mayor H. R. Cory who is seeking his seventh re-election. It is understood that Vic Ryan will come out for councillor and officials have hinted that A. A. Farrar and S. O. Graham will be seeking election for council positions. Some say that Ross Burtt will return to the local political arena but his entry seems rather doubtful just at present. All the old councillors with the exception of the chairman of Market and Police are expected to ask the electors to return them to their seats. However, a source close to the scene of activity reports that councillor Norman Bower has decided to withdraw, but the true slate will not be known until nomination day has become history for another year.

Badminton Club Opens

The Trenton Badminton Club started 1939-40 activities last night when forty members of the club congregated in the film plant club house where it was decided to hold a meeting next Monday night to elect officers to govern the organization during the forthcoming season.

H.S. Band Plays For Colborne Red Cross

On Monday evening members of the Trenton High School Band played for the Colborne Red Cross organization which is staging a drive to raise funds for the War Relief work and home hospitalization. The orchestra comprised Reginald Batchelor, pianist; William Spencer, saxaphone; John Clegg, drums; Donald Mawson, cornet. The instrumental quartette was well received by the citizens of Colborne and the Red Cross organization there was well pleased with the proceeds from the night's entertainment.

Joseph Black Dies

News received here today revealed that Mr. Joseph Black of Windsor, died in that city yesterday following a sudden heart seizure. Mr. Black was a former resident of Trenton and lived here for 20 years while he carried on a clothing business on Dundas Street. He was well respected by the community and many local residents were shocked when they heard that he had passed on. Mourning his loss are his wife, and two daughters, Mrs. Wiseman of Toronto and Helen at home. Among those who attended the funeral were Mr. and Mrs. Fred Gitelman of Trenton.

Junior St. John's Corp Meets

The fourth in a series of talks by Dr. Gordon Johnston of Trenton was given to Trenton's Junior St. John's Ambulance Corp in the town hall on Monday evening. There will be one more meeting before the organization disbands for this season.

Hunter Returns With Deer, Bear and Hunter Injured by Gunshot

Albany, N.Y., Nov. 15—(AP) — George Vassar, Lake Placid, killed a 500-pound black bear feeding on the carcass of a deer he shot the day before. With Bruin and the buck stowed in his car, Vassar started for home. Lying beside a highway was a hunter, wounded by the accidental discharge of his gun. Next stop: The hospital.

GERMANY READY FOR LONG WAR SAYS REV. BLUMIT

Believes Immense Storage of Food Will be Sufficient for Six Years

LATVIA PRO-BRITISH

Immense stores of foodstuffs in Germany, sufficient to feed the nation for the next six years, should dispel the popular opinion in other countries that Germany will cry for food in the near future, the Rev. Oswald Blumit, Latvian minister, said in an address on conditions in Europe, yesterday.

Speaking to the Belleville Kiwanis Club at their weely luncheon in the Queens Hotel, Mr. Blumit declared that "Germany had begun to store food when she started to build her army, six years prior to the present war."

The speaker had been in Germany at that time, and had eaten pie cooked in whale's fat. This was not because there was a shortage of butter, merely because that commodity and other preservative foods were being stored for the future.

Germany today is more united than people think. The large Christian population is disgusted with present conditions but this represents the minority. German youth stands 100 per cent. behind the government, the speaker declared.

"The only organization who dare whisper or say anything to displease Hitler are the churches. The government is reluctant to arrest ministers because of public opinion in the parishes they represent. At that millions of Germans are unhappy in a state that is more pagan in thought and aspirations than is Soviet Russia," he said.

He drew a graphic word picture of atrocities committed against Jewish men, women and children. "In spite of many stories coming from Germany regarding these atrocities, not one-half of the story has been told, he declared.

Suspicion Overshadows Fact

"Suspicion on the part of both parties overshadows the Russo-German pact," Mr. Blumit said. "Although Hitler and Stalin have a lot in common, mutual distrust is apparent in all their dealings."

"Communism has failed in Russia, because the government knows it has not the love and affection of the people. Its main object failed when it refused to allow freedom of religion and because it forgot 76 per cent. of the population are peasants that live on the land.

"There will come a day, when the peasants who owned 70 per cent. of the land, aided by devout Christian leaders, will cause a terrible shaking up in Soviet Russia," Mr. Blumit said.

The low resistance offered by Poland was due to the fact that the majority of its people were peasants, poorly treated, who thought they would be better off under Soviet Russia.

English Taught in All Schools

Latvia owed the success of its indepedence to the granting of religious freedom and distribution of its land among the peasant classes, he said. At present it is 100 per cent. pro-British in sympathies, and the English language is taught to every Latvian schoolchild. This is compulsory. The German language was forbidden to be taught in the Latvian schools after Hitler's aspirations for German expansion became known. There is today, Mr. Blumit said, less Communism in Latvia than in Canada or other democratic nations.

The speaker was fittingly introduced by Kiwanian Harold Seldon, with Kiwanian Sidney Howell moving a vote of club appreciation for the address.

During the luncheon, the club unanimously decided to sponsor a hockey team in the proposed Belleville Juvenile Hockey Association. President Dr. "Dick" O'Flynn occupied the chair.

Railroad Man Never Starts His Run Without Buckley's Mixture as Protection Against

COUGHS, COLDS

When railroad men who are exposed to rain, snow, and bitter freezing cold depend on Buckley's Mixture you would be wise to follow their example. Mr. H. Harrold, Moose Jaw, Sask., says: "I find Buckley's Mixture the finest cough remedy I have ever used, and never go out on the road without a bottle in my grip for protection against colds." Buckley's Mixture is a time-tested, proven remedy used in thousands of Canadian homes whenever coughs, colds, grippe, bronchitis, etc., are troublesome. It eases the cough almost instantly, turns tough phlegm into easily expelled fluid, soothes the air ducts, corrects over-acidity. Don't experiment—Buy Buckley's.

Madoc

Madoc—On Saturday morning Armistice Day Service was very fittingly observed when the citizens of Madoc village and vicinity met in the Armouries, Madoc. The service was in charge of the Veterans and Mr. Earl Burnside, President of the Madoc branch presided. The meeting opened with the singing of the hymn "O, God Our Help in Ages Past", with Stanley Hawthorne at the piano. Rev. Mr. Poulter led in prayer after which Rev. W. A. Hunter read the 68th Psalm. Miss Doris Broad gave a reading "Canada", dedicated to "The Veterans of the Great War." The Rev. Mr. Redding of Bannockburn gave the address. Speaking to the people he said after the last war we had hoped for a lasting peace and today we are again plunged into a greater war. The speaker paused during his address and two minutes silence was solemnly observed. In closing Rev. Redding said he had two thoughts to leave with the people, that the Salvation of Canada depends on every individual in Canada to make our country a land worth while and safe for democracy and that we owe our duty to God, so should band together, forget our creed, respect our churches, go to church and by doing so, we are doing a great part in this world's crisis. Rev. Father Hyland and Rev. Mr. Pepper were among the clergy in attendance. The service was closed with the singing of the National Anthem. With the clergy, the Great War Veterans and those carrying wreaths, a procession was formed and marched to the cenotaph, where the "Last Post" was sounded by Mr. Jas. Aylesworth. The wreaths placed at the cenotaph were:—

Province of Ontario—Mrs. H. Davies.

Madoc Village—Mr. George West.

Veterans—Mr. Will Hart.

Community Club—Mr. C. Wallbridge.

Women's Institute— Mrs. Mary Alice Davies.

United Church—Miss Margaret White.

Anglican Church—Glen Nickle.

St. Peter's Church Stanley Hawthorne.

On Sunday large congregations gathered in St. Peter's Presbyterian Church, Madoc, for the 65th anniversary of the church and congregation. The visiting minister for the day was the Rev. H. S. Graham of Belleville and a former minister of St. Peter's. At the morning service the minister took his text from the 5th Chapter of Ephesians and his subject was "The Church." Special music was rendered by the choir, the Anthem "My Soul Waiteth on the Lord", with Miss West and Mrs. K. Nicol taking the duet and Mr. Tom Hawthorne the tenor solo. The service was closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

At the evening service the pastor and congregation of Trinity United joined with St. Peter's for the service. The pastor, Rev. Mr. Poulter assisting in the service also Rev. W. A. Hunter pastor of St. Peter's, who welcomed the congregation of Trinity United. The Rev. Mr. Graham chose for the evening service the text "For I Am Not Ashamed of the Gospel of Christ." The Anthem for the evening, "There's a Beautiful City" and a quartette "Take Time To Be Holy", was rendered by Messrs. Will, Tom, Billy and Stanley Hawthorne. FINN DELEGATES BACK IN FINLAND

Prepare to Report to Government on Situation With Russia

Helsingfors, Nov. 15 (AP)—A Finnish delegation returned home from Moscow today after resisting Soviet Russian demands for territorial concessions and prepared to report to the government.

The delegation was greeted by Premier Aimo Cajander, members of his cabinet and ministers of the Scandinavian nations.

Dr. Juho K. Paasikivi, who headed the mission, told interviewers he did not know whether the negotiations with Moscow would be resumed.

"The position of the Russians and Finns differs greatly," he said.

Asked to comment on statements by Tass, official Russian news agency, which said that Finland would be forced to come to terms within seven months, Dr. Paasikivi said:

"Such calculations are obviously erroneous. We can certainly hold out much longer."

Diplomatic observers previously had expressed belief that Russia would continue massing troops on the Finnish border in the hope that the economic strain of counter mobilization might force Finland to yield.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was looking through the paper on his way to the sporting page, and ma said, Now I know why I'm inclined to be so restless, Willyum, and why I so often insist on being taken out to a movie or a bridge game.

I wish I could find out why I allow myself to be dragged out every time you insist on being taken out, pop said and ma said, There's the most wonderful article in this month's Home and Table magazine. It's called Your Environment and You, and according to this article a woman should feel as happy and contented in her own home as a little wild animal feels in the woods, in other words she should feel perfectly naturel and just where she belongs, ma said.

By gollies I couldn't of written a better article myself, I agree with it a hundred and one per cent, pop said, and ma said, It all hinges on harmony, on the harmony of colors. Now just look at this room for instants she said.

It's pretty harmonious that's a fact, pop said, and ma said, Dont be rediculous, it's just one solid clash of colors and that's the cause of all my restlessness. I'm going to call up Howerd Beckver the deckorater tomorrow and have him come and look it all over and see what he suggests. It will proberly be just a little matter of changing the hangings and recovering a few things, and Howerd Beckver is quite inexpensive, I mean for a deckorater. I'm so glad you agree with me, Willyum, she said.

O agreed with you that a woman's place is in the home and liking it, I didn't say anything about an inexpensive high price deckorater for Peet sake, pop said. Hay, let's get out of this and go see a picture, it will rest your thoughts, he said, and ma said, Well, if you really feel in the mood, Willyum. I understand there's a wonderful picture at the Mawsoleum, she said.

Being where they proberly went.

Thank God for the Red Cross!

...Say GREAT WAR VETERANS

Veterans of the Great War know what the Red Cross will mean in this war. They know that to every soldier the Red Cross is a sanctuary to which he can look for gentle care and peaceful quiet. To the wounded and sick it means transportation from the scene of strain and strife to the comparative safety of the base hospital. It means the swift, sure hands of the doctor... cool sheets and a comfortable bed... the kindly Red Cross nurse in her clean white uniform... relief, encouragement and cheer. To the convalescent it means the sweet-smelling countryside of England. No wonder that old soldiers who are joining up again say "Thank God for the Red Cross!"

Have you done your share to help this great cause? We who stay at home in the midst of peace must prove to the Red Cross that we are ready to shoulder the heavy financial responsibility that is ours. Delay on our part will be measured in human agony. We cannot, we must not fail! He gives doubly who gives quickly. Give big-heartedly. Don't wait for a canvasser. A FINANCIAL PHYSICIAN

One who made himself famous by his knowledge of things and ways financial has gone, Thos. Bradshaw, Toronto, who perhaps more than any other man was brought into close contact with so many Canadians, especially those who have the custodianship of the financial wealth of the Dominion, of the Province or of the cities, towns and villages and rural parts of Ontario and other provinces. With him it was an achievement, he made it an art.

He was just such a man as so many individuals need in arranging the financial aspects of their own lives. He dealt with large institutions and saw the signs of health or weakness as a physician regards his patient.

To large institutions in whose service he labored, to the City of Toronto, whose treasurer he was, to cities which had run into financial difficulty, and to thousands who are interested in municipal affairs, he showed the way of wisdom in matters of money.

It is to be regretted that there are not more men of his type, for they would stabilize the affairs of industry as well as the private financial affairs of individual men and women. There is much education but never enough in things of finance.

His addresses, recommendations and suggestions are treasure houses for those who have to deal with business affairs, for he was not only a financial expert of rare gifts but he was a teacher of financial health and thousands were willing to sit at his feet and be taught the lessons of sanity and judgment.

AIMS OF ALLIES AND DIVIDED GERMAN COUNSEL

New York Times sees in the progress of the war signs of divided counsel in the German command. The most recent is the situation which causes so great concern in the Netherlands and Belgium as to whether there will be a German invasion in an effort to secure air and submarine bases against Britain. As the Times puts it, "Such an invasion could not be considered, even by the leaders of the Reich, purely in military terms. It must be difficult for them to decide whether, even if Holland could be successfully occupied as a submarine and air base against Britain, the achievement would be worth its probable cost. That cost is not to be measured merely in the ammunition, tanks, planes or German lives lost in trying to effect the occupation but on the profound effect that the invasion would undoubtedly have on neutral and particularly on American opinion."

If the German Nazis could at least be trusted on their word, there would be no dread, the Netherlands and Holland would have confidence. But the German Nazis' pledges are worthless, as many a public man has pointed out from the history of the past two years. This is the pass the Nazis have come to—they feel no moral obligation, they necessarily size up the situation on the basis of mere policy, nothing of the rightness or the wrongness of their undertakings entering into the question. Had the Nazis been other than they are they would not have reached the pass they find themselves in, they would not be up against such a dilemma as the Times sees them facing.

But the New York Times sees another dilemma for the Nazis. "It is not neutral opinion alone with which the German leaders would have to deal. The leaders of Holland or Belgium would widen any existing split of opinion within Germany, while it would both add to the number of Germany's enemies and strengthen their unity and resolution." The Times says it is clear from the replies of King George Sixth and of President Lebrun, Britain and France have not lost sight of their main purpose to redeem Europe from the "perpetually recurring fear of German aggression." President Lebrun insists upon reparation for the wrongs done in Austria, Poland and Czecho-Slovakia, while the King speaks of preventing future use of force to settle international disputes. As the New York newspaper says "a German invasion of Holland or Belgium would bring that aim (the freeing of Europe from the fear under which it has lived from German aggression) to the fore with greater clarity than ever and would turn public opinion more strongly against Nazi Germany than it has been at any time."

RUMORS

Rumors have been rife that the former Crown Prince of Germany has been executed and Nazi circles have been quick to deny the story. They say he is safe in Potsdam. The other day there was a report that he was virtually a prisoner in his own home because of the demonstrations which took place in his honor as he passed along the streets. This would seem to indicate a body of opinion with monarchist leanings.

The outside world naturally does not know and possibly the German people themselves know less what is going on within Germany.

Another story yesterday told of the arrest of Marshal Werner von Blomberg. He was former German War Minister whose marriage a year ago with his secretary, thirty years his junior, caused his removal from the ministry as it was disapproved by the army officers.

What is in these stories is not known but they may be indicative of Nazi repressive measures in Germany, perhaps towards prominent men in the monarchist ranks or in their mad hate of everything but themselves n the army.

U-BOAT CREWS' NERVES

Manning German submarines is a tough job. Everyone knows what trouble there was in the last war. And it begins to look as if the same trouble is being manifested today as then, because it is so hazardous a task to raid shipping and possibly be sent to the bottom.

According to a newspaper story yesterday submarine crews at Hamburg refused to go on raids unless they were released from the necessity of coming to the surface before attacking. There is no doubt that the Nazis would give such a release if the need were clear and they would not suffer from it, by reason of public opinion.

Yet there are signs today of a Nazi sea policy of sink-on-sight and without warning. The story goes that British anti-U-boat control is so efficient that the U-boats have but to show themselves to be attacked. Whether the Hamburg story is true or not it conveys a fact—the effectiveness of the British patrol ships. Their destruction of U-boats must inevitably tell on even the nerves of the Nazi U-boat crews in this war of nerves.

GERMANY REFUSES

Hitler waited until Britain and France had made their position clear on the mediation offer made by the two Low Countries' Monarchs last week and then he had his Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop dictate practically the whole of the brief reply in the form of a rejection.

He should have known that there would be no drawing back from the Allied policy of "end Hitler and Naziism."

As His Majesty King George pointed out in his reply to the two Sovereigns, the move rested with Hitler.

Nazi Germans broke the peace because they thought themselves all-powerful and because they thought the Western Powers would not fight. For ten weeks or more the world has been freed of Hitler agitation or fomentation of strife because he has a full-sized job on his hands. All his moves have been to end the war but without yielding one jot of his stolen booty, stained with the blood of patriotic Poles, or the territory and wealth of which he robbed Austria and Czecho-Slovakia.

So the German Chancellor has to look as if he wanted the war to go on. He surely knows no one believes he unselfishly wants peace.

It is a fight to the end. Britain and France mean that. Germany need not come suing for peace unless she had got rid of Hitler and his mad insensate system. Germany must take punishment for the crimes the Nazis have committed in her name, or the German people must rise up and throw off the Hitler yoke, a task which requires control of most of the army of which Hitler is the virtual head.

The situation confronting the world is that liberty to defend oneself is better than life under Naziism. As Churchill says—"You may take it absolutely for certain, that either all that Britain and France stand for in the modern world will go down or that Hitler or the Nazi regime will be broken and destroyed. If we are conquered, all will be enslaved and the United States will be left alone to guard the rights of man." But Mr. Chamberlain has said the Allies will fight until "the other side has had enough of it." Churchill knows that Hitlerism will perish.

It was the founder of Nazi policy which is doomed who yesterday refused the mediation plea of offer of the Queen of the Netherlands and the King of the Belgians.

Music, once admitted to the soul, becomes a sort of spirit and never dies. It wanders perturbedly through the halls and galleries of the memory, and is often heard again, distinct and living, as when it first displaced the wavelets of the air.—Bulwer.

Headquarters of the Canadian City Bureau for the Expansion Campaign in connection with the Belleville Board of Trade have been established at 8 Campbell Street and the organization will be directed by Messrs. R. A. Crosby, A. R. Scott and Dr. H. B. Haskell, representing an advisory committee of fifty members. The drive will be short and snappy and will last not more than one month.

Applications totalling $2,122,750 have been received in the Victory Loan Campaign in this district up to last night. Returns coming in today indicate a good chance of equalling last year's record of nearly $2,700,000. A feature of yesterday's canvass was the special subscription of $80,000 put in by the Corporation of the City of Belleville. As a reward for this subscription the Prince of Wales flag was formally presented to the city by Mr. W. B. Deacon, Chairman of Hastings County Victory Loan Committee. Acting Mayor W. A. Woodley received the flag, while the bell on the City Hall tower rang and whistles blew.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

Rest of Mind and Body in Treating High Blood Pressure

One of the hard things to understand is why one individual with very high blood pressure (hypertension) continues on his way in good health year after year, whereas another with the same, or even lower, pressure may suffer an attack with his heart, bloodvessels, or kidneys, from which he never completely recovers.

It is now believed that high blood pressure is just a symptom of some underlying condition or disturbance of one or more organs in the body and the blood pressure must be high to overcome these conditions or obstacles. That one can possess this high pressure for years without serious disturbance and another cannot, may be due to one inheriting strong blood vessels and the other being not so fortunate.

While there are a few drugs used in the treatment of high blood pressure, most physicians place chief reliance on just one thing, that is mental and physical rest.

Drs. Nelson W. Barker and Robert W. Graham in the Mayo Clinic number of Medical Clinics of North America state—

"It has long been recognised that rest and the reduction of nervous stress and strains are important in the treatment of hypertensive patients. In general, patients with high blood pressure should be advised to get plenty of sleep at night, to take a short rest following their noon meal, to avoid excitement, and, if possible, limit their business responsibilities. When the patients are young, it may be possible for them to select occupations which will cause but little nervous strain. In cases of severe or advanced hypertension, further nervous relaxation may be obtained by prolonged quiet vacations, warm climates in winter if possible, the use of hot baths, and occasional days spent in bed."

Drs. Barker and Graham, in stressing the importance of rest of mind particularly, make this suggestion: "In general (there may be exceptional cases of course) the physician should allay the patient's anxiety concerning his disease. There is no justification for giving the patient a gloomy outlook or talking about the likelihood of a stroke as anxiety may be a definite factor in increasing the already high blood pressure."

The thought then when blood pressure is high is not to be asking your physician about a drug to reduce the pressure but to try to prevent any further rise by keeping mind and body at rest.

Czech Students In Demonstration Against Protectorate

Prague, Nov. 15 (AP)—Two thousand Czech students demonstrated today against the German Protectorate Government but were dispersed before clashing with police.

The youths attempted to escort to a railway station the body of a 24-year-old student who died of injuries Oct. 28. The demonstrations extended from the medical school where the funeral was held to the station.

When police prevented the funeral march, the youths, singing Slavic songs, tried to enter Wenceslas Square and Karl's Square from side streets.

EX-KAISER WILHELM CHARGED WITH ENGINEERING MUNICH ASSASSINATION ATTEMPT

Crown Prince Wilhelm

Field Marshal on Blomberg

Kaiser Wilhelm

Prince Friedrich

General von Bock

Agents of the Nazi Gestapo are reported to have commenced an anti-monarchist purge as blame for the Munich beer cellar explosion was laid to ex-Kaiser Wilhelm, at present in exile at Doorn, Holland. Scores of palaces and mansions are reported to have been raided by the Gestapo, who, according to reports from Brussels, have arrested five princes and nine generals. Pince Friedrich Wilhelm, grandson of the ex-Kaiser and often mentioned as a leading candidate for the German throne should the Nazi party collapse, is reported to have been shot without trial to avenge the attempted assassination of Hitler. Former Crown Prince Wilhelm, father of Prince Friedrich, has variously been reported beheaded and held by Nazi authorities on his Potsdam estate. Among the generals reported to have been arrested are listed Field Marshal Werner von Blomberg, former German war minister, who was forced to resign his position following his marriage to a plumber's daughter, and Col. Gen. Fedor von Bock, who is reported to have incurred Hitler's displeasure following the annexation of Austria.

SAYS WAR BATTLE FOR FREEDOM

But C.C.F. Speaker How Says Organization Reserves Right to Criticize

Victoria, Nov. 15—(CP)—Co-operative Commonwealth Federation members "recognize our duty to make every effort for a successful conclusion of war, but maintain our right to criticize," the group's British Columbia leader said in the Legislature Tuesday.

"We are not seeking martyrdom by being jailec o: banned from the floor of this house," said Harold Winch, C.C.F. Vancouver East. "We are determined to speak in the best interests of the people and we are determined that while Canadians are fighting Hitler overseas no little Hitlers will arise here.

"We are opposed to Hitler and all he stands for and we accept the war as a battle for freedom, liberty and democracy and express the hope that out of this conflict will emerge some form of co-operation that will make future wars impossible.

"Because we had the courage to speak we have been open to attacks from the Press and on the floor of this house. We could have come here waxing eloquent in patriotic utterances.

"That was the easy way to evade our responsibilities. But we chose the hard road which other speakers have misinterpreted.

"It is quiet reasonable, logical and consistent, that an individual or an institution can support the Government's efforts to win the war, yet retain the right of criticism.

"We have pointed out mistakes of the past and have asked that they be not repeated. Prime Minister Mackenzie King is on record as adopting that attitude.

"It is considered the opinion of the C.C.F. that economic support is the best form of aid that Canada can give the Allies. Sending large bodies of men overseas would disrupt those very industries now being utilized to help the Allies."

PICTON

DR. D. W. GULLETT IS SECRETARY OF R. C. D. S. BOARD

Announcement of His Appointment Has Just Been Made

Picton, Nov. 15—Dr. D. W. Gullett has been appointed secretary to the Board of the Royal College of Dental Surgeons, of which he has been a member for several years, it was announced here yesterday.

He will assume his new duties on May 1st next, taking up residence in Toronto at that time.

The appointment is an important one, since this Board is the ruling body with regard to the Faculty of Dentistry of the University of Toronto and with regard to dental surgeons practising their profession in Ontario. He will have offices in the Dental Building of the University.

Dr. Gullett is a veteran of the Great War and has been prominent here in the United Church, Masonic Lodge, Tennyson and Kiwanis Cubs, member Library Board, past chairman Public School Board and on the P. E. County Hospital Board.

Two West Lake persons met with painful accidents. Robert Hook, an employee at the McColl-Frontenac Service Station in Bloomfield, while greasing a car, stepped backwards on a screw driver on the floor, in falling he suffered a broken bone in the ankle.

Miss Beverley McDowell, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. McDowell, cracked her arm in two places, at the wrist and elbow, when she fell after stepping from a car. She was returning home with others from the Collegiate and was getting out of the car in front of Roy Wight's home at the time.

Says Ex-Kaiser's Grandson in England Under Surveillance

London, Nov. 15—(CP)—The News Chronicle said today that Prince Friedrich Wilhelm, grandson of former Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany, "is in England under surveillance."

"When the war broke out he was ill and here he has remained," the paper said.

Other sources said the Prince was liable to internment as a German but the authorities allowed him his freedom. He was reported staying with friends in the country.

Physician Loses When Triplets Born

Sedalia, Mo., Nov. 15—(AP)—Mrs. Elmer Coon saved money by having triplets instead of just one child.

When she went to the hospital Dr. A. L. Walters told her if she had twins he would omit the charge for the second baby; if triplets, he would make no charge at all; if quadruplets he would pay the assistant's fee, and if quintuplets, they would "split the pot" on whatever the babies earned from photographs and advertising.

The physician said he wasn't surprised at triplets but was disappointed there weren't two more.

"I hoped there would be five," he said, "and Callander, Ont., would have a real rival."

MENZIES NAMES WAR AIMS.

Canberra, Nov. 15 (CU-Reuters)—Prime Minister Robert Menzies told the Australian House of Representatives today that "urgent war aims are victory followed by world security, abandonment of armaments competition, and a prosperity in which Germany would share."

"No patched up peace or compromise can assure the world enduring peace," Mr. Menzies said.

10-SECOND 'QUAKE SHAKES EASTERN U. S. SEABOARD

No Serious Injury or Property Damage Reported in Affected Area

WILMINGTON ALARMED

Philadelphia, Nov. 15 (CP)— A check-up today showed no serious injuries or property damage resulted from a 10-second earthquake that shook the eastern United States seaboard from Baltimore, Md., to Trenton, N.J., last night.

Seismographs at the Franklin Institute here and Fordham University, New York, placed the centre of the quake at a point near Westville, N.J., just across the Delaware River from Philadelphia.

The earthquake was a vigorous one for this region but, as F. Wagner Schlesinger, in charge of Franklin Institute seismographs, put it: "A good Californian wouldn't have paid any attetnion to this at all."

The shocks hit an area about 130 miles long and 30 miles wide, and frightened residents of northern Maryland, Delaware, Southern New Jersey and Eastern Pennsylvania.

Jolted from a doze, a Philadelphian exclaimed: "It felt as if two fellows picked up the davenport and shook it back and forth like a baby's cradle."

The greatest alarm was felt in Wilmington, Del., and other sites of power and chemical plants. Residents tumbled into the streets crying: "which plant blew up?"

Rumbling like distant thunder, the shock knocked down pictures, overturned furniture and brought out emergency guards against fire.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Beware Spooks."

What is he . . . man or mouth? He catches cold . . . not killers. He makes love . . . not arrests! He stops traffic . . not crime!

He's Joe E. Brown and he comes to the McCarthy Theatre next in Columbia's "Beware Spooks!" thrill-packed comedy sensation which turns a crime wave into a wave of laughter. As a patrolman who is the toast of the mobs because his dim-witted efficiency means happy days for holdup men, the cave-mouther comedian brings to the McCarthy Theatre a scream-a-second funfest of gags and girls.

"Beware Spooks!" roars with laughter. Mary Carlisle, the lovely blonde actress, becomes a bewildered bride; Marc Lawrence, Hollywood's tough screen heavy, battles Joe in a beach resort fun house and Clarence Kolb braves apoplexy as commissioner of police. Frank Thomas, Joseph Downing, Lorna Gray, Don Beddoe and Eddie Laughton add to the fun. Edward Sedgwick directed.

In addition to the above feature, the program includes spectacular thrills . . . stirring drama . . . and heart-warming romance in a companion feature entitled "Konga" which presents a cast of favorites including Fred Stone, Rochelle Hudson and Richard Fiske.

Now Playing.

"Fighting Thoroughbreds" a splendid race-track story, with Ralph Byrd, Mary Carlisle and George Hayes, is now playing at the McCarthy Theatre. The program also includes a companion feature hit, Robert Cummings, Helen Mack and Lyle Talbot in "I Stand Accused" plus an interesting short subject entitled "Stranger Than Fiction."

AT THE CAPITOL

"Undercover Doctor."

"Undercover Doctor", coming to the Capitol Theatre, is based on the experiences of G-Men, as recorded in J. Edgar Hoover's book, "Persons In Hiding". The Paramount crime film is really based on an actual case. A brilliant but weak-willed surgeon throws in his lot with a gang of ruthless killers. Being nursemaid to a bunch of mugs pays well. Before long, the erstwhile penniless surgeon becomes a wealthy, respected member of the community. Of course, no one suspects the doctor of his crooked connections, not even his nurse who is deeply in love with him. Then, one day, there walks in the gangster leader who demands that the doctor be found at once. The nurse is stunned by discovery that the man she has always loved is in league with these cut-throats. Louis King's direction squeezes every bit of drama and excitement from the script. Cooperating with him in making "Undercover Doctor" one of the season's better crime pictures, are Lloyd Nolan as the G-Man, Janice Logan, Paramount's latest film discovery, as the nurse, J. Carrol Naish in the title role, Heather Angel as Naish's fiancee, Broderick Crawford as the number one public enemy and Robert Wilcox as Nolan's associate.

Also on the same program brings Roy Rogers, a blue-eyed blonde of Irish-Indian descent, but this somewhat paradoxical description doesn't keep Roy Rogers, Republic's cowboy star, from being a typical American screen hero. He has what the public wants—an engaging manner, a clear-eyed frankness in his acting, and a crooning voice which brings audiences to their feet.

Rogers' newest picture, "Frontier Pony Express", presents him as an intrepid Pony Express rider who finds that his duties do not prevent him from singing a heart-warming western ballad. Mary Hart, the heroine, reacts favorably to his lovemaking, and the picture is said to be of the type which appeals thoroughly to a typical American audience.

Roy was born in Ohio, but the family migrated west early in his life, and he grew up on the western mesas, learning how to handle the most fractious bronchos, and how to wrangle the toughest steers.

His career in the entertainment world began when he organized a cowboy orchestra, "The Sons of the Pioneers", which became extremely popular on west coast stations.

Selected by Republic officials from a minor spot in a western film, Rogers was groomed for stardom, and sky-rocketed immediately into the public eye.

"Frontier Pony Express concerns the adventures of a few gallant Pony Expressmen who finally succeed in defeating a group of designing Confederate spies who try to steal the U.S. mail. Mary Hart, the "sweetheart" of the west, is seen with Rogers in this film.

AT THE BELLE

"In Name Only"

What does a woman want most out of marriage — wealth, social position, children, happiness?

The answers are absorbingly discussed in the new Carole Lombard-Cary Grant-Kay Francis romantic vehicle, "In Name Only," now at the Belle Theatre.

The conflicting views expressed in "In Name Only" have been only rarely discussed on the screen. Miss Lombard portrays a charming young widow deeply in love with Grant, a married man, but determined not to break up his home. Miss Francis, on the contrary, has only contempt for marriage itself, although she is Grant's wife. To her, being a wife means money and prestige, both of which she enjoys. She flatly refuses to surrender when Grant begs her for his freedom, even though she admits she doesn't love him.

In its contrast of the radically different ideas of the two feminine characters regarding matrimony, "In Name Only" presents a significant piece of film fare as well as a fine, dramatic entertainment.

John Cromwell, of "Of Human Bondage" fame, directed, with Charles Coburn, Helen Vinson, Katharine Alexander, Jonathav Hale and Maurice Moscovich in the support.

Joe Penner New Comedy

The revenge of a group of luckless taxi-drivers on racetrack bookies provides the uproarious theme of Joe Penner's newest fun-film, "The Day the Bookies Wept," announced as the added laugh-hit feature.

Believing they can beat the bookies if they own a race-horse, the cabmen form a pool and send Penner, also a hackman, against his wishes, down South to purchase a pony. Penner returns with a nag that is a confirmed souse, an addiction of which his optimistic sponsors are ignorant.

Because he is obliged to abstain from alcoholics, the steed under Penner's inexperienced training, loses steadily, and the odds on him increase accordingly. Comes the day when the track odds are 60-1 against the haybag. The tricksters who sold Penner the horse send a barrel of beer to the stable and bet their last dime on him. But when the taxi drivers see the condition of the inebriated equine before the race, they are reluctant to bet on him. The hilarious race, and the side-splitting results which reward the cabmen's long-fostered desire to "make the bookies weep," is said to afford loads of laughs and excitement.

Leslie Goodwins directed the RKO Radio Comedy and the supporting cast includes Betty Grable, leading lady, Richard Lane, Tom Kennedy, Thurston Hall and Carole Hughes.

"Information Please"

A special extra attraction on the same program is the appearance of Clifton Fadiman, Franklin P. Adams, John Kieran and Oscar Levant, and an internationally famous guest star in "Information Please," based on the Radio program.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

LITTLE ACTIVITY AT FRONT LINE

Considerable Patrol Activity in the Zone East of the Saar

Paris, Nov. 15 (CP-Havas)—Front-line operations, although at a minimum, appeared today to be shifting eastward from the Saar sector to the wooded foothills of the Vosges between Bitche and Wissemboug.

There was little fighting to speak of. This morning's official communique reported "reduced activity during the night," whereas Tuesday's second communique advised that "there was great patrol activity, particularly in the zone east of the Saar."

Bad weather, with near-zero ceilings, reduced air activity yesterday. A number of planes went aloft on routine reconnaissance flights, but not a single air battle was reported.

Operations on the ground were a few patrols. Most of what little activity there was still was confined to the sectors to the west of the Saar and northeast of Bitche, along the eastern flank of the Orhental Salient. An evident eastward shift was in progress, it was said, however, toward the Vosges foothills, which form a sort of connecting hinge between the Lorraine and Alsace fronts.

100 Patrols Operating

About 100 German and French patrols are operating in the few miles of "No Man's Land" stretching between the Maginot Line and the Westwall, French military experts said.

In 1914 the frequent reference to patrol operations would have been interpreted as a positive indication that an offensive was in the offing. But in 1914 the Allied and German positions were separated in many places by only a few yards of shell-pocked terrain and there was no room for numerous patrols unless they were paving the way for a large-scale attack.

In 1939 the situation is entirely different. Except at a few points where intensive artillery barrages have been laid down, the landscape is much the same as it was before Sept. 3. In the zone east of the Saar for instance, there are numerous clumps of trees and irregular valleys which permit patrols to operate to a considerable extent without encountering the enemy.

Race News Empire Is Liquidating

Chicago, Nov. 15—(AP)—M. L. Annenberg and his associates began liquidating their race news empire today with the intention of quitting the business forever.

The organization known as the Nationwide News Service, Inc., took steps to end dissemination of horse race information to customers in Canada, Cuba and the United States by tomorrow noon.

Recently a target of federal and state prosecutors, the wire network for years has carried race entries, odds, results, payoff prices and other information from tracks to betting parlors.

Meanwhile, Annenberg and 19 others were summoned to federal court today for arraignment on indictments alleging violation of the income tax and other laws.

The United States District Attorney, William J. Campbell, said dissolution of the wire network had no bearing on the criminal cases; that "no agreement of any sort" had been discussed or contemplated. The income tax charges against Annenberg alleged he owes the government approximately $5,500,000 in back income taxes and penalties.

The liquidation of nationwide news service will affect every state in the nation as well as Canada and Cuba, and apparently will deprive bookmakers of their only continent-wide wire network.

ENGAGEMENT NOTICE

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel H. Caffey of Read, announce the engagement of their daughter, Helen Agnes to Patrick J. McAdam, son of Mrs. J. P. McAdam and the late Mr. McAdam of Oshawa. The marriage will take place at St. Charles Church, Read, December 2.

Mr. and Mrs. William Doxtator of Shannonville are celebrating their fiftieth wedding anniversary at their home tomorrow. The day will be spent very quietly owing to the ill-health of Mrs. Doxtator.

At the close of the regular meeting of Quintena Rebekah Lodge on Tuesday evening, a very enjoyable Masquerade party was held for the members and their friends. The first part of the evening was spent in games and relay races which afforded much amusement. Following this was the judging of the costumes. There were a number of very original and beautiful ones and the judges had some difficulty deciding on the winners. The rest of the evening was very enjoyably spent in card-playing and dancing. The prize winners were for costumes—ladies' best, Mrs. Webber; comic, Mrs. F. Pinkston; men's best, Mr. Eric Hatfield; comic, Mr. F. Pinkston; for euchre, ladies' first, Mrs. Fairman; second, Mrs. Hatfield; men's first, Mr. Newman; second, Mr. Kerr. The spot dance winners were —Miss Florence Redner and Mr. Art Martin.

Mr. F. D. Lace, treasurer of the Confederation Life, Toronto, Mr. E. S. Byers, secretary of Gananoque Spring and Axle Co., Gananoque; Col. George Drew, Toronto; Mr. W. H. Ireland, Trenton; Mr. K. G. B. Ketchum, Principal of St. Andrew's College, Aurora, Professor Stanley Graham of Kingston, Dr. W. R. Graham, Guelph, were among those from out of town attending the funeral in Belleville yesterday of the late Col. R. J. E. Graham.

Mrs. Frank Miller and Mrs. Robert Cameron were among the out of town guests at the Creelman-Desmarias wedding in Montreal yesterday.

Mr. J. Clifton is spending a few days with relatives in Lindsay.

Mr. P. E. Barth, President of Sargent and Co., New Haven, Conn., and Mr. M. D. Vanderbilt, assistant to Mr. Barth, Stratford, Conn., were in the city yesterday to attend the funeral of the late Col. R. J. E. Graham, who was president of the Belleville Sargent Company, the Canadian Branch of Sargent and Company.

WEDDINGS

GREEN—UTMAN

Stirling, (Special) — The River Valley home of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Utman was the scene of a pretty autumn wedding on Saturday, Nov. 11th at twelve o'clock when their only daughter, Dorothy, became the bride of Mr. Jonn Gordon Green, youngest son of Mr. John Gordon Green and the late Mrs. Green of Rawdon Township.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. J. Scott of St. Paul's United Church, Stirling, and the wedding music was played by Mrs. Ray Shortt of Rawdon. During the registration period Mrs. Carleton Potts rendered a contralto solo "Sweet Mystery of Life".

The bride given in marriage by her father, was charming in a floor length gown of white appliqued silk. A full length veil of silk net fell gracefully from a coronet of orange blossoms. She carried a large bouquet of Talisman roses. She was attended by Miss Jerrine Thompson of Rylestone, gowned in a frock of pink taffeta with a shoulder length veil caught with orange blossoms. Miss Thompson carried pink Briarcliffe roses. Mr. George Sutherland of Stirling, acted as groomsman.

Directly following the ceremony guests numbering about sixty attended the wedding dinner in the dining room of the home where an effective decorative scheme of yellow and white predominated. Six cousins and friends of the bride assisted in serving. A large three-storey wedding cake centered the table of honor. Later in the day Mr. and Mrs. Green left by motor for a short wedding trip to St. Thomas, Ont., Detroit and Saginaw, Mich. For travelling the bride selected a frock of green crepe beneath a coat of green boucle wool and red fox neck piece with matching accessories. Upon their return they will reside in Stirling District.

The groom's gift to the bride was a handsome cabinet of silver to the bridesmaid, a locket in natural gold; to the soloist and musician, vanity compacts of modern floral design and to the groomsman a white gold tie set.

TRACY—HUNTER

A pretty wedding took place Saturday evening, at seven o'clock at St. Michael's Church, when Kathleen Nora Hunter, only daughter of the late John Melvie Hunter and Mrs. D. Rush, Belleville, became the bride of William Tracy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Mack Tracy, Fort William, Ont. Rev. J. J. Collins officiated.

The bride wore a becoming frock of teal blue with hat to match and fur wrap and carried a bouquet of deep pink roses and fern.

Miss Patricia Daley, bridesmaid wore a becoming frock of moss green with matching accessories and carried a bouquet of yellow roses and fern. Mr. James McQuire Jr., was groomsman. After the ceremony a buffet luncheon was served at the home of the bride to thirty-five relatives and friends. The rooms were brightened with vases and flowers and the newlyweds received congratulations. Later the happy couple left for a short wedding trip to Toronto and on their return they will reside in Belleville.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Dr. Dafoe Deflates Old Theory of Child's Laxative

As we saw yesterday, some small children are afflicted with constipation, and no amount of changes in diet will correct this. In such cases we may use laxatives, but we must be very careful of the type we use.

There are many different types of laxative, each with a different action. For instance, some of these laxatives act by increasing the water content of the bowel, thus causing the bowel to became distended, setting up a reflex action which empties the bowel. Such a laxative is epsom salts. It is rarely used in childhood for the control of constipation because, as a rule, its action upon the bowel is apt to be too drastic; it may do real harm.

Other laxatives act by releasing irritating acids in the bowel which cause the movements of the bowel to become more rapid until it empties itself. Such a laxative is castor oil. Castor oil liberates a strong acid in the bowel which may be all right for adults but has no place in the control of constipation in children.

I am sorry to have to deflate this old theory that castor oil is good for children, but what I tell you is a fact. We old-timers in the field of general practise know how widespread was and is the idea that castor oil is the thing to administer.

I remember a rather startling story that came to my attention in my practise. In one part of my section of the country we had a children's shelter. There were quite a few youngsters kept their for adoption, and the choice of a woman to run the place was always something of a problem.

Death removed the old superintendent one day and we finally got a new woman who came to us highly recommended. She had been there for some weeks when I was called to see some of the children who were badly upset. They seemed to be having trouble with their bowels. I examined them and then I sent for the superintendent, to find what they had been eating. She told me what they had had—just plain ordinary food that youngsters need. Then she added, "Doctor, I can't understand how anything could be wrong with their bowels. I keep them clean all the time."

I couldn't quite understand her meaning so I asked her to explain what she meant.

"Every child in this institution gets a physic once a week", was her astounding reply. "One Saturday they get epsom salts, the next Saturday they get castor oil".

Well, I had thought the day was past when we had such barbarous practises. I remonstrated with her, told her that she might be doing permanent injury to the tender bowels of her small children. I tried to show her how harmful it was but I couldn't get anywhere with her. She made it plain that she thought I was just an ignorant country doctor. She was from the city and she knew what was good for her children.

Well, the upshot of it was I had to bring the matter to the attention of those in charge of the shelter. Of course they had her removed immediately. I was sorry to have to do this, but even now it makes me shudder when I think of what those children went through. In fact, it rather sounds like the methods of some of our modern dictators in Europe. I believe castor oil plays an important role in their punishments and tortures. Why give it to babies?

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Hostess Should be Thanked for Hospitality

You receive an attractive invitation. You accept, go to the party, enjoy it, talk about it, remember it with happiness and appreciation.

But do you ever take the trouble to tell these delightful reactions to the kind and hospitable hostess who took so much effort to give you this pleasure?

If you haven't the graceful habit of expressing your appreciation of a party, the day or so following the party, make a resolution to acquire this habit. It's a grand one!

The next time you greatly enjoy yourself at the house of a friend, sit down the day following the party and write a friendly little note to your hostess and tell her of your enjoyment. Tell her what a delightful hostess she was, what a gallant host her husband was, how much you enjoyed meeting her friends, perhaps how delicious her dinner was, and how attractive her home.

Very likely the tired little woman who so gaily entertained you on the previous evening is in the throes of the inevitable reaction which always comes after giving out much of one's self. Can't you see that such a letter would make her very happy, would show her that you are a pleasant and appreciative friend?

Relative Wants to Give Shower

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

1—My brother is to be married early next month. I would like to have a shower for his bride-to-be. Is this correct?

2—I would like to have it at my mother's home, and I would like to invite the bride's mother, as well as my mother. Is there any reason why this shouldn't be done? I have been told that it isn't proper.

Alice.

1 —It isn't considered good taste for a member of either the fiance's or the fiancee's family to give a bridal shower. You can, I am sure, see how this suggestion came about: a shower, given by a member of the family or by any other relative gives the impression that the shower has been a bit too "deliberately" planned, that the bid for gifts is a bit too obvious. Don't you agree that this would probably be the interpretation?

If you leave the question of gifts out of the picture, you have the proper and charming alternative of giving a party (luncheon, tea, dinner, buffet) in honor of your prospective sister-in-law. Then everyone will be happy . . . . including Mrs. Grundy!

2—Indeed it is a proper and gracious bow to invite the bride's mother and the bridegroom's mother to a shower.

Courtesy Tip

Don't buy a Christmas card with the abbreviation Xmas on it. And don't ever write this abbreviation. Christmas (Christ-mass) is a beautiful word, and we should honor the sacred significance of the first syllable by writing it in full.

"They take away BABY'S TEETHING FEVER"

SO writes Mrs. B———, of North Sydney. Then a Toronto mother says: "I used Baby's Own Tablets and the babies were always so good. No cramps, pain or trouble when teething. In fact, I hardly knew they were cutting their teeth as they never were any trouble at night."

Baby's Own Tablets are quick, safe and effective, sweet-tasting and easy to take. Contain no opiates or stupefying drugs. Try Baby's Own Tablets not only for teething troubles but also for colds, constipation, upset stomach and other simple ailments of babyhood. 25 cents. Your money refunded if you are not satisfied.

Pardon My Stylish Accent

(By Alice Alden)

Five o'clock fashions are mostly an emphasis on good accessories. The butterfly debbie and her career sister can't do more than be chic when they step out at dusk, no matter what their individual incomes—and they both say it with a flattering hat, jewelry, gloves and handbag, tastily distributed over a simple basic costume. There are two schools of thought on what's chic, perhaps. One girl goes for soft, feminine wiles; the other prefers tailored oomph. At the left is a belle of the first type who wears a hat of puffed velvet and carries a shirred, draped handbag of suede. The bag has a be-jewelled metal frame. At the right is Babs Beckwith who adores a tailleur, wearing with it a woven suede thong hat in brilliant colors, one of which she matches with her washable, high-colored doeskin gloves.

Comfort Rules The Modern Roost

By Eleanor Ross

A New York store is drawing crowds to its charming exhibition home, a home where comfort rules and not the decorator. Decorated by Helen Koues, of Good Housekeeping Magazine, it offers lessons and ideas in every room.

The interiors are different because here the outmodel "don't mix" rules were discarded for the more flexible needs of a new and more practical homemaker. Good 18th century furniture styles blend beautifully with modern wallpaper, modern draperies and modern lighting. It's a comfortable home, not because it is so rich or luxuriously appointed, but because a chair is just where a chair ought to be, and a truly inviting soft is beside a cheery fireplace.

The living room has unmatched pieces that form a harmonious ensemble. There is a sofa which could be Lawson, Sheraton or Chippendale style. Behind it is a Regency wall table with a hanging bookshelf above it. Everybody needs a large table in the living room, so an 18th century drum table is placed in a corner with an overstuffed chair near it. A small piano, a small breakfast bookcase, and a small chest of drawers all fit into the scheme of useful and busy living. Colorful burgundy chintz draperies finish the French doors, which open onto a terrace.

Spacious Dining Room

The dining room is designed to create a feeling of spaciousness, yet everything the modern woman could possibly want is in it. Two medium-sized chests for linens, an adequate sideboard with bow front and an unusual curved-front corner cupboard are included. The furniture is all mahogany. An attractive bay-window treatment is achieved with striped faille draperies in chartreuse and deep green on a cream ground.

It has also a charming room designed for a young lady. It has sunny painted furniture and one of the new quilted beds. Then there is a boy's room that could easily be an upstairs sitting room. It is definitely modern, with its chest of drawers, smart desk, comfortable chairs and a good-looking studio couch that at night doubles as a comfortable double bed. Practical sectional pieces along the wall hold books and knickknacks. Beige and green are the motif colors.

Fashion Flashes

Getting together various leathers seems to be the thing for gloves. Thus, a black doesskin glove has at the wrists, a wide panel of alligator outlined with stitching.

Bright touches abound in evening fashions. A lovely bag of blue stain has an all-over pattern of water lilies and leaves in sequins approximating natural colors.

Go gay with a smart red suit. A beauty is in military red, a slim jacket and a twenty-eight-gore skirt. Lovely with black or blue accessories and nice for town or country.

It isn't easy to pass the bag counter these days. Not when they are showing bags like that smart model of black antelope with a wide border of black patent and a massive gilt link handle.

A siren of a frock is an evening model of black velvet with chevron encrustations of pink velvet. The frock is cut on slim figure-revealing lines and is beltless and strapless.

Nice afternoons are so much nicer with a nice frock. A charming and useful model is of floral patterned black satin brocade, made with tucked draped effect at the bustline and hipline.

BIRTHDAY PARTY FOR MRS. EMILY TYLER

Mrs. Emily Tyler celebrated her ninety-second Birthday at her home, near Ameliasburg, on Monday November 13.

Friends and relatives met at her home on Sunday, offering birthday felicitations; others coming on Monday.

The prettily decorated birthday cake, a gift of her niece Mrs. Selburn Westover, Sidney and chrysanthemums grown by Mrs. Hermon Tucker, Tweed, another niece, decorated the dinner table, where guests numbering twenty-six were present.

Mrs. Tyler was a perfect hostess, showing great interest and enthusiasm in the day's doings, and especially enjoyed the unwrapping of the gifts that had been brought her.

Mrs. Tyler has a keen sense of humour, which was in evidence many times during the day.

Enjoying fairly good health, Mrs. Tyler takes an active interest in all her surroundings. Her loyalty to her King and Queen whom she saw last May, is very strong.

Mrs. Tyler lives alone at her farm residence during the summer months, spending the winters with her niece, Mrs. Clarence Hay and Mr. Hay.

Regular Meeting Of Queen Alexandra Home-School Club

The regular meeting of Queen Alexandra Home and School Club, was held in the School Auditorium at eight o'clock with Mrs. R. Morden in the chair. The meeting was opened with the singing of "O Canada". The attendance prize was won by Miss Lockhart's class.

Miss R. Templeton, guest speaker, gave a very interesting address on "Our Duties as Citizens in a Country at War". She advanced many splendid ideas in connection with the training of children at this time. In this connection Miss Templeton suggested that Club members visit the boys' and girls' department of Corby Public Library, especially during Children's Book Week, this week, to see the many books for youthful reading. It was advisable, too, for members to become familiar with the books the library offers for discussion groups.

A spelling match at the conclusion of the address, proved very amusing, in charge of Mr. G. Anderson. Mrs. H. O. Trusdale's team won over Mrs. W. H. Finkle's team. Refreshments were served in Miss Lockhart's room.

'North Star' Leaves On First Part of Trip To the Antarctic

Boston, Nov. 15—(AP)—Without fanfare, the first half of the first Antarctic expedition sponsored by the United States Government in 100 years sailed from Boston today on the first leg of the long journey to the Southland.

Just before the dawn the motorship North Star—loaded with everything from food to phonograph records, from sled dogs to a 27-ton snow cruiser—cast off her lines at the army base and slid down the harbor en route to Philadelphia.

With the declaration that he believed Little America might provide a new and "safer" base for a United States-Australian air trail, Rear-Admiral Richard E. Byrd, the expedition's leader, gave the signal for the takeoff.

The North Star's next stop was to be Philadelphia to pick up some airplanes. After that she will head for Panama, then for New Zealand and finally for the expedition's west base in the Antarctic.

Next week, the second ship in the expedition, the barkentine Bear, will follow the North Star on the 12,000-mile journey.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Marrying to Help Another Not Always a Sensible Move

In making up her mind to marry a widower sixteen years older than herself, and hoping I'll tell her she's doing the right thing, Anne is going to get a definite "No" so far as my endorsement of her marriage is concerned.

She goes on to state that she's not in love with anyone else, she is not of an emotional type, and she feels that her marriage would make things easier for her mother, who is an invalid and who is the real love of Anne's life.

My young friend doesn't give her age, but it's safe to say she's not a day over 20, perhaps younger, as she speaks of her graduation only a year ago and is wondering if she can have her white organdy made over for a wedding gown. That's what she wore under the cap and gown the day she received her diploma.

A wedding dress doesn't rate a pin's importance. If you watch the papers closely, you'll realize that the ivory satins have a Reno finale much more often than the simple going-away gown. Congeniality of tastes, understanding, genuine love keep the good ship Matrimony afloat longer than seven bridesmaids dressed in pastel shades and a shower bouquet fashioned from white orchids.

But so many girls are too young and too inexperienced to understand this. Anne, among them, I fear. My correspondent is not aware that there's a pattern about this business of living. There is no reliable padlock on love. Anne may not be in love with anyone today and madly, ecstatically in love with someone tomorrow. And the very fact, that she's married and presumably the door is shut on romance may be another reason why her eye roves unconsciously for a possible Prince Charming.

Human nature being what it is and having such a large alloy of perversity, this girl may become terribly bored by the widower, sixteen years her senior, after she marries him.

Some men approaching middle age or having arrived there definitely are much more interesting and capable of inspiring love than men young enough to be their sons. They have more wordly experience, greater poise, are more amusing, and all of these things make youngsters seem crude and half-baked by contrast. It's safe for the select few to marry young girls. But Anne's widower, from what she tells me about him, doesn't seem to belong to this preferred stock.

Taking everything in the same tempo —their meals, their amusements, the books they read, even a second marriage with "sweet and twenty"—this marriage does not suggest romance. And what she tells me of him promises less.

There is another side to marriage intended to benefit someone other than the contracting parties. This young girl who is marrying to help along her mother may discover that her mature bridegroom is not without jealousy. Unless the girl has some hard and fast arrangement with him beforehand, he may object seriously to contributing to his mother-in-law's support, or having her live in the same house with them.

All these things should be decided on beforehand. But if I were in Anne's place, I'd get a job, and if I were not capable of taking a job at the moment, I'd prepare myself to get a good one. So much in the way of free tuition is open to young people today.

But to marry a dull-looking, "plain boiled" man to help along someone else seems more than risky to me.

CARMEL W.M.S.

The November meeting of Carmel W.M.S. was held at the home of Mrs. A. Armstrong, Cannifton.

In the absence of the president, the vice-president, Mrs. Seldon Homan, opened the meeting and conducted the worship service, assisted by Mrs. Armstrong and Mrs. F. Hicks. Rev. Mr. Armstrong gave an interesting talk on some of the experiences of Dr. Huffman. Mrs. Pitman, group leader, took charge of the program, opening with a poem and Hymn 15. Ruth Brintnell gave a piano solo. Mrs. Ross, Mrs. Pitman and Mr. Armstrong gave short talks on what interested them most in the new Study Book on India. This was followed by a vocal solo by Hazel Hicks. The delegates report of the Sectional Rally held at Zion was well given by Mrs. C. Brintnell. A solo was given by Mrs. R. Stapley.

The meeting closed with prayer, after which Mrs. Armstrong, assisted by the groups, served refreshments and a social time was spent together.

Stirling

Stirling — Mrs. Don Donohue of River Valley, was hostess on Thursday afternoon, November 9th, at a surprise party and crystal shower given by a group of the young ladies of the community in honor of Miss Dorothy Utman.

Several of the young ladies assisted in the direction of the social program, including novel games and contest that were greatly enjoyed. During the afternoon an address directed to the guest of honor was read by Mrs. Donohue and a presentation of many lovely and useful gifts made. Miss Utman expressed her gratitude to her many friends for the kindly gesture and the pleasant function closed with several ladies serving a luncheon.

The address:

Stirling, Ont., Nov. 9, 1939

Dear Dorothy:

We, your girl friends, have gathered here this afternoon to spend a short time with you before you enter into a new and happy experience on the great sea of wedded bliss. We feel we could not let the occasion pass without expressing to you our appreciation of your sterling character and the way you have helped us at all times. We are reminded, too, not only of your willingness to aid us but of your friendly and jolly nature at all our gatherings. We have found you a true friend in every sense of the word and it is a pleasure to know that we may still have your companionship in the future.

It is the wish of all present today that prosperity, love, health and happiness shall attend you wherever you may roam, especially happiness, for life is dull and drear without it. There is a way which will lead you to it called

The Road to Happiness

There is a road to happiness, start now from where you are.
Turn to the right and keep right on, and you'll not find it far.
Along the path of willing feet and over heart ease hill,
Across the fields of sweet content, the stream of glad goodwill.

Then thro' the land of loving heart,
the gates that's called today,
And down the steps of little things, into the common way.
And take the cloak of Charity, the staff of wise employ,
A loaf of bread of daily grace, a flash well-filled with joy.
A word of cheer, a helping hand,
some good to give or share,
A bit of song a high resolve, a hope, a smile, a prayer.
And in the place of duty done beside the door of home,
You'll find the house of happiness does not roam.

May you find the road not hard to follow and happiness to greet you at the end. We ask you to accept these gifts as an expression of the regard in which you are held. May each individual gift or token remind you of our feelings of goodwill for you.

Signed on behalf of your girl friends.

Impressive Military Service at St. Andrew's

St. Andrew's Church, Stirling, was filled to capacity for a special memorial service on Sunday morning with Veterans, members of the present Hastings-Prince Edward Regiment under command of Major E. Matthews and Sgt.-Major Turner and members of the Stirling Boy Scouts and Girl Guides, joined the large congregation in impressive worship. Rev. W. H. V. Walker referring to the three groups present as past, present and future heroes in defence of Christian civilization based his sermon on Scriptural groupings of three, taking Luke 2: 52 as his text which set forth the three stages of development in the life of Christ. The essence of righteousness is found in the passage "and Jesus increased in wisdom and stature and in favor with God and Man." In the present day numerological comparison is significant. Totalitarianism is symbolized in the figure one, one dictator, one state, one purpose. Three is the lowest number used in description of democracy, two would result in endless debate; three provides a ruling majority. Three drastic measures on the offensive were taken by one dictator before Britain took up arms after three avenues of peaceful settlement were closed. Three agencies that will do much to bring victory are the Navy, Army and Air Force fighting for a flag of three colors, red white and blue, bearing three crosses, striving to establish another grouping of three, goodwill, peace and contentment. The message was timely and revealed considerable study on the part of the speaker.

The soldiers, veterans, Girl Guides and Scouts assembled for parade at the Stirling Community Service Building and marched past Memorial Park and the Cenotaph to St. Andrews Church.

A choir of twenty-two led in the singing of appropriate hymns and rendered an anthem, "O Worship the King." Mrs. R. H. Williams, organist and choirleader, presided at the organ with Miss Grace Pitman at the piano. Special organ and piano duet numbers included "March of the Fifth Symphony," "Hymn Celeste" and "Soldiers of the King." Arthur Duncan, tenor soloists, assisted offering, "Britons Everywhere," and the service closed with the National Anthem. The procession then returned to the point of assembly for dismissal.

Frankford

Frankford, Nov. 15. — Frankford Veterans observed Remembrance Day on Sunday with a parade to the Cenotaph led by Rgt. Sgt. Major E. Almey, D.C.M. and accompanied by the band. They were met at the cenotaph by Reeve George Spencer who made a few very appropriate remarks. The band played "Oh God Our Help In Ages Past" and the service was conducted by Rev. V. D. Harrison of Belleville. The trooping of the colors by the standard bearers was very ably done and the following wreaths were placed in front of the cenotaph: the wreath from the Ontario Government by Mrs. John Chard, the veterans' wreath by Mr. Saddler, the village of Frankford wreath by Mr. William Simmons, the Masonic Lodge wreath by Mr. Harold Terry, the Orange Lodge wreath by Mr. Geo. Brown, and the I.O.O.F. wreath had been previously placed in front of the cenotaph. The benediction was pronounced and the band played the National Anthem.

"Engineer Shore" at Throttle As Boston Locomotive Rolls Over Chicago by 3-1 Score

Reliable Eddie Fails to Score but Presence Inspires Bruins to Victory

RED WINGS WIN

Detroit Beats Americans 4-2 Leaving Dutton's Charges Winless in Cellar Slot

By ROBERT CLARKE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The Boston "locomotive" rolled along the "main track" again today after nearly two weeks of idling on a National Hockey League "siding." All the Bruins needed, evidently, was the hand of "Engineer" Eddie Shore at the "throttle" once more.

The reliable Shore last night averted the "wrecking" of the Boston "thirty-niner" by leading the Bruins to a 3-1 triumph over Chicago Black Hawks. Anything but a victory would have been disastrous, for the Stanley Cup champions had dropped their only two previous contests.

It was the loss of these two games—to Toronto Maple Leafs by 5-0 and to Detroit Red Wings by a 2-1 score—that led to Shore offering his services to Manager Art Ross for the game against the Hawks at Boston. According to arrangements made at the start of the season, Eddie was to have played in no regular away games and only in home games after Dec. 15.

Does Not Score

Although Shore failed to score against the Hawks, his very presence seemed to inspire the Bruins to better things.

While the Hawks were losing in an overtime struggle to the Bruins, thereby forfeiting a chance to go into first place in the standing, Detroit Red Wings staved off a last period rally to defeat New York Americans 4-2 at New York. The victory sent the Wings into a tie at the top with Toronto Maple Leafs.

For 53 minutes of the Boston-Chicago encounter it appeared that the Hawks might win, for they had taken the lead on a first-period goal by Doug Bentley. But at the 13-minute mark in the third period, Shore engineered the play that allowed Bill (Busher) Hollett to tie the score.

In the overtime period Bruins went to work and Milt Schmidt took advantage of a breakaway from a gang attack, while Boston's Dit Clapper was serving a minor, to fire the winning goal. Hollett added his second goal of the game.

Young Kenny Kilrea, member of a famous hockey family, and Syd Howe, a still-youthful N.H.L. veteran, led the Wings in handing Americans a third straight defeat. Kilrea counted the first and second Detroit goals while Howe aided in the third and scored the fourth. Johnny Sorrell and Murray Armstrong scored for the winless Americans.

Sports Roundup

FLYERS GOALIE HURT

Cornwall, Ont., Nov. 15—(CP) — Floyd Perras, goalie of Cornwall Flyers in the Quebec Senior Hockey League, will be unable to play for the rest of the season, club officials disclosed last night.

Perras suffered a torn tendon during Friday night's game with Verdum Maple Leafs when he collided with Hugh Tracey in a goal mouth scramble. Perrin Magwood has been in the nets since Perras' injury but it is learned that Flyers are in the market for a new goalie.

PRO PUCK PERSONALITIES

TOE BLAKE
Canadiens

A hard-working player who gives everything he's got, going both ways, on the ice, Toe Blake (Hector's his given name) scaled the heights last year by winning the N.H.L. scoring championship and being chosen left wing on the annual Canadian Press all-star team. Not a spectacular player or one given to verbal displays either on or off the ice, he's the kind of a player every coach likes to have around. Big and rugged, and always in good shape, he sets out for the opposition's goal in a determined manner and usually ends up pretty close, without any fancy skating display to get him there. When he was younger he would flare up at the least provocation, but he's conquered that tendency, and, despite being a "marked man" because of his goal-getting ability, he served but 10 minutes on the penalty bench last year. Played amateur hockey in Northern Ontario senior ranks before turning pro with Canadiens in 1935-36. In four years he's amassed 52 goals, 53 assists for a point total of 105. For his great play last year with Canadiens, who barely made the playoffs, he was voted the Hart trophy as the most valuable player to his team in the league.

TOE BLAKE

TOMORROW: Dit Clapper, Boston Bruins.

WRESTLERS TAKE CUT

New York, Nov. 15—(AP)— It's a sad state the old sport of wrestling has reached hereabouts.

For several years the New York State Athletic Commission has refused to recognize any wrestling championships, ruling all bouts must be billed as "exhibitions."

Yesterday, at the request of Jess McMahon, representing various mat promoters, the commissioners agreed to reduce the minimum wage of wrestlers from $10 to $8 per exhibition.

BERNIE MOROZ IS IMPERIALS' LEADING SCORER

Moroz Capably Fills Stirling's Shoes at Sarnia as Leading Scorer

HAS 36 POINTS

Converts Nine Touchdowns and Plunges Over for Four Major Scores Already

For a young fellow who had to step into a position vacated by the illustrious Hugh (Bummer) Stirling, Bernie Moroz, of Sarnia Imperials has done a man-sized job. Moroz, who won the east's scoring title this season, will be the player watched most by Montreal Westmounts when the two clubs start their Ontario rugby football union playoffs this Saturday.

The great Bummer, who retired from play at the end of the 1938 season, was hailed often as a "one-man" football team. He could run, plunge, pass and kick with the best of them and was a power on secondary defence. It is almost the same way, although he doesn't do some things quite as well, with Moroz. Moroz is as deadly as Stirling at place-kicking, booting two field goals and converting nine touchdowns from placement. He backs up a line with some deadly and hard tackling and he plunges well enough to have scored four touchdowns this season.

The thirty-six points Moroz picked up during the six scheduled Sarnia games look all the better when it is considered that in the previous season, when Stirling was leading the Imperials, he failed to score a single point. Stirling led all scorers in the section with forty-two points.

No other player on the Sarnia team came close to Moroz in point scoring, but Westmounts have two players—Tommy Burns and Ray Mullins—that will bear watching. Burns came second among section scorers with twenty-six points while Mullins compiled twenty-two. Burns and Red Storey of Toronto's big four Argonauts were the only two players in the east to score five touchdowns this season.

The Westies and the 'Imps play the first game of their two-game total-points series at Sarnia, with the second contest coming a week later at Montreal. A similar series between the Canadian champion Argonauts and Ottawa Rough Riders for the big four title opens at Ottawa Saturday.

Giants Go the Limit With Plans For Finest Floodlight Plant

New York, Nov. 15 (AP) — New York Giants, themselves, breathlessly announced night baseball in the Polo Grounds today—after just about every baseball writer in town had been announcing it for them for weeks.

"We're going to have the finest lighting plant in the game for 1940," President Horace Stoneham said. "We'll have seven games under the lights during the 1940 season."

Thus the last major league stronghold against night ball passed out of the picture. A year ago the Giants vowed they never would play under the lights, either at home or on the road. Reason for the about-face could not be learned.

Now the club is going the whole hog. Not only will there be seven night games in the Polo Grounds next season, but the Giants also will play under the lights in Cincinnati, Philadelphia and Brooklyn.

"We originally had planned to wait until 1941 to start," Stoneham explained, "but since we made the decision finally, and figured the revenue is so high, we thought we might just as well start in 1940."

There will be eight towers in the lighting plant, extending 150 feet above the playing field and 70 feet above the roof of the stands. The installation will cost more than $100,000, and operation of the 200,000,000-candle-power system will cost about $300 a game.

H. Thomas Summoned Before Boxing Heads

New York, Nov. 15—(AP)—Harry Thomas, the Eagle Bend, Minn. heavyweight who recently charged that the fights in which he was knocked out by Max Schmeling and Tony Galento had been fixed," was summoned before the New York State Athletic Commission yesterday. After being sworn in, he was granted a week's postponement in order to obtain counsel.

The Commission also called Arthur Donovan, who refereed the Schmeling-Thomas bout, but postponed questioning him.

After the postponement, Thomas insisted, "I'm standing pat on what I said. I just merely want to take every precaution I can. I prefer to be represented by my attorney."

Indianapolis—Danno O'Mahoney, 228, Ireland, threw Juan Humberto, 226, Mexico City (Humberto disqualified for roughness after losing first fall.)

KAMINSKY LEADING

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 15—(AP) —Max Kaminsky edged ahead of a Springfield teammate, Norm Schultz, today in the race for individual scoring honors in the International-American Hockey League.

Kaminsky was credited with nine assists for a total of nine points in league statistics. Schultz holds a second place tie at eight points with Deacon of Indianapolis.

Pete Bessone of Pittsburgh, with 14 minutes in the penalty box, headed the "bad man" division.

VERDUN BEATEN 7-6

Verdun, Que., Nov. 15—(CP) — St. Hyacinthe gained a 7-6 victory over Verdun Bulldogs last night in the opening game here of the Provincial Senior Hockey League season.

The Lemay brothers, Albert and Tony, and Gordie Poirier set the pace for the visitors. Tony Lemay scored twice and assisted in another goal, his brother had a goal and three assists and Poirier a goal and four assists. Steve Nickartz, Bob Purdie and Gordie Waite were the other St. Hyacinthe scorers.

BERNIE MOROZ

CLEM FAUST

RED STOREY

With the regular schedules safely tucked into the records here are the players who led the three eastern senior leagues in amassing scoring points in the six league games their teams played. Bernie Moroz, of Sarnia, headed them all with 36 points, made up of four touchdowns, two field goals, one single and nine converts. Second best was Tommy Burns, with 26 in the O.R.F.U., the same circuit that Moroz led. Red Storey, who "found himself" in last year's Dominion final against Winnipeg, galloped to five touchdowns for Toronto Argonauts and the 25 points thus accumulated led the Big Four. Faust, one of the many starry backs with University of Western Ontario's college champions, like Moroz, counted by all four methods, one touch, two field goals, one single and 11 converts, for a point total of 23. Wilf Tremblay, of Ottawa, was second in the Big Four and Ding McGill, of Queen's, took the runner-up spot in the intercollegiate.

Rangers were on the job to stop this rush as they opened the New York season by dropping a 1-0 decision to Toronto Maple Leafs. This wasn't a scoring effort, however, although Dave Kerr, Ranger netminder, had to move quickly to thwart the move. Gord Drillon (12) is seen sprawled on the ice and Syl Apps, the other figure in white, falling farther back. Falling over Drillon is Dutch Hiller (8) and standing, Art Coulter (2). Facing the camera on the far side of the goal is Muz Patrick, while skating in front of Kerr is Phil Watson. The other player in the right foreground is Bryan Hextall.

SUSPENDED ? ?

This somewhat agitated countenance belongs to Lew Hayman, coach of Toronto Argonoauts, for the past two years winners of the dominion rugby championship. Lew was more than agitated last Saturday as his team closed the season with a tie game against Montreal Royals and in the excitement pushed Referee Pean Bennett about the playing field. Result may be a one-game suspension, meaning the Argos' coach would not be on the bench for his team's first Big Four playoff game against Ottawa Rough

IN THE FOLD EARLY

Reversing the procedure of last year, when he remained a holdout until April 2, Paul Waner, for the past 14 years one of baseball's greatest outfielders, was the first member of Pittsburgh Pirates to be signed for the 1940 season. Paul is the only player in the majors who has averaged 200 hits a season over such a long stretch and the season before last was the only one in which he failed to pass .300. In the realm of rumors he's been on the trading block for years now, but he's been a Pirate every year so far.

Shore is Absent so Springfield Lost

By The Canadian Press

If Eddie Shore doesn't have a headache before this hockey season is over, what with owning a team in one league and being needed as a player by a team in another, he's the wonder man of the ages.

As owner of the Springfield Indians of the International-American League, Shore has more than a passing interest there. But he also happens to be a much needed cog in the Boston Bruins National Hockey League machine.

However, he can't be in two places at the same time, so last night while he inspired the Bruins to a 3-1 overtime victory over Chicago, his Indians bowed 5-4 in overtime to Cleveland Barons. Indians remained in first place in the eastern section, for there was only one game last night, while Barons gained a first place tie with Indianapolis in the western division.

In gaining their fourth straight victory, Barons scored three times in the overtime period.

Two former N.H.L. stars, Paul Runge and Leroy Goldsworthy, played prominent parts in the victory. Runge scored Barons' last two overtime goals while Goldsworthy figured in the other three markers.

N.H.L. STARS

By The Canadian Press

Kenny Kilrea and Syd Howe, Detroit—Former scored two goals and the latter a goal and assist in a 4-2 victory for the Red Wings over New York Americans.

Bill (Busher) Hollett, Boston, caged two goals in a 3-1 overtime victory over Chicago Black Hawks.

Eddie Shore, Boston, inspired Bruins in their first victory of the season and made the play that brought Boston's first goal, sending the game into overtime.

Trend Toward Inter-League Baseball in Majors Seen As Game's Great Stimulant

Latest Suggestion of Inter-League Competition During Season Gains Momentum

NEW PLAN SEEN

Play 18 League Matches and Four Inter-League Games per Club All Around Circuits

(By Sid Feder, Associated Press Sports Writer).

New York, Nov. 15—(AP)—The trend toward inter-league play in the major leagues, gradually picking up momentum, was given a new push today by a suggestion which met with the approval of several of baseball's more influential citizens.

The sponsor of this plan, a well-known baseball official, asked that his name be not mentioned. But you got the idea that it might be brought up at next month's major league meetings, along with the suggestions of Larry MacPhail, for eight "world series" right down the line between the two loops, and Gerry Nugent for a Shaughnessy play-off in the big leagues.

The new plan goes something like this:

1. Cut the regular season play down to where each team, instead of meeting every other team in its own league twenty-two times each season would take others on in only eighteen games — nine at home and nine away.

2. Then each team in each league would play four games with every team in the other league.

3. These four games — two at home and two away—would count in the pennant standings, somewhat on the order of the National Hockey League.

Test of Strength

"In that way," explained the sponsor, "you'd have some true idea of just how much better your pennant-winning clubs are than the other clubs in both loops. These interleague games could be put on late in August, just when the interest of fans is beginning to fall off, and would be a definite shot in the arm to the gate."

Ford Frick, the National League's President, unofficially thought the idea a good one.

"At least," he said, "it's a progressive step. And baseball must keep on showing progress all the time, just like a business."

"The trend is definitely toward inter-league play, sooner or later."

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with
Ken J. Colling

Frank Shaughnessy, President of the International Baseball League and one-time captain of a Notre Dame football team, says the time for unlimited interference in Canadian football has arrived. "The trouble with Canadian football as it's played in the east is that it's too individualistic. The sooner the Canadian rules committee adopt unlimited blocking and interference, then the sooner Canadian football fans will see some real football," predicted "Shag," who went on to say that under the present eastern Canadian rules "a lineman on the offence can't play on a field deeper than a three-yard lane and once passed this stripe they are through on that particular play." Mr. Shaughnessy contends these rules "just don't make sense." However, well taken "Shag's" proposal was made, he's going to find considerable adverse criticism of such changes. For instance Frank Cunningham, of the O.S.D., says: "The Canadian football season is too short to introduce unlimited interference, as this type of playing football takes many more months of practice, than our present system in vogue." Others connected locally with the fall classic agree, but then we recall hearing objections to the forward pass and three-yard interference before they were adopted and these football innovations have proven popular.

Western University's 1939 senior Intercollegiate champion football squad will suffer severely through graduations next spring, it was announced yesterday. Incidentally Belleville's gift to the new Intercollegiate champions, backfielder Wally Hilton, is listed as one of those scheduled to graduate from Western next year. We also understand that Jimmie Follwell, kicker delure for the Ontario intermediate Intercollegiate champion Agricultural College squad, will graduate from O.A.C. next spring. This may mean that both Hilton and Follwell may return to Belleville to take up their life's work and residence, but what future can either Follwell or Hilton look to in their favorite sports channels, rugby football. When Wally Hilton left to attend Western and Follwell bade farewell to old Belleville to study agriculture and how to keep ants out of the picnic sandwiches, the Quinte City was flourishing in both intermediate O.R.F.U. and senior Interscholastic. There has been many a watery ripple under the bridge since their departure and today all there is left is the rejuvenation of Interscholastic football in our midst.

With Hilton and Follwell back in Belleville another season, the nucelus of another Belleville intermediate O.R.F.U. team would be assured at least it's a thought and one well worth taking to the point of serious consideration. The introduction of floodlights in a local sports park or athletic field would also help to make many a local sport dream attain realization.

Jimmie Follwell and his champion O.A.C. teammates can hang up their football paraphernalia for the season. Yesterday it was announced by Coach Baldwin of O.A.C., that there would be no post season play-off between the O.A.C. "Aggies" and the Ottawa University squad for the eastern Intermediate Intercollegiate rugby title as proposed by the Capital City students.

Ray Blades, who took over the management of the St. Louis Cardinals and guided them into second place in the National League this season, signed a one year contract to head the Red Birds again in 1940. The terms are still a secret, however.

Owing to continued cold weather the promoters of professional wrestling cancelled Friday night's card at the Hume arena. It seems Joe Maich was in Montreal yesterday and in touch with the head office promoters and enroute home to Brantford today stopped in the city long enough to break the news. Immediately Manager Norm Barriage started preparations towards clearing the playing surface in preparation for immediate flooding of the arena in the event the present cold snap continues. Wrestling, under the new promoters, will continue next Spring, however.

Ed Thomas' Belleville Redmen make their initial hockey appearance in the Van Horne Memorial series tonight in Kingston versus the Royal Canadian Artillery sextette. Little is known of the strength of the "cannonaders", but the Redmen are being prepared for "long range" attacks and the odd "barrage." In all likelihood the locals will line-up with Ken Watts in goal, St. Louis, McCreary and McElrath on the defence, the Jackson boys and Robinson on one line and Herb Windsor, Les Yates and Cy Barriage on the second line with Mark and Bill Storms as alternates. Tomorrow night "Toots" Holway's R.C.A.F. seniors play the Oshawa Generals, Memorial Cup champions an exhibition game in Oshawa.

Do you remember when Hugh (Bummer) Stirling, sparkplug of Sarnia Imperials' great football machine, won the Eastern Canada football scoring championship, according to final Canadian Press statistics issued two years ago today. He outscored college and Big Four gridders despite an Ontario Union season three weeks shorter than the others. His point-total was 36.

Taking pattern after Canadian ideas, the major baseball leagues may adopt inter-league games between the National and American Leagues within two years, which wouldn't be a bad idea no matter how you look at it. To have the powerful and colorful Yankees make a complete swing around the National League circuit would doubtless prove a great stimulant to the game, and wouldn't Dizzy Dean or Bucky Walters prove additional attractions in the American League cities occasionally? When it comes to ferreting out new wrinkles in which to draw the fans through the turnstiles, the Canadians are first and past-masters at the art, at least they're far ahead of their Yankee cousins.

Just the presence of Eddie Shore turned the Bruins into a smooth working machine as Art Ross' Beantown boys rang up their initial N.H.L. win, in three starts, at the expense of the Black Hawks last night. The Bruins paced by Shore, won 3-1 and really looked like champions. Who was it said—"one swallow doesn't make a summer"—Mebbe not, but one Shore made a lotta difference in Boston. In the meantime Jack Adams' Detroit Red Wings kept the New York Americans mired in the N.H.L. cellar slot as the Motor City squad beat Red Dutton's "amazing Amerks" 4-2 in Gotham.

Sports Whirl — See where Bobby Pearce, world's professional sculling champion, is taking up professional wrestling ..He meets Al (Bunny) Dunlop at the Maple Leaf Gardens this week....If all goes well there's to be an inter-unit boxing card between the Air Force and leather-pushers from the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment on the 25th.

FIGHT AT VALLEYFIELD

Valleyfield, Que., Nov. 15—(CP) —In a rough and tumble game in which five major penalties were called after a free-for-all fight in the third period, Valleyfield Braves trounced Shawinigan Falls Cataracts 7-2 in a provincial senior hockey league game last night.

Police helped officials restore order after players from both teams joined in the 10-minute fight.

INSTALLMENT 18

The eighth day after Gibbs had been taken away was a Sunday and she could go to see him in the hospital. She had crept in every night for a report; she had telephoned every day; but he was better now. There was a joy in this meeting that Becky had never known in her life before.

Gibbs was lying languid on a pillow; he was pitifully thin, and his big eyes seemed to take up all his face. But his small hand was cool, and the forehead that Becky's lips touched was cool. She sat beside him talking quietly, telling him his favorite story of the white rat that was good and the black rat that was bad, and he listened with all his old absorption, sometimes supplying details with vigor. "So his mommy din' give him any ice cream?" or "And hurted his leg so it bleeded?"

"Mrs. Gibson," a nurse said. Becky turned to smile. "Doctor Dinsmore, the head, is here," the girl went on. "He would like to see you for a moment. He took charge of your small boy when he was brought in. He'd like to see you in his office. Fourth floor I'll show you the way.

Becky followed, praying as she went. It couldn't be that anything was wrong with Gibbs. Not tuberculosis or anemia.... She was so white when at last she faced the famous physician that he made her sit down, and himself brought her a paper cup of water.

"You're all right?" he asked anxiously. Becky sat facing him, trying to smile. "I'm all right," she said shakily. "but Gibbs, my little boy....? She said he was really out of the woods. She said that perhaps he could come home next Sunday."

"He is. He's made an astonishing comeback. Well, not for a baby, come to think of it. No, he's all right. But now, Mrs. Gibson, where do you live?"

Dr. Stephen Dinsmore, nearing fifty, was dark, tall, lean, spectacled. Becky liked his voice. It was unalarming, cultured.

"Where do I live? I have a little apartment in 149th."

"Go to work in the subway every day?"

"No. I work at Rheingolder's. It's not so very far from here. I've been able to come to the hospital every night at dinnertime, before that a neighbor took care of Gibbs while I was away."

"I don't think", the doctor said, "that little Gibbs ought to go back to that neighborhood. Not now. He ought to have a month or six weeks in an even warm temperature and very careful building up. Any epidemic now, measles or whooping cough...."

"Oh, God help me!" Becky said in her soul. Aloud she added, "Could I take him to California?"

"Could you get to California?"

"My people are there. But there are circumstances...." Becky began, and hesitated. "They haven't a great deal of money," she explained. "I've four younger brothers, all in school, I thought ....I knew so many people had made good here.... I ran away from home—"

"What I'm suggesting," said the doctor in a businesslike voice, "is that you bring the child down to my house on Long Island and keep him there until after Christmas. My sister is there, widowed, with two girls—grown girls; she's visiting me. I think she'd be very glad to have you. After Christmas we are going to Florida for several weeks. That would build him up perfectly, and I don't imagine you'll have any further trouble."

Becky looked at him in stupefection.

She said dazedly. "But Doctor Dinsmore, why—why should you do this for me?"

"Because I want to," the doctor said, looking at some scribbled message on his desk pad.

"But—but my job?"

"You would have to give that up."

"But what—what would I do in return? I couldn't just—just take it."

A glance was flashed at her through the strong glasses. "Why not? I would of course guarantee you your fare to California in March, in writing if you like. You could safely move him in March, I believe."

It was as if the dark December skies above the grim old city had broken into the blue of June..

"What do you say?" Stephen Dinsmore asked.

"Why, but, Doctor Dinsmore, what can I say? Except that I didn't know that people could be so wonderful—so marvelous. I was —I was—sort of at the end of my rope," Becky faltered, "and it doesn't seem true!"

And suddenly abandoning an attempt to hold back her tears, an attempt to turn them into a laugh, she put her head down on the desk and burst into wild sobbing, sobbing so uncontrolled, so exhausted and abandoned that the man presently rang for a nurse, and Becky had to be quieted with something powdery and white dissolved in water, and made to lie down in one of the waiting rooms on a wide leather couch.

She saw Dr. Dinsmore again before she went home; he was quiet and business'like and unemotional. Gibbs could be moved on Friday; that was the eighteenth. If Becky would be at the hospital with his clothes and hers on Friday afternoon, they could be driven straight to the Locust Valley place.

"My sister will take charge of you; she's done this sort of thing for me before. You're to do nothing but rest and eat for a while I'll be down Saturday and see how you've settled in."

Her face colorless, her lashes soaked, her voice shaking, Becky caught at his hand. "Doctor, you don't know....you don't know...."

He blinked at her, stirred himself. "I do know," he said.

On Friday Gibbs, well rolled in a big soft tan blanket with S. D. lettered upon it in brown silk, rode in his mother's arms away from the city into the clean sweet winter country.

The big car turned in at an iron gate; it was not a pretentious house at which they stopped, but Becky thought she had never seen a more inviting one. A square plain brick building, painted a cream white, on which bare vines etched delicate patterns; french windows with curved tops; a doorway severely Colonial with fine-fluted columns and a fanlight. There were window balconies of green ironwork; there was a fire in one of the downstairs rooms; she could see the pink hospitable light of it flickering on primly drawn net curtains.

Another fire, in a fireplace of white tiles, was burning briskly in the great upstairs bedroom to which she and Gibbs were immediately taken. Mrs. Lafayette Lee, Stephen Dinsmore's sister Harriet, a faded, sweet woman of some fifty five years, escorted Becky there, as did Carrie-Sis, an enormous gentle young Negress, who performed all the offices of nurse for Gibbs so kindly that even the shy three-year-old did not feel strange with her.

A pretty girl of twenty, Harriet junior, did what she could to make Becky feel welcome. There was a butler, who went off for milk and toast for Gibbs, a big motherly gray-headed cook and a thin little eager maid. All these, as Becky was to learn later, composed the house staff, but so comfortable and friendly and understanding was the relationship between them that the domestic machinery at Hillover ran as if by magic, and she was never conscious of their presence again unless she needed them.

She was presently left alone, to sink panting into a great ruffled chair by the fire and wonder — and wonder—and wonder what had happened to her. Gibbs, refreshed with bread and milk, warmly blanketed, slept deeply. The fire crackled and was still; Carrie-Sis came in noiselessly to lay another log or two upon it, to murmur sympathetically, "I ralk'n you's jus' played out, havin' yo' baby so sick!"

"It's so good to sit still," Becky admitted shyly, on a long contented sigh. "I don't know what sort of angels live here," she added, "To let me bring a sick child in on them!"

"Dey angels all right," Carrie-Sis agreed. "En Roc," she added, "is a son of God. Yas'm, he sho' a son of God."

God again! Becky leaned back in her chair, when the Negress was gone, and smiled deep within herself. "God, I thank thee. Whether it lasts two days or two weeks, I do thank thee."

After a while she got up and explored her domain, reveling in the spacious country generosity of its proportions, in the bathroom as big as her Bronx bedroom. There were children's books on the lower shelf of the bookcase; surely, surely not even Dr. Stephen Dinsmore's inspired kindness could have thought of that! But there they were. Becky and Gibbs had a wonderful hour with them before dinner.

Then Gibb's supper of chicken soup and custard appeared on a tray, and after Becky went shyly down a curved, gracious white stairway to dinner and sat with the two Harriets over a meal, simple, perfect, delicious. Afterward they had a library fire and talked, while the elder Harriet played solitaire with tiny cards that matched her small ivory hands, and the younger Harriet debated the arrangements for a Princeton weekend party.

Some friends of Hatsy, as the daughter was called, came for her; they were dancing at Sally's.

Then Mrs. Lee and Becky were alone.

"Steve has a heart of gold," was Harriet Lee's only acknowledgement of what Becky tried to say. "It gives him the greatest pleasure in his life to do what he calls "playing God.""

Again, Becky thought. God again. She told her hostess her own story of the past few years, of her running away to New York when she could no longer face her old friends at Salletts. "And since then it's been a nightmare...."

"Well, you'll get a real rest now," Harriet Lee said comfortably. Becky had already discovered that the one real treat life could bring her little hostess was a good listener. Mrs. Lee loved to "talk, to ramble on endlessly of the glories of the old South, of her family's possessions and privileges all through America's history up to the present moment. She had always been rich, gentle, generous, good, proud of her place in the world. She wished she had had a son, she told Becky, because with Barbara and Hatsy one branch of the fine old family died out. Barbara was the older daughter, now on her way home from a two months stay in Hawaii.

"Stephen," Mrs. Lee said, "is—well, we call him a social outlaw, Mrs. Gibson. But the longer you know my brother the more you'll admire him."

"I haven't any doubt of it," said Becky.

Gibbs was his lively, interested self when she went in; in that fact alone there was heart solace for Becky. After she had settled him off and gotten ready for bed she suddenly, unexpectedly, sank on her knees again. And this prayer was one of pure gratitude.

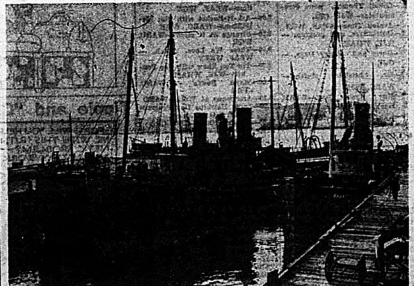
A PARTICULARLY progressive and productive state of affairs is read from a very interesting chain of planetary configurations. Sudden and surprising events may push things forward at a lively and unprecedented tempo, with changes in plans, revolutionary or radical in effect. Decidedly important contacts may be made with large corporations political, diplomatic or fraternal organizations, with which finesse and stratagem may be unexpectedly lucrative. There may be delays and impediments but these seem to vanish.

Those whose birthday it is are at the threshold of a memorable and notably progressive year, with many major ambitions being swept along with whirlwind and surprising tempo. It is a time for pushing toward new goals, with the prospect of powerful interests, political, diplomatic or fraternal, aiding and abetting. These should be cultivated, as new and constructive plans are promised unexpected co-operation. But do not be discouraged by some delays, postponements or disappointments of a temporary nature, possibly due to a low physical condition.

Joe E. Brown and Mary Carlisle in one of the hilarious comedy scenes from "Beware Spooks," coming next to the McCarthy Theatre.

Monte Blue, Roy Rogers and Raymond Hatton in the new Republic film, "Frontier Express," coming at the Capitol with an added special hit "Undercover Doctor," starring Lloyd Nolan, J. Carroll Naish and Heather Angel.

AMERICAN TRAWLERS TO BECOME FRENCH MINE SWEEPERS



Pictured tied up to a dock in East Boston are the trawlers Penguin, Loon, Brant and Plover, former fishing craft that have been sold to the French Government and will be used overseas as minesweepers, providing the U.S. government approves the sale. The trawlers were originally built as minesweepers 20 years ago. They were not completed in time for world war service.

SNARE

By B. A. BENEDICT

It was common talk around Pellham that Claire Montgomery had set her cap for Rus Stanton. Folks pitied Rus, because Claire had a reputation. Ever since the day she had come home following her graduation at Vassar, Pellham's young male population had been her slave.

That is, all save Rus Stanton. He alone had withstood her intoxicating beauty and charm; but now even he seemed doomed.

Claire was without scruples, a fact evidenced, first, by her total lack of concern regarding the shattered hearts of suitors whose love she sought and, winning, spurned. And second, by her indifference toward the feelings of one Dolly Kilbourne.

Dolly Kilbourne had been in love with Rus Stanton since high school days.

Indeed, rumors had it that sooner or later the two of them would get together on a matrimonial enterprise.

But that, of course, was before Claire Montgomery had returned from Vassar.

She was pretty sure of herself, this Claire, and when Rus showed only casual interest in her frank liking for him, she merely vowed to make his punishment the greater when eventually he was gathered to the fold.

Rus did a pretty good job of holding off, so much so, in fact, that observers of the drama began to speculate as to Claire's success.

One or two, indeed, went to the extent of chiding her about it.

"You'll never collect Rus," Fred Burgess told her, grinning. "He and Dolly Kilbourne have been hitting it off together for a dozen years or so. You'll never break 'em up."

Fred was one of Claire's vanquished suitors. He was a little resentful and would have liked nothing better than to see failure reward her efforts.

Claire regarded him scornfully.

"Dolly Kilbourne! My dear Fred, that ugly little hussy is the least of my worries. Her sex appeal is nil. Rus has been amusing himself with her, because there's been no one else about."

"She's at least honest," Fred replied.

Claire turned to the others who were standing about, with a derisive little laugh.

She saw the looks on their faces, and the determination in her soul to ensnare Rus Stanton increased a hundred fold.

The campaign lasted more than six months.

Claire employed all the cunning tactics and womanly instincts at her command.

And in the end she won.

Rus Stanton succumbed and pronounced the words that placed him in the category of suitors seeking the hand of the beautiful Claire Montgomery.

Flushed and triumphant, Claire returned home that night feeling much the same as a successful political candidate after the votes have been counted.

For a long time she lay awake, musing over the outcome of her campaign.

Tomorrow her cup of victory and satisfaction would be filled to the brim, for then the world would know that Rus Stanton had beep entrapped in her snare.

Claire thought about the matter for a long time, and as she thought an unaccountable feeling of remorse began to steal into her soul.

For some unknown reason her triumph seemed incomplete.

The thing was disturbing.

Analyzing it, she wondered if it lay in the reputation she had gained for herself, the esteem in which the people—especially the young people of Pellham—regarded her. And after a detailed review of her activities during the past two years, she decided that that was the answer.

The result of her cogitation was a little frightening.

Those people — neighbors and friends—she knew, thought of her scornfully and with contempt.

And now that the last field had been conquered, now that the last heart was broken, their friendship would be a pretty precious thing.

Then it was that the idea came.

The idea would restore her to the good graces of her fellowmen, win back their admiration.

She would surprise them by becoming virtuous.

It was a wholly selfish idea, because its purpose was designed merely to accomplish a personal gain.

Claire didn't love Rus Stanton any more than she had loved Fred Burgess or the others.

Her original plan had been to announce her engagement to him, keep the romance alive for a week or two so that the world would know of her triumph. And then, when Rus had reached the nth degree of ecstasy and happiness, she would, as on many previous occasions, break the engagement and drop him from her lists. That was the game she played. The torment that would be his reaction was the thing that delighted her.

But instead of that Claire would become virtuous.

She would marry Rus Stanton!

The thought sickened her, yet she knew it would be far better than run the risk of being ostracized by Pellham society. And Pellham society, once they knew, would forgive her for all that was past. They would cease condemning. They would shake their heads and say she had been wise to wait, for Rus Stanton and she were well matched.

Claire dropped off to sleep with the plan assuming elaborate proportions in her mind.

She was well satisfied, well pleased; no longer disturbed or afraid.

The problem had solved itself, as all problems do, once you give them a little thought.

She rose late the next day, breakfasted in her room and spent the remainder of the morning and part of the afternoon making her toilet.

There was to be a dance that night at the country club. Rus had said he would call. He wanted, she knew, to announce their engagement as a feature of the affair.

The dance was no unusual event, not unlike a dozen others Claire had attended. It occurred to her that this might be an opportunity to torment Rus a little, without sacrificing anything herself or increasing the animosity of Pellham society. Yes, it was an excellent opportunity.

Claire waited until 7.45 that evening to put her scheme into execution. At eight Rus was to call for her. She pictured him getting ready to leave, features aglow with excitement and anticipation at thoughts of seeing her.

At ten minutes before eight she picked up the 'phone and called Rus' number. His mother answered.

"This is Miss Montgomery," Claire told her. "Will you put Rus on the wire, please."

"I'm sorry, Miss Montgomery, Rus isn't at home."

"Oh, he's on his way here then. So sorry. I called to tell him I couldn't attend tonight's dance."

"I doubt very much, Miss Montgomery, if that fact will affect Rus one way or another," Mrs. Stanton's voice vibrated with contempt and triumph.

"For you see," she went on, "Rus left Pellham two hours ago for Boston with Dolly Kilbourne. They were married this afternoon. He tried to get you on the phone to explain, but whoever answered said you were still asleep." Pause. "Rus left a message. He said he was sorry, but that he only proposed because you forced him into it. However no one need know the circumstances unless you care to tell them yourself."

Warns Against Abuse Of Freedom of Press And Speech

Wellington, New Zealand, Nov. 15 —(CP-Reuters)—Prime Minister Michael Savage warned against abuse of freedom of speech and freedom of the press today in an interview published by the Labor newspaper Standard.

"The New Zealand government believes in freedom of speech and freedom of the press, but it is determined that that freedom is not going to be abused," he said. "Certain promises have been made to Great Britain and those promises are going to be carried out."

He said members of the opposition, who had pledged themselves to cooperate with the government in every way, could yet decry the government in everything it did. He said he wanted to make it clear that even members of parliament were not going to be allowed to "step on it" as they thought fit. What was an offence in the last war was an offence in the present war, he added.

LIVESTOCK

Toronto, Nov. 15 (CP)—Cattle trade continued dull at mid-session on the Toronto Livestock Market today. A few butcher heifers and cows were only sales for slaughter cattle. Other sections of the market were steady while no hog price was set. Cattle holdover from Tuesday was, 1,100 head.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Livestock Branch: Cattle 710: calves 240; hogs 1,160, sheep and lambs 470.

Heifers ranged from $5.25-$7 and butcher cows $4-$5. Canners and cutters brought $3.25-$3.75. Stocker trade also was dull, a few selling from $4.75-$6.25.

Choice veal calves held at $10-$11. Common vealers sold downward to $6 and grassers made $5-$8.75.

Good ewe and wether lambs sold at $9.75-$9.86 with one small lot at $10. Other grades ranged from $7-$8.86. Sheep were $2.50-$5.50 cwt.

Montreal, Nov. 15 (CP) — All classes of livestock held a steady pace again today on Montreal livestock markets, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported.

Receipts — Cattle 71, sheep and lambs 127, hogs 589, calves 85.

Good western cows made $5.50, with a few picked out at $4.75, mediums brought $4.25-$4.75 while common butchers went for $3.50. Canners and cutters drew mostly $2.75-$3.25.

Veals, while there were no tops, made $10 for mediums to medium goods with common lights down as low as $7. Drinkers brought $7 with grassers ranging from $4.50 to $4.60.

Good ewes and wethers made $9.75 with an odd sale reaching $10 off cars. Heavies were cut $1 per hundredweight with culls and bucks being cut $2. Sheep brought from $3-$5.

Hogs, for bacons fed and watered, drew $9 and $9.25 to $9.35 off trucks. Selects made $1 premium with regular cuts on off grades. Sows sold at $6.25-$6.75, while hogs sold on rail grade brought $12 hot weight.

NEW YORK STOCKS

New York, Nov. 15 (AP)—Laggard stocks followed the upward lead of business today, but buyers entered the market only in small groups.

Gains of fractions to full points were spread all over the big board toward the fourth hour. The advances, however, were timid—and so were the traders.

Leaders in the rise included U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, Republic Steel, Chrysler, Goodrich, Aanaconda, Allied Chemical, United Aircraft, Eastern Air Lines, United Air Lines, Dupont, Santa Fe and Southern Railway.

In a sluggish Canadian group, fractional gains were scored for Lake Shore and Dome. Dominion 4s were in fair demand in the Bond market.

Large Buck Almost Tramples on Hunter

Almost as good as the tall yarn that came out of the hunting country the other day to the effect that a hunter lying secreted in a bush near a deer runway had his ears licked by a large inquisitive buck, is the story of Buff Cooper of Picton who narrowly misseld being trampled on by an over-lively deer while lying in hiding.

Taken completely by surprise, Cooper rolled over in the undergrowth and hurriedly grabbing his rifle, took a pot shot at the rapidly disappearing deer, that brought it down in its tracks.

Scratching its back on a convenient acorn tree, a handsome two hundred pound buck, suddenly slumped to the ground, as a well-directed bullet from the rifle of F. L. Ward, Picton barrister, found its mark.

Other Picton hunters to bring home the hunting bacon, include Dr. D. S. Lighthall and Clarence Jones.

BRITAIN STOCKED

Well Supplied With Foodstuffs

On the home front there was an encouraging report in well-informed quarters that except for butter, bacon and possibly sugar, the British Isles are well supplied with foodstuffs and that there is no immediate necessity for a rationing system, certainly not before January. It was predicted that when instituted rationing will affect only bacon and butter.

There are heavy stocks of bread, flour, and other derivatives of wheat and cereals, it was learned. The supply of fresh meat is sufficient for use at home and by the expeditionary forces. Fats, fruit, vegetables and milk are available in abundance. To increase supplies of butter, the government has contracted with New Zealand to take up all of next season's exportable surplus and a similar deal has been made with Eire.

Tighter Blockade

While Britain thus assures itself against stringency on the home front, the blockade will be drawn in an increasingly tighter ring around the Reich, it was stated, in the continued hope that this means above all others will force an early peace.

Lord Finlay, chairman of the Contraband Control Committee, issued a lengthy statement declaring that neutrals were obliged by every tenet of international law to submit to search. This obligation is centuries old and the British government intends to exercise to the fullest its rights as a belligerent, he said, warning neutrals that resistance to control was "absolutely illegal."

Reconnaissance Flights Into Germany

The Air Ministry announced new daylight reconnaissance flights over Germany, many of them penetrating to a depth of more than 200 miles in the face of "active opposition" by German air fighters. All objectives have been reached, photographs obtained and the desired information obtained, it was said.

On the diplomatic front, especial interest was aroused by the arrival yesterday of the Polish Premier, General Wladyslaw Sikorski, and his Foreign Minister, August Zaleski. They conferred last night with Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax.

In informed quarters the possibility was suggested that Poland might, after an Allied victory, be compensated for her losses to Russia by new territorial acquisitions at the expense of Germany.

In connection with Russia, there was a report in diplomatic circles last night that the U.S.S.R. might try to obtain British aid to obtain a more conciliatory attitude on the part of Finland, making such aid a condition of Anglo-Soviet trade arrangements.

26,000 TONS CLAIMED SUNK

Nazi Report Says U-Boat Returns Escorting Prize Vessel

Berlin, Nov. 15 (AP)—Sinking of 26,000 tons of enemy shipping was claimed by the German command today as the work of a Nazi submarine which returned to its base escorting an unidentified prize vessel.

This announcement was contained in a communique which noted sinking of a British destroyer by a German mine and destruction of a British freighter by an "explosion"— losses reported yesterday by the British Admiralty.

There were "no special events" on the Western Front, said the communique, the text of which follows:

"In the west no special events except minor local artillery activity.

"The British Admiralty announced loss of one destroyer which ran on a German mine. The English freighter Matra (8,600 tons) was destroyed by an explosion.

GERMAN

The Berlin correspondent of the Nieuwe Rotterdamsche Courant reported the chaos of vague rumors about Germany's intentions is likely to be clarified by next week. This correspondent said the German public was now resigned to the fact peace would be impossible without large scale hostilities and suggested the possibility of a strong German blow against Britain before Christmas in time to permit the Germans to announce a Christmas truce with the advantage on their side.

36 Marriage Licences Sold Here in September

It may have been the fact that there is a war on, but Dan Cupid this year switched his allegiance to the month of September from the proverbial orange-blossoms, rice and old shoes month of June.

Thirty-six happy couples strolled to the altar during the first month of Autumn as against thirteen in August and twenty in October, according to vital statistics released today by the City Clerk's office.

City population increased over the three months period with 125 births registered as against 51 deaths.

Hon. T. A. Crerar Speaks 100 Feet Below Ground in Fortress of Maginot Line

With the British Expeditionary Force in France, Nov. 15 (CP)-Reuters) — Anthony Eden, Dominions Secretary, and the five ministers representing the empire overseas returned to England today after four days of strenuous investigation of conditions on the allied front.

Since they left the British zone on Monday the ministers, including the Hon. T. A. Crerar, Canadian Minister of Mines and Resources, have inspected a sector of the French front, including part of the Maginot Line. They were up at seven yesterday morning, spent the forenoon in the French Maginot Line—they passed over ground which had been under German shellfire the night before—left the Maginot Line after lunch, and reached a town in the vicinity of British general headquarters at 10:15 last night.

Weary But In High Spirits.

Weary, but in high spirits, they sat around a table in a small French hotel and had dinner. Each minister was wearing in his buttonhole a bronze medallion — the emblem worn by French fortifications troops, which shows a gun protruding from a fort with barbed wire in the background. On it are inscribed the words "On ne passe pass".

The medallions were presented by the French general commanding the fortifications.

The ministers were impressed by the strength of the French defences and the quality of French troops.

"The line is tremendously strong," Mr. Crerar said. "It would be mighty hard to get through."

Mr. Eden said: "To visit the Maginot Line is to realize how much we owe the French army and the French nation for having constructed it."

Through Maze of Traps.

During their visit to the French line the ministers passed through a maze of tank traps, barbed wire entanglements and other obstacles, and actually motored along a road some considerable distance in advance of the Maginot Line proper. Separating them from the Germans were only the French outposts.

The weather was misty. Had it been clear they could easily have seen the German advance posts across no man's land. Through the patches of mist they could see the ground held by German troops.

Canada's Pledge.

With the French Forces in the Maginot Line," Nov. 15—(CP-Havas)—Canada will give Great Britain and France all aid in its power in the war against Hitler Germany, Hon. T. A. Crerar, Dominion Minister of Mines and Resources, said yesterday.

He spoke 100 feet below the surface in a fortress of France's great Maginot Line, where the Canadian Minister and fellow statesmen from different parts of the Empire, accompanied by Dominion Secretary Anthony Eden, were luncheon guests of a group of French officers.

"As a Canadian citizen," Mr. Crerar said, "I do not forget that I have 3,500,000 fellow countrymen of French descent, and I raise my glass to the success and glorious victory of the French army."

Mr. Eden pledged in turn that the Empire was resolved to prevent the return in future generations of the terrible trials imposed upon the world by Germany.

General Northcote of Australia, a member of the visiting group, told the sector's commander upon his departure: "I will return not alone, but at the head of an Australian contingent."

5 Jurors, 6 Others Held for Contempt

Buffalo, N.Y., Nov. 15—(AP) — Five members of a trial jury that acquitted former Police Commissioner James Higgins and six other men on conspiracy charges last month were cited by Special Prosecutor Frank Raichle today for criminal contempt of court.

Justice Albert Conway issued warrants for their arrest and trial before him without a jury.

Raichle charged that one juror tried to influence the others for acquittal almost as soon as the three-weeks trial, which ended Oct. 1, was under way. He quoted this juror as telling the others "the judge will kick the case out of court."

Throughout the trial, Raichle said, the five jurors frequently discussed the case among themselves without consulting the others, in violation of Justice Conway's admonition.

Cited in Raichle's affidavit were Milsom Basset, Robert Whiteside, John Gorman, Mrs. Angelina J. Muscarella, only woman on the panel, and John J. Pensky.

WOMEN'S GUILD ENTERTAINED

Mrs. Coles of Shannonville entertained the Women's Guild of St. John's Mission and a few local friends on Tuesday afternoon.

During the early part of the afternoon the ladies carried on their regular Guild meeting.

At the close of the meeting the hostess arranged tables and a pleasant hour was spent in progressive euchre.

The prize winners were Mrs. D. Houston of Shannonville, Mrs. Putman of Belleville, and Mrs. Matthew of Cannifton.

A dainty lunch was then served after which a hearty vote of thanks was tendered the hostess.

500 TO 800 PERSONS BURNED IN OIL TOWN

Venezuela Village of Wooden Houses Perched on Stilts Destroyed

RESCUE EFFORTS FAIL

Caracas, Venezuela, Nov. 15 — (AP)—Volunteer workers searched Lake Maracaibo today for the bodies of 500 to 800 persons estimated to have died in a fire which swept the oil town of Laguinillas, a village of wooden shacks perched on stilts at the water's edge.

While the searchers paddled through floating debris and charred piling, all that remained of the shanty town which housed 2,500 natives employed in the great oil fields nearby, the government mobilized its resources to aid the survivors. Airplanes brought doctors and nurses to aid in the relief work. National guard detachments took over the task of maintaining order.

Three Days of Mourning

President Eleazar Lopez Contreras, who decreed three days of mourning, raised a relief fund of 355,000 bolivars $110,050 which was swelled by subscriptions taken up in many towns and cities.

Temporary quarters for the injured and homeless were established in the towns of Ciudad Ojeda and Bachquero.

Recovery of the bodies of the victims, many of whom are believed to have been children,—was hindered by the debris which covered the water. Approximately one hundred bodies had been recovered last night.

Lamp May Have Exploded

Hundreds of survivors who lost relatives lined the shores as the search progressed.

The cause of the fire, under investigation by a special commission, remained uncertain, but was generally attributed to the explosion of a lamp in one of the shacks. The flames, roaring above the surface of the water, balked rescue attempts. Witnesses said one launch which attempted to approach the burning village was engulfed by the flames and sank with all aboard.

An off-shore wind, which swept the fire into the lake, speeded destruction of the houses, about 200 of which were grouped in an area equivalent to one or two city blocks. A bridge, connecting the houses with the shore, was destroyed.

Oil company properties in the vicinity of Laguinillas, located about thirty miles from the seaport of Maracaibo in the heart of Venezuela's rich petroleum country, were reported undamaged.

Three major producers — Royal Dutch Shell, Standard of New Jersey and Gulf Oil Corporation — have terminals in the Lake Maracaibo region. Much of Venezuela's annual production of about 188,000,000 barrels is handled through Laguinillas and the neighboring towns of La Roza, Cabimas and La Salina.

BLUNT, REALISTIC

"If it points out in a practical manner the way in which existing and urgent problems affecting inter-American communications and trade can actually be solved, bluntly and realistically, it will not only have achieved the purpose for which it was created, but it will have likewise demonstrated the best of reasons why close inter-American co-operation of this character should continue in the future in times of pease as well as in times of war", he said.

Matters for Discussion

The Advisory committee has decided to take under consideration these matters:

1—To study means of assuring stability in monetary and commercial relationships among the republics.

2—To provide for exchange of commercial and financial information.

3—To propose measures for offsetting dislocations in the trade of the American Republics affected by the war.

4—To establish a customs truce in the Western hemisphere, to reduce duties and eliminate trade restrictions.

5—To create an inter-American institution to insure permanent financial co-operation among the republics' treasuries and central banks.

6—To establish new industries and negotiate commercial treaties for the interchange of raw materials.

BLAZE DAMAGES CAR

Fire believed to have originated in a short circuit in the wiring system caused damage to a car parked in Weir's garage on South Front Street last night. The vehicle, which had not been driven for two or three days, suddenly burst into flames, but the prompt arrival of city fire squads prevented any serious damage.

Extinguish Chimney Fire

Blazing furnace pipes in a cellar of a house at 274 George Street caused dense smoke to fill the building yesterday afternoon. Firemen, answering an alarm quickly extinguished blaze. No property damage was done.

Purge Rumors Spread, Hundreds of Arrests Reported in Bavaria

By CHARLES NICHOLS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The pall of rumors that rose over the wreckage of the bomb-blasted beerhall shrine of Nazidom at Munich thickened today with reports Field Marshal Werner von Blomberg had been arrested in the Reich with other "high Nazis."

The reports of the former German War Minister's arrest emanated from the territory of a neutral nation adjacent to the Reich—like many others in the last few days which have been denied strenuously in Berlin.

But on the theory that where there is smoke there must be fire, neutral observers were inclined to believe there might be some substance to the rumors of internal Nazi dissension that spread outside Germany after the Munich beerhall collapsed from a bomb explosion Nov. 8, 11 minutes after Adolf Hitler left the building.

What Rumors Suggest

These rumors suggested any one of these groups may have instigated the plot:

1. Anti-Nazi elements in the German Reichswehr.
2. Monarchist sympathizers of exiled Kaiser Wilhelm's line.
3. Autonomy-seeking separatists in Bavaria.
4. Formerly loyal Nazis disgruntled by the rapprochement with Communist Russia.

Von Blomberg was the leader of the Conservative army element out of sympathy with the extremist Nazi elements. It was he who discouraged Hitler in his early plans to expand the Reich.

The former War Minister was ousted from his post a month before Hitler's troops goose-stepped into Austria, ostensibly because he married a woman whose family background was not up to German army standards.

Drive Against Separatists Reported

Latest report of disaffection in the Reich came from Stockholm, where the newspaper Social-Demokraten said hundreds of persons had been arrested and members of prominent families in Wurttemburg and Bavaria were under survaillance in the Nazi drive against Separatists.

Alleged facsimiles of two manifestos said to have been distributed in Bavaria were published in the paper. Both were violently anti-Nazi.

Santa Claus Parade Planned for Dec. 9th

Business Men Meet Today to Organize for Colorful Spectacle

FLOATS WANTED

Santa Claus will arrive in Belleville on Saturday, Dec. 9, around 1.30 p.m., accompanied by Mickey and Minnie Mouse, Ferdinand the Bull, and many other characters of the fabled Christmas Wonderland. Information to this effect was received by special messenger at a meeting this morning of the business men of Belleville at the Y.M.C.A.

It was decided to go "all out" to make the day a memorable one for the children of Belleville and vicinity. Bands, floats, clowns and all manner of characters in fancy dress will follow Santa Claus in triumphal procession over a route which will be announced later, but will include principal business streets. In all probability the schools of the surrounding district will be invited to enter floats or groups in fancy costumes in the parade. Committees are being appointed to look after the various details and full plans will be published within a short time.

Preliminary plans anticipate a parade that will require an hour to pass a given point, so there will be ample opportunity for several thousand people to witness the colorful spectacle.

The meeting was presided over by Bruce Lattimer, president of the Retail Merchants' Association of Belleville.

Wholesale Butter Prices Improve

Toronto, Nov. 15.—Wholesale butter prices gained on the Toronto open produce market Tuesday, but egg prices were easy.

Steady demand kept the light volume of fresh supplies moving well on the butter market. Although trading was not overly active, holders increased prices ¼c per pound on Ontario solids as offerings were not heavy.

With buyers assuming a cautious attitude, demand tapered on the egg market. Receipts were light, however, and prices generally were unchanged. Lower grades cleared satisfactorily. The Dominion Department of Agriculture states that there are indications of a very active movement of storage eggs into retail channels in Canada, and that some districts point to the possibility of the storage season winding up in a more satisfactory position than for some years past.

Montreal Produce.

Montreal, Nov. 15.—Produce market prices here as reported by the Dominion Agricultural Bureau, follow:

Butter — First grade creamery prints, job price, 29c to 29½c; first grade solids, job price, 28½c to 29c.

Cheese — Ontario white, current receipt price, 15 7/16c to 15½c; Ontario colored, current receipt price, 15½c to 15⅝c. Receipts, 3,911 boxes.

Eggs—Graded shipments in used free cases, offering price, A-large, 44c to 45c; A-medium, 37c; A-pullets, 32c to 33c; B-large, 26c; C, 20c. Receipts, 2,274 cases, including 1,048 direct.

Hospital Signs Cause Surprise In New Air Station

St. Thomas, Ont., Nov. 15—(CP)—You'll find a few surprises at the Royal Canadian Air Force's newest and largest station here.

For instance, you enter a room marked "treatment" and you find Group Captain D. C. M. Hume, officer commanding the station. Then you try a door marked "nurse" and the person inside is the adjutant. The main building formerly was a mental hospital.

Captain Hume, whose work is cut out for him—to turn out 5,000 trained airmen a year for the Empire—says his staff has just moved in and the signs will make more sense later. Meanwhile, it's a little like it was before the mental patients moved out.

2 Red Cross Dogs May Accompany Each Toronto Unit

Toronto, Nov. 15 (CP)—Toronto Red Cross officials announced today they were working on a plan whereby two trained dogs will accompany every military unit which leaves Toronto for active service.

The dogs will be trained to find wounded men, take them medical supplies and to lead search parties. Carl Emsley, a dog trainer whose life was saved by a dog in the first Great War, has volunteered to train the animals.

Dionnes Have Busy Time Picking Christmas Gifts for 12 Children

New York, Nov. 15—(CP)—Mr. and Mrs. Oliva Dionne, parents of the famous Quints, started out this morning on the busiest day of their New York trip — choosing Christmas gifts for their family of eight girls and four boys.

"The stores are full of millions of presents but if there were twice as many it would still be difficult to pick the right thing for each of twelve children," said Mrs. Dionne.

One of Mrs. Dionne's greatest interests since she came here Sunday has been the playground and nursery facilities for city children. Yesterday she visited a day nursery operated by the House of Divine Providence for infants whose whose mothers go to work in the daytime. Mrs. Dionne spent an hour with the children and remarked laughingly as she left "all these babies are just like one big family."

Last night the Dionnes, accompanied by six-year-old Pauline, saw a musical show. They will leave for home tomorrow morning.

One-Man Campaign Against Hoodlums Begun in Amherstburg

Amherstburg, Ont., Nov. 15—(CP)—Magistrate W. A. Smith has started a one-man crusade against "hoodlumism" in this Essex County town.

"Somebody is going to jail without the option of a fine if this continues," he said yesterday at the conclusion of a case in which Philip Abbot of Kingsville and Donald Wright of Amherstburg were convicted on charges of assaulting Malcolm T. Shaw, President of the Canadian Legion branch here.

Abbot was fined $15 and costs and Wright $10 and costs.

Magistrate Smith commented on the assault case and said "this town is running wild, and I'm going to clean it up if I have anything to say about it."

Member of Air Force Falls Off Abutment Wall into River

Losing his balance while walking along the east abutment wall along the Moira River, A.C. Donald Kelly, of the R.C.A.F., fell into the icy waters of the river at the rear of the Queen's Hotel late last night. Kelly was rescued from the shallow water by companions from the Air Force, who climbed down the wall and were forced to wade in the chilly waters to effect the rescue. Both the city police and fire departments were notified of the accident, but upon their arrival Kelly had been rescued and was later taken to the police station where his wet uniform was removed and dry clothing provided. Later Kelly was afforded a dry uniform and escorted to the Trenton Air Base by R.C.A.F. officials, who had been notified of the incident through Sergeant Arthur Booth.

JAPANESE FORCES LAUNCH ATTACK

Assault is Believed to be Start of New South China Offensive

Hong Kong, Nov. 15—(AP)—Fresh Japanese forces landed today on the Kwangtung Province coast near Pakhoi and launched an assault generally viewed as the start of a new South China offensive.

Japanese headquarters, announcing that a combined army and navy force had landed at the southern port on the Gulf of Tonking, said it was pushing inland against Chinese defenders.

Pakhoi, 300 miles west of Hong Kong, is just north of Hainan Island, strategic base which the Japanese seized last Feb. 10. On the same date, Japanese naval planes bombed Pakhoi. Inconclusive fighting has continued in the southern area.

(An imperial Japanese army communique issued at Tokyo claimed Pakhoi, last seaport retained by the Chungking government, had fallen to the Japanese landing party.)

Policy Toward Third Power

Lending support to the belief a broader southern offensive finally had been launched was a statement by the Japanese foreign office in Tokyo, saying: "In connection with the operations just undertaken, the Japanese government will adhere strictly to the policy hitherto pursued toward third powers."

Pakhoi and Hainan Island are near French Indo-China and have been viewed as lying within the French sphere of influence.

When the Japanese took Hainan, both Britain and France inquired as to Japanese aims and were told the occupation would continue only as long as necessary to wage war against General Chiang Kai-Shek's central Chinese government.

Britain is interested in the Gulf of Tonking area because of its proximity to the naval base at Singapore.

TENSION RELAXES, LEAVES RESTORED FOR BELGIAN TROOPS

Brussels, Nov. 15—(AP)—Further relaxation of tension in Belgium was reflected in the restoration today of leaves for soldiers.

Cancellation of the three days a month leave was ordered after King Leopold made his hurried trip Nov. 6, to the Hague to confer with Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands. Other military precautions were taken then.

Leaves are now allowed at the discretion of corps commanders.

TEXTILE FIRMS SEEK MORE HELP

Foundries and Iron Companies Also Reported More Active

Toronto, Nov. 15—(CP)—Wartime efforts are reflected in the weekly statement issued by Hon. Norman Hipel, Ontario Minister of Labor, today.

The statement says that textile firms, foundries and iron companies are seeking more help than is usual, while many women are looking for office or factory work rather than domestic service.

Hamilton, Guelph and Woodstock report there are steady demands for workers in the knitting and hosiery factories. Machine and moulding plants in Hamilton, Kingston, London and Guelph are also looking for skilled tradesmen and machinists.

Building trade is not so active although a new building is being erected in Trenton for the Canadian Air Force, and work is being rushed on the new federal buildings at Ottawa, calling for skilled construction workers.

Domestic Help Scarce in Places

In some places domestic help is scarce. Kingston, Guelph, London and Oshawa all seek more domestics caused by girls wanting factory or office jobs, while other places report that there is a sufficient supply of this help.

Chatham reports there are no employable men on relief and local industries there have all the help they want.

Pulpwood camps at Port Arthur are filled up but experienced pulp cutters find no trouble getting work at Kenora. Only experienced bushmen are wanted in Sudbury.

In the mining districts the demands for miners is falling off. There is a demand for cabinet workers and upholsters in Stratford and in Timmins a demand for house, day, hotel and restaurant workers.

All Ranks Warned 'Phone Conversations May be Overheard

Ottawa, Nov. 15—(CP)—Defence headquarters have issued a warning to all ranks that users of telephones must remember at all times that conversations may be overheard.

"No subject," the contents of which might be of value to the enemy should be discussed over an open line," says the warning. "The consequence of such indiscretion may be the loss of many lives."

Copies of the warning are being placed on all military telephones, both in offices and in the field.

Sees British Navy and R. A. F. As Decisive Factor in Victory

Capt. the Rev. Norman Rawson Addressing Canadian Travellers' Association at Hotel Quinte Says Allies Are Fighting German Nation—Position of Canada Defined — Entertainment Program is Presented—Frank Hughes Elected President of Travellers' Association

"Britain and France are not fighting Hitler, they are fighting Hitlerism, for the German dictator is backed by 85 percent of the German people. They are solidly in his support and we will not defeat Hitler until we defeat the German masses," Captain the Rev. Norman Rawson, Hamilton, Ont., famous war veteran minister and lecturer declared here last night.

"We must defeat them and make them feel the destruction of war on their own soil, not in a spirit of revenge, but any nation that wages ruthless war outside the confines of its own land, and inflicts its horrors on small nations, should know its destruction and the terror that stalks by night and noonday, in its own country", he told one hundred representatives of the Eastern Ontario Commercial Travellers' Association at their annual banquet held in the Hotel Quinte.

With the inimitable humor for which he is famous, Captain Rawson interspersed a brilliant address on present conditions with many a likely joke and anecdotal reminiscence.

"If ever in its history the British Empire went to war with a clear conscience, unsullied honor, with everything to lose and nothing to gain, that time was 1939," he said. "We went in with a clean heart, a clear brain and a higher moral standing in the eyes of neutral nations, than ever before in our honorable history."

Church Behind Empire

He had heard that certain sections of a denomination were not in favor of war. "I sincerely believe" he said, "that the Church irrespective of denomination, Roman and Protestant, and its people are firmly behind the Empire in this crisis in its history."

Chamberlain, a Christian Gentleman

Neville Chamberlain, he said was the finest Christian gentleman that ever sat in the Prime Minister's chair in the long history of that noble office. "He suffered ignomy and shame. He was the first British Premier to visit a foreign nation armed with an umbrella in the efforts of peace. He was betrayed by Hitler, and he returned a broken man. He knew conditions in 1938 were such that the Empire could not fight. He went to Munich and signed the famous agreement in all trust.

But human nature can stand so much, and when the Prime Minister said those memorable words on September 3rd, he brought with him a British Empire united as it has never been before, the speaker declared. "England could not stay out of the war, for all that we hold near and dear would go by the way if the totalitarian states win."

Religious Freedom

While many men do not show an interest in religion, he declared, "Let someone ridicule it, trample on it and you will soon see how they feel." We all love to worship the Deity in our own way, and do not want anyone to tell us what to do."

"Religion in the totalitarian states is a halting limping thing," he said. "Captains of industry, the army, business, all kowlow to Hitler but that glorious flame still flickers in the heart of that small minority of preachers in that country. If liberties ever come back to Russia and Germany you will find the cause, a small group of Christians who refuse to bow the knee to the dictators."

Canada's Part

"We cannot defeat Germany with vague promises, we have to get action in this country, no matter who gives it" he said.

"We, in Canada during the last war, mobilized 600,000 men, fed them and clothed them. We must have action in this country and immediately if we are to do our part," he repeated.

He warned that "before the war is over, we will know that we have been in one."

"We will send as big an expeditionary force as the last time, but," he declared, "I sincerely hope that no bungling will mar the fine air training depots that will put us in the forefront of contributors to the cause, and that no penny-pinching will mar that splendid conception, and ultimate victory."

Amid a roar of cheers, the speaker stated that the "British Empire is bound with tangible bonds, accentuated by the visit of two of the most beautiful Christian characters in the world, our King and Queen."

He warned his listeners not to expect a revolution among the Nazi troops, as some would have it, but a terrific smash by Hitler through Holland and Belgium. Hitler won't hesitate a second to violate their neutrality if it suits his purpose, he said. "The decisive factors in the war will not be internal revolution in Germany or its army, but will be the British Navy and the Royal Air Force. (Cheers.) And Canada will play her part. At this very moment one thousand gallant Canadian spirits are in the van of the Air Force at the front."

Canada, the Prize.

Canada is the world's greatest prize, Captain Rawson declared, with its unlimited resources, vast prairies and territory 856,000 square miles longer than the United States. "If Hitler wins," he said, "he will respect the Munroe Doctrine, to be sure, but he will demand unlimited immigration into Canada. In twenty years, our sons and daughters would learn the Nazi tricks of Germany."

"The battle we are fighting in France is our own battle," he said, "and for our own protection. We could not defend ourselves, and must realize that the Mother Country stands between us and annihilation."

Referring to the United States and the war, Captain Rawson said that 85 per cent of the American people are in sympathy with the allies.

Canada must build a strong social structure based on a spiritual system and the experience of the Mother Country, he asserted. "We must get rid of the cursed relief system, that is destroying thousands of those receiving it, and those who are giving it.

"Canada is going to win, because she doesn't know when she is licked" Captain Rawson concluded. "She won her spurs as a military nation when the glorious First Division covered themselves with mud and glory in France in 1915. Her name is synonymous with those of the great nations, for her sons distinguished themselves in a manner that made a name for Canada now and forevermore."

The surest and best criterion of victory is found in the Bible, he said, "God is noble and will not be mocked".

President C. R. Smith, who occupied the chair, moved a vote of appreciation to Captain Rawson for his fine address. The president in his earlier remarks paid tribute to the organization. "There is not a finer bunch of fellows in Canada" he said, "and none co-operate more or better than do the members of this association'.

The toast to the visitors was proposed by the Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne, and the response was made by John Curtiss, director of the Canadian Travellers' Association.

Presentation to Gerald Jenkins

A feature of the banquet was the presentation of a handsome silver smoking stand to Mr. Gerald Jenkins, proprietor of the Hotel Quinte, by members of the Association. The presentation was made by President Smith, who with several members added a humorous touch with a well-rehearsed "Quinte Cheer".

Community singing brought out some lusty voices conducted by Bill Finch who was pinch-hitting for Sandy Burrows. The Belleville Male quartette, with Leo Riggs at the piano drew the well-merited acclaim of the gathering with several selections while Jack Green, Belleville's ace trumpet player, received vociferous acclaim following several offerings on his favorite instrument.

Another highlight of the banquet was the fine performances of members of Miss Mary Forster's dancing class. This part of the program included, Miss Madeline Waldron, song and dance; Mary Lou Pigden, song and tap; Ruth Hagerman, acrobatic waltz; a tap-dance by Miss Forster herself, and a novelty Scotch routine by the four clever young dancers. Loud applause greeted each act, and the charming young artists were presented with handsome gifts at the conclusion of the performance.

Election of Officers

The election of officers brought to a close one of the most enjoyable banquets in the history of the association. During the early part of the function, a one-minute silence was observed in respect to the memory of members who have died during the past year, among whom was the originator and first president of the association, the late Alf. Appleyard.

'The knights of the satchel', demonstrated that easy camaraderie that is typical of their calling, and the fine fellowship displayed by the members among themselves and the cordial hospitality afforded the many visitors present, were no small factors in the unqualified success of the event.

The officers elected for 1940 last night include— President, Frank Hughes; Vice President, Wally Mills; Directors, Charles Laurence, Chas. Tomlinson, Aubrey Curtiss, Glen Moir, Bill Clayson; Secretary-Treasurer, Harold Thurston.

Personnel of the annual Cobourg Picnic executive— President C. C. Wright, Hamilton; Vice President T. B. Long, Preston; Directors: C. L. Sproule, William Fryer, William Frawley; Secretary Treasurer, Harold Thurston.

Italy's Peace 'Not Timid But Armed'—Duce

Rome, Nov. 15 (CP-Havas)—Premier Mussolini today told university students that "Italy's peace is not a timid peace, but an armed peace."

"Hold your musket beside your book," Il Duce advised the young men, who gathered before the Palazzo Venezia on the occasion of the opening of the university year

PRIVATE PILOTS VOLUNTEER.

Ottawa, Nov. 15—(CP)—Practically all private pilots in Canada have volunteered to join the Royal Canadian Air Force, it was learned today.

Some time ago the Department of National Defence asked a number of experienced pilots if they were ready for service on special work and replies are being received regularly.

As necessity demands, these volunteer specialists are being absorbed into the air force.

THE RED CROSS

Great Humanitarian Organization Prepares for War Work as Soon as Call Comes

On Sunday, September 10, 1939, the Dominion Government, by the formal action of His Majesty's representative in Canada, declared that a "state of war" existed.

But one day earlier, on Saturday, September 9, Canadians had projected themselves beyond the confines of Canada to participate in the state of affairs abroad. Ten thousand dollars was cabled to England, for the relief of victims of the Athenia's torpedoing and doctors and nurses were notified to meet the City of Flint, bringing other rescued persons to Halifax.

Thus does the Red Cross, a vast organization of closely-knit branches, function. As automatically as day follows night, it follows disaster and tragedy. Because spontaneous need cannot be anticipated it is constantly geared for any emergency, and in peace-time its energies flow into countless channels of relief, hospitalization and similar endeavors.

It exists on the voluntary contributions of rich and poor, high and low. While it becomes peremptorily an auxiliary to the army medical service in war, and "must be so formed as not to exclude any appropriate branch of medical work in connection with the fighting services" it does not live on the government. In this almost anomalous position, it exists in international law as the sole accredited organization empowered to function in co-operation with the armed forces, yet maintaining a strict neutrality which must be observed by combatants.

Red Cross is always at peace. It never declares war, except on suffering and famine. International conflicts occur, yet Red Cross is not part of the conflict. Internationally it remains the sole existing medium of exchange when all other relations and media are wiped out. Many persons do not realize that exchange of prisoners between belligerent powers is negotiated by the Red Cross, or that, when other leagues dissolved, members of the League of Red Cross Societies, in accord with the principles of its constitution, maintained "a continuous relationship with the other National (Red Cross) Societies and with the International Committee." Through Red Cross, families learn of soldiers captured by the enemy, and again through the Red Cross they are able to correspond with the prisoners and send them gifts of food and clothing.

Wholly voluntary in structure, this organization has fifteen million adult members in sixty-five countries. By one of the principles of its international constitution, "its membership must be open to all nationals without distinction, particularly as regards sex, religion or political opinion." These members form the world-wide organization which is pledged to "be ready in time of emergency, to centuple if necessary their peace-time equipment and staff." And equipment of national societies must comprise at all times conveyances, buildings and furniture, bedding, cooking utensils, etc., surgical instruments, dressings and antiseptic appliances, serums, vaccines, disinfectants, remedies, analytical laboratories, X-ray equipment.

By constitution, all national societies must be headed by a central committee which is the only authorised body to represent it in its relations with other national societies. In time of war, all international functions or contacts are performed through an international committee of permanent structure, which is composed entirely of Swiss citizens. This committee maintains its offices in Geneva, where Red Cross first was born in 1863 under the aegis of the Societe d'Utilite Publique.

Nationally, each Society is allowed remarkable freedom to organize under its central committee along lines best suited to the geographical or economical peculiarities of the nation. Canada affords an excellent example of how this autonomous independence develops self-reliance and ability to act swiftly.

Ready Within 24 Hours

Within twenty-four hours after Canada had officially entered the war, representatives of every provincial society had assembled in Ottawa. Present were members gathered from Victoria to Halifax. In two swift days of council, a national war council for Canada had been arranged, a national campaign committee appointed, printed details of how similar organizations could be set up provincially had been prepared and sub-committees in purchasing, distribution, war work, etc, had been appointed.

Two days later provincial leaders were arriving home and going into action. Provincial and local units plunged into war work Local clearing houses of information, instruction and distrbiution were set up. With its official relationship with the Army Medical Corps, the Red Cross was in a position to inform the women of Canada of details of army needs (bandages, trained nurses and ambulances, socks, etc.), to organize preparation and packaging, and to distribute these packages where the army wanted them.

Within one week of the afternoon when Canada's Parliament decided on participation in the Motherland's struggle for civilization, there were twenty-five men and women working for Red Cross for every single person who had been engaged in peace-time work—with the numbers increasing steadily from day to day. Through its elaborate, yet simply operating two-way set-up of national-to-provincial-to-district - to - municipal councils, it was steadily supplying information on needs, as the army officials determined them, acquiring materials from which to make supplies, supplying directions on how to manufacture these supplies and arranging for their transportation and distribution.

Wholly voluntary, as already stated, the funds from which purchases are made are also voluntary. During the last war, millions were collected, and all administered under a carefully audited system which provided hospitals at home and abroad, personnel for their operation, equipment and materials for their use, special services at home and abroad for Canada's soldiers and their defendents. And now the Red Cross again faces and accepts the same task, while it still carries on its far-flung nation-wide peace services on behalf of the ailing and under-privileged.

Collie Dog Trapped in Blazing Barn Saved by Wellington Man

Animal Had Crept Into Attic to Sleep on Hay When Fire Starts—Pulled to Safety by Norman Clinton

OLD LANDMARK

Trapped in the second storey of a blazing livery barn in Wellington shortly after eleven o'clock today, "Peter", a handsome thoroughbred collie dog, was rescued from flame-swept building by Norman Clinton, local dog-fancier who scaled a ladder, smashed a window and hauled the terrified animal to safety.

The dog, owned by Wilson Burd, daily crept to the hay-strewn attic of the barn to sleep, was imprisoned in the blazing building when flames that swept the ground floor prevented its escape.

The livery barn owned by George Garratt was totally destroyed by the fire. An automobile and a large quantity of stored furniture were lost in the flames.

Residents of the village alarmed when the flames got out of control and threatened the entire business district of the village quickly formed a bucket brigade, but were unsuccessful in their battle with the livery stable blaze. Hurried calls were sent to the volunteer fire brigades of Picton and Bloomfield, who responded and assisted in preventing the flames from spreading to nearby buildings.

Valuable contents and papers of the village post office, situated directly north of the livery barn, were removed to places of safety. Furniture of the residences of neighboring houses was removed and taken away.

The livery barn is one of the oldest landmarks of the village having been erected nearly 70 years ago. The origin of the fire is unknown.

BYRD EXPEDITION TO ISSUE NEWSPAPER

Boston, Nov. 15—(AP)—For news of the world, as well as doings in their own ice-bound back yard, members of the United States Antarctic expedition will consult the "Penguin Post."

This will be a mimeographed sheet issued once a day and edited by Roger Hawthorne, an official of the expedition, who formerly was a reporter for The Associated Press.

"We'll have stories based on radio messages from the United States and also reports of activities at each of the two bases," said Hawthorne. "I don't expect we'll have to 'replate' very often."

Mistaken for Bear, Hunter Killed

Lindsay, Ont., Nov. 15—(CP)—Officials decided today not to hold an inquest on the death of Ernest Cooper, 57, of West Guilford, Haliburton County, who was mistaken for a bear and shot late Tuesday.

Bill Peck, Cooper's son-in-law, is said to have fired the shot at Horne's Lake, 10 miles north of their home.

The two man went hunting together and early in the day had shot one bear. In the gathering dusk, the two were separated. Peck mistook his father-in-law for a bear and fired.

"Bill, you've shot me," Cooper is reported to have said when Peck arrived by his side. He died a moment later.

$4,040 in Money Belt Strapped About Waist Of Dead 'Pauper'

Pittsburgh, Nov. 15—(AP)—Nurses preparing the body of Mrs. Anna Meyer, 73, for a "pauper's burial" today found a money belt containing $4,040 strapped around the woman's waist.

Mrs. Meyer died at the Mayview City home where her husband, Jacob Meyer, died five years ago and was buried at the city's expense. The money belt contained 40 $100 bills and some smaller currency.

SPAIN MAINTAINS NEUTRAL POSITION; BUSY REBUILDING

Will Permit No Demonstration in Favor of Any Country

WORKS WITH ITALY

Madrid, Nov. 15—(CP—Havas)—In a Europe at war Spain continues to occupy a special place, flattering itself with being "the most strictly neutral" country on the continent.

This role is dictated to Spain not only by General Francisco Franco but by Spain's geographical situation and her need for healing the wounds of the civil war.

At the same time, Spain continues to be the theatre of conflicting international influences. To guard against wiles of foreign propaganda the government is compelling newspapers and the radio to give a true accounting of their sources of information.

Long propaganda articles dated from one of the belligerent capitals no longer appear in the press as they did at start of the war.

The radio is not permitted to accept news without previous official verification. Demonstrations in favor of any country are no longer tolerated. Activity of foreign "offices" have been placed under strict surveillance. The order for "objectivity" given by General Franco will be more scrupulously observed than ever.

The Spanish Government, however, recently inspired the appearance of press editorials throughout the country recalling that "Spain fought against the mortal peril of Communism" and declaring that "Communism remains the mortal enemy in all forms, all its activities and in all its aspects."

This campaign coincides with a similar attitude developing in Italy. Close and constant contact with Rome continues to be the basis of Spanish foreign policy.

CITY'S NIGHT LIFE CEASES TO EXIST

Blackout Restrictions Have Made Travel Hazardous Except on Moonlight Nights

(By Guy Rhoades Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

London, Nov. 15 (CP)—This town's night life practically has ceased to exist since the war broke out.

Blackout restrictions have made travel through the streets pretty arduous except on moonlit night. Taxis are not as plentiful as they used to be, buses are less frequent and most places of entertainment are under some sort of restriction.

Half the movie houses in London stay open one week until 10 p.m., then close early the next week. A few night clubs remain open and a few theatres in the suburbs have legitimate plays and variety.

Pub owners complain bitterly that the rush of trade which swamped them in the early days of the war has been succeeded by a slump that has forced them to discharge members of their staff and has eaten so far into their earlier profits that they are worried.

Concerts in Afternoons

They believe the blackout is mainly responsible for their troubles. At first it made little difference and people who were tired or jittery at the start of hostilities were good customers.

After a while, however, the strain of making their way through the dark began to get them down, and they stayed at home. The same conditions appear to have cut down movie attendance.

The London symphony orchestra and the philharmonic are giving concerts in the afternoons.

Theatre owners are asking for revision of the staggered closing rule and that all houses be allowed to remain open regular hours. Some are asking that they be allowed to open on Sundays before five o'clock. Sunday openings have been permitted in some areas where troops are quartered.

All in all, however, there is not much in London after dark to take one away from the fire side.

POLICE RECOVER SEPARATOR STOLEN AT NEWTONVILLE

While investigating unrevealed police activities yesterday, Sergeant H. E. Thompson, Provincial Police, and Plainsclothes Constable Fred Isard, of the city police department, recovered a cream separator, which they later stated had been stolen at Newtonville sometime ago, on the premises of a Front Street second-hand store. The cream separator was identified as having been stolen from J. G. Pethwick's service station in Newtonville on the night of Aug. 23rd. last. The police later revealed they were not seeking the recovery of the separator at the time of their investigation.

FEED SHREDDED CORN TO ELIMINATE BORER

Leamington, Ont., Nov. 15—(CP)—District farmers said today they expected to score major advances in their fight on the corn borer this season through feeding their cattle shredded corn. They said the cattle would eat the corn, infested with the European corn borer, because the entire corn stalk has been shredded.

"MOST ENCOURAGING" PROGRESS MADE AT PARLEY

House Welcomes Lessening of Strain Over Netherlands

Sir John Simon, Chancellor of Exchequer, Reports Progress of War for Prime Minister Who is Too Ill to Attend Parliament

RESPECT NEUTRALITY

Land Operations Curtailed by Bad Weather but British Forces Improve Their Defences in Their Sector

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Nov. 16—(CP Cable) — Informal discussions among British and Dominion cabinet ministers have resulted in "most encouraging" progress and have "shown the great value of direct and personal contact," Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer, told the House of Commons today.

In the absence of Prime Minister Chamberlain, laid up with gout, Sir John read the weekly report on the progress of the war. The statement welcomed the relaxation of tension over The Netherlands and Belgium and reiterated Britain's determination to "continue to respect the neutrality of the Netherlands and Belgium."

Four Captured Last Week

The Chancellor disclosed that four German ships were captured by the navy last week and that two large vessels were scuttled to avoid capture.

On land, operations were curtailed by bad weather. On the French front minor German attacks were repulsed while the British forces in France improved the defences in their sector.

In the air there was "considerable activity" although most of it was of desultory character and there were no major engagements.

Referring to Hon. T. A. Crerar, Canadian Minister of Mines and Resources, and other Dominion representatives here, Sir John said that since their arrival "they have been engaged with us in discussions on all aspects of the war."

Canned sunlight! For five million million years the sun has been giving out light and heat equivalent to about three billion billion billion candles' This has not all been wasted, and considerable of it has been and is being canned for the use of mankind. The sunlight, through the agency of green plants, decomposes the carbon dioxide of the air, making valuable plant foods for man and animal. This is one way in which sunlight is caught and laid up in convenient form for future use. Another is the canned sunlight imprisoned in the standing forests and coal fields of the world. Coal beds were formed from luxuriant forest growth afterwards buried by subsidence and formed into coal by pressure.

Sapper is Discharged, Hears Two Brothers Conscripted by Germans

Sarnia, Ont., Nov. 16—(CP) — Sapper Louis Parkas obtained his discharge from the 11th Field Company of Royal Canadian Engineers yesterday because he didn't want to face the prospect of looking along a rifle barrel at his brothers in the German trenches.

Parkas said he had received word that his two brothers in territory formerly part of Czecho-Slovakia had been conscripted for the German army. Parkas and his brothers were born in Hungary and he served with a machine gun company in Hungary before coming to Canada.

NO PEACE TERMS UNTIL VICTORY SAYS GERMANY

Decide to Fight Until British Supremacy in World Destroyed

READY TO FIGHT

By MELVIN WHITELEATHER
Associated Press Staff Writer

Berlin, Nov. 16—(AP)—An authoritative source asserted today that Germany has decided to "fight until British supremacy in the world is destroyed."

Germany, this source said, "will have no peace terms to offer until such a victory has been won."

(Replying to previous similar Nazi statements, Winston Churchill on Sunday said Britain was not disturbed by "blood-curdling threats. If words could kill, we would be dead already," he said.)

The German statement was made in connection with the German reply to the mediation offer of the Netherlands and Belgium and in answer to the question, "what might Germany's peace terms be?"

(Germany's reply to the mediation offer, made orally by Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop, was a polite "no.")

"It is no longer a question of German peace terms," the Berlin official stated. "Such a question might be raised in Paris and London, but not in Berlin. We are far beyond that and there will be no peace terms until we reach success. We are as ready to fight as we were for peace."

This source said there was speculation throughout the world over why Germany did not attack.

"The speculators assert we need to attack to keep up morale," he said, "or we must attack the southeast for Von Ribbentrop needs a success to show the Fuehrer.

"We have no fear of attacking, but intend to let military judgment chose the time and not to be goaded into it by foreign propaganda."

His statement emphasized that it "would be a great mistake for the outside world to get the impression there was weakness here."

Today's communique of the German High Command was confined to four words: "No special events yesterday."

Chemical Tank Most Formidable Weapon of Offense Yet Devised

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
Associated Press Science Editor

New York, Nov. 16—(AP)—Poison gas warfare has a new weapon ready for the battlefield. It is the chemical tank, a squat, speedy, steel-skinned caterpillar which contains, instead of guns, poison liquids and gases.

This tank is described by Lieut.-Colonel Augustin M. Prentiss of the Chemical Warfare Service, United States Army, as one of the most formidable methods of attack yet devised. He is one of the great authorities on gas warfare .

"Chemical tanks have the power," he writes in the Chemical Warfare Bulletin, "to release suddenly enormous concentrations of non-persistent lethal gas in such strength as to readily break through any military gas mask."

The non-persistent gases are those which float in the air, and poison the lungs. Their potency as weapons was greatly reduced by gas masks in the last war.

But the chemical tanks may prov so effective, says Colonel Prentiss, that an entirely new type of gas mask will be needed for protection. This mask would shut out all outside air and keep its wearer alive by breathing oxygen stored inside the mask .

A ingle tank, he says, carrying 1,000 pounds of phosgene can cover in one mission an area downwind 500 yards lon, and 100 yards wide. For an additional 500 yards, a total of nearly two-thirds of a mile, the concentration of this gas will be sufficiently deadly to cause serious casualties.

The great advantage of this new war engine is the ease of placing gas. For example, to do the same thing with artillery or projectors of gas would require hours of preparation, transporting materials to the firing line. The tank, alone of ground weapons, carries its own gas.

European belligerents are supplied with these tanks. But these weapons are only one of several poison gas instruments new since 1918 and waiting for the day which Europe hopes will never come but for which its civilian populations are most widely prepared.

Finns Declare Russia Will Have to Provide New Basis for Negotiations

Moscow, Nov. 16 (AP), — The Soviet press, intensifying attacks on Finnish foreign policy, today quoted an Estonian newspaper as saying Finland's "obduracy" was impairing her relations with the U.S.S.R.

In a dispatch from Tallinn, Tass, official Russian News Agency, said the Estonian newspaper Uus Eesti had criticized Finland's military preparations and urged that the "regulate relations with her great eastern neighbor as soon as possible."

"Finland is hurting herself—no one can deny that," the dispatch quoted the paper as saying.

In another dispatch from Helsingfors, Capital of Finland. Tass charged that Finns were being taught to "hate Russians" with the encouragement of "The English Bourgoisie."

These attacks, reminiscent of Soviet newspaper comment preceding the Russian march into Poland two months ago, were interpreted by foreign observers as part of a cam-

REFUGEES FLOCK TO HIGHER LAND

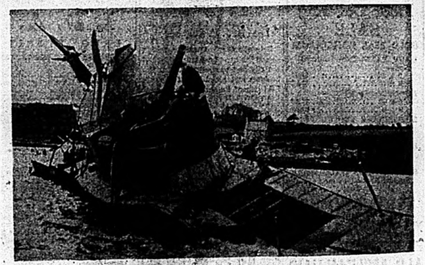
Will Wait for Rain-Swollen Rivers on Vancouver Island to Subside

Zeballos, B. C., Nov. 16—(CP) — Refugees from flooded areas in two Vancouver Island districts took shelter on high land today, waiting for rain-swollen rivers to return to normal levels.

More than 100 persons were taken by boats or trucks Tuesday night from their homes on Privateer Flats, four miles from this west coast gold mining centre. The Zeballos River, swollen by torrential rains, flooded the town's main street and caused damage estimated at thousands of dollars.

Telephone lines were washed out and roads leading to mines in the mountains behind the town were blocked by slides caused by the rain. Two women were rescued from the Halfway Inn where lower rooms were flooded. Harold Harrison spent a night on the roof of his shack, built on a small island.

On the island's east coast, a strong wind and 14-foot tide combined to back up waters of the Courtenay River, forcing 15 families to flee to higher ground.



The British submarine Thetis, pictured after she had been beached in an unnamed North Wales bay after she had been hauled from the bottom of the sea to which she had sunk on June 1, carrying 99 men to their deaths. After the steel shell has been pumped dry the sub will be drydocked. A mining crew has been assigned to recover the 34 bodies still in the Thetis.

British Superiority At Sea Overwhelming

London, Nov. 16 (CP)—Graphic figures showing Britain's overwhelming superiority in numbers over the German navy were published today in the latest issue of "Jane's fighting ships," authoritative naval annual.

Only in torpedo boats and submarines did Germany have an edge while Britain dominated other classifications. A comparative table follows showing the class of vessel and the number possessed by, first, Britain and, second, Germany:

Capital ships 15, including two under construction; five.
Aircraft carriers six; none.
Heavy cruisers 15; two.
Other cruisers 43, including two under reconstruction; six.
Anti-aircraft ships six, including two under construction; none.
Destroyers 179; 22.
Submarines 57; 65.
Torpedo boats none; 12.
Motor torpedo boats 26; 30.

Will Maintain Advantage

Britain's determination to maintain this advantage was shown by a construction program including nine battleships, five cruisers and six aircraft carriers against carriers.

Heavy programs of constuction by France, Britain and the United States were reported while scant information on new naval building was available from Russia and Japan.

Lion Class of Ships

In its review of Britain's naval program, Jane's said four British ships of the Lion class now under construction are believed to be designed for a displacement of between 40,000 and 45,000 tons. Two of them, the Lion and the Temeraire, will be completed in 1943, the other two in 1944. They will be armed with 16-inch guns.

Five 35,000-ton battleships of the King George V class will be completed within the next two years. They will be armed with 14-inch guns. Six aircraft carriers under construction have a displacement of 23,000 tons and carry 16 4.5-inch dual purpose guns.

HELPLESS FREIGHTER TOWED IN TO HALIFAX

Halifax, Nov. 16—(CP)—The salvage tug foundation Franklin reached Halifax today with the helpless Norwegian freighter Selje in tow after a nine-day battle with heavy seas and almost continuous gales.

The Selje, a 3,891-ton craft, dropped her propellor off Newfoundland November fifth.

FALL THROUGH THIN ICE

Dryden, Ont., Nov. 16—(CP)— Robert Wilson (Tommy) Collison age 15, drowned yesterday when he fell through thin ice on the Wabigoon river near this town 200 miles west of Fort William. He was the only son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Collison. Mrs. Collison is editor and publisher of the Dryden Observer.

Daily War Survey

By the Canadian Press

The possibility that Nazi threats of swift and terrible war in the west may be part of a game of bluff is not being overlooked in Allied official circles. If it is not a bluff, of course, the continued delay in launching an attack either on the British Isles by air or on France by land and air points to something like confusion or divided counsels within Germany.

Reports of the arrest of important personages such as Field Marshal von Blomberg and members of the former royal family originate outside Germany and must be accepted with reserve. If true they indicate a condition which explains many things.

Since the advent of the Nazi party to power great efforts have been made to make Germany economically self-sufficient so that Germans might never again be starved into submission by a sea blockade. Economists generally believe this objective was not attained and they further believe the new trade arrangement with Russia will not compensate for the shutting out of essential foreign supplies from the west.

Yet it may be the Nazi plan to force the German people to tighten their belts and live off their own and Russian produce while a long but inactive war proceeds. That would leave the initiative to Britain and France. They would have to either attack Germany or maintain their huge armies in constant readiness to meet a German attack.

The Nazis, however, have not been in the habit of making idle threats in their conflicts with other nations. Usually Hitler strikes first and talks afterwards or talks as his troops move.

Now he and his chief aides have been talking terrible war for weeks and doing nothing. It is the first time he has outlined an objective and failed to move towards it with promptness as he did in the occupation of the Rhineland, the annexation of Austria, the suppression of Czecho-Slovakia and the conquest of Poland.

FRENCH SEIZE 223,297 TONS OF MERCHANDISE

Blockade Minister Georges Pernot Gives Statement on Navy Activity

NO LAND OPERATIONS

British Plane Falls Into Seine River and Three Members of Crew Drown

Paris, Nov. 16—(AP)—A minimum of war activity on the western front was reported today by the French general staff, which announced in a communique that there was "no notable news during the night."

News of war on the sea was confined to a statement by Blockade Minister Georges Pernot that 223,297 tons of merchandise consigned to Germany had been seized by the French navy up to Nov. 10.

Pernot, reporting to the Chamber of Deputies foreign affairs committee yesterday, said the seizures included 100,000 tons of raw materials and 35,000 tons of petroleum.

With land operations practically at a standstill the Germans are giving wider scope to two other arms—aerial reconnaissance and a propaganda which is different from that employed earlier in the war.

Changed Propaganda

The propaganda no longer consists of loudspeaker broadcasts and posters proclaiming Adolf Hitler's desire for peace. It now is carried on through dissemination of false "whispered" reports in neutral countries which are taken up and amplified by other nations. The purpose of the campaign is to maintain tension in Europe and cause uneasiness among the Allies.

In line with this campaign, the Germans during recent days have sought to magnify the importance of various really minor clashes on the western front.

Intensified German reconnaissance flights have coincided with these devolpments. Throughout the early part of this week German planes flew over French territory, some of them cutting across Belgium. Some of them carried out continuous "shuffle flights" over the Sambre and Meuse Valleys.

Massed Near Border

Large German forces are still massed along the Netherlands and Belgian borders. Each day that passes permits the threatened neutrals, as well as the Allies, to imprive their defence preparations.

Reports received today indicated that a German military plane seriously damaged by anti-aircraft fire on Armistice Day when it flew over Dunkerque, later fell into the sea. The pilot was drowned and three other members of the plane's crew picked up by a Netherlands freighter.

A pilot and two other Royal Air Force fliers were drowned when a British plane fell into the Seine River near Villeneuve-Saint-Georges last night and sank. The town is nine miles above Paris.

The body of one flier was fished out of the river but the two others could not be found. Firemen from Paris were attempting to raise the plane from the river bed.

The accident was attributed to loss of speed after taking off.

Franco - British Unity Emphasized By Both Speakers

New Ambassador Brings Greetings from King George and Queen Elizabeth to Friendly France

Paris, Nov. 16—(CP-Havas)— Franco-British unity in the face of aggression was emphasized today by President Albert Lebrun and the new British Ambassador when the latter, Sir Ronald Hugh Campbell, presented his credentials.

"His Majesty the King asks me to assure you of his profound feeling of friendship for France" Sir Hugh said. "He and the Queen have the most tender memories of the welcome given them by the French people during their visit to Paris last year, as well as of your stay in Great Britain in March.

"When my predecessor had the honor of handing his credentials to Your Excellency, France and Great Britain had but one idea, one hope —peace.

Hope Disappointed

"Despite all efforts of the two governments, this hope was disappointed. Today the two peoples are obliged, for the second time in 25 years, to take up arms against the aggressors. Heirs of the time-honored traditions of faith and liberty, they know that their soil and future, their sons, are at stake.

"They know that only their victory can assure to the countries of Europe the right to live and work in peace. To achieve victory we must consolidate the union of our hearts and our efforts.

"Today as in 1914, Great Britain shares the sufferings and hopes of France. It admires its coolness and its courage. It ranges itself at its side with all its resources. it will be proud to continue to maintain this indivisible union, on which depends our fate and that of Europe."

President Replies

President Lebrun replied as follows:

"This absolute community of thought and action and this total solidarity which in such a remarkable manner characterize the relations between France and Great Britain rest on the unshakeable confidence felt by the one toward the other as to the equal determination which stirs them to continue the struggle to victory.

"In order that peace may no longer be troubled by a power avid of hegemony, they face all efforts and, closely associated, the sacrifices which less than a quarter of a century ago were imposed on them for a first time."

British Admiralty Has Heard Nothing of Story of Sinking of Pocket Battleship

London, Nov. 16—(CP)—The Evening Star published a brief Plymouth story today that "It is freely reported here that the 10,000-ton German pocket battleship Deutchland has been sunk by a British battle cruiser."

Immediately beneath the paper said: "The Star is authorized to state that there is no truth in the report." The Admiralty said it had not heard of it either.

SMUTS' POLICY IN S. A. UPHELD

Two By-Elections Won by Leader Who Took Over When Herzog Resigned

Johannesburg, Nov. 16—(CP) — Prime Minister Jan Smuts who led the Union of South Africa into the war against Nazi Germany, today saw his policy upheld in two parliamentary by-elections.

The contests were the first since General J. B. M. Herzog resigned as Prime Minister and was succeeded by General Smuts when the House of Commons rejected General Hertzog's view that South Africa should be neutral in the war. The campaigns were fought on the neutrality issue.

While the results announced last night, were not surprising, observers said, the margin for the government candidate was unexpectedly heavy in one of the seats, Brakpan, where Victor Ash of General Smuts' United Party polled 3,311 votes against 2,134 for G. P. Froneman, Nationalist, and 562 for G. Gilkillan, Labor.

BOY WINS NEW CAR

The winner of the car sold to the holder of the lucky ticket for one dollar by the Bancroft Branch of the 21st Battalion at the draw held the other day, was Thomas Elliot, sixteen-year-old Harcourt resident.

The second prize, a handsome radio, was won by August Kemprek of Hardwood Lake, while the $10 door prize went to Mrs. William McCaw of Belleville.

MILLING COMPANY PREMISES ENTERED

Night marauders broke into the premises of the McCarthy Milling Company, George St., some time last night, but failed to remove anything of value. P. C. Wright discovered a rear door leading into the building had been forced open while patrolling that section of the city early today. Company officials were notified and upon further investigation it was disclosed that no robbery had been effected. Prowling transients or michievous children are believed responsible.

INJURED MEN TAKEN TO LOCAL HOSPITAL

Two members of the Trenton R. C.A.F. base, G. D. Woods and A. E. Forsythe, were taken to the Belleville General Hospital last evening after sustaining severe cuts and lacerations received during a motor accident four miles west of Belleville on Highway No. 2 earlier in the evening. The injured men received medical attention at the hospital and were detained owing to the excess amount of blood lost through the bleeding.

Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Ervine investigated the accident and was told by Alex Emett of Bowmanville, that an east bound motor car had sideswiped his west bound automobile causing considerable damage. The motor car said to have collided with Mr. Emett's vehicle carried the two injured men and is said by police and Mr. Emett to have been driven by one G. McGaurnan, also of the R.C.A.F. Constable Ervine was unable to locate McGaurnan following the crash, however. Flying glass caused the lacerations inflicted.

REV. A. B. PAYNE GIVES ADDRESS TO SONS OF ENGLAND

A graphic description of life in wartime England was given the members of Lydford Lodge, Sons of England at their regular meeting the other night, by Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne.

The speaker stressed the calmness in the face of national emergency of the English people, her preparedness of both defensive and offensive measures, and the calmness and unity of the entire nation.

He gave a vivid word picture of air-raid prevention and the various methods of warning and detection of gas used by authorities. The British Premier today is one of the most admired men in England, he said, because what seemed to be former mistakes have now resolved themselves into very good strategy because it gave England time for preparedness.

Prior to the address the initiation of a new member was conducted followed by a musical program that included violin and piano duet by the Lennox brothers.

At the close of the meeting delicious refreshments were served to members and visiting members from Kingston Lodge, Picton and Lodge Oxford, Belleville.

STATION ATTENDANTS DOUSE CAR FIRE

Serious damage to an automobile by fire, was averted last night by the prompt action of Gordon Ritson and Clarence Mason, attendants at the Clapp White Rose Service Station on Front Street, when they dashed into the street with the station' fire extinguisher and quickly put out flames that enveloped the front part of a car owned by a man named Marsh of Hillside Street.

Marsh had left a local theatre, and had just stepped on the starter of his automobile when a sheet of flame shot out from beneath the hood. The station attendants saw the blaze and acted quickly, extinguishing the fire a second or so before the arrival of the Belleville fire department. The blaze was blamed on a faulty spark-plug.

LOST CHANCE TO GET $155 AT FOTO-NITE

The name selected last night at the Foto-nite drawing at the Capitol theatre was that of Lloyd Cretney, of 10 Grier Street.

As Cretney was not present in the theatre when his name was called, the prize of $155, augmented with the usual $15, will be drawn for next Wednesday night.

ALD. McLEAN HAIG WITHDRAWS FROM MAYORALTY RACE

Reasons for Action Are of a Business and Personal Nature Resulting from Recent Developments

TO RUN FOR COUNCIL

Alderman McLean Haig announced, that he was withdrawing from the Mayoralty contest in next month's municipal elections. His reasons for taking this action were of a business and personal nature over which he had no control resulting from developments which have arisen since he announced he would be a candidate for the Mayor's chair some time ago. Last evening before the meeting of the City Council he made a statement to the members of the Council. At the same time he stated he would again be a candidate for the office of Alderman. He added, that if elected, he would give that same measure of full co-operation to the new Mayor and Council, that he has endeavoured to give during the past two years he has sat in the Council.

Car, Out of Control, Damages Office Bldg.

When an automobile, said to have been driven by Clayton Wilson, Coe Hill, got out of control the vehicle collided with the office building situated on the premises occupied by Baker's service station, East Dundas St. shortly after midnight last night. Some considerable damage resulted to the front of the building, P. C. Wright reported after investigation.

Eye witnesses stated Wilson's automobile was being driven southerly on Front St. prior to the crash and had failed to completely negotiate a left hand turn into Dundas St. and which resulted in the motor car striking the building. Wilson was held by police and today charged with drunken driving.

Damage resulted to a motor car driven by Frederick Horton, Sidney St., when the vehicle was in collision with a truck, driven by Richard George, Belleville, on Highway No. 2 four miles west of Belleville late yesterday afternoon.

Provincial Constable Wm. McBrien stated both vehicles were west bound prior to the crash and that Mr. Horton was about to pass the truck driven by Mr. George at the same time that George was about to make a left hand turn off the highway. The lighter vehicle was badly damaged during the impact.

Visibility was reported bad on adjacent highways late last night when a heavy fog settled over the district slowing motorized transportation considerably. No serious accidents were reported, however.

POLICE CONVINCED AUTO IS STOLEN

How a motor car could completely disappear without having been stolen was the problem confronting Belleville police authorities this afternoon. An automobile was distinctly seen parked in front of the Quinte Motors, Pinnacle St., shortly after the noon hour. Attendants stated they saw no person approach the car, yet when garage employees came out of the building the vehicle had completely disappeared. The motor car was described to police as a 1937 Pontiac sedan bearing Ontario licence plates number 68N84. Police are thoroughly convinced the vehicle was stolen.

INDUSTRIAL REPORT GIVEN TO CITY COUNCIL

J. O. Herity, Commissioner, Says Situation in Satisfactory Condition

6 BY-LAWS PASSED

Resolution of Sympathy Addressed to Family of Late R. J. E. Graham

Belleville City Council feeling deeply the loss of a former Mayor of the city and one prominent in the business and social life of the city held one of its shortest sessions of the year. The large picture of the late Lieutenant-Colonel Robert J. E. Graham hung in the council chamber was draped in mourning and under general business, the council unanimously passed a resolution extolling the worth of the former Mayor and extending sympathy to the bereaved family. The resolution of sympathy will be sent to the family by the City Clerk.

The by-law to hold the Municipal elections on December 4th was passed through the various stages and the returning officers and poll clerks duly appointed. A bulletin respecting the extension of terms of office of members of municipal councils, boards of control, school boards and all other local boards and commissions of a municipal nature was read to the members by Ald. Ormonde Butler, who was chairman of the committee of the whole and after some discussion was ordered filed. Ald. Jennings thought it advisable to repeal the recommendation passed to request an answer, whether the people were in favor of extending the life of the members elected to two years instead of one. Ald. Cushing objected believing the people should have a voice in the matter. "I don't like to be dictated to by the government," said Ald. Cushing.

Must Hold Elections

Mayor Bone: "We have got to have elections every year for the Utilities and the Board of Education on account of our setup for electing these members. The people of this Province are being held up to ridicule by such eminent foreign authorities as General Hugh Johnson of the U.S.A. and others on account of so many laws being passed that totally disregard our rights as citizens. The Hon. Eric Cross now intimates that he and the Hepburn Government will do away indefinitely with municipal elections. They do not even consult the Ontario Mayors' Association whose elected heads are their bosom pals, and who maintain a discreet political silence. Neither do they consult the people's elected members of the legislature. I had a feeling that M. L. A.'s were only figure heads, who either do the Cabinet's bidding or get kicked out of the party, and it is a moot question, which is the greater disgrace. It is in my opinion high time that the people of this Province decided how they would be governed and how they would spend their money As it is, Queen's Park dictates where 95 per cent of our taxpayers' hard earned money shall go and we municipalities resent this procedure."

Ald. Jennings: "If the people vote yes we will have to have a private bill and that will cost a lot of money and the bill will be turned down so I think we shall call the whole thing off."

Ald. Butler: "The people put the government in power and if we do not like their government we always have the chance to turn them out while they are in power I think we should abide by their decisions."

Ald. Takes Exception

Ald Logan: "I take exception to some members of council who are always against any move or request by the government at Queen's Park. This is a democratic country and if at any time the people are dissatisfied with the way the government is administering the rules of the country, it is the people's privilege to change. The majority of the people wanted the present government at the last election so why not cooperate with them. This idea of sending long letters to the press for publication blasting every move the government makes is absolutely ridiculous, petty and very poor municipal governing. I think it is a political proposition as far as some members of this council are concerned."

Ald. Haig. "I thing we are getting away from the subject in hand."

Ald. Cushing: "The remarks of the former speakers are uncalled for." The bulletin was read and filed and is as follows:

BULLETIN NO. 15

Re: Extension of terms of office of members of municipal councils and local boards.

The approaching elections and appointments of members of municipal councils, boards of control, school boards and all other local boards and commissions of a municipal nature, will be affected by the recent announcement that the Government proposes, as a war measure, to request the Ontario Legislature at its session in 1940, to extend the term of office of members of those municipal bodies for one year, thus making the term two years.

The passing of this measure, as it is now drafted, will change the law as follows:

1. No elections or appointments to such bodies will be required for 1941, (except in the cases of municipal councils and boards of control that already have members who hold office for a term of two years).

2. A vacancy during 1940 and 1941 will be filled by vote of the remaining members, except in a city where aldermen are elected by general vote and section 170 of The Municipal Act applies.

3. Upon the recommendation of the Organization of Resources Committee that it is in the national interest that municipal elections be not held, the Lieutenant-Governor will be empowered to extend terms of office in any year for a further year.

4. No voters' lists will be prepared in 1940, except those begun in 1939.

It is the intention of the Government that the application of this measure shall be uniform throughout the Province. Any local plebiscite upon the question is therefore an unnecessary expense.

Please bring this Bulletin to the attention of your Council, municipal officers and local boards without delay.

Signed Eric Cross, Minister.

Report Received

A comprehensive report from the Industrial Commissioner J.O. Herity was read to council and ordered filed. The report is given in detail as follows:

Industrial Report

Prepared by J. O. Herity, Commissioner of Industries, Nov. 9, 1939

Owing to the very unsettled conditions both in Canada and the United States for several months past, because of the threat of war and the later declaration of war, there seemed to be little use in the industrial department spending any considerable amount of money in travelling or investigation of prospects until the business situation became more clear.

The long controversy over the United States Neutrality Act added to the uncertainty. The repeal of that measure removes one of the principal causes of unstable commercial relations and now business interests on both sides of the international boundary may look forward with a certain degree of assurance that is likely to be disturbed only by the unknown hazards of war.

Basing our judgment on the experience of the World War of 25 years ago, it seems certain that both the United States and Canada will enjoy tremendous industrial activity for the duration of the war and probably for years afterwards. The World War ended in 1918 but unexampled demand for manufactured goods continued until nearly a dozen years later.

It therefore would seem sound policy that our industrial department should be unusually alert and active in the months and years that lie ahead. There will unquestionably be many corporations which will have to provide for expansion and to seek favorable locations for new branches. To establish contacts with the heads of such corporations and to endeavor to present to them the advantage of locating at Belleville would seem beyond doubt to be the part of wisdom.

While no civic funds have been spent in travelling for several months past, the industrial commissioner has carried on correspondence with a number of manufacturing prospects which have come to his attention or which have been looking over the Canadian field for some time past.

While in Toronto he has interviewed several firms which gave evidence of interest in removal to a new location or to open new branches.

While in Buffalo, the commissioner interviewed the management of the Millfay Company, world's largest manufacturers of hosiery. While no immediate action is contemplated there is every assurance this corporation will give preference to Belleville when the time arrives to establish its Canadian subsidiary.

In the early summer the industrial commissioner made a trip to Farnham, Que., to interview Sobie's Silks Limited, but as the company requested assistance to the extent of giving them moving expenses and other concessions amounting to many thousands of dollars, he felt that he could not recommend such a prospect for serious consideration.

Within recent weeks a group from Toronto have visited our city and looked over such factory buildings as were available. An option was secured on the Tiger Tire property but has not so far been taken up. The parties maintained strict secrecy as to the name of the company and the nature of its proposed output.

As the members of the council are already aware, a serious situation arose some weeks ago because of the ardent dissatisfaction of several of Belleville's manufacturers on account of increased assessment.

While the totals of the proposed new assessments were well within the statutory limitation, there were in several instances drastic advances over the moderate assessments previously enjoyed. Strong objection was made by both the local management and the head office executives of some of the American corporations represented here and there were well rounded fears that some of them might be induced to accept some of the tempting offers to move their plants elsewhere.

The situation became so threatening that the chairman of industries and the industrial commissioner, after a hurried consultation, decided to bring the matter to the attention of His Worship, the Mayor, and the Chairman of the Executive. These four, after an earnest conference, determined to refer the question to the City Council.

Subsequent proceedings are now a matter of record. The council appointed a special committee consisting of the Mayor. Aldermen Logan, Haig and Lewis and the industrial commissioner to see what could be done.

This special committee decided to confer with the management of the various industries, which had expressed dissatisfaction, and try to ascertain if it was not possible to arrive at an amicable understanding.

An afternoon and an evening were devoted to interviews with the industrial representatives. The results were most gratifying. There seemed to be a desire upon the part of every body to adopt a reasonable attitude and to try to promote good feeling and to arrive at a satisfactory settlement. The chairman of the executive can best report upon his interview with the Honorable the Minister of Municipal Affairs and his subsequent personal interviews with the dissatisfied manufacturers.

It is further gratifying news to report that the American Optical Company (locally known as the Consolidated Optical Company) has planned and is now carrying out an important addition to its Belleville plant which will enable the company practically to double its output. This company is the largest manufacturer of spectacles in the world.

The American Hardware Corporation (locally known as Corbin's) has the blue-prints prepared for another extension to its already capacious Coleman Street plant. But it is feared that the season is now so far advanced that the erection of the new wing will have to be postponed until after the winter is over. This company is the world's largest manufacturer of builders' hardware.

Mess. Johnson and Company are now making full use of the second large extension to their factory.

Any city that has acquired great, soundly established industries, such as these and a number of others located here, may well consider itself highly fortunate.

$50 Contributed to Fund

A sum of $500 to the Hume Arena was ordered paid as provided for in the estimates. This is the conclusion of the agreement between the Corporation and the Arena with respect to the paying of free skating hours for the children. The chairman of the Executive, chairman of the Property Committee and chairman of Welfare were appointed as a committee to interview the Honorable Eric Cross to discuss the cultivation of vacant lands for garden purposes. An estimate of $200 was set by the City Engineer with respect to repairing the road that was torn up to lay the pipe for the Shell Gas Company. Ald. Harvey asked if the Shell Oil Company would oil the road in lieu of the damage done but the Alderman was informed that the roadbed was not disturbed by the work done. The report, however was sent back to the committee.

A sum of $50 was voted to assist in the Santa Claus parade to be held by the Retail Merchants of the city in early December. Ald. Harvey announced that the school zone signs are placed at Pine Street School and will assist greatly at that point. Ald. Kennedy explained that the sign posts are now being filled with cement so that they cannot be bent down. Six by-laws were passed by the council, four for conveyances of deed to persons purching property from the city, one for borrowing $6,000 on debenture to pay for sidewalks constructed under the Local Improvement Act and one to hold the Municipal Elections.

POLICE COURT

"I have received instructions from the Bureau of Criminal Statistics in Ottawa to instruct all police officers to fill out in complete detail all data on court informations pertaining to the statistics of all persons convicted in our police courts. The Bureau at Ottawa complains there has been continued disregard of checking these matters," Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., warned all police officers and police court officials at the opening of today's police court. The warning was issued more as a gesture to the officers and instructing them to obtain all data and information regarding a convicted person in order to more fully co-operate with the Dominion Bureau of Criminal Statistics.

Mrs. Myrtle Lucas, Tweed, was convicted of the illegal possession of liquor when a plea of guilty was registered through her attorney, Mr. J. M. Simpson, K.C., of Napanee, who assured the court that the assessed minimum fine of $100.00 and costs would be paid. Mrs. Lucas was arrested near Corbyville yesterday by Chief J. C. Hayes of Tweed and Provincial Constable W. E. Smith and found to be in possession of a large quantity of liquor after having been declared ineligible for the purchase of liquor by the L.C.A. recently.

Several motorists forfeited their bail bonds, which had been issued when apprehended for speeding, after the accused persons failed to answer to their names when called in today's court. "Their absence and the fact the bail bonds are identical to that of a possible minimum levied fine, doubtless indicates their guilt, and I'm asking for a conviction and the forfeiting of these bail bonds," Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K. C., asked and received.

QUATERNION Y.P.

The Quaternion Young People's Union met in Holloway Street Church, on Monday evening, November 13, at eight o'clock, Miss Mildred Bonter, the president presiding. The meeting [illegible] a song service conducted by Mr. S. M. Angl[illegible] church, with Mr. William Connor at the organ. The Scripture lesson was read by Miss Helen Brown, taken from First John, the fourth Chapter, beginning with the seventh verse. Mr Harry Atkinson led in prayer. The choir sang an anthem "Just as I am". Mrs. Clinton McDonald by request sang a beautiful solo, entitled "Alone".

Professor Shaw of the Theological College, Queen's University, Kingston, was the guest speaker. The group are studying the doctrines of the church and Professor Shaw was asked to open the series with an address on "God". He was introduced by Rev. David McClintock of Tabernacle United Church. Professor Shaw dealt with his comprehensive subject very effici[illegible]y, presenting his address in language and terms that were easily grasped by the young people.

There were a hundred present and great interest in the subject being presented was evidenced by the rapt attention given the speaker.

The Stars Say

For Friday, November 17

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

LIVELY conditions prevail on this day in both business and personal affairs. While these matters move at satisfactory tempo, there also may be an over-wrought or highly-accelerated pace which could prove detrimental if not prudently handled. The young and all interests and ambitions of a youthful character are under particularly exciting impetus. Affectional or romantic attachments may engage the attention to the hazard of purely business relations. Courtship and marriage are indicated, but be wary of dubious intrigues or subtlety.

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves caught up in a year of much activity of a romantic, emotional nature, with social engagements, entertainment and youthful pleasures and pastimes claiming major attention. The eligible will find courtship or matrimony intriguing, and unless manipulated with discretion there may be sinister or detrimental involvements.

A child born this day may be talented in both business and social lines, or it may have particular gifts in art, music or drama. It should be entertaining, enterprising and personally popular.

12,380-TON LINER ESCAPES U-BOAT

50-Minute Pursuit Ends When Vessel Outdistances German Craft

London, Nov. 16—(CP)— The 12,380-ton British steamship Matoroa, en route from Great Britain to New Zealand, escaped a submarine at sea after a 50-minute pursuit, a Reuters report from Panama said today.

The submarine was sighted when it came to the surface 2 1-2 miles from the liner. The skipper ordered full steam ahead and the vessel soon pulled seven miles ahead of the U-boat, which then abandoned the chase.

The Matora is armed but the captain was quoted as saying he had orders to fire only if attacked. He praised the coolness of passengers and crew.

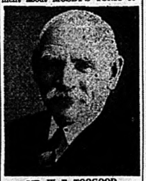
HIS RHEUMATIC PAINS VANISHED

Couldn't Raise His Arms, Stomach Gassy and Upset—Sluggish Liver Caused Dizzy Spells — Now Says Mosby's Tonic Has Relieved His Suffering and He Sleeps Fine and Can Raise His Arms Again.

Another Actual Instance of Relief from Long Suffering came to light here a few days in a statement about MOSBY'S TONIC received from Mr. W. E. Toogood, of 236 Laughton Ave., Toronto, Ont. Mosby's Tonic is a New, Scientific Compound of Roots and Herbs and Other Splendid Ingredients which is being introduced to the public daily at Lattimer's Drug Store, your Tamblyn Dealer, 228 Front Street. Read what Mr. Toogood has to say about Mosby's Tonic. Find out—for yourself—what this medicine CAN DO!



MR. W. E. TOOGOOD

Rheumatic Pains Kept Him in Distress

"I certainly had a long period of suffering with rheumatic pains," said Mr. Toogood. "My shoulders were so full of this affliction that I couldn't raise my arms above my head. My stomach was so gassy and upset that my food would not digest properly but would ferment and turn sour. I always felt bloated up with gas. My liver was sluggish and I was subject to dizzy spells.

"I had been trying medicines and treatments of various kinds for my suffering, but got no relief, and I certainly was discouraged. Finally I heard about Mosby's Tonic and what it was doing for so many people. I got this medicine and started taking it. Before my first bottle was gone I could see that this medicine was helping me. I continued with it for a few weeks longer, and now, I can hardly believe the change it has made in me. It has relieved those rheumatic pains so that I can raise my arms above my head. This medicine also had a Splendid action on my stomach and cleared out the gas. I don't have dizzy spells like I used to and I feel better than IN YEARS. I want to endorse such a medicine to others."

Acts on Bowels, Stomach; Helps You in General

MOSBY'S TONIC acts in several ways at one and the same time. That is, it contains 20 ingredients, including 15 Roots and Herbs. So it helps you IN GENERAL. It cleanses the bowels and clears gas and bloat from stomach. It enlivens the liver, cleans sickening bile from the system and relieves biliousness, sick headache and yellowish "muddy" complexion. In invigorates the kidney action and relieves night rising and backache. Weak rundown people soon feel like different men and women.

Another thing—due to the immense volume in which it sells, the price of Mosby's Tonic is reasonable. It is within the reach of ALL! In fact you can actually take this Splendid Formula for just a few cents per day. So don't hesitate. Get Mosby's Tonic —NOW—and start taking it!

MOSBY'S TONIC is sold here in Belleville at Lattimer's Drug Store, your Tamblyn Dealer, 228 Front St.

LAKE SHORE CUTS DIVIDEND

Toronto, Nov. 16—(CP)— Paying $1 quarterly since June 15, 1936, Lake Shore Mines, Limited, today announced its regular Dec. 15 dividend to shareholders of record Dec. 1 would be 75 cents.

Reduction in dividend payment was expected when the company announced recently that milling operations would be cut from 2,500 tons to 2,000 daily due to rockbursts. Tonnage decrease was made for protective reasons.

No Licence Needed To Export Honey to The United Kingdom

Ottawa, Nov. 16 (CP)—Export of Canadian honey to the United Kingdom now will be permitted without the necessity of having an individual licence, the Department of Agriculture announced today.

When the war began honey was one of several products placed on the list of restricted imports by the British authorities, consequently no Canadian honey has been shipped since the beginning of September, 1939.

In normal times nearly 25 per cent of the honey imported into the United Kingdom is Canadian. In 1938 the total exports from the Dominion to the United Kingdom amounted to more than 4,500,000 pounds. Last year honey production in Canada reached the record figure of 37,000,000 pounds. This year it is estimated the output will be between 25,000,000 and 26,000,000 pounds.

More than 40 countries supply the United Kingdom with honey, but the Canadian product in recent years has held a primary position of the British market.

INSIGHT INTO WORK OF THE RED CROSS

As the Canadian Red Cross is now making its appeal to the people of Canada for funds to enable it to meet the numerous opportunities for service which will fall to its lot in the war now in progress in which this Dominion is to play no small part, some information which appears in a bulletin of the organization will prove informative reading as it relates what the society was able to do during the Great War for the soldiers and their relatives. The story of the development of this branch of the Red Cross is interesting to everyone. The bulletin reads:

Twenty-five years ago, just a few short months after Canada had entered the Great War, a Canadian woman landed in England with the hope that she could serve her Empire.

Today the legend of Lady Drummond and her hundreds of volunteers, who organized and manned one of the most amazing institutions in Canada's overseas services, is one of the brightest pages in the history of the Canadian Red Cross.

It has been the subject of several historical books. It is best remembered by the men who spent long months in hospital, and who found that they were not forgotten by the smiling Canadian women who wrote letters for them, provided extra comforts, arranged visits in the country during convalescence.

But the great body of the work done by this unusual band of women, many of whom are scattered today across Canada as wives of men who served, is preserved only in the unpublished records of various government offices which came into contact with its work and were so impressed that details were mentioned in otherwise prosaic reports.

The work began with a chat between Lady Drummond and Col. Charles Blodgetts, Chief Commissioner of the Canadian Red Cross in London. Realizing that the experience of Canada's men would be that of Britain's men who were beginning to pour back into hospitals, and recognizing the anguish and worry of loved ones at home when no news was heard from missing or incapacitated men, Lady Drummond began the creation of a department which soon became five departments, of a work which started with two assistants and soon had an incredibly widespread, smoothly organized personnel of hundreds of volunteers. It was on February 11, 1915, the day after Canada's first forces landed in England, that she moved into two small offices in Red Cross headquarters at 14 Cockspur Street.

Younger people may not recall some of the names of this group's departments: The Bureau of Missing Men, Prisoners of War Department, the Information Service, The Hospital Visitors, and so on. But thousands of men who came within the scope of its work, and whose long hours in hospital were made easier, could tell much about the importance of that "little extra something" that military administration had not the time to provide.

The organization grew out of one first idea. During the long period between the occasion when a soldier was wounded and when he was able to write home there existed a gap. The women realized that this period was one of heartrending worry to people at home. Perhaps they received the brief, printed card announcing that: "I have been wounded (seriously), (slightly)". But the cards contained none of the things the people at home really wanted to know.

So the casualty information unit was organized. As relays of stretcher cases arrived at bases, women would meet them, learn the names of the patients, speak to those with whom they could converse, obtain bits of information to write home. And then they wrote personal letters to the folks back home. At hospitals visitors also met the men as they were sent back to England. And more letters, with lots of neway items in them, followed the first letters.

From first to the last, until a man was discharged from hospital, a card was kept at head office, in addition to the hospital records of the group, which gave details of the service: Who visited him, to whom was his letter addressed, what wishes had he expressed?

Almost immediately, however, the service realized that it was locating men who had been reported as missing. Through Red Cross International, in Geneva, details of men could be exchanged with Germany. And soon great numbers of men were being located, and letters were pouring out to next-of-kin with the good news that their men had been found.

This work, however, promptly began another task: Prisoners of war, who had previously been listed as missing, were being found, and this focused the attention of the group on the facts that prisoners of war were vitally in need of aid. So the Prisoners of War Department came into existence, and the home forces of the Red Cross who were the women behind the women behind the guns began preparing parcels for shipment to Germany.

Perhaps this is one of the greatest known services of Red Cross today. Thousands of men in prison camps received parcels of food, clothing, cigarettes and other needs. Through the International Committee in Geneva, a standard of parcel weight and numbers was set, and to every Canadian in a German camp went the full limit: 10 pound parcels six times a month, in addition to extra tobaccos, magazines and books to the full limit. In all 472,511 parcels of food and 57,745 parcels of clothing were sent, at a value of $1,300,000.

So efficient did this department become and so important was the service it rendered, that it was asked to assume the official status of an organization handling all problems with respect to prisoners. From one room, with two young women handling the files and parcels, it soon grew into a huge department with squads of workers. Even as the other units of the organization had grown, it swept to mature stature within a few months.

At the same time other branches were being created by force of necessity. At every hospital, visitors groups were organized who would make daily calls, almost literally adopt groups of patients, and become the letter-writing, tobacco-supplying, comfort-providing "mother" of their men. As men convalesced, homes in the country were provided for them. Cars were organized to take them for drives. And every detail of attention that could make a man's stay in England or Scotland pleasant was provided.

Such was the organization that grew from a desire to serve. Perhaps the history of it is better told in the opening of a letter from its files, a letter from a little Western Canadian town, which begins: "Dear Lady: Thank God for what your letters have done for me and mine . . ."

FIRST TOUCH OF WINTER

This week brought a cold snap as compared with the temperatures to which the people have been accustomed. The new low point reached was slightly under eleven degrees.

Indian Summer has often an indefinite outline so that it is sometimes difficult to say whether there has been an Indian Summer spell or not. Last week gave a couple of days suggestive of this lovely season, but the touch of snow at the first of the week suggested that it had passed away after a very brief manifestation of its eerie beauty and quiet.

Some may think that even yet Indian Summer may linger. Perhaps this is the season. For two days now the weather has been fairly mild and last night was not cold.

All people realize that the time of year is at hand for which all sensible people have prepared as far as they have been able—the winter season is not far off. Nature has done none of its delicate tracery on window panes and modern heating tends to offset this exquisite drawing by nature's hand, but on many a home during winter these arabesques are to be seen in the colder days. Thomas Bailey Aldrich refers to these signs as he tells of

These winter nights against my window-pane
Nature with busy pencil draws designs
Of ferns and blossoms and fine spray of pines,
Oak-leaf and acorn and fantastic vines,
Which she will make when summer comes again—
Quaint arabesques in argent, flat and cold,
Like curious Chinese etchings.

The first touch of winter often arrives in a suggestion of a snowstorm, such as the first of the week and very often the temperature dips as it did on Monday night, contrary to the prognostications of the weatherman.

In the sky is the sign of the approach of winter, the most majestic of the constellations. Orion, which is now to be seen in the southeast sky long before midnight.

Music is the harmonious voice of creation; an echo of the invisible world; one note of the divine concord which the entire universe is destined one day to sound.—Mazzini.

The Brown Manufacturing Co. of this city expects to receive next week forty tons of iron for use in construction of the bay bridge.

Pronunciation of Words

Mr. Justice Riddell, sitting in the Ontario Court of Appeal, corrected a lawyer who said something or other was "apPLICable". "You mean 'APPlicable', do you not?" replied His Lordship, and the lawyer agreed that was what he meant.

It is the duty of the Bench to save the innocent, and its defence of right perhaps not improperly covers the case of spoken English when it is abused.

There are many words commonly mispronounced by persons who should know better, or who could set themselves aright by consulting a dictionary — preferably an English ditcionary. They say decADEnt, for example, when they should say DECadent; comPARable when COMparable is correct, commANDant for commanDANT, REcess for reCESS, EConomic for Economic, PROGress for PROgress. They forget that it is the first syllable in DEMonstrate, but the second in reMONstrate. And the name of a well-known Ottawa institution puzzles not a few. The reSEARCH LABoratory finds itself called REsearch labORatory about as often as not.

And we hear people, educated people, say ABdomen when they should say abDOMEN, ADdress when they mean adDRESS, celibacy when the book says CELibcy, disCIPline when it ought to be DIScipline. They talk about piANists and adverTISEments when they mean Pianists and adVERtisements. They accent the third syllable instead of the first in temporarily. They forget that France is an AlLY, but that an ALly is something the boys will be playing with some cold months hence.

A man who, like Mr. Justice Riddell, is a stickler for accuracy in the pronunciation of words is called a purist, and too many people would describe a purist as one who makes a prodigious fuss over something of no consequence. To this doctrine we fear some of our most distinguished public men would subscribe, if we may judge by their broadcast mispronunciations. Radio speakers might study with profit the instructions issued by the CBC to its staff announcers—instructions which have brought a high degree of uniformity and accuracy to the air waves in so far as the official staff is concerned. Some of the politicians and lecturers, however, make their own rules.

A common attitude towards this question is illustrated by the lawyer corrected by Judge Riddell. "We all err at times," he said, "except of course Your Lordship," and no doubt he said apPLICable when next he used the word. Plainly enough he thought it didn't matter, but one doesn't argue with a judge! It does matter, though. Accuracy is worth cultivating, in speech as in engineering or accounting or journalism—sloppiness in speech, given the opportunity to know what is correct, may indicate a state of mind.—Ottawa Journal.

Sinking a U-Boat

The success of a U-boat in penetrating the defences of Scapa Flow and torpedoing the Royal Oak was certainly a shock to the Navy. Five attempts were made by U-boats to penetrate the defences of Scapa Flow between 1914 and 1918, and all of them failed. Three submarines were destroyed in these attempts, one in most dramatic circumstances.

U-B 116, with a volunteer crew of officers, set out at the end of the war with the mission of sinking the Grand Fleet flagship. They did not know that the fleet was down at Rosyth and the Flow almost empty. U-B 116 crept along the channel in Hoxa Sound without opposition.

Her crew did not know that every movement of the boat was recorded on a screen in an observation hut ashore from the moment they entered the zone of electrical detectors. The U-boat moved on slowly until it was over a field of mints that could be electrically fired from the shore. The observer in the hut pressed down the switch. U-B 116's mission had failed. — Manchester Guardian.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

More Than Apparatus is Needed To Learn Cause of Ailment

In these days with the laboratory, the Xray, the electrocardiograph, and other recent discoveries which so greatly help the physician in learning the cause of an ailment, it might be thought that apparatus was more important than the knowledge of the physician and his findings when he examines the patient.

As a matter of fact, the skill of the physician stands higher today than in the days before these discoveries were made.

It might be well to repeat the following. A group of physicians and students attended a heart clinic conducted by Sir James Mackenzie, expecting to learn some scientific facts about heart disease. Dr. Mackenzie asked the patient how long she had had heart disease and she replied that she had had it for ten years but that it was only during the past three months that she had felt any symptoms— breathlessness, fatigue, swollen ankles He asked her had she changed her residence recently and was told that for ten years she had lived on the basement floor but three months ago had moved to the third story. Turning to the group he said, "There's the cause of her symptoms of heart disease". (The three flights of stairs to climb.)

This means that a patient with heart disease, living within the limit of his heart's ability to work, may live as long as if his heart were sound. It is only when he asks the heart to do more than it can safely do that symptoms arise. As an example of how questioning the age of the patient and other simple measures may help in learning the kind of heart disease present, Dr. Frederick A. Willius, Mayo Clinic, says:

The age of the patient helps to determine the type as various forms of heart disease occur mostly in certain age periods. Among children under ten, rheumatic heart disease and heart defects present at birth, are the tyoes usually found. In the period between twenty and forty years of age, rheumatic heart disease is much more common than all other types combined. Between forty and sixty years of age, coronary (blood vessels supplying heart muscle) and heart disease due to high blood pressure are mostly observed, together with heart disease due to syphilis. From sixty to eighty the coronary and high blood pressure type are still the most frequently seen.

Similarly, history of past ailments the sex of the patient, location and intensity of the pain, degree of breathlessness, all help the physician. The stethoscope, the Xray, and the electrocardiograph may not be necessary.

Climate

What part does climate play in national characteristics?

Undoubtedly a great deal. The dreamers of Nordic supremacy don't dwell on it much, but the fact that they live in a colder country probably has more to do with their tempestuous straining and imperial nightmares than any racial roots in antiquity.

It is hard to keep any line of thought — even on climate — away from European troubles. So the best thing to do is to fit it into the picture, and it might be submitted that climate is a good thing to start on. Most of the conquerors of history have come from the north; so have most neurotics. Alexander the Great was a northerner, so were the Huns who sacked Rome, and so were the Scots who took over the English banks.

That is something we, indeed, cannot escape ourselves. We, too, are northerners. We, too, boast about it. And it appears that the fact that we are northerners gives us more energy and causes us to waste more energy than people who, in southern climate, take things more easily. Let the boastful northerner ponder on the fact that the oriental or tropical person uses about one-tenth less oxygen, when awake and at rest, than does the occidental. Which leads Professor Clarence A. Mills, of the University of Cincinnati, who has written a book called Medical Climatology, to question some of the advantages of being an energetic northerner.

What he says, in short, is this: Health in temperate zone countries (viz., Germany, Canada, Great Britain and part of the United States) has a more dynamic quality than it has in tropical warmth. "But with this push and vigor goes a much greater rate of body breakdown from the more stressful existence — a greater prevalence and more severe and rapid course for metabolic and degenerative disease, together with more functional insanity and suicides. Stimulation due to climate can be overdone and lead to an exhaustion or breakdown in body function. This is more clearly demonstrated during the late winter months in population masses of the northern states. From January onward death and sickness rates rise steadily to reach a March peak, as the bodily exhaustion from the winter cold and excessive storminess becomes more severe."

Clearly Professor Mills thinks the northerner burns up a lot of energy just being energetic and that he would do better if he burned less and relaxed more—a conclusion that has been reached by a great many medical authorities.

This explains in part why northern people are less absorbed in the very important business of living than they are in doing crazy things that lead to break-downs. They are notorious in carrying everything to excess. If there is to be a redistribution of living space in Europe it might be well to shift the Prussians down to the Mediterranean, letting them wallow in sun and wine long enough to forget their Wagnerian lances and world domination. They would be much happier, and so would every one else. And if this sounds crazy it is certainly no crazier than a lot of other suggestions for an enduring world peace. All northerners, Canadians included, like to go south.—Hamilton Spectator.

War in the Air

In connection with the possibilities or probabilities of war in the air, a paragraph in an article by Beverley Baxter in the current issue of Maclean's Magazine is of extraordinary interest. Mr. Baxter, as generally known, is a Canadian who at present is a member of the British House of Commons. What he writes is not likely to be framed carelessly. Under date of Oct. 22 he writes that "by the end of last week, a total of thirteen German planes had been brought down over Britain," he adds:

"It is obvious that the German High Command must be diligently studying the reports of their pilots. That they could reach an objective approachable from the sea seemed definitely established. But how could they face losses of 25 per cent, and even 50 per cent? Obviously bombers should be accompanied by fighting planes; but with their petrol consumption, fighters could not get back. Then, was every German bombing squadron to become a suicide club?"

The inference here is, if Baxter is not mistaken, the fast German fighting planes can not safely accompany bombing planes in attack on England, because they do not carry sufficient petrol to enable them to visit England, fight in the air there, and get back to Germany. If so, this means two vital things, namely, first, that the bombers must risk getting along among much faster British fighting planes (the bombers are comparatively slow) and secondly, that there will be no confusion in the British attack on them. If in the air were present German fighting planes as well as bombers one can imagine that there would be much confusion and uncertainty in the fighting; but German bombing planes alone would be clearly identifiable, and be easy targets.

So long as Holland and Belgium are neutral untouched countries between Germany and Britain, German planes of any kind must take a roundabout route to attack England, and be handicapped thereby. On the other hand, the British air forces will have bases in France for easy attack on Germany. France of course is open to equivalent attack from Germany; but it is not German air attack on France than can end the war.—Ottawa Journal.

Rugby Player on the Mend

Linesman Fred Burtt suffered a badly bruised leg in Friday's game with O.S.D. at Belleville. The big plunger played a whale of a game against the "deaf boys" before an injury put him out of the game for the remainder of the pastime. When Fred returned home his battered limb straightened out on him and these days he can be seen limping to and from school without the aid of a support however. With the taste of defeat still fresh in their mouths the Trenton High School huskies feel they can beat the O.S.D. Champions and are all heated up about the prospects of meeting the "Deaf boys" in an exhibition match at Belleville sometime soon. Providing the weather is fit at the end of this coming week another inter-form football clash is to be decided on the grounds to the east of the school....This tilt is expected to complete the Junior schedule for this term.

Concentration on Production Of Bacon, Beef, Dairy Products Urged by Hon. J. G. Gardiner

Minister of Agriculture Outlines Agricultural Policy for Man on Land

ASKED TO START PLAN

Huge Wheat Surplus Described as "Blessing in Disguise" for British Empire

Winnipeg, Nov. 16—(CP)—Greater concentration on the production of bacon, beef and dairy products was urged on farmers by Agriculture Minister J. G. Gardiner last night as he outlined a war-time agricultural policy for the man on the land.

Mr. Gardiner, who urged the farmer to consolidate his position to prepare for changes peace might bring, spoke before the annual dinner of the United Grain Growers Limited. His speech was broadcast over a network of Prairie radio stations.

The Minister described Canada's huge wheat surplus as "a blessing to the British Empire" during these difficult times and called on the farmer to bend his efforts toward planning for great quantities of cheese, bacon, beef and eggs. Britain has shown increased interest in such products since the outbreak of war.

"It will take us two years to get into the swing of greater production in beef and dairy products," he said. "We should, therefore, start to plan now, and as a matter of fact we have already done so."

Can't Estimate Demand

There was no increased demand right now from Britain for cheese, butter or beef. "We can rest assured, however, that if the war continues over a period of two years or more that by the end of a two-year period greater demand will be made upon our supplies than can be even estimated at present....

"No mistake will be made, whatever the future has in store, if the production of cheese, bacon and eggs is increased. I would particularly emphasize bacon and cheese...

"I am firmly of the opinion that whether we can realize the desired price at present we should keep bacon and cheese going forward, confident that it is the best long-time policy."

Likely to Make Agreement

Canadian cheese producers could not find their way to accept a price level similar to that extended New Zealand and Australia but the British Food Ministry had allowed the trade in Britain to go on purchasing Canadian cheese at a price higher than the Food Ministry price.

However, Canada is prepared to enter an agreement when "it is thought to be in the common interest of our producers and British defence that we should do so."

Mr. Gardiner explained that the British Food Ministry controls distribution of pork products at an established price and it eventually might, therefore, be necessary for Canada to direct production and price through an understanding with processors and producers.

Wheat All Required

In referring to the 500,000,000 bushels of wheat still in the Dominion, Mr. Gardiner said about 125,000,000 of this would be needed in Canada and "if armies overrun the wheat fields of Europe every bushel of that surplus will be required."

"If peace terms are made soon or late which are lasting, people will go back to normal production of other things and every bushel of our wheat will be required to feed people in times of peace just as it was from 1935 to 1937."

British millers who were using a standard mix containing 10 per cent Canadian wheat, were said to be willing to increase the Canadian content to 50 per cent or more if provided with the grain at a price reasonably close to other wheat and also if guaranteed sufficient to maintain production of flour at that standard mix.

HOW TO OVERCOME ITCHING PILES

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is highly recommended, is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost. AT THE BELLE

"In Name Only"

A vivid, memorable presentation of a modern social problem is "In Name Only," which is now on the Belle screen, with Carole Lombard, Cary Grant and Kay Francis comprising its dramatic triangle.

"In Name Only" is a sincerely told story fashioned into an excellent entertainment. A selfish, mercenary woman has married a wealthy young man for whom she has no love whatever. By the time he learns what his wife is really like she has firmly entrenched herself in the affections of his unsuspecting parents.

He does nothing about his marital difficulties until he meets a charming young widow and falls in love. When he asks his wife for his freedom she refuses, having no intention of giving up her secure position and her prospects.

Out of this impasse the story climbs to gripping dramatic heights with splendid performances of the three principals aiding vastly in building its realisms and emotional appeal.

Miss Lombard's work as the "other woman" and the portrayals of the married couple by Grant and Miss Francis are superlative, ranking among the finest of these three favorites. Supporting players are equally notable, particularly Charles Coburn, Helen Vinson, Katharine Alexander, Jonathan Hale and Maurice Moscovich.

Joe Penner

"The Day the Bookies Wept," which is the added laughter hit, seems to be the funniest of Joe Penner's screen vehicles to date, presenting the noted comic as a taxi driver who becomes involved with a race horse.

Devoted to his flock of pigeons and his fiancee, Betty Grable, the sister of a fellow hackman, Penner hasn't much interest in anything else. But the other drivers, annoyed because they invariably lose while betting on the ponies get together in a bright scheme. They will buy a horse of their own, enter him at the track and make a killing at the expense of the bookmakers!

Penner is elected to purchase the steed and train him and does so, much against his will. The task interferes with his romance and with his attention to his pigeons. The horse he has been tricked into buying is a "drunkard" which won't run unless intoxicated — a fact of which Penner isn't aware.

On this basis has been erected an hilarious story structure, one that gives the popular funster plenty of scope for his mirthful talents. Miss Grable makes a lovely leading lady in the featured role, and the supporting players, particularly Richard Lane, Tom Kennedy, Thurston Hall and Carole Hughes, give excellent performances.

"Information Please"

A special extra attraction on the same program is the appearance of Clifton Fadiman, Franklin P. Adams, John Kieran and Oscar Levant, and an internationally famous guest star in "Information Please," based on the radio program.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Beware Spooks"

Filled with laugh-provoking dialogue and action which will bring reminiscent chuckles for months to come, Joe E. Brown (the screen's cave-mouthed comedian) in "Beware Spooks" is now playing at the McCarthy theatre.

In his first appearance on the screen as an officer of the law, the cave-mouthed star's canny antics, his uncanny flair for timing and his unique ability to brighten every comedy situation have never before been so clearly demonstrated as they are in this the funniest of all Joe E. Brown laugh-riots.

From the moment Brown is introduced in police uniform until he finally engages a desperado in hand-to-hand battle, "Beware Spook!" moves with the speed of a tornado...a laugh tornado. Every situation, every character and every story development builds to a howling climax.

That Brown has splendid support and a whale of a story does not detract in the least from his splendid performance. Mary Carlisle is ideally cast as a young, bewildered bride, who follows Brown into numerous hair raising trials and tribulations. Marc Lawrence, Clarence Kolb, Frank Thomas, Don Beddoe, Lorna Gray and Eddie Laughton are a few of the supporting players whose flawless characterizations contribute to the general excellence of "Beware Spooks."

The film introduces Brown as a policeman whose inability to follow orders and misinterpretation of situations causes his transfer from one outlying precinct to another. Eventually his stupidity in allowing a notorious gangster to escape causes his dismissal. Burning with determination to redeem himself, Brown trails the formidable criminal to a beach resort fun house, denounces him and is tossed into a battle that taxes the thrill-haunted devices of the crazy house to leave the audience limp with laughter.

"Beware Spooks!" is swell film entertainment. Cleverly directed by Edward Sedgwick, well acted and soundly written, it strikes a new high for the mammoth-mawed comedian.

"Konga"

On the same program, as a companion feature, "Konga" an action-packed outdoor adventure story, featuring Fred Stone, Rochelle Hudson and Richard Fiske, brings to the screen one of the most spectacular and thrilling hits of the season and a swell co-feature presentation in addition to Joe E. Brown in "Beware Spooks!"

AT THE CAPITOL

"Undercover Doctor"

Paramount has assembled a fine cast to interpret the interesting characters in "Undercover Doctor," which is now on the screen at the Capitol Theatre. The cast—Lloyd Nolan, Janice Logan, Paramount's most recent film find, J. Carrol Naish, Heather Angel, Broderick Crawford, and Robert Wilcox—topnotch. So is Louis King's direction. Based on one of the exciting episodes in J. Edgar Hoover's book, "Persons in Hiding," the picture relates the case of a brilliant but weak-willed surgeon and a building contractor who are in cahoots with a gang of ruthless killers. The doctor falls in with the crooks when he finds that financial success is still very far away. Soon his illicit earning are sufficient to establish an expensive office where the city's socity folk and heiresses come for treatment. A rich, society girl is about to be married to the undercover doctor when she is saved from ultimate disgrace by the timely intervention of the G-men. "Undercover Doctor" is well worth seeing and on the same program

"Frontier Pony Express"

Never let it be said that the Pony Express rider has disappeared from the American scene. As long as there are silver screens, as long as there are producers and directors and fast-shootin' cowboy stars, the Pony Express rider will gallop his dashing way across the plains of American lore.

Latest contribution to the Pony Express tradition is Republic's "Frontier Pony Express," which brings Roy Rogers to the Capitol.

The plot is laid in pre-Civil War days, when the far west was torn between conflicting loyalties. Rogers is approached by a Confederate spy who tries to bribe him into delivering "fixed" dispatches to an army post. Matters become complicated when Rogers falls in love with the syp's lovely sister. However, he extricates himself from this situation with dash and verve.

Lovely Mary Hart, Roger's partner in all his pictures, once again displays her dramatic potentialities. The supporting cast, including Raymond Hatton, Ed Keane, Noble Johnson, Bud Osborne, Monte Blue, Matty Rupert, Vester Pegg and Bill Royal, handle their roles skilfully and deserve individual plaudits.

A cartoon "Little Blue Blackbirds" concludes the bill.

Thin wools make new housecoats. A flattering style in pale blue, fine flannel has a molded waist and full skirt. Scalloped pale blue satin marks the full-length button closing and also makes collar and wide cuffs.

Never too many blouses. A dressy pale pink silk chiffon is shirred all over except for the waist and hips. Frilled narrow V opening and long full sleeves are other features.

We note that the fur-hemmed frock is back again. A smart model in plum colored woolen has a wide band of nutria. The collar and the cuffs of the long, tight sleeves are also fur.

ENGAGEMENT NOTICE

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel H. Coffey of Read, announce the engagement of their daughter, Helen Agnes to Patrick J. McAdam, son of Mrs. J. P. McAdam and the late Mr. McAdam of Oshawa. The marriage will take place at St. Charles Church, Read, December 2.

Mrs. E. Ryan, Stirling, is spending some time in the city.

Mrs. William Kennedy, 30 East Moira Street, is confined to her bed, owing to a fall, several days ago.

Miss Kay McCormack, 25 Victoria Ave., who underwent an operation for appendicitis, is progressing favourably.

Mr. and Mrs. Jeff Marvell are in London owing to the sudden death of Mr. Marvell's father.

Mr. Roy Parker and Mr. Garnet Spencer, Oshawa, are spending a few days visiting the latter's sister, Mrs. R. Kimmett, Trent Road and his mother, Mrs. W. Kennedy, East Moira Street.

Friends of Mrs. Harry R. Moorman, Olive Street, will regret to learn of her bereavement occasioned by the death of her brother, Manley L. Sine, which occurred in Davenport, Florida, on Wednesday of this week.

Geoffrey Marvell, district manager of the Shell Oil Company at Belleville, received word of the sudden death of his father, who passed away at the family home in London last night.

A very successful card party was held in the Oddfellows' Hall last evening under the auspices of the Belleville Chapter No. 55, O.E.S., Patriotic Club. Mrs. E. Holst was convener of the interesting evening. Twenty-five tables of cards were in play. Winners at euchre were ladies' first, Mrs. Jack Bone, second, Mrs. Jeffrey; men's first, Mr. W. Hall, second, Mrs. A. W. Bradshaw; for bridge ladies' first, Mrs. Charles Mott, second, Mrs. Coulby; men's first, Mr. Clapp, second, Mr. George Darrah. The door prize was won by Mrs. K. Kokesh.

Miss Florence Houston-Hill, bride-to-be, was honored at a miscellaneous shower arranged in her home, 267 Ann Street, on Friday evening last, by a few of her friends. The guest of honor received many useful and lovely gifts for which she thanked her many friends. Euchre and dancing were enjoyed and a dainty lunch was served.

WEDDINGS

LOCKWOOD—SMITH

Frankford, Nov. 16 (Special) — A very pretty wedding took place at the United Church Parsonage in Frankford on Tuesday evening, Nov. 14 at 7.30 p.m. when Una Rose Smith became the bride of Roy Francis Lockwood. Miss Lena Lockwood, sister of the groom, and Mr. Thomas Francis Foster of Stirling were in attendance.

A wedding supper was held at the home of the groom when sixteen friends of the bridal couple were present. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Christine of the Bata Shoe Co. The couple will reside in Frankford.

LANDRY—ROBLIN
DIXON—LANDRY

A quiet wedding service was solemnized at Holloway United Church Parsonage, 44 Hillside Street, at ten a.m. this morning, when a double wedding ceremony was solemnized by the Rev. Royal E. Newman between Orville Arthur Landry of Ameliasburg Township, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Landry, and Nora Doris Roblin, of Ameliasburg Township, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Raymond Roblin and William Delbert Dixon, 76 Cannifton Road, Belleville, son of the late Rev. Soford Dixon and of Mrs. Dixon, to Zella Isabel Landry, Ameliasburg Township, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Landry.

Miss Roblin was attired in a street length frock of royal blue silk velvet with blue accessories and corsage of Bettertime roses. Miss Landry wore a street length frock of navy and teal blue sheer with navy accessories. Her corsage was of Briarcliff roses.

Messages of good wishes were received by the young couples at the parsonage. Following the ceremony luncheon was served at the Landry home.

Later the young couples left on a wedding trip to Niagara Falls and Buffalo. Upon their return, Mr. and Mrs. Landry will reside in Ameliasburg and Mr. and Mrs. Dixon in Frankford.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Choice of Laxative Depends on Age of Child

Yesterday we talked about some of the harsher laxatives which, if used on your baby, might do more harm than good. Specifically we mentioned epsom salts and castor oil, both of which are drastic in their action and so not suited to small children.

Another laxative we did not mention yesterday merely acts as a lubricant on the bowel. Mineral oil is an example of what I mean, and this is excellent for older children. But with babies it doesn't work so well because they have no capacity for handling fats or oils of any kinds.

There are many laxatives on the market, but before you buy any to try them on your small child—let alone yourself—find out if it is harmful or not. Your physician will be glad to tell you. If he doesn't know the preparation you mention, he will tell you what you should get.

For the majority of babies it isn't necessary to use laxatives at all. Changing the type of food will almost always clear up the trouble. For the few who do not respond to such treatment, the use of soap sticks and enemas are more advisable than laxatives.

However, before we even go this far, I have found in my experience that it is well to check up on the mother's belief that her child has constipation. In other words, when is a child constipated?

The average bottle-fed baby has two to three movements daily. Does that mean that because a child has only one daily movement that it is constipated? No, not until we have taken several important factors into consideration. Perhaps the most important of these is: "How much food is the baby getting?"

If the child isn't getting enough to eat, then it is altogether possible that he will have only one movement a day. In fact, he might have only one stool every two days and all the laxatives and all the enemas in the world won't increase the output of faecal material because the baby just hasn't got any more to put out.

On the other hand, it is quite possible for an overfed baby to have four stools a day and still be constipated. No, you cannot say a baby is constipated because his bowels move frequently. The answer to that constant question, "Is my baby constipated?" lies not in the number of stools but in their character.

Most babies at some time or another suffer from constipation, and if the mother is on the alert to detect the symptoms she can often save both the baby and herself a great deal of trouble by getting after it at once.

One of the strictest instructions given our nurses when the Quintuplets were small was for them to watch the bowel movements of the children. That policy certainly paid.

Powder Pad Pains

By HELEN FOLLETT

MOST IMPORTANT of all the items in the beauty kit is the powder pad. And the girl with an oily skin keeps it working overtime. She puts on the dull finish and, lo and behold! in no time at all the old shine is back again.

She should get down to the root of the problem, which is in the sebaceous glands that are over active. Why-for the expenditure of so much energy? They're excited by a diet that needs more fruits, vegetables, green salads, less pastry and sweets.

A change of soap may quiet the oil geysers; or, have several rinsings after the face has been washed so that every bit of the soap suds has been removed. A lemon rinse is beneficial. Add the juice of half a lemon to a cupful of water; apply three times a day. Make the lemon lotion fresh every three days.

Witch hazel is helpful. So is a boric acid solution, made by dissolving one teaspoonful of powdered boric acid in a cup of boiling water and cooling. Try out these three treatments. Surely one will prove effective.

Use a fluffy powder; apply lightly. Heavy ones with an oily base enrage the oily skin.

Walking appeals to few women; yet, it is the perfect exercise, one that is refreshing to the mind, strengthening to the body. It's too easy to hop into the family bus or seek convenient transportation. European women think nothing of clipping off 10 miles; American women go into a sudden decline if anyone suggests they walk two blocks to the grocer's shop.

ROCHELLE UDSON . . . . proper care keeps her free of oily skin.

Legs that are fat, legs that are thin will be normalized by a two-mile daily walk. Mrs. Walker should wear sensible shoes with fairly wide soles and low heels, and the waist of the foot should be properly supported. Take brisk steps, keep the body tall, breathe deeply, let the arms swing naturally. At sanitariums where men and women go for reducing treatments, the daily five-mile walk is a part of the routine.

Mrs. C. Maguire Enters 95th Year

Citizen of the Dominion since she settled in Hastings County nearly seven decades ago, and a resident of New Liskeard for a quarter of a century, Mrs. Charles Maguire, mother of Mr. A. H. Maguire, McDonald Avenue, will observe her 94th birthday tomorrow. A number of her children will join in the celebration. Mrs. Maguire still finds pleasure in knitting socks for her sons.

A native of Kilsyth parish, near Glasgow, Mrs. Maguire, whose maiden name was Helen D. Henderson, came to Canada as a young matron in the fall of 1870. The family settled near Detlor, and Mrs. Maguire and her husband lived there until they moved to Northern Ontario. Mr. Maguire was a native of the Belfast district, and the couple celebrated both golden and diamond weddings in New Liskeard.

Mrs. Maguire is the mother of ten children, all living. She has 38 grandchildren and 30 great-grandchildren, and herself is the last of a family of eight, two of whom were well-known ministers of the Methodist Church.

Roslin — Friends and neighbors from Moneymore, Mount Pleasant and Roslin gathered in the church hall, Roslin, on Monday evening November 13th in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Sullivan (nee Ena Kerr) who were married recently.

After all had assembled, Rev. F. C. Beazer called the gathering to order, spoke briefly and called Mr. and Mrs. Sullivan to take chairs at the front of the hall. Mrs. Arthur Bates read the following address.

Roslin, Ontario,
November, 13th., 1939

Dear Ena and Clayton:

Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Sullivan:

It is with real pleasure and joy that we meet tonight to express to you both our heartiest congratulations and best wishes on your recent marriage.

You have always lived in this district and have won the esteem and respect of all who know you.

Ena's ability as a successful school teacher is too widely recognized to bear repetition and the community is indebted and grateful to her for her years of service in training the youth of our rural schools.

In her church life she did her part whenever called upon to act as organist and also as a leader in other activities. For this assistance we take this opportunity of expressing our appreciation.

Of earthly goods, the best is a good wife, and of this we know, Clayton is the proud possessor.

Some one has said that "A wife is a gift bestowed upon man to reconcile him to his loss of Paradise." If so, then we know this couple will be very happy in their new venture.

A good husband makes a good wife at any time and Clayton can be depended upon to act his part.

We trust that the joy which will ever make your wedding day a happy memory be richly increased during the coming years.

As an expression of our affection and admiration, we would ask you to find a spot in your new home for this memento from your friends of this community. Signed:

Fred Coulter
Russell Glass
Norman Alexander
Arthur Bates.

Mr. and Mrs. Sullivan were presented with a tea-wagon and silver tea service for which they expressed their appreciation and thanks. All joined in singing "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows," following this lunch was served.

During the earlier part of the evening and again after lunch Mr. and Mrs. G. Burleigh and Mr. Edgar Burleigh furnished music for dancing.

Fashion Flashes

At home in town or country is a suit of softest tweed in a pinkish-violet shade with peplum band and collar of sheared beaver. Worn with a knitted brown silk yarn sweater.

New softness is a feature of bags now coming into the market for the gift season. Typical of this trend is supple black suede made in three loosely rippling tiers. The handle is of grosgrain and suede.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

"O, Dear, What Can the Matter Be?"

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I was much impressed with a letter in your column signed "Wondering A." I'd give a month's salary to meet a girl like that. But how does a fellow meet these nice girls?

In the last three years I have tried every means to make a date, and have drawn nothing but blanks. I have an excellent job and am a good card player, dancer, and know how to treat a decent girl decently. Several of the men who work in the same organization with me are in the same boat. Every nice girl we meet is either engaged, married or not interested.

If "Wondering A" would only let the boys around her know she'd like to meet a good guy, it's dollars to doughnuts she'd be swamped.

P. D. R.

Scores upon scores of "nice" girls wail to me that they receive no attention from men because they don't drink, pet, or go to the limit. A man takes them out once and when he discovers they're decent, that's the end of the man's interest. Now along comes a young man like yourself, who is weary of high fliers and doesn't seem to be able to meet a nice girl, the kind a man wants to marry and establish a home with. What's to be done?

In the city, from which this man's letter is postmarked, there are dozens of clubs where young men may meet "nice" girls. The Y.M.C.A. gives dances, card parties and other social functions. They are delighted to have a list of bachelors for their stag lines. The same is true of similar organizations. Most churches have young peoples' societies and any creditable young man, calling on the pastor and saying he'd like to meet some "nice" girls, is swamped with introductions.

There is also in this young man's town a splendid hiking club, where young people who like the out of doors may meet and have good times.

A Mistake to Drop Friends

Dear Miss Fairfax

I've been going with one certain young man for the last three years, and we have broken off entirely. I am convinced that he's not the person for me. I'm 23 years old, average in looks, ordinary personality, and dress very well in order to offset the deficiency in good looks.

During the time I went with him, I managed to retain a few girl friends, but no men, which was a great mistake I now find. I find myself shy. How am I to act when a young man is around who is the least bit attractive to me? I've already learned that a girl never "wears her heart on her sleeve", but whenever I meet a man I have the queerest sensation and become tongue-tied. I'm awkward and don't know what to say or do. I always want to just creep into the nearest keyhole and curl up and die.

What does one discuss with men? How does one act? And, most of all —this is my real reason for writing —how does one get a new acquaintance to the point of asking one out? I have met two or three who look good to me and with whom I'd like to have a date.

Awkward

I think that the reason you feel the way you do is due to the fact that you devoted yourself entirely to one young man for so long. This feeling will wear off. Your letter is clear and shows that you can express your ideas. Your trouble is not there. A never-ending source of interest among young people is current events, as they are shown in the newspapers, dances, movies sports. If you will believe in yourself, I feel very optimistic about your future.

Woes of a Widower

Dear Miss Fairfax

My wife died when I was very young. In fact, I'm not even middle-aged at present. Gossip said I ran around, but I was true to my wife until death.

Now I have met a young divorcee who is a splendid girl. She tried to make a go of her marriage, but her man was a philanderer. Everything seemed to go well with us, but suddenly she has declined to have anything to do with me.

I know of no reason why she should have turned against me. I have a good trade, and have been going to night school for advanced training. I don't care for smoking or drinking, put up a good appearance and am careful about my manners. I would give anything within reason to have her make up with me. Nothing seems to go right since we parted.

H. W.

If the young lady has become interested in some one else it is certainly up to her to tell you or write you a letter to that effect. It is neither kind nor well-bred to drop a person one has gone with and received attentions from without a word of explanation. Granting she has changed her mind, or has heard some of this gossip concerning you and your late wife, she should come out with it and not keep you on the anxious bench.

Meantime, if you go around with someone else and don't sit home, you'll probably be less miserable.

Mrs. A. E. Best Addresses W. M. S.

On Monday afternoon, November 13th., the Tabernacle W.M.S. held a special meeting the occasion being the visit of Mrs. (Dr.) A. E. Best, returned missionary from West China.

Mrs. D. T. McClintock presided and welcomed guests from Bridge Street, Holloway Street and Cannifton United Churches. Following the opening hymn Mrs. Bailey read the Scripture lesson and Mrs. French offered prayer.

Solos by Mrs. Houston of Bridge Street Church and Mrs. McDonald of Holloway Street, were much enjoyed also a reading by Mrs. Fisher, entitled "Bring Thy Gifts to the Altar".

Mrs. McClintock introduced Mrs. Best who gave a very interesting address showing pictures of the life of the Chinese people and telling of the splendid work of the missionaries in training doctors and nurses to carry on the great work of caring for the sick and preventing disease.

A hearty vote of thanks was extended to Mrs. Best for her splendid address.

The Tabernacle W.M.S. served lunch and social hour was enjoyed.

How Should a Girl Accept Masculine Compliments?

It's interesting to watch how a girl or a woman replies to a compliment given her by a man.

Some girls interpret any kindly-intentioned remark with the greatest seriousness, as if it were a definite invitation to step right up to the altar. A man tell Miss A "how pretty you look in that dress", and Miss A, in her mind, instantly begins to plan her trousseau! She can't wait to see her girl-friend, to repeat Jim's remark, and to imply, even to insist that Jim "cares". In her silly mind she turns the remark over and over, trying to probe it for new depths of significance. She is convinced that his pleasant little compliment is the bait that is going to land the proposal, if it hasn't already landed it.

Then there are girls who are always embarrassed and awkward when a compliment is given them. This awkwardness results in their becoming either tongue-tied and saying nothing, or something silly.

There are some girls who always take a compliment as something said with complete insincerity. These are the girls who are apt to hug to themselves an inferiority complex. When something pleasant is said to them, immediately they take the attitude that the person who says it is talking down to them, and their reply to the compliment is apt to be sarcastic, in the unattractive spirit of "Don't try to fool me, sir."

And there are the girls who take a compliment as it should be taken, and reply to it with complete naturalness and courtesy. They take the pleasant remark lightly, with the give-and-take spirit of today's "personal" world, and they don't bother their heads with trying to read deep significance into casual words. They see no reason why Jim's few polite words should tie their tongues, or make them awkward. And they are so sensible that they wouldn't dream of getting into a dither about such a ridiculous thing as an inferiority complex. These girls wisely realize that some men pay compliments with a certain automatic glibness; others, unthinkingly, or just for the fun of saying agreeable things.

But whether a compliment is either only casually said or said with complete sincerity, it need not make much difference in a girl's reply. If someone makes a remark about your health, as "How well you are looking", you smile and answer with a gracious, "Thank you", even if you don't feel particularly well. It's a good idea to take a compliment in just the same spirit. If some gallant gentleman compliments you, smile your friendliest smile and say, "Thank you" or, "How very kind of you", or "Thank you, Jim, you're nice to say so." A bit casual, lady, but completely gracious.

Tweed

Tweed — The regular monthly meeting of Tweed Red Cross branch was held in the Veterans' Hall on Monday night. In the absence of the president, W. E. Tummon, Mrs. J. C. Hayes, vice-president, was in charge of the meeting. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

The recently organized Sulphide Red Cross Sub Committee was represented at the meeting by three of its members, Mr. H. J. Cordy, convener, Mrs. G. H. Catton and Mrs. C. Goulah.

On motion of Mrs. P. C. Arber and Mrs. W. E. Tummon the following were appointed as members of Sulphide Sub Committee to act in conjunction with Tweed branch.: H. J. Cordy, convener, J. McCabe, C. Goulah, H. Varty, G. H. Catton, Mrs. M. Young, Mrs. C. Goulah, Mrs. G. H. Catton, Miss Butler, Mrs. Geo. Dowdall, Mrs. A. Corbett, Mrs. Langevin, Messrs. W. Turcotte, H. Carleton, and Mrs. H. Varty.

Moved by Mrs. P. J. Doyle, seconded by Mrs. Prust that Mrs. G.H. Catton, Mrs. C. Goulah and Mrs. M. Young of Sulpide be added to the executive of Tweed Red Cross branch. Carried.

On motion of Mrs. W. E. Prust and Mrs. D. W. Sills, Mrs. Simon Genore, president of Stoco Catholic Women's League, was also added to Tweed executive.

Mrs. J. C. Hayes and Mrs. J. McNaught were named as a committee to interview the Actinolite ladies with a view to arranging a meeting for the purpose of organizing a Red Cross Sub Committee.

After one day's canvass for funds Mr. C. E. White, chairman of the Red Cross Campaign Fund Committee, reported that $348 had been promised to the Red Cross and $8.50 in cash had been paid.

Mrs. John McNaught, convener of the Wool Committee, reported that 70 pounds of wool had been purchased to date. Some five dozen pairs of sox have been turned in to the committee to date and seventy-five additional pairs are in process of making.

Mr. H. J. Cordy reported that Sulphide Men's Campaign Committee was fully organized and would complete the canvass this week.

Mrs. G. H. Catton gave an encouraging report of Red Cross activities in Sulphide. Organized less than two weeks several pairs of sox and a considerable number of bandages of different types have been completed. Workers' meetings are held in the Community Hall every Thursday, alternatively in the afternoon and evening.

The Young People's Union held an interesting meeting on Monday evening in the United Church Sunday School Hall. The president, Miss June Brown, presided. Miss Hilda Benny read the Scripture lesson during the Devotional period. The program was arranged by Miss Marjorie McTaggart, who read an interesting article on Remembrance Day. Miss June Brown gave a resume of the proceedings of the Young People's Conference held in Peterborough recently.

Introducing the Canadian Apple

This year Canadian housewives are getting better acquainted with Canada's king of fruits . . . the high grade Canadian apple.

Reports from every corner of the country indicate that the efforts of the Marketing Service of the Dominion Department of Agriculture to sell the entire Canadian apple crop here at home are meeting with marked success. This campaign on behalf of the Canadian apple grower arose because of marketing problems caused by the war. Ordinarily Canada's choicest apples are boxed and barrelled for sale in the luxury market of Great Britain. Considered a delicacy in the British Isles, the Canadian pack each year commands the highest prices.

This year with the outbreak of war in the first few days of September, this valuable market became practically closed to the Canadian apple grower. With his fancy pack ready for shipment, the Canadian grower was forced almost overnight to find new buyers for his most valuable apples right here at home.

These ripe, luscious apples of highest grade have, as a consequence, been placed on sale through shops across the Dominion at prices that are proving attractive to those of even modest means. Canadian housewives have been told of these apples through an extensive newspaper advertising campaign. And Mrs. Canadian Housewife, quick to sense a bargain, has bought apples this autumn as she has never done before, and is still buying them.

Actually apple buyers are getting more and better apples for their money this season. Government grading has been stepped up and the very best grades, are offered for sale over the counter. Less attractive apples, are being absorbed by the Government and private firms for processing into apple cider, apple sauce, dried apples, and other similar products.

Because of the ready response of Canadian women to the appeal of the "Eat Canadian Apples" campaign, growers are beginning to wonder if they have been too backward in the past in telling their fellow Canadians just how good their apples really are. There is every possibility that as a result of this year's effort, caused by the unusual conditions of war, the home market for Canadian apples has been expanded to such an extent that a permanent market for most of Canada's crop in the future will be found right here in Canada.

OKLAHOMA CITY RIGHT BEHIND COLLEGE TEAM

Weekly Sessions of Quarterback's Club Puts Coach Right on Spot

ANSWERS QUESTIONS

School Given Co-Operation by Club for Securing Possible Stars

(By Gayle Talbot Associated Press Staff Writer).

Oklahoma City, Nov. 16 (AP)—Anyone still so naive as to regard college football in the United States as a sport and not a disease needs only to attend one of the weekly sessions of the Downtown Quarterback Club of this city to learn his error.

There are minor intimations in other cities, but his tone is the papa of them all. There were 750 members at the latest meeting, probably a third of them women, and they went at their quarterbacking seriously for three solid hours, starting at the unholy hour of 10.30 a.m.

The club, originated by sports editor Bus Ham of the Daily Oklahoman, was so modest at first that the charter members met in a restaurant to discuss the gridiron situation. Now it has been thrown open to the general public is one of the city's swankest ball rooms, and if the membership continues to grow they will have to move into a ball park.

Team Whole Affection

With no pretense whatsoever, the quarterbacks are football nuts, and the University of Oklahoma the object of their whole affection. Each week they put coach Tom Stidham squarely on the spot, and some of the questions he answers are a caution. Nor does he attempt to sidestep.

In return from taking the quarterbacks into his confidence, Stidham is given some important cooperation in the matter of getting and keeping good Oklahoma football players at the state university.

Here's how each week one of the state's leading high school teams is the honored guest of the club. The boys are well fed, and then they are told, in kindly fashion, that some Oklahoma players who have attended college in their own state have found it easier to obtain jobs after leaving school than others who went off to wicked foreign institutions.

GOODYEARS AND ST. KITTS WIN

Tiremen Defeat Galt 8-2 While Garden City Boys Take Hamilton 5-3 . . . .

(By the Canadian Press)

Toronto Goodyears and St. Catharines Saints, displaying well-balanced power and scoring punch, held a firm grip today at the top of the Senior "A" Ontario Hockey Association standing with two straight victories to their credit.

Displaying the power that carried them to the title last year, Goodyears defeated Galt 8-2 in Toronto last night while St. Catharines downed Hamilton 5-3 in Hamilton.

Galt was unable to cope with Goodyears' passing attack and the Toronto team banged home four goals during the first two periods. Inglis rapped in the first counter and was followed by Inlach, Mundrick and O'Flaherty.

In the third period Johnson and Keith Cooper scored two quick goals for Galt after King had scored Goodyears' fifth goal. Galt's defence however, was unable to stem the Toronto attacks and J. Cooper, Drummond and Benson barged by for goals.

FOUR BOMBERS OUT OF GAME

Winnipeg Facing 6-Point Deficit in Their Second Game for Title

Winnipeg, Nov. 16 (CP)—Coach Reg Threlfall of Winnipeg Blue Bombers said today four of his players probably will be kept out of the deciding game of the Western Interprovincial Football Union final at Calgary on Saturday because of injuries.

Bombers need all their playing resources, too, for they took a 13-7 beating from Calgary Bronks here Saturday as the total-points series opened and must trim the powerful Albertans by a margin of at least seven points to retain the championship for a third successive year.

Bud Marquardt, lanky outside wing, is definitely on the sidelines with a dislocated shoulder suffered in a Regina game Oct. 21. Other probable absentees on Saturday are flying wing Art Stevenson and halfbacks Wayne Sheley and Bill Boivan.

All three backfielders were injured in the first game of the title series. Sheley, ace forward passer from Augustana College, South Dakota, twisted an ankle and chances he will play are slim. Bronks came out of the game almost intact.

Unbeaten Bimelech Has Not Been Tried Over Muddy Track

By HOWARD BARRY
Central Press Canadian Turf Writer

Bimelech

E. R. Bradley's Bimelech has now demonstrated that he can do just about everything asked of a horse except run on a muddy track. Maybe he can do that, too, but he hasn't proved it. The fact that he has been scratched at times for the avowed purpose of avoiding heavy going would indicate that his owner believes he is primarily suited for a dry track.

Inasmuch as it sometimes rains on Derby day at Churchill Downs, it would have been of great interest to elarn something of Bimelech's mud-running ability before he takes his place as the winter book favorite for the Derby. If he had shown a knack for it before retiring for the season there would be every reason to learn something of Bimelech's the shortest-priced horses in the history of the Derby future books. As it is, the folks will have to take it for granted that he can't run in the mud, which will mean that anyone who backs him will be taking a chance on dry weather for Derby day.

Those who are familiar with the weather of the Kentucky spring would look upon such a proposition as quite a gamble. If the usual April rains fall Bimelech's capabilities should be well known before May 4, when he will be expected to run in the richest Kentucky Derby of all time.

In all probability he will be worked into condition on the private training track at Idle Hour farm near Lexington, and will be vanned over to Keeneland for one or two trial races before going to Churchill Downs. One of his objectives may be eKeneland's Blue Grass Stakes, which brought out Heather Broom, the third-place horse in last spring's Derby.

Bimelech's most recent performance, a victory in the Pimlico Futurity, gave him an even more impressive record than that which El Chico made in winning last year's juvenile championship. Although El Chico scored seven consecutive victories against six for Bimelech, the former never was asked to go a distance comparable to the 1 1-16 miles of the Pimlico Futurity.

As things worked out, El Chico's inability to go a route was the weak point in his make-up. His tremendous early speed proved useless again and again when he went up against three-year-olds over the longer routes.

Bimelech, on the other hand, drew clear with great ease in the late stages of the Pimlico Futurity. He won by four lengths, requiring only two-fifths of a second more than the stake record to accomplish his task. In earlier races he proved that he is able to overcome considerable obstacles and still win. He was blocked badly in the Hopeful Stakes and was forced to make up nearly eight lengths from the quarter pole home. But he did it and got up in time to beat Andy K by a neck.

N. H. L. RACE OFF TO JAMMED START

Either Canadiens or Hawks or Both Teams Can Head Race Tonight

(By the Canadian Press)

The National Hockey League race is off to a jammed start and every playing night for a while the leadership may change.

Tonight, for instance, either Montreal Canadiens or Chicago Black Hawks or both can leap ahead of Toronto Maple Leafs and Detroit Red Wings into first place. Then either the Leafs or the Red Wings can step again when they meet Saturday night at Toronto.

That's in sharp contrast to last sason, when Chicago took a brief lead and then Boston stepped in front to stay there until the schedule's finish.

The Canadiens meet the aroused Boston Club tonight at Montreal, where the habitants have won both their first two games of the season. The Canadiens, who took longer than any other team to get going last fall, are the only unbeaten and untied team in the league now.

The Bruins, with Eddie Shore back on the defence, got up on their hind legs at home Tuesday night and slapped down the Black Hawks in overtime.

The Black Hawks will seek the heights at New York in a meeting with the speedy Rangers.

WILF CUDE SHOWS MARVELOUS FORM WITH THE EAGLES

Former Canadian Goalie Will Soon be Back in the Big Time

TEAM NOW SECOND

Cleveland Barons Score Fourth Straight Victory to Head Loop

By The Canadian Press

As long as Claude Bourque keeps kicking out the pucks there is little chance of Wilf Cude getting back into the National Hockey League as Montreal Canadiens' goal-tender, but around the Calder circuit there is a feeling that the temperamental Welshman will be back in big time hockey before the New Year—with some other club.

Wilfie had no complaints when he was sent down to New Haven of the International - American League. Bourque, a youngster with a long career ahead of him, beat the veteran out of his job on sheer ability.

But Cude didn't let that break his hopes of getting back into the N. H. L. He knew that form alone would bring him back and on his showing with the Eagles so far this season he still has the form.

He demonstrated this last night with shutout goaling as New Haven beat Syracuse Stars 2-0 and gained second place in the league's eastern division, one point behind Springfield Indians who have played one more game.

In other games, the champion Cleveland Barons scored their fourth straight victory, 4-1, against Providence, to take first place in the western section while Pittsburgh Hornets and Philadelphia Ramblers played a 2-2 draw.

Two other former Canadiens combined to bring the Eagles their victory. With Don Willson making the plays both times, Bill (Pee Wee) Summerhill scored the goals, one in the second minute of the second period and the other at the half way mark.

Bob Gracie and Leroy Goldsworthy, two more ex-N.H.L., players who have been burning up the Int.-Am. with their scoring plays, led the Barons to an easy victory.

RACING OFFICIALS BELIEVED HORSE USED AS RINGER

Guard is Placed Over Stall of Smoke Signal at Pimlico Track

Former Hockey Player Bought Horse for Wife for $1,700

Baltimore, Nov. 16—(CP) — A guard hovered about the stall of the four-year-old gelding Smoke Signal at Pimlico race track today as governing bodies of racing in Illinois and Michigan studied evidence showing the horse had been used as a ringer.

Officials of the Maryland Jockey Club said they had evidence that Smoke Signal, bought earlier this year by Nels Stewart, former National Hockey League star, for his wife, had been run as George C. at Detroit on June 10, 1938 and as Laddie Boy Ring at Washington Park on Aug. 2, 1938.

Smoke Signal has started ten times under the colors of Mrs. Stewart and has failed to win a race. He ran second once and third once.

Bought in Good Faith

"I should have sold the horse to the glue factory long ago," Stewart said. He said he bought the horse in January for $1,700 from a man he knew only as "Rudolph."

"I bought him in good faith and can't be held responsible for any bad records dug up against him."

Maryland Jockey Club officials said they had notified governing bodies in Illinois and Michigan of their finds, since the horse ran under its proper name in Maryland and no action here was required.

Betting Held Up

Investigation started Friday when betting was held up pending identification of Smoke Signal. The officials released a statement by Frank Hastings, a trainer, quoting him as saying he had claimed the horse out of a race at Belmont Park in May, 1938, at the request of Tom Malone, a trainer ruled off the turf following a ringer case at Pimlico in May, 1938.

The New York Jockey Club instructed Hastings to appear before the New York Stewards Monday to discuss the case.

Smoke Signal was shipped to Canada by Mrs. Stewart last May. Turf records showed it had not started since May 26, 1938. The horse ran in Canada all summer and was shipped to the United States for a winter campaign.

Redmen Drop Opening Game Of Van Horne Series 4 to 3 To the R. C. A. 'Gunner' Boys

Winning Goal Strikes Goal-Post and Redmen Argue in Futile Effort

NO PENALTIES

Goalie Watt and Defenceman "Speedy" St. Louis Look Best for Locals

A last-minute goal, that was vigorously protested by Ed Thomas' Belleville Redmen as not having been scored, gave the Royal Canadian Artillery "Gunners" a 4-3 decision over the scarlet-clad Belleville pucksters in the opening game of the George Van Horne Memorial Cup series at Kingston last night. Being forced to come from behind the Redmen were shooting for a tie and split points in their initial appearance, when the bombshell broke. A "Gunner" shot sallied passed Goalie Ken Watt, struck the Belleville goal post and rebounded out, where Watt promptly pounced on the rubber for security, only to have a Kingston goal umpire flash the red signal indicating a score. Long and arduous protests on the part of the locals went for no gain in their point and the remaining few seconds proved too fleet to remedy the situation.

No Penalties Given

Clean hard - checking hockey marked the opening game of the Van Horne series, as not a single penalty was necessary throughout. Both teams showed a marked lack of conditioning, but the physical training of the army gave the "Gunners" a slight edge in the matter of condition as the contest progressed. The "Gunners" scored first and were really never headed by the Redmen, who battled courageously to tie the score on two occasions. The score by periods was 1-1, 3-2 for the "Gunners" and finally 4-3.

The 'Gunners" opened the scoring after some twelve minutes of strenuous hockey, that was marked with some close checking by both clubs. Stevens opened the scoring, when he rapped home Carey's pass, the scorer being unprotected all the way. Goalie Watt stopped two of Carey's shots on net before he whipped the rubber to the uncovered Stevens. Two minutes later St. Louis sallied through the centre lane and drove a hard low shot from the Gunners' blue line to have Yates race in fast and whip home the rebound before Goalie Lange could right himself after making the initial save.

Two Rapped Home

In the second period play was strenuous for fourteen minutes before the Gunners rapped home two in quick succession. Hanlon on Stevens' pass-out from the corner and Stevens came back to rap home Hanlon's combination play on a breakaway. Down two goals the Redmen rallied and Robinson took a forward pass inside the Gunners blue line and backhanded the rubber into the net on a fast play. Early in the third period McCreary raced through the centre lane, carried around the Gunners' goal and Will Jackson was in position to rifle home a subsequent rebound. Later in this frame Watt was sensational, making repeated miraculous saves as the Gunners swarmed the Belleville citadel. With one minute to play Younger-Lewis was creditted with a goal, when his shot hit the Belleville goal-post and was registered as a counter by the goal umpire.

Goalie Stands Out

Watt stood out for the Redmen, with "Speedy" St. Louis pacing the locals and Harry McCreary playing steady hockey on the defence. George Filion, former Trenton player, proved valuable as a relief alternate. The Jackson brother-Robinson combination carried the bulk of the Redmen's forward work, although several newcomers showed promise. Younger-Lewis, Armishaw, Stevens, who scored two and had an assist, along with Hanlon and Carey looked the best for the winners.

The line-ups: Belleville — Goal, Watt; defence, McCreary, St. Louis; centre, C. Jackson; wings, Robinson and W. Jackson; subs, Windsor, Yates, Mark Stors, Filion and W. Storms. Royal Canadian Artillery — Goal, Lange; defence, Carey, Brown; centre, Lounger-Lewis; wings, Belwa, Clarke; subs, Armishaw, Levie, Lemare, Hanlon and Stevens.

Referee: Bill Watt, Kingston.

PRO PUCK PERSONALITIES

Boston Bruins
DIT CLAPPER

By Central Press Canadian

Dit Clapper

Packing over 200 pounds of heft and ability over his large area, Dit Clapper is one of the National League's veterans and is such a doddering old fellow he got himself voted to a defence post on last year's Canadian Press all-star team— along with teammate Eddie Shore, although on the Boston defence he teamed with Jack Crawford, this year with Jack Portland.

Dit was born at Newmarket, Ont., and at the time christened Aubrey. That was 32 years ago. Not going back quite so far we find it is 11 years since he joined the Bruins, after being groomed with the minor league Boston Tigers. When he came up, Dit was a right wing, and in his second year was a member of the highest scoring line in hockey history, the famous "Dynamite Line" that scored 102 goals while the Bruins were losing only five games in 44. Dit beat opposing netminders 41 times that year. Since being moved back to defence he has proved to be a hard-hitting body-checker, but at the same time has retained his deadly eye around the nets, and his 13 goals and the same number of assists was the best scoring mark posted by any N.H.L. defender last season. Up to the end of last year this perennial star had accounted for 182 goals, 137 assists, for a point total of 319.

Billy Conn Called A "Boxer's Boxer"

New York, Nov. 16 (CP)— Billy Conn, light-heavyweight champion, was called a "boxer's boxer" yesterday as he completed training for the defence of his title tomorrow night against Gus Lesnevich of Cliffside, N.J. in Madison Square Garden.

The appraisal came from Frank Erne, old-time lightweight champion, who watched Conn's drill. "I saw him in training here for his first fight with Mello Bettina and he's improved 100 per cent," said Erne. "In coordination, footwork, timing, snap to punches Conn is better. He's nice to watch and he's still improving."
